Beſides this worſhip, Chriſt doth mention a ſeruing of God, which beeing diſtinguiſhed from worſhip muſt needes import ſome other thing. Seruice in generall, is nothing elſe but the giuing and performing of obedience to the comcommandement of another. This ſeruice is twofold; abſolute, or in part. Abſolute ſeruice is, when a man obeyes the commandement of another without any condition or exception, and that not onely in body outwardly, but in ſoule and conſcience, in thought will and affection. And this abſolute ſeruice is proper to God alone, for we muſt neuer call his commandements into queſtion, but looke what God commands, and as he commands it, ſo muſt we ſimply and abſolutely yeeld obedience thereto, not onely outwardly in body, but inwardly in ſoule and ſpirit with the powers and faculties thereof, and in all the affections of our heart. Seruice in part, is that which is due to gouernours and ſuperiours from their inferiours in the Lord: for God hath giuen power to magiſtrates here on earth to make lawes for the good of ciuill eſtates, in yeelding obedience whereunto, their inferiours muſt doe them ſeruice; yet not abſolutely, but with reſtraint, to wit, in the Lord, ſo farre foorth as their commands agree with the will of God, and croſſe not his command. Againe our obedience vnto them is in body and outward conuerſation: indeede we muſt from the heart yeeld ſeruice and obedience vnto them: but yet the conſcience properly cannot be bound by mens lawes, they onely concerne the outward man in ſpeech, geſture, and behauiour. Now of theſe two kinds of ſeruice, our Sauiour Chriſt ſpeaketh here, of ſimple and abſolute ſeruice, whereby both ſoule and body with all the powers and parts thereof yeeld abſolute obedience and ſubiection to the will and commandement of God.

Abſolute.

In part.

We ſee what worſhip and ſeruice is here required: Now we muſt obſerue the perſon to whom the ſame is to be giuen, in theſe words: The Lord thy God: Diuine worſhip whether inward or outward, and abſolute ſeruice of the whole man, muſt be giuen to no creature, Angell nor man, be they neuer ſo excellent, but to the true God alone. The ſcope and drift of the firſt and ſecond commandements, is to bind euery man to giue ſo much to his God, and to beware of giuing the ſame to any other beſides the Lord. And the practiſe of the good Angel that talked with [a] Iohn, doth ſhew the ſame thing, for when Iohn fell before his feet to worſhip him, the Angell ſaid, ſee thou doe it not: --- worſhip God. Where we ſee the good angels do ſtriue for the furtherance of Gods right in theſe duties, howſoeuer this wicked ſpirit tempting Chriſt, doth herein ſeeke Gods great diſgrace. And thus we may perceiue that Chriſts applying of this text againſt Satans temptation is moſt pregnant; for Satan requiring of Chriſt the proſtrating of his body before the Deuil, in token that he did worſhip him as the giuer of thoſe kingdomes which he offered vnto Chriſt, is iuſtly repulſed by this text, which bindeth euery man to giue outward diuine worſhip, whereby the inward worſhip of the heart is ſignified, to God alone, and not to any creature.

[a] Reu.19.10.

A Here then we may learne, that it is not lawfull to giue to Saint or Angell, or any creature whatſoeuer, outward diuine worſhip or adoration, whereby the inward deuotion of the heart is teſtified. This text is plaine to the contrary, and the reaſon we haue heard, becauſe diuine proſtrating of the body to any thing, is a teſtification that we aſcribe diuinitie vnto it ſome way; which without the guilt of idolatry cannot be done to any creature: for let a man worſhip Saint or Angell by prayer or thankſgiuing, and therein he doth aſcribe vnto them ſome proprietie of the diuine nature; as, to know the heart, to be able to heare, to helpe, or ſuch like. The Papiſts here ſay, they doe not thinke B the Saints to whom they pray, to be God, neither doe they worſhip them as God. But this will helpe them little: for the Deuill moouing Chriſt to yeeld vnto him outward diuine worſhip, neuer meant, that Chriſt ſhould adore him for God, but onely deſired, that by this outward adoration of proſtrating his body before him, Chriſt would acknowledge him to be the giuer of theſe kingdomes, (for he durſt not be ſo bold as abſolutely to deſire to be worſhipped for God) and yet Chriſt tels him, that outward diuine worſhip euen in reſpect of the acknowledgment of ſuch a gift is proper to God alone. And yet the church of Rome doe giue vnto Saints, that which the Deuill demands and Chriſt denies by appropriating it vnto God: for C they make ſeuerall Saints deliuerers and protectors from ſeuerall diſeaſes and dangers: as the Virgin Mary [a] from ſhipwracke; S. Roch [b] from the peſtilence; Raphael [c] from ſore eies; [d] Apollonia from the tooth-ach; And [e] Catharine for all manner of afflictions. Yea they make them patrons and protectors of whole countries and kingdomes, as Saint Iames for Spaine; S. Denis for France, Saint Patricke for Ireland, &c. Now ſith many a one may giue a kingdome, that cannot defend it, let all men iudge whether they doe not giue more vnto Saints, then Satan demanded to be acknowledged vnto him by our Sauiour Chriſt: yea they make them interceſſors for the procuring of the fauour of God, and life euerlaſting: they call the Virgine D Mary, the Queene of Heauen, and pray to her, that by the authoritie of a mother, ſhe would commaund her ſonne to heare their prayers; which is to make Chriſt a puny and vnderling vnto her; which are greater matters then the diſpoſing of earthly kingdomes. Here they ſay, that they may doe that to the glorious Saints in heauen, which is done to earthly Princes; for men adore them, and in their abſence fall downe before their chaires of eſtate. Anſ. The adoration giuen to Princes, is but a ciuil acknowledgement of their preheminence: and kneeling before the chaire of eſtate, is onely a teſtimony of loyaltie and ſubiection; it is not directed to the Princes perſon beeing abſent, but onely ſerueth to teſtifie his ſubiection to that authoritie and power which is ſet ouer him in the

Vſe. No creature muſt haue diuine worſhip.

Lord; there is no diuine propriety aſcribed by either of theſe vnto the perſon or authority of the Prince. But now in bowing downe to pray to Saints, there is religious adoration giuen them, for therein be aſcribed vnto them theſe diuine properties, that they can know the heart, heare, and helpe afarre off, pray for them in particular, and ſuch like; by all which God is robbed of his honour.

And though we condemne the Papiſts for giuing to Saints diuine worſhip, yet we muſt beware of deſpiſing the Saints of God in Heauen; for there is due vnto them a threefold honour: firſt, thankſgiuing to God for them, who inabled them by his gifts and graces, to be in their times, ſpeciall inſtruments of good vnto Gods Church; Secondly, we are to carrie a reuerent eſtimation of them beeing now in heauen; as of the friends of God, and temples of his holy ſpirit. Thirdly, we are to follow the example of their godly cōuerſations in the duties of godlineſſe: But from giuing vnto them diuine worſhip we muſt carefully abſtaine.

Worſhip of reliques vnlawfull.

Againe, if the diuine worſhip of Saints be here condemned, then much more is the worſhipping of their reliques: then alſo is their inſtituting and obſeruing faſting daies and holy daies vnto their Saints here iuſtly reprooued. Neither can our Church herein be condemned with them, though we retaine the names of ſuch daies among vs, becauſe it is for another end; our faſts are meerely ciuill on ſuch daies; and our holy dayes turned from the adoration of Saints to the ſeruice of God, whereon alſo our conſcience knows her libertie giuen of God for honeſt labour in a lawfull calling as neede requires.

Further, obſerue how Chriſt here ioynes the worſhip of God and the ſeruice of God together: teaching vs not to content our ſelues with doing the duties of Gods worſhip, but withall we muſt yeeld vnto him abſolute ſeruice and obedience. Men commonly thinke they haue done enough, if on daies appointed they come to the Church, and there performe outward worſhip vnto God in hearing the word, in prayer, and receiuing the Sacraments; theſe, I confeſſe be worthy workes, if they be well performed: but herein is the common errour, that when they haue performed this outward worſhip, they make no conſcience of abſolute ſeruice, the thing which Chriſt here ioines to worſhip; they think that in their callings they may liue as they liſt, either idly or vniuſtly, by fraud and diſſembling: but feuer not thou ſeruice from worſhip, which Chriſt hath ioyned together, leſt God ſay vnto thee for thy worſhip as he did once to the Iewes, [a] My ſoule hateth your new moones, and your appointed feaſts, they are a burden vnto me, &c. What, doth God hate that worſhip himſelfe appointed? no, but he hates the ſeuering of it from ſeruice and obedience, wherein they ſhould ſhewe foorth to their brethren, loue, iuſtice, and mercie: he reiects all ſeruice at A their hands, becauſe their hands were full of blood, v. 15. Read Micha 6. v. 6. 7. 8. The offering of ſacrifice was a ſpeciall part of worſhip vnder the Law, and yet though a man ſhould bring for his ſacrifice thouſands of Rammes, or ten thouſand riuers of oile, nay though he brought his firſt borne, the fruite of his bodie for the ſinne of his ſoule, yet all is nothing without iuſtice, mercie, humbling himſelfe, and walking with his God, verſ. 8. Let vs therefore ſerue God ſincerely in our conuerſations, as we ſeeme to honour him in duties of religion: let vs ſhew the feare of God in our liues; for worſhip without ſeruice, is like the cutting off of a dogs head, or offering ſwines fleſh, &c. as B Iſay 66. 3. which is abhomination to the Lord.

Thirdly, obſerue that Chriſt addeth onely to Moſes words, for the better clearing of Moſes meaning; which may ſerue for our iuſt defence againſt the Papiſts; they blame vs greatly for teaching that a man is iuſtified by faith only, ſaying the word onely, is not in any place aſcribed to iuſtification by faith. We anſwer, in all the ^ teſtament this word onely is not ioyned to this command, Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and ſerue him, and yet Chriſt ſaith, it is written, him onely ſhalt thou ſerue, becauſe the reſtraint and inhibition annexed, from giuing this worſhip and ſeruice to any other, doth in effect include onely; euen ſo, though in letters and ſyllables we doe not finde this word only, adioyned C to this ſentence, man is iuſtified by faith; yet becauſe of the excluſion of works vſually annexed to that phraſe, as that, we are iuſtified by faith without the workes of the Law. Rom. 3. 28. and are iuſtified freely by his grace, v. 24. and that a man is not iuſtified by the workes of the Law, but by faith, Gal. 2. 16. hereupon I ſay we may hold and teach, and that truly, according to the true ſenſe thereof, following Chriſts example in this place, that the Scripture ſaith, a man is iuſtified by faith onely.

^ old Test.

Laſtly, from this commandement we muſt learne our duty touching Gods ſeruice: in word we will all acknowledge our ſelues to be his ſeruants, but if herein we will approoue our ſelues to be his ſeruants, we muſt reſolue and D labour to yeeld vnto him abſolute obedience, as well in heart, mind, will, and affection, as in outward conuerſation. The end of the miniſtery of the word is not onely to reforme the outward man, but [a] to caſt downe the inward holds of ſinne in the Imagination; and to bring into captiuitie euery thought to the obedience of Chriſt. And this is done when after true repentance a man endeuoureth to yeeld vnto God totall obedience, and that from the whole man in ſoule and body and ſpirit, not for a time, but continually.

v. 11. Then the Deuill left him, and behold the Angels came and miniſtred vnto him.

Chriſts happie iſſue in theſe temptations.

A Theſe words containe the third part of this deſcription of Chriſts temptation; to wit, the happie euent and iſſue thereof, in Chriſt glorious victory ouer the Tempter; which is the principall part, wherein conſiſts the maine comfort of Gods church; for as in temptation Chriſt ſtood in our roome and ſtead, ſo is this victorie not his alone, but the victory of his Church. This iſſue conteines two parts. Firſt, Satans departing from him. Secondly, the miniſtery of good Angels vnto him.

For the firſt, then the deuill left him: that is, after that by temptations he could nothing preuaile, then he betakes himſelfe to flight. In this appeares the vnſpeakeable mercie of God vnto B his Church, in mitigating, and in due time putting an end vnto the afflictions and temptations thereof; for the caſe of Chriſt the head in this conflict, is the caſe and condition of all his members. Now here we ſee what a gratious iſſue the Lord put to theſe aſſaults of Satan; in due time his enemie flies: and ſo will the Lord deale in all the miſeries of his Church, and children: God promiſeth to Dauid concerning Salomon, [a] that if he ſinne, he will chaſtiſe him with the roddes of men, and with the plagues of the children of men: that is, with ſuch puniſhments as he ſhall be able to beare, but his mercie he will not take from him. The Prophet Habacuck in his complaint againſt the wrong & violence of the wicked done to the iuſt, is ſomewhat impatient towards God for his delay, Hab. 1. 2. 3. C Therefore in the viſion afterward ſhewed vnto him, he is bid to waite for deliuerance, for though it tary, yet it ſhall ſurely come, and ſhall not ſtay, Cha. 2. 3. Thus Paul comforteth the Chriſtian Corinthians, God is faithfull, and will not ſuffer you to be tempted aboue that which yee are able to beare, but will giue an iſſue with the temptation, that ye may be able to beare it; 1. Cor. 10. 13. [a] The bodies of the two Prophets who were ſlaine for the teſtimonie of the Lord Ieſus, are ſuffered to lie in the ſtreetes vnburied, for three daies and an halfe, that is, for ſome ſhort time: which beeing expired, the ſpirit of life comming from God ſhall enter into them, and reuiue them; then feare ſhall take their enemies, D but they ſhall aſcend up to heauen, and their enemies ſhall ſee it. All theſe doe plainly manifeſt Gods great mercie in giuing a gracious iſſue to the troubles of his children, yea by good experience we may ſee the truth hereof in the happy iſſue that the Lord hath put to the moſt fearefull temptations of ſundry in our time, who haue beene exerciſed therein, ſome for a yeare or two, other for longer time euen many yeares together, and yet in the end haue ſung the ſong of ioyfull deliuerance: it may be ſome of Gods children beare the Croſſe to their dying day, yet the Lord ſuſtaines them in it by his grace, and in the end ſhewes them mercie and peace.

a Rev. 11. 8. 9. 10.

Secondly, in this departure of Satan from Chriſt, we may obſerue a notable difference betweene the firſt Adam, and the ſecond. The firſt Adam was tempted and ouercome therein; Sathan preuaileed in that conflict, and brings him captiue into his kingdome, hauing ſpiritually taken poſſeſſion of him. The ſecond Adam is tempted alſo; but the Deuill can finde no means whereby to preuaile with him: the prince of this world commeth, but hath nought in me, ſaith Chriſt, Ioh. 14. 30. But after his aſſault is faine to flie away.

Further in this departure of Chriſt note two circumſtances: when Satan departed, and for how long a time. Firſt, when he departed is noted in this word then, that is after the third temptation; when Chriſt in indignation for his blaſphemy againſt God, had ſaid, Auoid Satan; & withall had anſwered his tẽptation out of the written word; then he departs. Hence we learn, Giue Satan no ground.

Firſt, that the beſt way to vanquiſh Satan is to giue him no ground, but to withſtand him manfully at the firſt: Iam. 4. 7. reſiſt the Deuill and he will flie. Now Satan is reſiſted, when from our hearts we caſt our ſoules on the promiſes of God conteined in his word, and in the whole courſe of our liues pray for ſtrength of grace to ſtand againſt his aſſaults: whereby we may ſee the great error and deceit of thoſe, who accompt of Satans temptations as of fits of melancholie, and thinke they may be remooued by muſicke, merrie company, and ſuch like; but theſe are no weapons to driue away the Deuill. Secondly, this alſo ſhewes their dangerous courſe who yeeld to Satans temptations for a time, taking their pleaſure in their youth, purpoſing to reſiſt him when they are old, and then to repent: too many take this couſe, but it is fearefull: for thus doing, they ſet open all the doores of their heart to the Deuill, and ſuffer him to take quiet poſſeſſion, little conſidering that it is beyond their power to diſpoſſeſſe him at their pleaſure: For indeed hereby they become like to a man that is ſick of the dropſie, who the more he drinks, the more he deſires; ſo he that willingly giues place to Satans temptation, the more he ſinnes, the more he may; for the longer he is tempted, the more by yeelding is he weakened, and the greater is the danger of his endleſſe confuſion: therefore learne of Chriſt to reſiſt betime.

Satans obedience is not commendable.

Secondly, in this circumſtance, note that when Chriſt rebuketh Satan & bids him auoid, he departs, and is preſently gone. Was this any vertue in Satan that he doth thus readily depart at Chriſts command? no verily, though he obey, it is not praiſe-worthy: for obedience is two fould, voluntary, and conſtrained; voluntary, when the creature doth Gods command without compulſion, thus Adam did before his fall, and all holy ones that are iuſtified and ſanctified doe thus in part in this life. Conſtrained obedience is, when the creature is made to obey God, will he nill he. This is like to the obedience of rebels, who beeing attached and arraigned for their treaſons, in ſuffering are made to obey the Princes lawes. And ſuch was this obedience of Satan, forced vpon him by the powerful command of Chriſt, who is Prince and Lord of all creatures. And this is to be marked, that when Chriſt giues forth his powerfull command; then Satan muſt obey whether he will or not. This is euident by his manifold diſpoſſeſſions of the vncleane ſpirits, who came forth at his command, though they accompted him as their tormenter. Now that which here befalls the deuill, ſhall one day be verified of all wicked men; if they will not now obey God willingly, while in the miniſterie of the word he bids them repent and beleeue the Goſpel; they ſhall one day be cōpelled, euen at the dreadfull day of iudgement, will they nill they, to obey that wofull voice of Chriſt, Depart from me ye curſed into euerlaſting fire, Mat. 25.41. In regard whereof, we muſt euer be carefull, now in the day of grace, to yeeld vnto Chriſt voluntary and cheerefull obedience, vnto all his commandements both of the Law and Goſpell, leaſt one day we be conſtrained to obey in going to our endeleſſe wo: Satan who is a thouſand-fold ſtronger then man, could not reſiſt his power, how then ſhall we that are but duſt and aſhes ſtand before ſo great a God?

a Luk.4.13.

This circumſtance of time is more fully noted by S. Luke, ſaying, [a] and when the Deuill had ended all the temptation, he departed from him: whereby thus much is ſignified, that looke what knowledge, craft, or power the Deuill had, that did he imploy to the vttermoſt in theſe temptations before he left our Sauiour Chriſt. Whereby it appeareth that Chriſt was tempted in the higheſt degree and meaſure that Satan poſſibly could attain vnto: herein did the Deuill ſhew the extremitie of his fraude and malice againſt Chriſt; which further appeares by this, that the Angels of heauen came and miniſtred vnto him for his comfort; ſo as though Satan could not taint the ſacred heart of our Sauiour Chriſt with the leaſt ſpot of ſinne; yet in theſe temptations, Chriſt was troubled with the ſame ſorrowes, griefes, and vexations which Gods children vſually feele in their temptations: The conſideration whereof ſerues for ſpeciall vſe.

A good ground againſt deſpaire.

Firſt, to keepe all Gods children from deſpaire in the greateſt extremity of their temptations, euen when they ſhall feele their conſcience (as it were) ſet on an Iron racke, and the flaſhings of hell fire already kindled in their ſoule: for Chriſt Ieſus the head of the Church was tempted by Satan in the higheſt degree, ſo as the Angels came to miniſter comfort vnto him, and yet he ſtill remained the welbeloued ſonne of God; and ſo may any of Gods children remaine Gods deere elect, euen then when the violence of Satan ſhall ſeeme moſt to preuaile againſt them.

Secondly, this teacheth vs to ſuppreſſe all raſh iudgement in our ſelues, of all ſuch as ſhall be exerciſed by Satan in extreame temptatitons: for oft it will fall out that the conſcience of Gods child ſhall be ſo exceedingly tormented in temptation, that he ſhall crie out, he is forſaken of God, and ſhall be damned; when as indeede he ſtill remaines the deare child of God, as Chriſt our Sauiour did Gods welbeloued in the deepeſt aſſaults of Satan. And therefore the relation publiſhed of Francis Spira his deſperation, doth inconſiderately take him for a caſt-away; conſidering that nothing befell him in the time of his deſperation but that which may befall the child of God: yea our owne land can afford many examples which match Francis Spira, whether we regard the matter of his temptation, or the deepeneſſe of his deſperation, who yet through the mercy of God haue receiued comfort. And therefore in this caſe Chriſtian charity muſt euer bind vs to thinke and ſpeake the beſt.

Fr. Spira.

Laſtly, Satans departing vpon the ending of theſe three temptations, giues vs to vnderſtand that howſoeuer the diuel abound with temptations of all ſorts, yet theſe three are the ground of all, and the moſt principall temptations that Satan hath; for in this combate he did his worſt, and ſhewed the violence of his rage and wrath. And therefore it will be needefull for vs to take ſpeciall notice of them, as alſo of Chriſts repulſes giuen vnto them, that ſo we may be the better armed againſt them and the like. Thus much for the time when Satan departed.

The ſecond circumſtance touching his departure is, for how long the Deuill left him, noted by Saint Luke, not for euer, but for a ſeaſon. Some may ſay, we do not find that Satan tempted Chriſt euer after this ſaue onely vpon the croſſe, where he ſpoiled principalites and powers, Coloſſ. 2. 15. Anſw. The Deuill tempts men two waies; ſometime by himſelfe, as he did our Sauiour Chriſt in this place, and vpon the croſſe, and our firſt mother Eue in the garden, Gen.3.1. ſometime by men whom he vſeth as his inſtruments; thus he tempted Adam by Eue; and Iob by the Chaldeans and Sabeans that robbed him, and by his friends who ſought to drawe him from his integrity, Iob. 27.5. now though Chriſt were not often after this tempted immediately by the Deuil, yet by Satans inſtruments he was many times ſore aſſaulted to the grief of his heart, as by the Iews, the Scribes, and Phariſies, Herod, and Pontius Pilat, who required ſignes of him, mocked & perſecuted him.

Luk.4.13.

The ſtate of Gods church on earth.

Here we may ſee a notable patterne of the ſtate of gods church and children in this world, for looke as Chriſt their head is ſore tempted, and then let alone, and yet but for a ſeaſon, beeing tempted againe by Satans inſtruments; ſo fareth it with them, one while they are exerciſed with outward temptations, and another while with inward aſſaults; then through Gods mercy they haue freedome for a ſeaſon; but afterward Satan comes vpon them againe, either by himſelfe or by his inſtruments: which muſt teach vs wiſedome in regard of the ſtate of our owne Church in particular, to wit, that we muſt not dreame of a perpetuall freedome from trials and temptations, howſoeuer through Gods mercie we haue inioyed admirable peace and tranquilitie for many yeares together; for beeing a part of Chriſts myſtical body, we muſt looke for the ſame condition with our head Chriſt Ieſus, who beeing ſore tempted of Satan, was left but for a ſeaſon, and after tempted againe: and therefore we muſt reſolue our ſelues vndoubtedly that trialls will come; what way, God onely knoweth; but the winter of affliction will followe our harueſt of ioy and peace: and the yearely viſitations, by plagues and famine, are ſymptomes, that is ſignes and forerunners of more heauy iudgements, vnleſſe we prepare to meete our God in the practiſe of ſpeedie and vnfained repentance. And as this is the ſtate of our Church in generall, ſo is it the particular condition of euery Chriſtian, whoſe life is a continuall intercourſe of trouble and peace, and therefore euery child of God muſt be watchfull againſt ſecurity, and with the ende of one aſſault, ioyn his preparation for a new: This was the ſtate of Chriſt, and the ſeruant muſt not looke to be aboue his maſter. And thus much for the Diuels departure.

The ſecond part of the Iſſue of this conflict is the miniſterie of the Angels vnto Chriſt; And behold the Angels came and miniſtred vnto him. In ſaying Behold, the Euangeliſt commends vnto our conſideration the view of a great wonder, to wit, that that perſon whom the Deuill would haue had to haue worſhipped him, is here worſhipped and ſerued of the holy Angels of God. Let no man therefore iudge of himſelfe, by that which Satan would perſwade him to in temptation; Chriſts eſtate doth now appeare farre different from that which Satan would haue brought him to, and ſo ſhall all Gods chilcren finde it to be with them after temptation, if therein they fight manfully after the example of Chriſt.

Touching the miniſterie of theſe Angels, here obſerue three points. Firſt, the bond that causeth the good Angels to miniſter vnto Chriſt. Secondly, their number. And thirdly, the time of their miniſtery.

I. Point. The bond of their Miniſterie, is Chriſts ſoueraigntie ouer the Angels, not onely as he is God their Creator, but as he is mediator God and man, euen the man Chriſt, (I ſay not the manhood of Chriſt) but Chriſt (as I may ſay) the man-God, is Lord of all Angels, and they doe him homage and ſeruice. And though the man-hood of Chriſt be not Lord of Angels, yet beeing receiued into the vnity of his Godhead, it is thereby exalted aboue all Angels by many degrees. Wherein we may behold the endeleſſe goodneſſe of God, in aduancing our nature, which by ſinne was made more vile then all earthly creatures, far aboue the Angels in degree, by reaſon of this coniunction which it hath with the nature of God in the perſon of Chriſt.

Now as by this bond the Angels are made miniſters vnto Chriſt, ſo by vertue of the ſame, they become miniſters to all his true members. Iacobs ladder is thus expounded by our Sauiour Chriſt: verily, verily, I ſay vnto you; hereafter ſhall ye ſee heauen open, and the Angels of God aſcending and deſcending vpon the ſonne of man. This ſonne of man is Chriſt, who beeing God and man reacheth from heauen to earth, and from earth to heauen; to him the Angels miniſter, and by him they deſcend to miniſter to all the ſaints of God here on earth.

The vſe. 1. This teacheth vs to admire the endeleſſe goodneſſe of God vnto his Church and children, not only in beſtowing heauen and earth vpon them, but euen in giuing his glorious Angels to become miniſtring ſpirits for their protection, defence, and comfort. II. This their miniſterie, muſt admoniſh vs to carry our ſelues reuerently and holily in all maner of conuerſation. If we were in the preſence of an earthly Prince, oh how carefull would we be to our behauiour both for words and actions? Much more then ſhould the preſence and attendance of Gods glorious angels, who pitch their tents about vs if we be Gods children, make vs circumſpect to all our wayes; and the rather, becauſe their miniſtery is for our comfort and protection, while we keep our ſelues in the ſtraight waies of God.

II. Point. Their number. It is not ſaid one Angel, but Angels came and miniſtred vnto him. Indeede when he was in his Agonie in the garden a little before his paſſion, [a] one Angel came and miniſtred comfort vnto him: ſo that ſometime one, ſometime moe attended on him, euen as the euill ſpirits come to tempt, ſometime one alone, as Satan did here to Chriſt, and ſometime moe, as they did when he was vpon the Croſſe. And as it befell Chriſt, ſo doth it to Gods children, they haue ſometime one good Angell to attend vpon them, and ſometime many: ſo likewiſe haue they ſometime one euill ſpirit to aſſault them, and ſometimes many, as the man in whom the legion was. And hereby falleth to the ground this common opinion, that euery man hath one good Angell and one bad attending vpon him, the one to protect him, the other to tempt him. But this opinion doth not well ſtand with the tenour of the Scripture, which thus ſets out the ſtate of man in regard of his attendance by Angels, that there are ſometimes moe about him, and ſometime fewer; whether we ſpeake of good Angels, or of euill ſpirits.

III. Point. The time when theſe good Angels came and miniſtred vnto Chriſt, is noted in this word Then: that is, when the deuill had done all he could againſt our Sauiour Chriſt: they came not in the times of his aſſaults, but when Satan had ended his temptations and was gone. There is no doubt, but the good Angels were alwaies about our Sauiour Chriſt, attending on his bleſſed perſon, but at this time it is like they tooke vpon them ſome viſible ſhape, that ſo their miniſterie might be the more comfortable vnto him: as It is like, the Deuill appeared in ſome ſhape for Chriſts greater terrour in his temptations:

God will ſometime hide his mercie from his children.

In this circumſtance of time, we may obſerue a worke of Gods prouidence which he pleaſeth to exerciſe in the time of temptation vpon his owne children: to wit, for a time to hide his mercie from them, withdrawing the ſenſible feeling of his fauour. Thus he dealt with his beloued ſonne Chriſt Ieſus, during the time of Satans violent temptations he concealed frō him the ſenſible aſſiſtance of the miniſterie of his Angels, they ſhewe not themſelues till Satan is departed. And ſo fareth it many times with Gods deere children vpon whom he beſtowes the good graces of his ſpirit: as a nourcing-mother to try the affections of her childe, will ſometime hid her ſelfe from it, leaue it alone, and ſuffer it to take a knocke or a fall: ſo will the Lord leaue his children to themſelues and conceale from them the ſignes of his fauour, ſuffering them to be buffeted in temptation for a time, that they may finde thereby what they are in themſelues without Gods grace, and by feeling the bitterneſſe of that eſtate, the more to hunger and thirſt after his grace and fauour, the more ioyfully and thankfully to embrace it when it is renued, and the more carefully to keepe it all the daies of their life. What made Dauid to accompt ſo highly of the courts of Gods houſe, as that he eſteemed the ſilly [a] birds happy that might build their neſts by Gods altar, but his baniſhment thence, by the perſecution of Saul, wherein he was conſtrained to remaine in [b] Meſhech, and to dwell in the tents of Kedar? And ſo when the people of God were in Babel, remembring Zion they wept; oh then, [b] let my right hand forget to play, if I forget thee O Ieruſalem; let my tongue cleaue to the roofe of my mouth, if I preferre not Ieruſalem to my chiefe ioy.

But vnto many this doctrine of temptations will ſeeme to ſmall purpoſe, nay altogether needleſſe, for that they neuer felt any ſuch conflicts with the Deuill, they defie him from their hearts, and they truſt to God neuer to be troubled with him: this is the common eſtate of moſt men (thoſe onely excepted who haue felt how hard a thing it is truly to repent and beleeue) thus to bleſſe themſelues in a carnalll peace; but ſillie ſoules, they know not their owne hearts nor the fearefull caſe in which they ſtand; for all the true members of Chriſt muſt be made conformable vnto their head; now he was conſecrated the prince of their ſaluation through afflictions, Heb. 2. 10. his ſoule was heauie vnto the death, before he could finiſh the worke of our life: yea he is tempted by Satan before he is comforted by the Angels; thoſe therefore that were neuer tempted haue yet no fellowſhip in his afflictions, they haue not begunne any conformitie with Chriſt, ſo as it is like they are ſtill bondſlaues vnto Satan, for if they had eſcaped out of his ſnare, they ſhould feele his aſſaults to get them in againe: in regard hereof the child of God is conſtrained to buckle hard with Satan in temptation, and to pray many a time to be deliuered from his buffeting. And indeed howſoeuer for the preſent this be not ioyous, yet they may count it exceeding great gladneſſe, as the [c] Apoſtle ſaith, not onely for this triall of their faith which bringeth forth patience, but alſo becauſe herein they become like vnto Chriſt in his humiliation, which may giue them aſſurance that they ſhall be like him in glorie: [d] for if we be dead with Chriſt, we ſhall alſo liue with him, and if we ſuffer, we ſhall alſo raigne with him. Adde further that theſe men that neuer felt the aſſaults of Satan, are as yet vnder a moſt fearefull iudgement of God in hardneſſe of heart. When Chriſt feed fiue thouſand men with fiue loaues and two fiſhes, [e] he diſtributed it by the hands of his diſciples; But after it is ſaid, they perceiued not this matter of the loaues, and this reaſon is rendred, becauſe their hearts were hardned, verſ. 52. And ſo it is with them that neuer feele the temptations of Satan, for he goeth about continually, like a roaring Lion ſeeking whom he may deuoure, as they whoſe hearts are not hardned do well perceiue. To conclude therefore, let theſe men who yet neuer felt in themſelues theſe aſſaults of Satan, vnfainedly endeuour to change the courſe of their liues, by the practiſe of true repentance in eſchewing euill and doing good; let them giue themſelues ſincerely to the exerciſe of prayer for the remoouall of their ſtonie hearts, and the renuing vnto them hearts of fleſh, let them heare the word, and doe the ſame; and then they will ſhortly ſing another ſong, to wit, that whoſoeuer will liue godly in Chriſt Ieſus, muſt ſuffer temptations, and be aſſaulted by the Deuill; and then will they finde that this doctrine is needfull, yea they wil bleſſe God for this work of his ſpirit that cauſed theſe temptations of Chriſt to be ſo particularly recorded, with his happy iſſue and victory ouer them all, not onely for himſelfe, but for all his members, that in their temptations they may looke vnto Ieſus, leaſt they ſhould faint in their minds, for in that he ſuffered, and was tempted, he is able to ſuccour them that are tempted, Heb. 2.18.

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPFVLL, MY VERY

worthie and Chriſtian friend, Syr William Gee, Knight, one of his Maieſties Honourable Counſell in the North, Recorder of the Townes of Beverly and Hull, and one of his Maieſties Iuſtices of Peace in the Eaſt-riding of the Countie of Yorke, a true friend of learning, and pietie; and to the vertuous, and religious Ladie his wife:

Grace and peace from God, &c.

AMongſt the many reaſons (Worſhipfull Syr,) which haue perſwaded me that Poperie cannot be the true Religion, this is not the leaſt: the inſufficiencie of their doctrine of faith and repentance: which two things though they be the chiefe and principall points in Religion, and ſo neceſſarie, that he, who doth not, both know, and practiſe them aright, can neuer be ſaued: yet I dare auouch, that the faith and repentance of the Romiſh church, as they are taught by many of the beſt approoued Papiſts, are no better then ſuch a repentance as an hypocrite, and a very reprobate may attaine vnto. Indeede, to inſiſt vpon repentance onely (they make many faire flouriſhes) they call it penance, they make it a Sacrament, and ſay it is a board that ſaues a man after ſhipwracke, and write great volumes of it, and of confeſsion, and of Caſes of conſcience, (as you good Syr in your owne reading know better then I) and yet alas, when all is done, it is but a ſhadow of repentance; and indeede how can they teach aright the doctrine of repentance, which erre ſo fowly in ſetting downe the iuſtice of God, and the vileneſſe of ſinne? which two points a man muſt know, elſe he will neuer repent: but Poperie miſconceiuing the iuſtice of God, teaching it not to be infinite, in as much as it needs not an infinite ſatisfaction, and miſconceiuing the nature of ſinne, teaching euery ſinne not to be damnable, nor to offend Gods infinite iuſtice, erring (I ſay) in theſe two, how is it poſſible they ſhould conceiue aright the nature of repentance? by which a man ſeeing his ſinnes, their fowlneſſe, their puniſhment, and his owne miſerie by them, confeſſeth them, bewailes them, fearing Gods iuſtice, flieth from it, and craues forgiueneſſe of his mercie, and laſtly purpoſeth, and endeauoureth to leaue them all, and to lead a new life. The ſerious conſideration hereof, hath often made me wonder, why many Popiſh treatiſes, beeing in ſome ſort exhortations to repentance, ſhould be ſo accounted of as they are by ſome: for though I confeſſe, there are in ſome of them, good and wholeſome meditations, and many motiues to mortification, and good life; yet would I gladly learne of any man but this one thing, how thoſe exhortations can be pithie, or powerfull, ſound, or any way ſufficient to mooue a man to repentance, when as, not thoſe bookes, nor all Poperie is able to teach a man ſufficiently what true repentance is.

Canitius in Catechiſmo. Coſterus in Enchir.

Corradus. Navarrus. Loper Sairus. Hallus. Graffius, and many others.

If any man reply; I will therfore learne the doctrine out of the Proteſtants books, and vſe the Papiſts for exhortation onely: I then anſwer, is it not a more compendious, and conuenient, and a leſſe ſcandalous courſe, to ſeeke exhortations out of ſuch writers, as doe teach the doctrine aright? nay, I doubt how it is poſſible to find a powerfull exhortation to repentance in any Papiſt, who erres in the Doctrine: the reaſon is manifeſt, becauſe Doctrine is the ground of exhortation: and if the doctrine be vnſound, how can the exhortation be any better? Let vs therefore leaue theſe muddie puddles, and fet our water at the fountaine: the water of life, at the fountaine of life; I meane the doctrine of faith, and repentance, at the written word of God, and at ſuch mens writings as are grounded thereupon, and agreeable thereunto.

Deering, Greenham, Bradford, and many others.

Now, amongſt thoſe many inſtruments of God, who haue laboured with profit in this great point of Religion; namely repentance, drawing their doctrine out of the two breaſts, of the two Teſtaments of Gods booke, I may well ſay, (to ſay no more,) that this man of God M. Perkins, deſerues to haue his place: whoſe labours, whileſt he liued, and his yet liuing labours, what they deſerue, I had rather others ſhould proclaime, then I once name: who profeſſe my ſelfe to be one of thoſe many, who may truly ſay, that by the grade of God, and his good meanes principally, I am that I am. But leauing him in that glorious manſion, which Chriſt the Lord of the harueſt hath prepared for him, and now giuen him, I returne to my ſelfe, and doe humbly praiſe the Lord of heauen, who gaue me my time in the Vniuerſitie, in thoſe happie daies, wherein (beſide many worthie men of God, whereof ſome are falne aſſeepe, and ſome remaine aliue vnto this day) this holy man did ſpend himſelfe like a Candle, to giue light vnto others.

The ſcope of all his godly endeauours was to teach Chriſt Ieſus, and him crucified, & much laboured to mooue all men to repentance, that as our knowledge hath made Poperie aſhamed of their ignorance; ſo our holy liues might honour our holy profeſſion. And as repentance was one of the principall ends, both of his continuall preaching and writing: ſo eſpecially and purpoſely hath he twiſe dealt in that Argument.

Firſt, in his Treatiſe of Repentance, publiſhed 1592. wherein briefly (as his manner was) but ſoundly, pithily, and feelingly, he laieth downe the doctrine, and the very nature of repentance: and after the poſitiue doctrine, he toucheth ſome of the principall controuerſies and difficulties in that doctrine, but afterwards thinking with himſelfe, that he had not ſeriouſly and forcibly enough, vrged ſo great and neceſſarie a leſſon as Repentance is, therefore ſhortly after, beeing deſired and called to the dutie of Preaching, in that great and generall aſſembly at Sturbridge Faire, he thought it a fit time, for this neceſſarie and generall exhortation to Repentance: to the intent, that as we were taught the doctrine of repentance, in the former treatiſe; ſo in theſe Sermons we might be ſtirred vp to the practiſe of it. And certenly (good Syr) I iudge there could haue beene no matter, more fit for that aſſembly, then an Exhortation to Repentance: for as the audience was great and generall, of all ſorts, ſexes, ages, and callings of men, and aſſembled out of many corners of this Kingdome; ſo is this doctrine generall for all: ſome doctrines are for parents, ſome for children, ſome for ſchollers, ſome for trades-men, ſome for men, ſome for women, but repentance is for all: without which, it may be ſaid of all, and euery one of age, not one excepted; No Repentance, no ſaluation.

Theſe Sermons beeing in my hands, and not deliuered to me from hand to hand, but taken with this hand of mine, from his owne mouth, were thought worthie for the excellencie, and fit for the generalitie of the matter, to be offered to the publique view.

And now theſe firſt fruits of my labours, in an other mans vineyard, as alſo all that hereafter doe or may follow, I humbly conſecrate to the bleſſed Spouſe of Chriſt Ieſus, the holy Church of God on earth, and namely to the Church of England, our beloued mother, who may reioyce that ſhee was the mother of ſuch a ſonne, who in few yeares did ſo much good to the publique cauſe of Religion, as the wickedneſſe of many yeares ſhall not be able to weare out. But firſt of all, and eſpecially, I preſent the ſame vnto you (my very Worſhipfull and Chriſtian friends) who (I muſt needes ſay) are very worthie of it in many reſpects.

M. Perkins but fourtie yeares old at his death.

1 For the matter it ſelfe, which is repentance, my ſelfe beeing able to teſtifie, that you are not hearers, but doers, ripe in knowledge, and riſe in the practiſe of repentance, inſomuch as I dare from the teſtimonie of my conſcience, and in the word of a Miniſter pronounce of you, that as you haue heard and knowne this doctrine of repentance, ſo bleſſed are you, for you doe it.

And 2. for him who was the Author hereof (whoſe mouth ſpake it from the feeling of his ſoule, and whoſe ſoule is now bound vp in the bundle of life) I know, and cannot in good conſcience conceale the great delight, you haue alwaies had in the reading of his Bookes, the reuerend opinion you had of him liuing, and how heauily and paſſionately, you tooke his death and departure: therefore to cheare you vp in want of him,I ſend you here this little Booke,his own child,begotten in his life time, but borne after his death: obſerue it well, and you ſhall finde it not vnlike the father: yea,you ſhall diſcerne it in the fathers ſpirit,and it doubts not, but to finde entertainment with them,of whome the father was ſo well reſpected.

And for my ſelfe,I ſpare to rehearſe what intereſt you haue in me,and all my labours, it is no more then you worthily deſerue, and ſhall haue in me for euer: you are the faireſt flowers in this garden, which in this place I after others haue planted for the Lord(or rather God by vs:)And two principall pearles in that crowne, which I hope for,at the laſt day from the Lord my God, whoſe word at my mouth you haue receiued with much reuerence, and with ſuch profit, as if I had the like ſucceſſe of my labours in others,I ſhould then neuer haue cauſe to ſay with the Prophet,I haue laboured in vaine,and ſpent my ſtrength in vaine,but my iudgement is with the Lord,and my worke with my God.

And if I knew you not, to be ſuch as take more delight in doing well, then in hearing of it,I would prooue at large,what I haue ſpoken of you:yet giue me leaue to ſay that, which without open wrong, I may not conceale, that beſide your rare knowledge,and godly zeale in religion,and other duties of the firſt table to God himſelfe, your charitie and pitie to the needie diſtreſſed Chriſtians at home and abroad, your mercifull dealing with them, who are in your power, your beneuolence to learning, and namely to ſome in the Vniuerſitie,doe all proclaime to the world thoſe your due praiſes:which I(well knowing your modeſties)doe ſpare once to name:neither would I haue ſaid thus much, were it not for this cold and barren age wherein we liue, that ſo, when our preaching cannot mooue, yet your godly examples might ſtirre vp. Pardon me therefore I pray you, and thinke it no wrong to you,which is a benefit to Gods Church: but goe forward in the ſtrength of the Lord your God,and hold on in that happie courſe you haue begunne, be faithfull vnto the ende, the Lord will giue you the crowne of life: faithfull is he which hath promiſed,who will alſo doe it: proceede(good Syr)to honour learning in your ſelfe and others, and religion eſpecially, which is the principall learning; and proceede both of you, to practiſe religion in your owne perſons; and in your family, hold on to ſhine before your family, and amongſt the people where you dwell, in zeale and holineſſe: hold on hereby, ſtill to ſhame Poperie, to ſtoppe your enemies mouthes, and to honour that holy religion, which you profeſſe, to gaine comfort of good conſcience to your ſelues,and aſſurance of eternall reward: and laſtly,to encourage me in thoſe painefull duties which lie vpon me: for I openly profeſſe that your religious zeale and loue of the truth, with many other good helps, are principall encouragements in my Miniſterie, and eſpeciall motiues vnto me, to vndertake the charge of publication of ſo many works of this holy man deceaſed,as may not in better manner be done by others. But I keepe you too long from this holy Exhortation following; I therefore ſend you to it, and it to you,and from you to the Church of God,for I dare not make it to be priuately yours and mine,wherein the whole Church hath intereſt,as well as we. It was preached in the field,but it is worthie to be admitted into our hearts: I found it in the open field, but vpon diligent view, finding it to be Gods corne, and a parcell of his holy and immortall ſeede,therefore I brought it home,as good corne deſerues: And as it is Gods corne, ſo in you, I deſire all holy Chriſtians to lay it vp in Gods garners, that is,in their hearts and ſoules.

AN EXHORTATION TO REPENTANCE.

Zephaniah, 2. v. 1, 2.

Search your ſelues, euen ſearch you O nation, not worthie to be beloued: before the Decree come forth, and you be as chaffe that paſſeth on a day.

THe Prophet in the firſt Chapter of this prophecie rebukes the Iewes of three notable crimes, Idolatrie, fraud, and crueltie. In this ſecond he exhorts them to repentance, and withall reprooueth ſome of their ſpeciall ſinnes. In the three firſt verſes he propoundeth the Doctrine of Repentance, and addeth ſome ſpeciall reaſons to moooue and ſtirre them vp to the practiſe of it. In propounding the Doctrine of Repentance, he directs it to two ſorts of men: Firſt, to the obſtinate and impenitent Iewes, in the firſt and ſecond verſes. Secondly, to the better ſort of them, in the third. So that the ſumme and ſubſtance of theſe two firſt verſes, is a briefe and ſummarie propounding of the doctrine of Repentance to the obſtinate Iewes. The words containe in them fiue ſeuerall points, touching the doctrine of Repentance.

1. The dutie to be performed, Search. 2. Who muſt be ſearched: your ſelues. 3. Who muſt doe it; the Iewes: who are further deſcribed to be a nation, not worthie to be beloued of God: theſe are in the firſt verſe. 4. In the ſecond verſe, the time limiting them, when to repent, before the Decree come forth; that is, before God hath put in execution the iudgements which are alreadie decreed and appointed for them. C 5. A forcible reaſon vrging them to doe it, which lieth hid, and is neceſſarily implied in the fourth point; namely, that there is a Decree againſt them, which wants nothing but execution: which alſo ſhall come vnleſſe they repent, whereby they ſhall be fanned: and if they ſhall be found to be chaffe, they ſhall flie away with the winde of Gods iuſtice. Of all theſe points in order.

For the firſt, the holy Ghoſt ſaith, Search your A ſelues. The words are commonly read thus; Gather your ſelues: which though it be good, for that in repentance a man gathereth himſelfe, and all his wits together, which afore were diſperſed, and wandered vp and downe in vanitie: yet I rather allow their tranſlation, who read thus, Search, or fanne your ſelues: but either of them may ſtand, becauſe the word in the originall doth comprehend both ſignifications: yet it ſeemeth that to ſearch, or ſift, fits this place better, conſidering the ſame manner of ſpeech is afterwards continued in the word chaffe: ſo that the meaning of the holy Ghoſt ſeemeth to be this; Search, trie, and fanne your ſelues, leaſt you be found light chaffe, and ſo flie away, and B be conſumed before the iuſtice of God.

Iunius.

Concerning this dutie of ſearching, let vs obſerue, firſt, that the holy Ghoſt vrging the Iewes to repent, vſeth not the word Repentance, but biddes them ſearch themſelues: yet meaning, he would haue them to repent: giuing vs to vnderſtand, that no man can haue true and ſound repentance, but he who hath firſt of all ſearched and examined himſelfe: and this ſtands with good reaſon: For no man can repent, who firſt of all doth not know himſelfe, and his owne wretchedneſſe: But no man can ſee into himſelfe, nor know himſelfe, but he that doth diligently ſearch himſelfe: ſo that the beginning of all grace, is for a man to ſearch, and trie, and fanne himſelfe, that thereby he may know what is in himſelfe: that ſo vpon the ſearch, ſeeing his fearefull and damnable eſtate, he may forſake himſelfe, and his owne waies, and turne to the Lord. Thus ſpeaketh the holy Ghoſt in the hearts of holy men; Let vs ſearch and trie our waies: and marke what followeth; and turne againe to the Lord: as though there were no turning againe to the Lord, but after a ſearching of our ſelues. With this teſtimonie of the holy Ghoſt, agreeth the teſtimonie of all holy mens conſciences, who all know, that the firſt beginning of their turning vnto the Lord, was a ſearching of themſelues. Let any repentant ſinner aske his conſcience, and call to minde his firſt calling and conuerſion, and he will remember that the firſt thing in his repentance was this; that he ſearched into himſelfe, and looked narrowly into his waies, and finding his waies dangerous, and his caſe fearefull, did thereupon reſolue to take a new courſe, and turne to the Lord for pardon and mercie, and for grace to enter into more holy, and more comfortable courſes.

The man that paſſeth vpon ridges of Mountaines, and ſides of hils, or that goeth ouer a narrowe bridge, or ſome dangerous and ſteepe Rocks at midnight, feareth not, becauſe he ſeeth no danger: but bring the ſame man in the morning, and let him ſee the narrowe bridge, he went ouer in the night, vnder which runnes a violent ſtreame, and a bottomeleſſe gulfe, and the dangerous Mountaines, and rocks he paſſed ouer, and he wil wonder at his owne boldneſſe, and ſhrinke for feare to thinke of it, and will by no meanes venture the ſame way againe: for now he ſeeth the height of the Mountaines; the ſteepeneſſe of the Hilles, the cragginеſſe of the Rocks, the fearefull downefall, and the furious violence of the ſtreame vnderneath, and thereby ſeeth the extreame danger, which afore he ſawe not: therefore he wondreth and reioyceth, that he hath eſcaped ſo great a danger; and will by no meanes be drawne to goe that way in the day, which he went moſt careleſly in the darknes of the night, but ſeeketh another way (though it ſhould be farre about:) So a ſinner in his firſt eſtate, which is naturall and corrupt (as we are bred and borne) hath a vaile before his face: ſo that he ſeeth nothing: The wrath of God, and the curſe due for ſinne, Hell and damnation ſeeking to deuoure him, he ſeeth them not, although (liuing alwaies in ſinne,) he walketh in the very Iawes of Hell it ſelfe; and becauſe he ſeeth not this fearefull danger, therfore he refuſeth no ſinne at all, but ruſheth ſecurely into all manner of ſin; the night of impenitencie, and the myſt of ignorance ſo blinding his eyes, that he ſeeth not the narrowe bridge of this life, from which if he ſlide, he falles immediately into the bottomeleſſe pit of Hell.

But when as Gods ſpirit hath by the light of Gods word opened his eyes and touched his heart to conſider his eſtate, thē he ſeeth the frail bridge of this narrow life, and how little a ſtep there is betweene him and damnation; then he ſeeth Hell open due for his ſinnes, and himſelfe in the high way to it: ſinne beeing the craggy Rocke, and Hell the gapping gulfe vnder it; this life beeing the narrowe bridge, and damnation the ſtreame which runneth vnder it; Then he wondreth at his miſerable eſtate, admireth the mercy of God in keeping him from falling into the bottome of Hell, wondreth at the preſumptuos boldneſſe of his corruption, which ſo ſecurely plodded on towards deſtruction, and being aſhamed of himſelfe, and theſe his waies, he turnes his heart to the God that ſaued him from theſe dangers; and ſets himſelfe into more holy waies, and more comfortable courſes, and confeſſeth that ignorance made him bold, and blindnes made him ſo preſumptuous; but now he ſeeth the danger, and will by no meanes goe the ſame way againe and thus the ſearching and ſeeing into the foulenеſſe of ſinne, and the danger thereof, is the firſt beginning of repentance, and the firſt ſtep into grace.

This doctrine teacheth vs what faith and repentance is generall in the world. All men ſay, they beleeue, and haue repented long agoe; but trie it well, and we ſhall finde in the bodie of our Nation, but a lippe faith, and a lippe Repentance: for euen when they ſay ſo, they are blinde and ignorant of their owne eſtate, and knowe not themſelues, but preſume of themſelues, that becauſe they are baptiſed and liue in the Church, therefore they are in Gods fauour, and in very good eſtate, when as they neuer yet were reconciled to God: and are ſo far from it, that they neuer yet ſawe any ſinnes in themſelues whereof they ſhould repent, As a man trauelling in the night, ſeeth no daunger, but plods on without feare: So the moſt part of our common people, in the night of their ignorance, thinke and preſume they loue and feare God, and loue their neighbour; and that they haue euer done ſo: Nay, it is the common opinion that a man may doe ſo by nature, and that he is not worthy to liue, who doth not loue God with his heart, and beleeue in Ieſus Chriſt: But alas poore ſimple ſoules, they neuer knewe what ſinne was, neuer ſearched nor ſawe into their owne hearts with the light of Gods law, for if they had, they ſhould haue ſeene ſuch a Sea of corruption, that then they ſhould confeſſe it to be the hardeſt thing in the world, to loue God, and to beleeue in Chriſt, and forſake ſinne: it is therefore manifeſt, that they haue not yet begun to beleeue or repent, nor haue entred into the firſt ſtep of grace, which leadeth to repentance, for that they haue not learned this leſſon, which the Prophet teacheth; that is, to ſearch themſelues.

Furthermore, let vs in the ſecond place, obſerue better the ſignification of the word; it ſignifieth to Search narrowly, as a man would doe for a peece of Gold, or a precious Iewell, which is loſt in a great houſe: Or as a man may ſearch for gold in a Myne of the earth, and but very little gold Oare.

Hence we may learne, that in true Repentance and conuerſion, we muſt not ſearch ſo onely, as to finde the groſſe and palpable ſinnes of our liues; but ſo as we may finde thoſe ſinnes which the world accounts leſſer ſinnes, and eſpie our ſecret faults and priuie corruptions. Some corruptions ſeeme more neere a kinne of our nature, and therein men hope to be exouſed, when they forſake many other greater ſinnes. But a true penitent ſinner muſt ſearch for ſuch, ſo as a good Magiſtrate ſearcheth for a lurking traitor which is conueied into ſome cloſe and ſecret corner, and he muſt ranſack his heart for ſuch corruptions, as wherein his heart takes ſpeciall delight, and muſt thinke that no ſinne can be ſo ſmall, but it is too great to be ſpared, and that euery ſinne great or litle, muſt be ſearched for, as being all Traitors to Gods Maieſtie.

But alas, the practiſe of the world is farre otherwiſe, great ſinnes are little ſinnes, little ſinns are no ſinnes: Nay, after a little cuſtome, great ſinnes are alſo little or nothing, and ſo at laſt men make no bones of groſſe and grieuous ſins: and for the moſt part men ſearch ſo ſuperficially, that they ſcarſe find any thing to be ſinne: ſuch excuſes are made, ſuch diſtinctions are deuiſed, ſuch mitigations, ſuch qualifications, ſuch colours are caſt vpon all ſinnes, as now vp and downe the world, groſſe ſinnes are called into queſtion whether they be ſinnes or no: and the great tranſgreſſions of the law, are counted ſmall matters, neceſſarie euils or inconueniences, tollerated to auoid other euils: and what is he counted but a curious and preciſe foole, which ſtands vpon them: Ignorance after fiue and thirtie yeares preaching is counted no ſinne: blinde deuotion in Gods ſeruice no ſinne: lippe-labour in praying, vaine and cuſtomable ſwearing, mocking of religion, and the profeſſors thereof, no ſinne: prophaning of the Sabbath, contemning of preachers, abuſing of parents, no ſinne: pride in apparell, ſuperfluitie in meates, beaſtly and ordinarie drunkenneſſe, fornication, no ſinnes. Nay, deceits, coſonages, oppreſſing vſury, notorious briberie, and couetouſneſſe, that mother ſinne; theſe are counted no ſinnes: theſe beames are made but moates by profane men, and they are ſo minced and carued, or there is ſome ſuch neceſſitie of them, or ſome ſuch other flouriſh or verniſh muſt be caſt vpon them, as that they are little or none at all. Alas, alas, is not that a ſimple and ſilly ſearch where ſuch blocks as theſe are, lie vnſpied? what are molehils, when ſuch mountaines are not ſeene? Moates will be little regarded, where ſuch beames are not diſcerned: but it is cleare, that therefore there is no true triall nor diligent ſearch made: for a true conuert will ſearch his heart for all, and will ſpare none: He deales in ſearching his owne heart, as a good Iuſtice of Peace in ſearching for traytors or Seminarie Prieſts. He ſeekes not ſuperficially, but moſt exactly, and leaueth neuer a corner vnſought; and he thinkes great ſinnes, to be infinite, and little ſinnes great, and iudgeth no ſinne ſo ſmall, but that it deſerueth the anger of God, and therefore he wonders at the mercie of God, which throwes vs not all down to hell in a moment: and he crieth out with holy Ieremie: It is the Lords mercy that we are not conſumed. Away then with this ſuperficiall and hypocricall ſearch where ſo many ſinnes are ſpared and not found out. It is Phariſaicall, for euen ſo the Phariſie, when he came into the Temple to recken with God, and to tell what Traytours he had found, that is, what ſinnes vpon good ſearch he had eſpied, he returnes his precept, all is well, he hath found neuer a one, but beginnes to thanke God that he was ſo good, & ſo good, and not ſo ill, and ſo ill, nor yet like the Publicane. The world is full of Phariſies; not onely the Popiſh Church, but euen our Church ſwarmes with theſe ſuperficiall teachers, who cannot (becauſe they will not,) finde any ſinne to preſent vnto God. Men thinke in the Countrie, a Church Officer hazards his Oath, if he preſent all well, and findeth no fault in his Pariſh, to preſent as puniſhable to the Ordinary: for men thinke it vnpoſſible, that there ſhould be none in a whole pariſh: then how doth that man hazard his owne ſoule, who beeing made ouerſeer and ſearcher of his heart, findes nothing in it to preſent to the Lord. For it is not more eaſie to eſpye outward and actuall tranſgreſſions in a whole pariſh, then it is to finde a heape of corruptions in a mans heart, if a man will ſearch into the bottome of it with the light of Gods law. Therefore when the Lord comes and keepes his viſitation, what ſhall become of ſuch a man, but to vndergo the ſtrict and ſeuere ſearch of the Almightie, becauſe he would not ſearch himſelfe.

Our bodies and liues are free from the Spaniſh Inquiſition, (which is one of the laſt props, which Satan hath lent the Pope, wherewith to vphold his declining kingdome) and the Lord grant we may be euer free from it. But in the meane time, that might put vs in minde how to deale with our corrupt hearts, and vnmortified affections, euen to erect an Inquiſition ouer them, to lay in waite for them, to ſearch them narrowly, and to vſe them roughly: yea, to ſet our hearts vpon the racke of Gods law, that ſo it may confeſſe the ſecret wickedneſſe of it; for the Papiſts doe not thinke vs Proteſtants, greater enemies to their ſuperſtition, then the inward corruptions of our owne hearts, are to our ſaluation: therefore it may be a godly policy for euery man, euen to erect an Inquiſition ouer his owne heart and conſcience, and not to ſpare his moſt ſecret and deareſt ſinnes, and ſuch as are neereſt allyed to his owne nature: for that is the true ſearch here commanded by the Prophet, and practiſed by all godly and holy men, when a man purpoſeth to finde all that are, and to eſpie euen all his ſinnes: for a godly man is neuer ſatisfied in his ſearch, but ſtill, the more he findes, he ſuſpects the more are ſtill behind: and therefore he continueth ſearching his owne heart al his life long: Therefore let euery profeſſor looke to it betwixt God and his conſcience, that he dally not with himſelfe in this caſe; for if he doe, then, when God comes with his priuie ſearch, his hypocriſie ſhall be diſcouered, and his nakednes ſhall be laid open in the view of men, and Angels, to his eternall confuſion.

Thirdly, Search ſaith the Prophet, but not ſo content, he forceth it againe, Euen ſearch you. In thus repeating and vrging this exhortation, the holy Ghoſt giues them and vs to vnderſtand, that the true ſearching of a mans heart and life, is a duty of great moment, and ſpeciall neceſſity: therefore he leaues it not after once naming it, but inforceth it the ſecond time, as beeing no matter of indifferencie, but of great neceſſity: thereby ſhewing, that it is a principall duty in repentance, euen the beginning and foundation of all true grace.

And further, it is a meanes alſo to preuent Gods judgements, for when men ſearch not themſelues, then God ſends the fire of afflictions, and croſſes to trie and ſearch them: but when they ſearch themſelues, then God ſpareth to ſearch them by his iuſt iudgements.

Now in that this duty of ſearching, is both the beginning of all true grace, and the meane to ſtay Gods iudgements, and therefore is ſo pithily, and forceably vrged by the holy Ghoſt, it muſt teach vs all a neceſſarie leſſon: namely, to make great conſcience of ſearching our ſelues. Firſt, becauſe God hath ſo commanded, and we are to make conſcience of obedience to euery commandement. Secondly, becauſe thereby we ſhall reape two ſo great commodities, as firſt thereby we ſhall lay a ſure foundation for the good worke of grace in vs, and ſecondly, ſhall ſtay the hand of God, and his iudgements from beeing executed vpon vs. Let vs therefore hearken to this counſell of the holy Ghoſt, let vs take the fan of the Lawe, and therewith ſearch and winnowe our hearts and liues. Our hearts, for ſecreet and hidden corruptions. Our liues, for committing of euill, and omitting of good. Doe with your hearts as men doe with their wheate: they will not ſuffer their corne to lie long in the chaffe, leaſt the chaffe hurt it, but commit it to the fanne, that the wind may ſeparate them: So the graces of God in our hearts are pure corne, our ſinnes and corruptions are chaffe: looke well, and thou ſhalt finde in thy ſelfe much chaffe, and but little corne: let not then the chaffe lie too long mingled with the corne, leaſt it corrupt the corne. Let not thy ſinnes lie mingled with the grace of God in thee, if thou doe, they will choake it in the end, and ſo depriue thee of all grace; therefore rip vp thy heart, and looke into thy life, and when thou haſt ſinned, enter into thy ſelfe, aske thy conſcience what thou haſt done, and be not quiet till thou haſt found out thy ſinne, and the foulneſſe of it: and neuer think that thou knoweſt any thing in religion, till thou knoweſt what is in thine owne heart, and what are thy ſpeciall and priuieſt corruptions, and looke into thine owne faults, not with a partiall eye, but with a cenſorius, and a ſtrait judgement: ſpare ſinne in no man, but eſpecially condemne it in thy ſelfe.

But alas theſe times of ours, cry out of an o-

A ther ſtate, for euen Ieremies caſe is ours: We may complaine as he did, No man repents him of his wickedneſſe, ſaying, what haue I done? the ſame is the ſore of our people, and the ſickneſſe of all Nations, that euery man runnes on in his ſinnes, from ſinne to ſinne, careleſly: euen as the barde horſe into the battaile. But how rare a thing is it, to finde a man, that daily ſearcheth himſelfe, and examines how he liues, and how the caſe ſtandeth betwixt God and himſelfe; and that when he hath done amiſſe, entereth into the cloſet of his heart, and ſtrikes himſelfe vpon the breaſt, and diſputes the caſe with himſelfe, ſaying: What haue I done? O what is this, that I haue done againſt God, againſt his B Church, and againſt my owne ſoule?

The want of this, is that which the Prophet complaines of in that place: not as though it were ſufficient thus to doe, in a mans own conſcience: but becauſe it is a good beginning, and a ſteppe to further grace. For if a man did ſeriouſly thus deale with his conſcience after his ſinne, his conſcience would ſhape him ſuch an aunſwer, and would tell him ſo roundly what he had done, that he would take heede, how he did the ſame againe, and looke more narrowly, and warily to himſelfe all the daies of his life. Seeing therefore it is ſo neceſſarie a dutie, let euery one of vs indeuour the practiſe of it, namly, to rippe and ranſack our hearts, and to ſearch our waies vnto the bottome.

C Now for your better inſtruction, and furtherance in the performance hereof: you muſt knowe, that this Search is to be made by the Law of God, for nothing elſe but Gods law can helpe vs, & let vs ſee that which we muſt ſearch for: for if we ſearch by any other meanes, we may ſeeke and ſearch long enough, ere we find any thing that will be matter of repentance, Aske the deuill, he will tell thee all is well, and that thou art in an excellent eſtate; and God loues thee, and thou art ſure of Heauen: this ſong the deuill alwaies ſings for the moſt part till a man comes to die, for then he appeares in his colours; but till then, he labours to ſing, and lull all men a ſleepe in the cradle of ſecuritie. Aske our owne fleſh, and our owne hearts and D natures, and they will anſwer, and ſay, that all is well and ſafe, and that we haue beleeued, and loued, and feared God all our daies. Aske the world, and men in the world: and they will anſwer, all is well; and they will ſay further, that thou art a right good fellow, and art worth twentie of theſe curious fooles that ſtick vpon points, and ſtand vpon circumſtances, as ſwearing, and drinking, and good fellowſhip, and gaming, and ſuch other nice and circumſtantiall points: thus will worldly men anſwer: for thy prophane courſe is acceptable to them, becauſe thereby thou approoueſt the ſame in them. Nay goe further, and aske all humane learning in the world, and it cannot tell thee what one ſinne is, nor what it is to offend God: ſo that there remaines onely the lawe of God, the light where-

A of will diſcloſe the darkeneſſe of our hearts, and the iuſtice whereof will reueale the vnrighteouſneſſe and the peruerſneſſe of our natures: therefore to the law of God muſt we fly to help vs in this ſearch.

And yet for our better helpe in this dutie, and that there may be nothing wanting to that ſoule, that ſeeketh God, therefore we are further to know, that if we will ſearch our ſelues by the lawe profitably, we muſt marke three rules, the truth whereof vnleſſe we knowe, acknowledge, and feele, we ſhall neuer ſee our owne eſtate, nor profit by this Search, but plodde on from ſinne to ſinne, vntill we plunge into hell.

1 The firſt Rule is, that euery man that came B from Adam, ſinned in the ſinne of Adam: thou muſt therefore knowe, that his ſinne in eating the forbidden fruit, was thy ſinne: and thou ſinnedſt therein, as well as he (though thou waſt then vnborne) and that thou art guilty of it before God, and muſt anſwer for it to Gods iuſtice, vnleſſe Chriſt doe it for thee. The reaſon hereof is, becauſe we are his ſeede and poſteritie, we were then in his loines, he was the father of vs all: and was not a priuate man as we are now, but a publike perſon, the pledge of all mankind, and bare the perſon of vs all at that time: therefore what he did then, he did it for himſelfe, and for vs: What couenant God made with him, was made for himſelfe and vs: what God promiſed him, and he to God, he promiſed for himſelfe, and for vs; what he receiued in his Creation, he receiued for himſelfe, C and for vs: and what he gained or loſt by his fall, he gained and loſt for vs, as for himſelfe. He loſt the fauour of God, and originall puritie: therefore he loſt it for all his poſteritie: guiltineſſe, and Gods anger, and corruption of nature which he gained, he got for vs all, as well as for himſelfe. If we doubt of this point, it is prooued by the Apoſtle: where the holy Ghoſt ſaith; * Sinne entred by one man, and death by ſinne: and that ſinne went ouer all, and that it went ouer all them, which ſinned not in the like tranſgreſſion with Adam (that is, euen our children) who as they are borne, are borne not onely tainted with originall corruption: D but guilty alſo of Adams ſinne. This is a moſt certaine truth, though it ſeeme ſtrange, for few men thinke of it, that euer they ſhall anſwer for Adams ſinne: and therefore if any obiect, what reaſon is there that I anſwer for another mans ſinne? I anſwer, true, if it had been Adams ſinne alone: but it was his and thine alſo: for he was thy Father, and ſtoode in thy roome: and thou alſo ſince thou waſt borne, haſt confirmed what he did. Now therefore though not one of many thinks ſeriouſly thereof; namely, that he ſhould ſtand guilty of a ſinne committed more then fiue thouſand yeeres before he was borne, yet ſeeing it is moſt true, both in Scripture and good reaſon: let euery man ſubſcribe in his conſcience to this truth. And let this be thy firſt reſolution in this ſearch, that thou ſtandeſt guilty of Adams tranſgreſſion.

* Rom.5.14.

2 The ſecond rule to be knowne is, that in euery man are all ſinnes, more plainly, that in euery man by nature are the ſeedes of all ſinnes: and that not in the worſt, but in the beſt natured men: make choyſe of the beſt man and the greateſt ſinne, & that worſt ſinne is to be found in that beſt man. If any doubt of this, let him conſider what originall ſinne is, namely, a corruption of the powers of our ſoules: and that not of ſome, or in part, but of all, and wholly. This corruptions hath two parts. Firſt a want, not of ſome, but of all good inclination, a want of all goodneſſe. Secondly, a deprauation, and proneneſſe, not to ſome, but to all euil: and not a proneneſſe onely, but originall ſinne infuſeth into euery mans heart, the ſeede of all corruption.

Many men ſtand much vpon their good meaning, and vpright heart, and bragge of a good nature: but they are fouly deceiued: for take the ciuileſt man vpon the earth, and the ſeedes of all ſinnes in the world are in him by nature. But to explane this point fully, obſerue theſe two clauſes.

Firſt, I ſay not the practiſe of all ſinnes, but the ſeedes; for all men practiſe not all ſinne: the ſeedes are in their nature: but the practiſe is reſtrained, ſometime by education, ſometime by good and wholeſome lawes, ſometime the conſtitution of mens bodies deny the practiſe of ſome ſinnes, ſometime the Countrey a man dwelles in, or calling a man liues in, keepes him from the practiſe of ſome ſinnes: and alwaies a generall and limitting grace of God, reſtraines the natures of all men, from running into many ſinnes: which hand of God, if God ſhould take away, and leaue euery man to his nature, we ſhould ſee that euery man would practiſe any ſinne in the world: yea, euen the greateſt ſinnes that euer we heard to be done in the world. All men which know themſelues, know this to be true. And the more a man knowes his owne heart, the more he ſeeth that his heart is a ſea of all wickednes: and that it is the mercie & grace of God, that he hath not fallen into the mightieſt and moſt monſtrous ſinnes in the world.

Secondly, I ſay, by nature. For I know by good education, and by grace, it is otherwiſe; grace rectifieth nature, but that is no thankes to nature: for it is as euill and corrupt ſtill, beeing ſeuered from grace: and therefore nature muſt be fully aboliſhed, afore man come to heauen. And yet (though all this be true) I ſay not that ſinne breakes out in al natures alike, though all natures be alike corrupt: for the courſe of nature is reſtrained in ſome more then others, by the meanes aforeſaid; but this is the truth, that whereas ſome are not ſo angry, ſome not ſo wanton, ſome not ſo cruell, ſome not ſo couetous, ſome not ſo ambitious, &c. as others; that comes not from any goodneſſe of nature in them, aboue the other originally, but from Gods hand, which tempereth, reſtraineth, and moderateth euery mãs nature as he ſeeth good.

And if God did not thus moderate and reſtraine the natures of men, but ſuffer them to breake out to the full: there would then be no order, but all confuſion in the world; therefore (as eſpecially for his Churches quietneſſe, ſo alſo for the preſeruation of publike peace, and the vpholding of ſociety in the world, betweene man and man) the Lord holdes a hand ouer euery mans nature, and keepes euery one in a certaine compaſſe limitted by the wiſdome of his power, which reſtraining hand of his, if the Lord ſhould take away, all ſocieties and common wealths, would be turned vpſide downe; becauſe euery man by the vniuerſall corruption of his nature, would break out into euery ſinne. I ende this point with appealing to the teſtimony of the conſciences of all men, and eſpecially of the beſt and holieſt men, of whom I would aske this queſtion, whether they finde not in their natures an inclination, euen to the fowleſt ſinne in the world; if ſhame, or feare, or elſe the grace of God reſtrained them not; ſo that the beſt men doe knowe well enough, what adoe they haue with their corrupt natures, to keepe them within the compaſſe of Obedience.

Nay, I yet adde further, the nature, of men, and of all men is ſo corrupt, ſince Adam, that euen the ſeede of the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, and a proneneſſe to it, is in the nature of euery man (though not one man amongſt many thouſands doe commit that ſinne) for ſeeing in that ſinne, there is a heape or ſea of all ſinnes gathered together, he therefore that hath in his nature the ſeede of all ſinnes, hath alſo the ſeede of it. And againe, ſeeing all euill tendes to a perfection, as well as grace doth; what reaſon therefore is there, but we may ſafely thinke that the Deuill would hale euery one to that height of ſinne: if it were not that the powerfull hand of God preuented him, who will neither ſuffer wicked men, nor the Deuill himſelfe to be ſo wicked as they could and would bee.

The vſe of this ſecond Rule, is notable. For in this ſearching of our ſelues, it ſheweth vs what we are, without all colours or deceit, and fully diſcouers vnto vs, the vglineſſe of our natures: and it may teach vs all how to thinke and eſteeme of our ſelues, when we heare of Caines vnnaturall murther, Pharaohs vnnaturall cruelty, the Sodomites vnnaturall luſts, Achitophels deuilliſh policy, Senacharibs horrible blaſphemie, Iudas monſtrous treaſon, Iulians fearefull Apoſtacie. When we heare of the fearefull murthers, treaſons, periuries, ſinnes againſt nature, blaſphemies, Apoſtacies, witchcrafts, and other the horrible ſinnes of the world: let vs then returne into our ſelues, and looke homewards, euen into our owne hearts, and confeſſe euery one that theſe ſhould haue been euen thy ſinnes alſo, if Gods grace had not preuented thee.

Exod.1.
Gen.8.
2.Sam.15.
Eſa.38.

This will humble thee, and make thee thinke vilely & baſely of thy ſelfe, and ſo conſequently bring thee to repentance and true amendment: and the very reaſon, why men repent not, nor amend their wayes, is becauſe they are Phariſies by nature, and thinke highly of themſelues, and of their owne natures, and their naturall inclinations: this will be a harſh and a ſtrange Doctrine to them; Oh, they haue excellent natures, and they cannot endure ſuch and ſuch ſinnes, and they thanke God, they are not as ill as others: but let all ſuch men knowe, they muſt ceaſe magnifying nature, and learne to magnifie Gods grace. Let them knowe that nature in them, is in the Roote as much corrupt, as in the worſt man in the world, and euery mans heart is a bottomeleſſe fountaine of all ſinne; therefore praiſe not thy nature, but Gods grace and mercie in giuing thee ſo good a nature; or rather ſo well reſtraining and rectifying thy nature; and ſtay not there, but deſire of the Lord, that as he hath giuen thee a better tempered nature, then to other men: ſo alſo he would beſtowe on thee his ſpeciall and ſauing grace: and as he hath kept thee from the fearefull ſinnes of others (thou being as ill naturally as they) ſo he would alſo lead thee into the way of ſaluation, which elſe the beſt nature in the world, can neuer attaine vnto.

The third rule to be knowne and practiſed by him, who will truely ſearch himſelfe, is, that euery man borne of Adam, is by nature the child of wrath, and Gods enemie: this is true of all without exception; High, and low, rich or poore, noble or ſimple, borne in the viſible Church or without. And further, by beeing enemy of God, he is therefore borne ſubiect to hell, to damnation, and to all other curſes, ſo that looke as a Traytor conuicted, ſtands thereby in his Princes high diſpleaſure, and is ſure of death, without ſpeciall pardon; ſo ſtands euery man when he is borne, conuicted of high treaſon againſt God, in his high diſfauour; and is in danger of Hell, which is the fullfilling of the wrath of God. Thus Dauid cōfeſſeth of himſelf; I was borne in iniquity, and in ſinne hath my mother conceiued mee. If in ſinne, then in Gods wrath, and vnder the danger of damnation. If any aske, how, or why this is ſo. I anſwer, the truth, as alſo the equity of this third rule depends on the two former: for, becauſe euery man is borne guilty of Adams great ſinne, and alſo tainted originally with all corruption, and a proneneſſe of all ſinne: therefore it followeth in equity and iuſtice, that euery man is borne vnder the wrath and curſe of God. This point is a plaine and euident truth: yet men in the world thinke not ſo, and it is the cauſe, why men repent not of their ſinnes; for moſt men thinke that by nature, they are in Gods fauour; and therefore they neede not ſo ſue for it in humiliation and repentance; but onely liue ciuilly, and doe noe open wrong, and all is well: whereas (alas) there is no condemned Traitour, more out of his Princes fauour, nor more ſure of death without a pardon, then all we are out of Gods fauour, and ſure of damnation, vnleſſe we procure Gods fauour againe, by faith and repentance.

For the better opening of this third rule, and the manifeſting of the truth; let vs know further that the curſe of God, vnder the which we are all borne, is three-fold.

The firſt, is a bondage vnder Satan: It is a certaine truth that euery man as he is borne of his Parents, and till he repent, is a ſlaue of Satan: man or woman, high or low, Satan is his Lord & Maſter. He ſittes as Iudge in his heart; and in this ſence Sathan is the King of the Nations, and God of the world. Men will in words defie Satan, & not name him without defiance, and ſpit at him; and yet (alas,) he is in their hearts: they ſpit him out of their mouthes, but he is lower; they ſhould alſo ſpit him out of their hearts, and that is true defiance indeed: for alas, he lodgeth in thy heart, & there he makes his Throne, and raignes vntill the ſpirit of regeneration diſpoſſeſſe him: and till then, no ſeruant is ſo ſubiect to his maſter, no ſlaue to his Lord, as is the heart of man by nature vnto Sathan, the prince of darkeneſſe. Nay, our bondage is more fearefull, then the ſlauery of any pore Chriſtian, in the Spaniards, or in the Turks Gallies: for their bodies are but in bondage, and at commaund, and vnder puniſhment, but our beſt part, our heart, our conſcience, our ſoule it ſelfe is captiuated vnto him, and vnder his command, who is the King of crueltie, and confuſion, and Lord of hell, whoſe commaundements are Iniuſtice, whoſe ſeruice is ſin, and whoſe hyre is damnation

The ſecond part of the Curſe, is the firſt death, or the death of the bodie: that is, a ſeparation of the ſoule and body aſunder for a time, namely, till the laſt iudgement. This death is duly and iuſtly the puniſhment of any one, or the leaſt ſinne: therefore, how due and iuſt a puniſhment vpon that horrible heape of ſinfulneſſe, which is in euery mans nature? and it is a moſt terrible curſe. For it is the very gate of hell, and the downefall of damnation, vnto all men, but ſuch, as by faith and repentance doe get their death ſanctified by the death of Chriſt; vnto ſuch men indeede it is no curſe, but a gracious and glorious bleſſing, for it is altred by Chriſt his death. But vnto all men by nature, & which repent not, it is the heauie curſe of Gods wrath, and the very downefall into the gulfe of hell.

The third part of the curſe, vnder which euery man is borne, is, the ſecond death, the death of ſoule and bodie; which is the eternall want of Gods preſence, and the accompliſhment of his wrath; and an apprehenſion and feeling of that wrath, ſeazing on bodie, ſoule, and conſcience. The firſt curſe, was a ſpirituall death; the death of the ſoule. The ſecond a temporarie death, the death of the bodie. The third is an eternall death, a death both of ſoule and A bodie together; and for euer. This eternall death is the curſe of all curſes, the miſerie of all miſeries and torment of all torments; and I ſhewe it thus. Often when thy tooth aketh, and ſometime when thy head aketh, or in the paine of the ſtone or collicke, thou wouldeſt giue all that thou haſt in the world to be eaſed of that paine: Nay, in the extremitie of ſome fittes, many will wiſh themſelues euen out of the world: Now, if the paine of one tooth, can ſo farre diſtemper minde and bodie, that it cannot be releeued with all the pleaſures of this life; O then, what a torment ſhall that be! when not one kinde of paine, but the whole viole of Gods wrath ſhall be powred, not on one member, but B on the whole ſoule, bodie, and conſcience; and that not for a time, vnder hope of better; but eternally without hope of releefe; and that not in this world, where there are comforts, helpes, and remedies; but in that vgly and darkſome place of torments: and that not amongſt liuing men, which might mittigate thy paine, or elſe bemone thee, and bewaile it with thee; but with the Deuills, and damned ſpirits, which will now laugh at thy deſtruction, and ſolace themſelues in this thy miſery, and will reioyce, as thou diddeſt ſerue them in earth, ſo now in hell to be thy tormenters. It may be therefore (by the way) good warning and wiſdome to vs all, when we feele the extremity of ſome bodily paine, to conſider with our ſelues, and ſay: O C then, what ſhall be my miſery and torment if I repent not; when not one member, but ſoule, bodie, and conſcience, ſhall be racked and tormented in the feeling and apphehenſion of the anger of the Lord of hoſtes.

In theſe three points, ſtands that curſe and wrath of God, vnder which euery man is borne. And theſe doe anſwer to the three degrees of ſinne, which are in vs: for as the two firſt Rules taught vs, there is in euery man by nature, till he repent, a threefold guiltineſſe. Firſt, a guiltineſſe of Adams ſinne. Secondly, the taint of originall and vniuerſall corruption. Thirdly, a pollution by many outragious actuall ſinnes. In the firſt of theſe, euery man is equally guiltie. In the ſecond, euery man is equally corrupt. But D in the third, euery one keepes that compaſſe, within which the Lord will keep them, by his limiting power.

Now as in our guiltineſſe of Adams ſinne, ſinne hath his beginning: in originall ſinne, his continuance: in actuall ſinne, his perfection: So anſwerable hereunto, the wrath of God (which alwaies ſtandeth oppoſite to ſinne) is begun in leauing vs by nature to the ſlauerie of Satan, is continued by death, & is accompliſhed in damnation.

And now theſe three Rules, I commend to the carefull and Chriſtian conſideration of you all; certifying you from God, that as you can neuer be ſaued, vnleſſe you repent: nor repent, vnleſſe you Search your ſelues (as here the Prophet biddeth,) So, that you can neuer ſearch your ſelues aright, till you be perſwaded, and reſolued of theſe three Rules, and of the truth of them all, euen in your hearts and conſciences:namely,Firſt,that thou art guiltie of Adams ſinne.Secondly,that thou art prone by nature to all euil in the world.Thirdly,that for theſe,thou art ſubiect to the wrath of God, and to all the curſes of his wrath: but when thou art in heart and conſcience reſolued that theſe are true, then thou art a fit Scholler for this Leſſon of the Prophet, Search thy ſelfe. For when thou goeſt, thus prepared vnto this Search, and eſteemeſt of thy ſelfe, as theſe three Rules haue deſcribed thee:then if thou Search into thy ſelfe,thou wilt finde thy ſeſe, and thy eſtate to be ſuch, as will cauſe thee to repent, returne, and take a new courſe: therefore,what the Prophet ſaid to thoſe Iewes, I ſay vnto you alſo, my brethren of this Realme of England, who are here now gathered together out of ſo many countries, and quarters of this Realme; yea in the name of the ſame God, I cry vnto you, Search, O Search your ſelues: and thinke it not a matter indifferent to doe, or not to doe it: but know it, that God commands you, as euer you will come to ſaluation; Search your ſelues. And the rather becauſe by theſe three Rules you ſee how much chaffe of corruption is in your nature,and what neede therefore it hath to be ſearched into, and fanned by Repentance. Be well aſſured thou man, whatſoeuer thou art, there is ſo much Chaffe in thee, that if thou ſearch not, and fanne it not out, thou wilt prooue nothing but Chaffe at the laſt day, and ſo be blowne away with the winde of Gods iuſtice into hell. Take hold therefore of this exhortation,and deferre it not.

Thou wilt not ſuffer thy Wheate to lie too long in the chaffe, for feare of hurting it: Is it then ſafe to ſuffer the chaffe of thy ſinnes and corruptions to lie cankering and rotting in thy heart? Be ſure that that little portion of grace, which thou attaineſt vnto, by liuing in the Church, and vnder the Miniſtrie of the word of God, will be putrifyed, and cleane corrupted with the Chaffe of thy ſinnes: therefore againe and againe, I exhort you to make conſcience of this dutie:Search into your ſelues fanne out this Chaffe, this preſumption of ours, & high eſteeming of our owne nature, and conceits of Gods fauour before we haue it,that ſo this Chaffe being blowne away, the Lord may then beſtow vpon vs ſoundneſſe of grace, and the foundation of all goodnes, which is a holy and humbled heart.

Saluation is ſuch a building, as the foundation thereof had need to be ſure and ſtrong; Ignorance, blindneſſe, and preſumption, are not ſufficient foundations for ſuch a building:therefore as no man will build a ſtrong houſe vpon any earth, but will firſt ſearch it, leaſt it prooue Sandie,and ſo ouerthrow all: So a wiſe Chriſtian will not build his ſaluation, vpon fancies and conceits, and naturall preſumptions: but will A Search, and looke into his heart: and finding theſe to be ſandie, and rotten,and therefore too weake for the foundation of ſo glorious a building, will refuſe them all, and labour to furniſh his heart with ſuch ſound grace, as whereupon he may truſt ſo weightie a worke, as is the Saluation of his ſoule. Againe, if thou wilt ſtand in the day of trial, then ſearch thy heart betimes and deſcerne betwixt Chaffe and Wheat: thou ſeeſt that chaffe flyeth away before the wind; but the good corne indures the Fan, and the fury of the wind: ſo in the day of triall, temptation, ſickneſſe, or open perſecution,the chaffe of naturall preſumption, and outward formality in Religion, will fly away: and it muſt be the B penitent, humbled, and beleeuing heart,which muſt then abide it out, and endure the fan of temptations and perſecutions.

And to conclude, Let not the Deuill deceiue thee, in making thee imagine or hope to pleaſe God, and yet to let thy corruptions lie vnſeene, and thy ſinnes vnſearched out, leaſt thereby thou marre all; for thou vſeſt not to lay vp wheat in thy garners, vntill it be purged from the Chaffe: ſo thinke not to ſtore vp any ſauing knowledge, or any other grace of God in thy heart, vntill the chaffe of vanitie be firſt blowne away, that ſo the holy graces of God, may be laid vp in the garners of thy ſoule. And therefore queſtionleſſe (to ſpeake one word to touch our common profeſſors, in the very ſore C of their ſoules) all knowledge that is ſtored vp in theſe impure and vnſearched hearts: is euen as wheat laid vp in the Chaffe, which is a thouſand to one ſure to be eaten vp by the chaffe, ſo that, when the winnowing time of trialls and perſecutions comes, I feare, that ſuch men will (for all their knowledge) ſhrinke aſide, and betray the truth: their knowledge then prooouing no better then chaffe, becauſe it was laid vp in an vnholy heart. If therefore thou wouldeſt ſtand and endure when Poperie or perſecution, or temptations come, if thou wouldeſt abide the fury of the fanne of temptations: now then exerciſe thy heart with the fanne of Gods law, Search and ranſacke it, purge out the chaffe of corruption, and ſtore vp knowledge in an holy D heart, and a good conſcience, and that will abide the violence of all temptations; yea when God ſuffers the Deuill to doe with vs as he did with Peter, to winnow vs like wheate, to ſift and trie vs as he did Iob, with the furious wind of all his malice: the knowledge will prooue Wheate, that will abide the winde, and gold that will abide the fire: thus glorious will it be in the ende, if we follow this holy Prophets counſell, and Search our hearts.

And thus much for the firſt point(namely) the duty of Searching here commanded, in which we haue ſtayed the longer, becauſe it is the foundation of all the reſt: and this beeing wel laid,the whole building will goe vp the faſter.

Now we come to the ſecond generall point here

here laid downe: that is, whom we muſt ſearch? the Prophet anſwereth, your ſelues; not other men, but your ſelues. This ſearch ſo vrged and inforced by the Prophet, muſt not be of other mens hearts and liues, but of our owne: our owne are our charge, and not other mens; and therein is the ſaying true, which elſe is moſt falſe; Euery man for himſelfe: for as euery ſoule muſt be ſaued by it ſelfe, ſo muſt it beleeue, Repent, and ſearch it ſelfe.

The dutie therefore here commanded, is, for euery man that would haue his ſoule to be ſaued, to Search it, and reforme it, and leaue others to be ſearched by themſelues. Here the holy Ghoſt meets with the common corruption of this world, (and that is) that men are Eagle eyed, to ſee into the liues of other men, but to looke into their owne hearts, and liues, they are blinder then Moles: they can ſee moates in other men liues, but diſcerne not beames in their owne: whereby it comes to paſſe, that they ſtumble and fall fowly: for the eies of moſt men are ſet vpon others, and not vpon themſelues: and thereupon it is, that an euill man, ſeeing other men, and not himſelfe, thinkes beſt of himſelfe, and worſt of other men: but contrariwiſe, a good man ſeeing himſelfe, and not other men, thinkes worſt of himſelfe, and better of other men: an euill man lookes outward, and iudgeth other men; but a good man lookes homeward and iudgeth himſelfe: and in iudging, condemnes himſelfe, farre aboue other men; and that becauſe by ſearching into his owne heart and waies, he knowes that by himſelfe, which he knowes not by any man in the world beſides.

So then we muſt ſearch, not other men, but our ſelues: our owne hearts and our owne liues are our charge, and burthen: the liues of other men concerne vs not, beeing priuate men, further then either to follow them beeing good, or take heede of them beeing euill: but to ſearch, or to be inquiſitiue into them, is no dutie commanded vs, but rather a foule and a baſe vice forbidden of God. Indeed Magiſtrats in their people, Paſtours in their congregations, and houſholders in their families are to ſearch: but they can ſearch onely for criminall cauſes, or open actuall ſinnes: but this ſearching muſt be of our hearts, which no man can ſearch, but our ſelues onely. Fewe men haue a calling to enquire into other mens liues, but euery man hath a calling to ſearch into himſelfe: but (alas) men doe farre otherwiſe, they ſuffer themſelues to rotte in their owne ſinnes, and erect an Inquiſition ouer other mens liues: and it is to be ſeene in daily experience, that thoſe men, who are the great Searchers and priers into other men, are the neglecters and forgetters of themſelues: And contrariwiſe they who doe narrowly Search themſelues and their owne wayes, and looke into the corners of their owne hearts, doe finde ſo much worke to doe with themſelues that they little buſie themſelues with other men. And thus much may ſuffice for that point.

It followeth; O Nation not worthie to be beloued.

The third point: Who muſt ſearch? the Iewes, who are here termed a Nation, not worthy to be beloued: and yet for all that, they are bid to ſearch themſelues, that ſo vpon their Repentance, they might be beloued. Where we may ſee the vnſpeakable loue of God, and his wonderfull mercie, offering grace vnto ſuch men, as are altogether vnworthy of it. Gods children are by nature like other men, and God findes nothing in them, why to reſpect them aboue others: but euen of his owne mercie, makes them worthy, who of themſelues are not: therefore how worthy is that God, to haue all the loue of our hearts, who loued vs, when we were not worthy to be beloued.

But let vs examine more particularly, why God doth call the Iewes a Nation not worthy to be beloued: I anſwer, God had bleſſed them aboue other Nations: He gaue them his Couenant of grace, and thereby made them his people, and committed to their truſt, his holy word and Oracles, but he delt not ſo with other Nations, neither had the Heathen knowledge of his lawes. Beſides all this, they had a better land then others about them, it flowed with Milke, and Honie, (that is, with all commodities, and delights) and though their Countrie was but little, yet themſelues ſo populous, and ſo powerfull, that whileſt they pleaſed God, no enemie durſt ſet vpon them.

Thus for ſoule and bodie, they were euery way a Nation bleſſed of God, a people beloued of God aboue all others. Now how did this people (thus beloued of their God,) requite this his loue, which they had no more deſerued, then any other Nation? Certainly, as they deſerued it not afore they had it, ſo they requited it not when they had it: but requited this loue God with ſinne, with rebellion, and with diſobedience. They tempted him, they prouoked him to wrath, they preſumed of his mercie, and prooued a moſt ſtubborne and ſtifnecked people, a froward generation: Moſes partly ſawe this in his owne experience, and better diſcerned it in the ſpirit of Propheſie: and therefore wondring at this their wickedneſſe, he cried out, Do you thus requite the Lord, O fooliſh people, & vnwiſe? thus: that is, with ſinne, and diſobedience, which is the onely meanes to diſpleaſe the Lord, and to prouoke him to wrath: for this cauſe, they are worthily called a fooliſh and vnkinde people by Moſes, and here by the Prophet, A Nation not worthy to be beloued: namely, for their vnthankfulneſſe, and vnkindneſſe: which was ſuch, as they not onely were ſlacke, and careleſſe in performance of ſuch duties as God required, but euen multiplyed their ſinnes, and committed thoſe foule rebellions, which his ſoule hated.

And amongſt many, the Prophet here in this Chapter, noteth three of their great ſinnes: for which they were a Nation not worthy to be beloued, Couetouſneſſe, Crueltie, and Deceipt, all which were the more hainous, and intollerable, becauſe they were the ſinnes of their Princes, their Rulers, and their Prieſts, who ſhould haue beene lights and examples to the reſt.

Now though euery ſinne in it ſelfe, is of that ill deſert, as it is able to caſt vs out of Gods fauour, and depriue vs of his loue: yet, behold, here God complaines, not vpon a little cauſe, but for wonderfull and exceeding vnthankefulneſſe, and vnkindneſſe in them, who of all other ſhould haue loued the Lord.

As a man cares not for hard vſage from him, whome he eſteemes not: but a little vnkindnes doth greatly grieue a man, from him who is loued and reſpected: ſo is it with the Lord our God; he loued not the Gentiles, as he did the Iewes, neither was he ſo bountifull vnto them: and therefore (as we may ſee) though they liued alwaies in ignorance, and continued alwaies in diſobedience, yet, the Text ſaith, the time of that ignorance God regarded not: but when as the Iewes his owne people, whom he choſe out of all people, and beſtowed his loue vpon them, and made his Couenant of grace with them, when they became vnkinde, vnthankful, forgetfull, ſtubborne, and rebellious, that cauſed the Lord euen to complaine of the indignitie, and to cry out by Moſes, Doe you thus requite the Lord, O fooliſh people and vnwiſe? And hereby the Prophet, O Nation, not worthy to be beloued: and therefore there is no man, but if he be asked what he thinkes of this Nation of the Iewes: he will anſwer, that they are a moſt vile and wicked people, a froward generation, and that they are worthy to taſt deepely of all Gods plagues, who ſo farre abuſed his loue and mercie.

Act.17.30.

But what doth this belong to them alone? and is Iſrael onely a Nation not worthy to be beloued? nay, I may cry out with as good cauſe, O England, a Nation not worthy to be beloued. For God hath beene as good a God to vs, as he was to them: and we haue been as vnkind a people to him, as they were to him. But that I may be free from diſcrediting our Nation, and from defiling my owne neſt: let vs prooue both theſe points, and lay them open to the viewe of the world.

1. Firſt therefore, the ſame mercies and farre greater; haue beene powred and heaped vpon vs: he hath called vs out of the darkeneſſe: Firſt, of Heatheniſme, and then of Poperie: his coueuenant of grace and ſaluation, he hath confirmed with vs, his treaſures of his word and Sacraments, he hath imparted vnto vs, his holy word neuer better preached, and the myſteries thereof neuer more plainely opened, ſince the time of the Apoſtles: and as we haue religion, ſo we haue it vnder a Religious Prince, whereby it comes to paſſe, that theſe bleſſings of ſaluation, we inioy not in ſecret, or by ſtealth: but we haue it countenanced by authoritie: ſo that religion is not barely allowed, but euen as it were thruſt vpon men. Beſides all this, we haue a land alſo that floweth with milke and hony, it is plentifull in all good things: we haue libertie and peace vnder a peaceable Prince, and the companions of peace, proſperitie, plentie, health, wealth, corne, woole, golde, ſiluer, aboundance of all things, that may pleaſe the heart of man: thus hath God deſerued the loue of England.

2. But now England, how haſt thou requited this kindneſſe of the Lord? certainely euen with a great meaſure of vnkindneſſe: that is, with more and greater ſinnes then euer Iſrael did: ſo that if Moſes ſpake true of them, then may our Moſes much more truely cry out againſt England: doeſt thou thus requite the Lord thou fooliſh people? And if this Prophet ſaid thus of Iſrael for three ſinnes, then may it be ſaid of England for 300. ſinnes (O England) a Nation not worthy to be beloued; for thou haſt multiplyed thy tranſgreſſions, aboue theirs of Iſrael; euen as though thou hadſt reſolued with thy ſelfe, the more Gods kindneſſe is heaped on thee, the more to multiply thy ſinnes againſt him. For thou England, as thou haſt requited the Lord with ſinnes; ſo not with a few ſinnes, or ſmall ſinnes, or ſinnes, which hardly could haue beene preuented: for that had beene a matter of ſome excuſe, or not of ſo great complaint. But thy ſinnes are many, and greiuous, and capitall. And which is worſt of all, willfull and affected, euen as though God had deſerued euill of vs: and that therefore we ought malitiouſly to requite him.

If any man make doubt of this, and therefore thinke I ſpeake too hardly of our Church: I will then deale plainely, and particularly, and rip vp the ſores of our nation, that ſo they may be healed to the bottome.

The common ſinnes of England, whereby the Lord is requited, are theſe. Firſt, ignorance of Godswill and worſhip, (I ſpeake not of that compelled ignorance in many corners of our Land, which is to be pittied becauſe they want the means) but willfull, and affected ignorance. Men are ignorant, euen becauſe they will be ignorant. Meanes of knowledge were neuer ſo plentifull, and yet neuer more groſſe ignorance; is not he wilfully blinde, who will not open his eyes in the light? and can there be any darkenes at noone day, but it muſt be wilfull? But our Nation is darke and blinde in the Sunne-ſhine of the Goſpel, and groſſely ignorant, when the Goſpel beates their eares, and light ſhines round about them: ſo as if they cloſed not their eies, and ſtopped not their eares, they could not but both heare and ſee. Who would looke for ignorance after thirty fiue yeares preaching, and yet, many are as ignorant, as if they had beene borne and brought vp vnder Poperie: ſo that our people are as euill as thoſe in the daies of Chriſt, of whom the holy Ghoſt ſaith; Light is come into the world, but men loue darkeneſſe more then light. So knowledge is come into England: but many Engliſhmen loue ignorance better then knowledge. Alas, how many thouſands haue we in our Church, who knowe no more in religion, then they heare in common talke of all men, and which is worſe, they thinke it ſufficient alſo, and which is worſt of all, whereas they might haue more, they will not, but care not for it.

2. The ſecond maine ſinne of England, is Contempt of chriſtian Religion. Religion hath beene among vs this fiue and thirty yeares; but the more it is publiſhed, the more it is contemned, and reproached of many; in ſo much, as there is not the ſimpleſt fellowe in a Countrie towne, who although he knowes not one point of religion, yet he can mocke, and ſcorne ſuch as are more religious then himſelfe is: this is one of the moaths of England, that eates vp religion, this is grieuous in whoſoeuer, but moſt intollerable in two ſorts of men. Firſt, in them who are altogether ignorant, that they ſhould mock they know not what. A pitifull thing to heare one, who himſelfe cannot giue the meaning of one petition in the Lords prayer, to vpbraid other men, becauſe they are too forward: but it is the worſt of all, when men of knowledge, and ſuch as liue ciuilly, and would be counted good Chriſtians, and indeede of the better ſort, cannot abide to ſee others go a little before them: but if they doe, preſently they are hypocrites and diſſemblers. Thus not prophaneſſe, nor wickedneſſe, but euen Religion it ſelfe is a by-word, a mocking ſtocke, and matter of reproach; ſo that in England at this day the man or woman that begins to profeſſe Religion and to ſerue God, muſt reſolue with himſelfe to ſuſtaine mocks and iniuries, euen as though he liued among the enemies of Religion, and not among profeſſors; and as religion increaſeth and ſpreadeth it ſelfe, ſo doth the number of theſe mockers. O what a curſed ſinne is this? to contemne the greateſt fauour that God can giue vs, that is his holy religion: for the which we ſhould rather praiſe him all the dayes of our liues. All that God can giue a man in this world, is his goſpel; what then can God giue to be regarded, when his goſpell is contemned?

This ſinne was neuer amongſt the Iewes; they indeede regarded it not ſo as it deſerued, but who did euer make a mocke and ſcorne of it but England? O England, how canſt thou anſwere this? God ſends thee the moſt precious Iewell, that he can ſend to a Nation; and thou ſcorneſt it, and them that bring it, and them that receiue it; euen as though it were no bleſſing, but a curſe: ſo that as Chriſt ſaith to the Iewes, for which of my good workes doe you ſtone me? So may the Lord ſay to England, I haue giuen thee a fruitfull land, a bleſſed Prince, gold and ſiluer, peace and liberty, plenty and proſperitie: for which of theſe (O England) doeſt thou contemne my religion? The leaſt of theſe deſerue loue; but England hath a better then all theſe; that is, his Goſpell, and word of ſaluation: and yet, that alſo is contemned (as being nothing worth) and thoſe which confeſſe it, and thoſe that bring it, and conſequently God himſelfe that gaue it. If England had no more ſinnes but this: this deſerues, that it ſhould be ſaide of vs, that we are a Nation vnworthy to be beloued aboue all Nations, for ſome Nations would haue religion, that they might loue it, but they cannot haue it: ſome haue it, and loue it not: but in no Nation is it made a mocking-ſtocke, but in England. And where are thoſe men, but in England, who (like the dog in the manger) will neither entertaine Religion themſelues, nor ſuffer them that would: let vs in time take heede of this ſinne, as a ſinne that crieth to God, to reuenge ſo vile a diſhonour done to his maieſtie: neither is there any ſinne that more certainely foreſhewes, and more forcceably haſtens the remoouing of the Goſpell from vs. For high time is it to leaue louing, where loue procures diſdaine: And to ſtay giuing, where gifts are ſcorned.

Ioh. 10.32.

Carry home this leſſon to your great townes and cities where you dwel, for in theſe populous places are theſe great mockers, for where God hath his profeſſors, the deuil hath his mockers; and repent betimes of this ſinne: for hold on in mocking, and be ſure that God (who will not be mocked) will remooue his Goſpel from you; but if you leaue this ſinne, and entertaine the Goſpell (as it worthily deſerues) then be ſure of it, God will continue his Goſpell to you, and your poſteritie after you, in the face of all your enemies round about you.

There were then preſent inhabitants of the chief Cities and townes of the Land.

3. The third common ſinne of England, is Blaſphemie, many wayes, but eſpecially in vain ſwearing, falſe ſwearing, and forſwearing, and the abuſe of all the names and titles of the Lord God. This ſinne is generall, euen ouer the whole land, eſpecially, in Fayres, and Markets where men for a little gaine, will not care to call the Lord of Hoſts to be witneſſe to a lie, and the God of truth, to teſtifie an vntruth.

And which is worſt of all, Gods holy name is vſed in vaine oaths, and ordinarie talke, when men haue no cauſe to ſweare at all: ſo that it is moſt lamentable to ſee and obſerue, that the name of any man of honour, or worſhip, is vſed more reuerently, and leſſe abuſed, then that fearefull and glorious name, the Lord our God.

4. The fourth generall and great ſinne is, Prophanation of the Sabbath. A common ſinne euery where, and yet ſo great a ſinne, that where it raignes, in that Country, congregation, family, man or woman, there is no feare of God, nor any true grace in them: for the keeping of the ſabbath, is the maintaining, increaſing, and publiſhing of religion.

The fift ſinne of our Nation, is vniuſt dealing in bargaining betwixt man and man. Ho

A hard is it to finde an honeſt, ſimple, plaine dealing man: and that euen in ſuch great aſſemblies as this is, I feare preſent experience will teſtifie: you are now many thouſands gathered together, ſome to buy, ſome to ſell, ſome to exchange: Remember that I haue told you, an honeſt hearted and plaine dealing man is hard to finde: therefore labour to approoue your ſelues ſincere hearted men; remember the counſell of the holy Ghoſt; Let no man oppreſſe nor defraud his brother in bargaining: for the Lord is the auenger of all ſuch things. Theſe ſinnes are generall and vniuerſall as a canker: And ſo are the ſinnes of the 6, 7, and 8. Commandements; (though they be not altogether ſo common as B theſe be) Murthers, Adulteries, Vſuries, Briberies, Extortions, Couſonages, they are a burthen vnder which our earth groanes; and they crie againſt vs to heauen, ſo that vpon as good or much better cauſe may it be ſaid to vs, as to the Iewes: O Nation not worthy to be beloued.

Looke at the outward face of our Church, at the ſignes of Gods loue, which are amongſt vs, and at Gods dealing with vs; and behold we are a moſt beautifull Church, a glorious Nation, a Nation to be admired, and wondred at: but look at the liues of our ordinary profeſſors, looke at our ſinnes, & at our requiting of Gods loue; and we are a people of Sodome, as full of iniquities as they were, whoſe ſinnes are ſo many, ſo riſe, and ſo ripe, that at the laſt they will C euen bring downe fire and brimſtone, or ſome other ſtrange iudgement vpon vs, if repentance doe not preuent it, or the cries and prayers of holy men ſtay not Gods hand. So then let vs all here aſſembled, grant and confeſſe, that we are a Nation ſo far from beeing worthy to be beloued, as that we are moſt worthy to be hated, and to haue all the wrath of God powred vpon vs.

Now then, are we ſo? and ſhall we continue ſo ſtill? Nay that is worſt, and moſt wretched of all: then let euery one of vs learne this duty, enter into our ſelues, Search our hearts and liues, that they may lie open to our owne ſight, to the confuſion of vs in our ſelues, that in God by repentance we may be raiſed vp.

Our ſinnes lye open before the face of God, D and ſtinke in his preſence, and cry for vengeance: and before the face of Gods Angels, who bewaile them, & before the face of the Deuill, who reioyceth in our confuſions: and ſhall they lie hid onely to our ſelues? Now then, if we would haue them hid from God, and ſtop the crie that they make againſt vs, and keepe them from Satan, who accuſeth vs for them; we muſt ſo ſearch our ſelues, that they may lie open to our own hearts: Remember thou thy ſinnes, and God will forget them: lay them open before thy owne face, and God will hide them from his: Write them vp for thy owne ſelfe, and God will blot them out of his remembrance: but if contrariwiſe thou hideſt them, then aſſure thy ſelfe the more thou hideſt, and burieſt them, the more open doe they lie in the face of God: and then what will followe, but that they will all be diſcloſed at the laſt day, to thy eternall confuſion. Therfore againe, and againe, I exhort you in the name of God, Search your ſelues, find out your ſinnes, confeſſe them to God freely, and ingenuouſly: confeſſe their deſert to be Hell and damnation, humble your hearts to God, cry, and call for pardon as for life and death, purpoſe and promiſe to leaue them, begin a newe courſe of life, beleeue ſtedfaſtly, and doubt not of pardon and forgiueneſſe in the blood of Chriſt, continue in that faith and that new courſe of life: So may England preuent Gods iudgements, and quench that great action of vnkindneſſe, which God hath againſt them, and become a Nation as worthy (vpon their faith and repentance) in Chriſt to be beloued, as for their peace and proſperitie, they haue beene of all nations of the earth admired.

Hitherto of the third generall point.

4. The fourth generall point in this exhortation, is the time limitted them when they ſhould Search. Before the Decree come forth, &c. As though the Prophet ſhould ſay, Iſrael, repent, before God execute his iudgements on thee. For behold the gracious dealing of God, Man ſinneth, his ſinnes deſerue plagues, but God preſently plagueth not, but deferres it, he puts a time betwixt the ſinne and the puniſhment (ordinarily:) this he doth to ſhewe his mercie vnto mankind, becauſe that he would not deſtroy them, if they would amend. Therefore, after the ſinne he ſmites not preſently, but puts off his puniſhment, that in the meane time man may repent. Here the Prophet compares the Lord to a mother, for as ſhe conceiues the fruite in her wombe, and beares it a long time, ere ſhe bring it out: ſo the Lord after a mans ſinnes, or a peoples ſinnes, conceiues, that is, ordaines, and decreeth a iudgement for it, but he keepes it vp, and all that while he beares it; But as ſhe when her time is come, then trauailes and brings forth; ſo when the time that God hath appointed is come, and ſtill ſinne is not repented of: then his iuſtice trauailes to be deliuered of that iudgement, which Mercie hath kept vp ſo long a time. Thus the olde world had an hundred and twenty yeares giuen them for time of repentance; all that while God was in conceiuing, at laſt when their ſinnes were ripe, and no hope of amendment: then God trauelled, and brought forth a fearefull birth, namely, the vniuerſall flood, to waſh away, and take reuenge vpon the vniuerſall iniquities of thoſe times. So many hundred yeares he gaue vnto the Iewes, long he was in conceiuing their deſtruction, and oftentimes he had it at the bringing forth, as in the captiuity of Babylon, and vnder Antiochus; yet his mercy ſtaied it, and ſtil he trauelled longer: tells them here by the Prophet, that yet the decree is not come forth, (though it be conceiued:) but at laſt when Iſ- rael would not Repent, but grew worſe and worſe, (as in Chriſt his time) then hee could containe no longer, but trauelled indeede though with griefe, yet he hath brought forth: and what? a moſt fearefull birth, euen an vtter deſolation of that kingdome and country, of their Citie, and Temple, and a diſpertion of their Nation ouer all the world: but as a woman at laſt is deliuered with danger and difficultie, with paine and ſorrow: ſo the Lord long conceiues, but at laſt brings forth his iudgements: yet it is with griefe and vnwillingneſſe, and he is loath (as it were,) and much grieued to execute his moſt iuſt iudgements on thoſe, who haue profeſſed his name: he often touched the Iewes a little, and as beeing vnwilling to ſmite them, he drue backe his hand againe: but at laſt when their ſinnes did ſo increaſe, and were ſo ſtronge, that they euen did wringe out by violence his plagues from him; then with much bewailing of their great miſerie (as we may ſee in Chriſt weeping for them,) he executed his iudgements on them. But as they are long a comming: ſo, when they come forth, they are the heauier; as a child, the more fulneſſe of time it hath, is the greater, the liuelier, and the ſtronger: ſo Gods iudgements, the longer God deferreth them, and is in conceiuing them, the heauier are they, when they come: that is manifeſt in the Iewes, once his own people, for he hath deſtroyed their land with an irrecouerable deſtruction, and ſmitten their poſteritie with a blindneſſe of mind to this houre, ſo that to this day, when the olde teſtament is read, the vaile is ouer their eies, that they cannot ſee the light of Chriſt Ieſus, but plodde on in fearefull and palpable blindneſſe.

This Doctrine hath ſpeciall vſe to this our Church, to teach vs to looke to our ſelues betimes, and try our owne wayes, and turne to the Lord, for we cannot tell how far off his iudgements are: in reaſon they muſt needs be neere, they haue beene ſo long deferred, and ſo iuſtly deſerued of vs. Certainely God hath long been in conceiuing iudgements and plagues for the ſinnes of England, and often hath Gods hand beene vpon vs, by warre, famine, peſtilence, inundations: and yet it hath beene puld backe againe; and his ſword hath beene put vp into his ſheath, and God hath ſtayed his birth euen in the very trauell, and we haue eſcaped, euen as a man, whoſe necke hath been vpon the blocke, and the Axe holden vp to ſtrike: ſo then yet the day is not come, yet we haue time: happie we that euer we ſawe this day, if now we haue grace to repent, and ſearch our hearts, for then we ſhall ſtay this Iudgement decreed, that it ſhall neuer come forth againſt vs: but if we deferre to repent, and put off from day to day, and lye rotting ſtill in our ſinnes: then knowe and be aſſured, that as the decree is eſtabliſhed, ſo it muſt needs come forth: and then when iudgement is come forth, and the ſtroke ſtriken, repentance is too late: therefore what he A ſaid to the Iewes, I ſay vnto vs, Search thy ſelfe O England, (a Nation not worthy to be beloued) before the decree come forth, which is alreadie paſt againſt thee. Thus much for the forth point.

5. Now followeth the laſt point; the reaſon of all. Why ſhould we ſearch our ſelues? The reaſon is included in the fourth point: For there is a Decree come forth againſt thee. And though the execution be deferred, and though God be vnwilling to take it out, yet without repentance, it is moſt certaine, it ſhall come forth, and be executed at the laſt. In one word this is the reaſon, Repent, or elſe certainely God will take vengeance. But (will mans heart ſay) is this true? Or rather theſe be but words to B feare men; and to keepe them in awe. I anſwer, for the proofe and experience hereof, neuer goe further then this place, and preſent example we haue in hand: the Prophet bids them Search, Search, and Repent; elſe as certainely as there was a iudgement conceiued, ſo certainely it ſhould be executed vpon them: they would not heare, nor ſearch, nor repent: but what followed; let all men iudge whether God is not true of his word to them or no: yea alas, who ſeeth not that God hath trauelled indeede, and hath brought foorth a fearefull iudgement on them, and hath made them for theſe thouſand yeares and a halfe, the gazing ſtock, the by-word, and the amazement of all the world.

C Thus was it threatened to the Iewes, and thus it is performed: and certainely thus hath it beene threatned, and thus ſhall it be performed to thee, O England, except thou preuent the iudgements that are comming; O happie England, that I may ſay to thee, it is yet but comming. For as for the miſerable Iewes, vpon them (alas) it is come alreadie: to thoſe poore ſoules it can be ſaid no more, Repent before the decree come forth; for it is nowe paſt: but thou art happie, for thy day is not yet come: yet I may ſay to thee, Repent before the decree come forth: and O happie England, that thou maieſt heare this word (Before) ſounding in thine eares. Therefore my beloued brethren, who are D here aſſembled out (almoſt) of euery corner of this kingdom, heare my words, and carry them home with you into all countries. God is the ſame God ſtill, as iuſt, and as iealous, as euer he was: our ſinnes are as ill, nay, much viler then the Iewes were: how can it be then but that muſt fall to vs that fell to them: therefore the zeale of Gods glory, and my deſire of your ſaluations make me, that I dare not flatter, but tell you the truth: that is, that out of all queſtion, if we ſearch not our ſelues and repent, there is a generall iudgement in preparing for vs: certainely the Decree is out, and what can ſtop the execution of it, but Repentance; God hath long ſpared, and he hath beene long in trauelling, therefore (though nothing can be ſaid in way of propheſie) I am in my conſcience perſwaded to feare, and that out of infallible grounds of the word of God, that a plague, and a iudgement, and that moſt fearefull, hangs ouer England: and that it is alreadie pronounced vpon this Nation, and ſhall be as certainely executed, without a viſible reformation: and becauſe I may ſeeme to ſpeake ſomewhat at large, giue me leaue to giue you the reaſons inducing me hereunto.

1. Firſt, the Goſpell hath beene preached theſe fiue and thirty yeares: and is daily more and more, ſo that, the light therefore neuer ſhone more glorioſly, ſince the Primitiue Church: yet for all this, there is a generall ignorance, generall of all people, generall of all points, yea, as though there were no Preaching at all: yea, when Poperie was newly baniſhed, there was more knowledge in many, then is now in the body of our Nation: and the more it is preached, the more ignorant are many, the more blind, and the more hardened (euen as a Stithie the more it is beaten vpon, the harder it is) ſo they, the more they heare the Goſpell, the leſſe eſteeme they it, and the more they contemne it: and the more God calles, the deafer they are; and the more they are commanded, the more they diſobey. We Preachers may cry till our Lungs fly out, or be ſpent within vs, and men are mooued no more then ſtones. O alas, what is this, or what can this be, but a fearefull ſigne of deſtruction? Will any man endure alwaies to be mocked? then how long hath God beene mocked? Will any man endure to ſtand knocking continually? If then God hath ſtood knocking at our hearts fiue and thirty yeares, is it not now time to be gone, vnleſſe we open preſently?

But if we will know what this argueth, to contemne the Goſpell, and not to repent, when the word is ſo abundantly preached: reade the Story of Ely his wicked ſonnes. He ſpake vnto them, and gaue them godly counſell, but they hearkened not vnto the voyce of their Father: But will ſome ſay, that is no great matter, not to heare their Father is a common thing: but marke what followeth; They would not heare their Father becauſe the Lord would deſtroy them: a fearefull thing. Euen ſo it is with a nation, or a people: are they taught, and are they worſe and worſe? take heede: If Elyes ſonnes obey not, it is becauſe God will deſtroy them.

If therefore Elie, and many Elies haue ſpoken to England, and England heares not, England obeyeth not, England repents not: take heede the Lord in heauen ſay not, England will not heare the voice of the Prophets, becauſe I will deſtroy it. Let no man ſay, we take vpon vs to propheſie: we onely giue warning, and ſhewe the danger, by example of the like.

2. My ſecond reaſon is this. One iudgment executed, and not working Repentance, is alwaies a fore-runner of another: that Rule is certaine, and an euident truth, and needes no prouing. Now, we haue beene viſited with Famines, Earth-quakes, peſtilences, inundations, Thunder and lightenings, in winter, and moſt ſtrange and vnſeaſonable weather: but alas, all theſe haue taken no effect: where is the humiliation, repentance, and reformation which they haue wrought? therefore it muſt needes be, there remaines behind a greater iudgement. Men may be ſo madde to thinke theſe to be ordinarie things, and to come by courſe of Nature, and ordinarie cauſes: but certainely they are the ſhaking of the Rod, and forerunners of a greater iudgement, vnleſſe Repentance cut off their courſe. For looke as one cloud followeth another, till the Sunne conſume them; ſo one iudgement haſtens after another, and repentance onely is the Sunne, which muſt diſpell them.

3. Thirdly, it ſtands with the iuſtice of God, according as he hath reuealed it in the Scripture, eſpecially in Deut. 28. out of the whole Chapter, it muſt needes be gathered as a Rule. I will curſe that people which breake my lawes, now we may not deny, but this land of ours, is for abundance of ſinne, a people of Sodome. All kinds of ſinnes, in all eſtates of men, rage and raigne euery day more and more; therefore I conclude, that vnleſſe we repent, and ſo diſſolue this cloud of iudgement, that hangs ouer our heads: it cannot be but a moſt fearefull tempeſt is to come at the laſt, and when it is come, it will be too late to wiſh they had done it. Therefore in the bowells of Chriſt Ieſus, let this be to intreate and to exhort you all, to ſearch and looke into your ſelues, that for repenting and changing your wayes, you may get the ſword againe into his ſheath, which is alreadie drawne out, but yet hath not ſtricken home, and may quench the wrath which is already kindled, but yet burnes not out as it wil doe, if by repentance we quench it not: and doe this euery one, as you tender the ſaluation of your owne ſoules, and the continuance of the Goſpell to this glorious Nation, and the peace and proſperous ſtate of this Church and common wealth. For let men make what cauſes they wil, it is certainely ſinnefulneſſe that ouerturnes kingdomes, and changeth ſtates, as all theſe kingdomes and ſtates haue felt, who haue continued finally to contemne the Goſpell.

It followeth; And you be as chaffe, that paſſeth on a day.

The Prophet proceedeth, and deſcribeth more plainely the manner and ſtate of that plague, which God will ſend vpon them: the meaning was partly opened before, to be in effect thus much; Search your ſelues, leaſt God take his fanne and try you, becauſe you would not try your ſelues, and finding you vpon the triall, not ſound wheate, but light chaffe, blow you to hell with the winde of his wrath: the Metaphor which the Prophet vſeth is this, he compares the Lord to a husbandman, great & rich, the whole world is his corne field: ſeueral natiōs, (as this of ours for one) are his heaps of corn: but theſe heaps of corne be full of chaff,

A that is, theſe particular Churches, are full of hypocrites: now a wiſe husbandman letteth corne and Chaffe lie together no longer, then till the winde doth blow, and then he appoints his fanning time to ſeuer his corne from his chaffe, and to blowe away his chaffe, and lay vp his corne: ſo God, the great and wiſe husbandman, will not let the Chaffe lie for euer amongſt the Wheate, he hath therefore appointed his fanning times, when to blowe the Chaffe into hell, and to gather his wheat into heauenly garners.

Now Gods winnowing times are two: the one is at the laſt day, after this life, and that is Gods great winnowing day of all his Corne (that is of all men) whē the bad ſhall be ſeuered from the good for euer, neuer to be mingled againe B with them, but by the ſtrong and powerfull fanne of his laſt and finall iudgement to bee blowne into Hell: the winde of whoſe wrath, at that day, ſhall be ſtronger to blow them all away, then all the winde in the world to blow way one handfull of light Chaffe.

2. Gods other fanning time, is in this world, and that is alſo double. The one is, when the word is preached: the preaching of the word is one of Gods fans: For when the Goſpell is preached to a Nation or Congregation, it Fannes them, and tries them, and purgeth them, and ſo ſeuers them, that a man may ſee a manifeſt difference of the chaffe and the wheat, that is, of the godly man, and the wicked man: this preaching of the Goſpel doth Iohn the Baptiſt expreſſely cal a Fanne: where the holy Ghoſt purſueth C this whole Metaphor moſt plainly ſpeaking of Chriſt, he ſaith, Whoſe Fanne is in his hand, and he will throughly purge his Floore, and gather his weat into his garner, but the chaffe he will burne with fire vnquenchable. The winde of this fanne of the word preached is ſo ſtrong, as that it ſeuers the Chaffe from the Wheate, that is, good profeſſors from hypocrites in the viſible Church, and blowes ſo ſtrongly vpon the wicked, that it brings them to the beginning of hell euen in this world, for it ſo worketh vpon the conſcience, as if it cannot conuert them, it ſtrikes them with feare, terrour, and torment, either in life or at death, which torment of conſcience is the very flaſhes of hel fire.

Matth.3.

D But, when this firſt Fanne of the word, will not ſerue to bring men to repentance, (for the word preached, doth not confound a man actually, but onely pronounce the ſentence, and thereby ſtrike the conſcience) then God hath another fanne, and that is the fanne of his iudgement: and that fanning or winnowing time is, when he executes his vengeance and his iudgements on a Nation: this is his latter fanne, when the firſt will not preuaile, this is his powerfull and ſtrong fanne driuen about with the winde of his wrath, this fanne went ouer the olde world, and ſwept them all away, and went ouer the nation of the Iewes, and we ſee they are no more.

1. Theſe three fannes of God, make a threefold ſeparation of the Chaffe from the Wheat, that is, of the wicked frō the elect: with the fan of his word, which is powerfull, he ſeuers them in affection, and diſpoſition, and makes a diſtinction of them, ſo as generally the Wheate is knowne to be Wheat, and Chaffe diſcerned to be Chaffe, by the preaching of the word: but though the tares be known to be tares, yet both growe together, ſo that the word onely ſeuers them in affection, and ſets ſeuerall notes of diſtinction vpon them both.

2. But then the ſecond fanne of his iudgements is more violent: for thereby he ſeuereth thē aſunder in ſoule, gathering the ſoules of the godly as his wheat into the heauens, and blowing the ſoules of the wicked into hell: but yet the bodies of them both lie together, as partakers of the ſame iudgement, ſo ſubiect to the ſame corruption, and are all lodged in the ſame graue of the earth, and death hath like dominion ouer them all.

3. But afterwards at the laſt day, at Gods great harueſt, and great winnowing time, he then with the wind of his power, ſeuereth them aſunder in ſoule and bodie. Wheate from the Chaffe, Sheep from the Goates, and ſeparateth them, neuer to be mingled againe for euer and euer: and then with the wind of his wrath, he blowes the Chaffe into fire vnquenchable, and with his louing fauour gathereth his weate into the euerlaſting and glorious garners of heauen.

So then, the firſt ſeuereth them in affection. The ſecond, in ſoule, for a time. The third, actually in ſoule and bodie for euer and euer.

Now of theſe three winnowing times, the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh here properly of the ſecond: namely, the fanne of Gods iudgement: ſo that the meaning of the Metaphor is this: ſearch your ſelues and repent betimes, leaſt God come vpon you with ſome fearefull Iudgements, becauſe you haue ſo long contemned the fanne of the word, and finding you too light to abide the tryall, doe take you away in the iudgement, and caſt you into hell: for as ſure as the fanne of the word hath made difference of you, which are chaffe, and which are Wheat, ſo ſure ſhall the fan of his iudgements blow away the chaffe to hell & damnation. Thus much for the meaning.

Now for the vſe, for vs in England, the caſe ſtands thus: Our Church doubtles is Gods corne field, and we are the corne heape of God: and thoſe Browniſts and Sectaries are blind and beſotted, who cannot ſee that the Church of England is a godly heape of Gods corne: but withall we muſt confeſſe, we are full of chaffe: that is, of prophane and wicked Hypocrites, whoſe hearts and minds abound in ſinnes and rebellions: and many of our beſt profeſſors are alſo too full of chaffe (that is) of corruptions, and doe giue themſelues too much libertie in many ſinnes; but alas, the pure wheat, how thin is it ſcattered? how hard to finde a man (at leaſt a family) which dedicate themſelues to the Lorde, in holie and ſincere obedience, and labour to make conſcience of all ſinnes: now therefore, ſeeing we are Gods corne field, and we haue ſome pure wheat amongſt much chaff, therefore God will winnow vs to finde out the corne, if he haue but one corne of wheate in a handfull of chaffe, but one good man of many, he will ſtirre all the heape for thoſe few cornes, he will not care to blowe all the chaffe to hell, to finde out thoſe fewe cornes of weate, to lay them vp in heauen: ſo that out of all queſtion, England being ſo full of chaffe, muſt look to be winnowed.

Now for the firſt Fanne of his word, it hath beene vſed in this land theſe fiue and thirtie yeares, and that as powerfully, and as plentifully as any where in the world, & yet (alas) many are more God-leſſe, more ignorant, more prophane then euer they were, yea wickedneſſe groweth, and the chaffe increaſeth aboue the Wheat; be ſure therefore, that God will bring his ſecond Fanne vpon vs; becauſe we will not ſuffer the firſt, the milde and gentle fanne of his word to trie and ſearch vs; therefore he will bring the fearefull fanne of his iudgement, and with it, he will blowe ſoule and bodie into hell, with thoſe our ſinnes and corruptions, which we would not ſuffer the fanne of Gods word to blow from vs. The firſt hath ſo long blowne in vaine, that the ſecond muſt needs come vpon vs, and it hath alreadie begun to blowe: three or foure blaſts haue blowne ouer vs, famine, peſtilence, earthquakes, fire, water, wind, theſe haue ſo blowne ſome of vs, that they haue taken away a great number of vs. For vs that remaine, this onely remaines, that we ſtrengthen our ſelues by grace, to be able to ſtand againſt the next blaſt, for come it will, and when it comes, no wealth nor worldly thing can inable vs to endure it, onely faith and repentance, and the grace of God will ſtand at that day. Now therefore, in that ſo fearefull a fanning abideth vs: ſeeing it is ſo nere (as appeareth by the blaſts already paſt ouer vs, which are nothing but the forerunners of a greater tempeſt:) what ſhould be our care (except we care not to be blowne body and ſoule into hell) but to labour to eſchewe this fearefull fanne of Gods wrath: or at leaſt, if it come vpon vs, that it may not blowe vs to hell, but haſten vs to heauen. If thy heart be touched to aske how this may be: I anſwer thee, only to follow the Prophets aduice in this place, by ſearching and trying our ſelues. The way to eſcape Gods triall, is to try thy ſelfe: and to eſcape Gods iudgement, to be a iudge to thine owne ſoule, and ſo the way to eſcape the fearefull fanne of God, is to fan thine owne heart by the law of God. For whomſoeuer the firſt fanne (that is the word of God) doth work vpon: theſe men are neuer blowne away with the fan of Gods iudgements. O then, entertain the word of God into thy heart, ſubmit thy ſoule vnto it, let it pierce, and try, and ranſacke thy heart, and lay before thee thy wretched eſtate by thy ſinnes, and when thou ſeeſt thy nakedneſſe and miſerie, confeſſe it, bewaile it, be humbled for it, cry and call for mercie and forgiueneſſe; pray againſt thy ſpeciall ſinnes, ſtriue to purge them out, as the poiſon of thy ſoule, craue grace from God againſt thy ſinnes: and if thou ſeeſt any ſinnes more welcome to thy nature, more deere vnto thee, and which more preuaile againſt thee, then others doe, pray againſt theſe ſinnes, and ſtriue againſt them aboue all: and endeuour, that by the fanne of Gods word, they may be blowne away from thee. When thou haſt done this, then marke what wil come of it; when thou haſt fanned thy ſelfe, God will not fanne thee: but when the fan of his iudgement comes, and bloweth ſo ſtrongly vpon the wicked, then the Lord finding thee already fanned, and clenſed by his word, will ſpare thee, and his iudgement ſhall either blow ouer thee, and paſſe by thee vntouched (as ouer Lot, in the deſtruction of Sodome) or elſe ſhall fanne out all thy corruptions, and blow thee vp to heauen, to be laid vp as pure wheat in the heauenly garners, and manſions of glorie which Chriſt aſcended to prepare for thee.

In the plague at London, there died ſome weeke almoſt 2000. a weeke in 92. but in 1603. there died 3300. in a weeke.

Now then amongſt thoſe many buſineſſes, with which this world doth comber euery one of vs (all which ſhall periſh with the world it ſelfe) let vs good brethren, ſpare ſome time for this great buſineſſe. Martha may be combred about many things, but this is that one thing which is neceſſarie: therefore whatſoeuer is done, let not this be vndone. Once a day put thy ſelfe and thy life vnder the fanne of Gods law, try thy ſelfe what thou art, and thy life, how thou liueſt. Once a day keepe a Court in thy conſcience, call thy thoughts, thy words, and deeds to their tryall: let the ten Commaundements paſſe vpon them, and thy ſinnes and corruptions which thou findeſt to be chaffe, blow them away by repentance, ſo ſhalt thou remaine pure and cleane wheate, fit for the houſe and Church of God in this world, and for his kingdome in heauen. But, if we will not doe this, then alas, what will follow? my heart grieueth to vtter it: but I muſt, vnleſſe I ſhould be a falſe Prophet: And therefore I will. Our long peace, plentie, and eaſe haue bred great ſinnes, ſo great, that they reach to heauen, and prouoke Gods Maieſtie to his face, and ſo ſtronge, that they will violently draw downe iudgements from God vpon vs: which when they come, they wil be ſo powerfull, and ſo violent, that they will blowe vs away like chaffe, and bring this kingdome to ſome miſerable ruine. O therefore how happie are we, if we can entertaine this doctrine, and practiſe it: for in ſo doing, we ſhall preuent Gods iudgements, we ſhall continue the Goſpel to this land, and preſerue this glorious Nation from beeing deſtroyed or diſpeopled, by ſome fearefull iudgement.

Beloued, you come hither to this place, purpoſely to buy and ſell, and thereby to better your eſtates in this world: how happy then are you, if beſides the good markets you make for your bodies and eſtates, you learne alſo how to make your ſelues abide the triall of Gods iudgements, and how to be made pure corne, fit to repleniſh the garners of heauen, and how to continue Gods fauour and the Goſpell to this Nation. If thou goe away with this leſſon, thou haſt a Iewell more worth, then if thou ſhouldeſt goe home poſſeſſed of all the great riches of this Faire: you call this and ſuch like times, Faire times: but if thou learne this leſſon right; then thou maiſt ſay, that this was the faireſt day indeed, that euer ſhone vpon thee, ſince thou waſt borne. This precious Iewell which I haue ſpoken of all this while, I here offer vnto thee. Euery one brings hither ſomething to be ſolde, this is the marchandize that I bring, and ſet to ſale vnto you: what euer commoditie any of you bring, it is from ſome quarter of this land, but all is from the earth, but this that I bring, it is from heauen: and all the earth cannot yeeld it: and as it is from heauen, ſo it is of a heauenly vertue, and will worke that which all the wealth in this faire is not able to doe: therefore caſt not to buy the baſeſt, and let paſſe the beſt of all: and neuer alledge that it is aboue thy compaſſe, and being a Iewell, it is too deere and coſtly for thee: for I offer it freely vnto you, and to euery one of you: I pronounce vnto you, from the Lord, that here this bleſſed doctrine is offered vnto you all, in his name, freely, and that you may buy it without mony. Happie is that day when thou comming ſo farre to buy things for thy bodie, & paying ſo deere for them, doeſt meete with ſo pretious a Iewell, the vertue whereof will ſaue thy ſoule, and payeſt nothing for it. Thou maieſt hereafter reioyce, and ſay: I went to buy and ſell, and to helpe my bodie: but I haue alſo learned to ſaue my ſoule. I went thither to helpe to maintaine my owne eſtate: but I haue learned to helpe to mainetaine England in proſperity: for aſſuredly, if we would all of vs learne this leſſon, and practiſe it, wee might aſſure our ſelues of the glorious proſperity of England, to continue from generation to generation: whereas alas, if we continue and go forward in our ſinnes, and impenitency, it is greatly to be feared, that neither the Goſpel, nor this peace, will reach to our poſteritie. Therefore now to make an ende; I once againe, and laſtly commend this doctrine to you all, and euery one of you, (for this marchandiſe that I bring, is of that nature, that though ſome take it, yet there is alſo inough for euery one) and I commend it vnto you, euen from the very mouth of God himſelfe: thinke of it I charge thee, as euer thou lookeſt to appeare before the face of Chriſt Ieſus the great iudge, at the laſt day; and if thou wouldſt eſcape the rigor of that iudgement, enter now into iudgement with thy ſelfe, and ſearch thy ſelfe: if thou now wilt not receiue this doctrine, then ſhall it at the laſt day be a bill of Enditement againſt thee, for if it ſaue thee not, it ſhall condemne thee, thinke of it therefore ſeriouſly, as a matter that concernes thy ſoule and bodie: yea, and thy poſteritie, and this whole Realme, all which ſhall ſmart for it, if we repent not. And if the bodie of our people, and thoſe, whoſe hearts are wedded to the world, will not entertaine this doctrine; then I turne vnto you that feare the Lord, & to you I direct my laſt warning: Search, O ſearch, and try your hearts and liues, renewe and reuiue your faith and repentance, that if iudgement doe come and blowe vpon this nation, and driue the Goſpel from it, and it to hel; that yet you may haue a teſtimony to your conſciences, that you did not pull downe this generall calamitie, but for your parts laboured to haue preuented it, by your earneſt prayers and hartie repentance: that ſo, the poſteritie enſuing may not curſe you, but ſpeak reuerently of you, and praiſe God for you, and wiſh that all had done as you did; for then had they enioyed this goodly land, and all Gods bleſſings with it, as we their forefathers did before them: & ſo ſhall our names not rot, but flouriſh amongſt the poſteritie to come, which ſhall be partakers of the deſolation: And when we haue renewed our repentance, let vs then euery one of vs, deale with the Lord by earneſt prayer for this church and Nation, that the Lord would ſhew his mercie vpon it, and continue vnto it this peace and the Goſpell: it is nothing with the Lord to doe it, his powerfull hand is not ſhortned, he can continue our peace, when the Papiſts look for hurli-burlies, he can continue the Goſpel, when they hope to ſet vp their Idolatry againe: let vs therefore plie the Lord with our prayers, and with Moſes ſet our ſelues in the breach, and pray for the ignorance of the multitude, and bewaile their ſinnes, who bewaile not their owne. So did Noah, Daniel, and Iob, in their ages, and praied for the people in generall calamities: let vs all be Noahs, Daniels, and Iobs in our generations: If we doe thus, then when Iudgements come, we ſhall either turne them away from our Nation, or at the leaſt, we ſhal deliuer our owne ſoules.

Ezek. 14. 13, 14.

Let vs now turne to the Lord in prayer, and becauſe it cannot be hoped, but that this our generall ſinfulneſſe muſt needes end with ſome heauy iudgement; let vs deſire the Lord ſtill to ſpare vs, and giue vs time and leiſure to repent: that ſo, we entring into our ſelues, and ſearching our hearts, and turning to the Lord; he may turne away his imminent iudgements: and that when his wrath doth burne out indeed, we may then be counted worthy in Chriſt, to eſcape thoſe things which muſt needs come vpon the world. Amen.

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPFVLL SIR EDWARD COOKE, Knight, his Maieſties Atturnie Generall, and Sir Thomas Heskith, Knight, Atturnie of his Highneſſe Court of Wards and Liueries, and one of his Maieſties Honourable Counſell in the North, Grace and peace from IESUS CHRIST.

Right Worſhipfull, giue me leaue to put you both in one Epiſtle, whome one ſeruice, one place, one profeſſion, one order, one Religion, haue ſo neerely combined: as you are Brethren many waies, and eſpecially in the profeſſion and practiſe of one Religion: ſo vouchſafe to be ioynt Patrons of this little after-birth, this fœtus poſthumus, of that worthie man M. Perkins, now deceaſed. I ſend you here one of the ſhorteſt, and one of the ſweeteſt of his Treatiſes: had it beene as well brought forth by me, as it was begot by him, it had beene a child not vnworthie of ſo great a father: but ſeeing it is now as a fatherleſſe child, be you the Tutor to this Orphane, at whoſe hands Orphans and Wards haue beene well vſed. The father whilſt he liued was a ſhining light to this our Church, and beeing dead, is a ſhining ſtarre in heauen, for he turned many to righteouſneſſe, and his doctrine will ſhine in Chriſtian Churches, whilſt the Sunne ſhineth vpon the earth. The ſubiect of this Treatiſe is the miniſterie, whereof are laid downe the duties and dignities. And well doth he couple theſe two together: for ſome can challenge the dignities of the Miniſterie, and cunningly caſt the duties from their ſhoulders: others performe the duties, but are kept from the dignities duly belonging to that calling: but as he that will doe the duties, may iuſtly challenge the dignities; ſo he that will expect the dignities, muſt doe the duties of a Miniſter: therefore in this building, theſe two beames are in great wiſdome well ſet together by this wiſe maſter builder, and ſo cloſely coupled, as the idle or ambitious man cannot looke at the dignities, but he muſt withall behold the duties, nor the painfull and laborious man ſee his dutie, but withall ſhall ſee the dignitie thereto belonging.

And ſurely (Right Worſhipfull) none might better haue written of this ſubiect then he: for who may more worthily deſcribe the dignities of the Miniſterie, then he, who neither by doctrine nor conuerſation, was euer the leaſt diſgrace vnto his Miniſterie? Or who may better challenge the honour of his calling, then he, who was euer an honour to his calling? And who might better teach the duties of the Miniſterie, then he, who ſo diſcharged them, as Enuie it ſelfe cannot iuſtly reprooue, and the Enemies themſelues cannot but [a] commend? And who may better teach them to others, then he that carefully practiſed them in his owne perſon? And as none could be a fitter Author of this diſcourſe then he, ſo not many fitter Patrons then your ſelues: not many in your profeſſion better ſchollers, nor any that better loues ſchollers then your ſelues: and you are ſome of thoſe fewe in this wicked age, who willingly yeelde all dignities and due reuerence to ſuch Miniſters, as you ſee willingly to diſcharge the duties of good Miniſters. Well would it be with the Miniſterie of England, (and the better with it, the better with England) if all as great as you, were as good friends to it as you. And if the Papiſts except, and ſay how can this be, for that you haue beene perſecuters of their Prieſts? Let me anſwer once for you, who often anſwer for many diſtreſſed men: they perſecute you with ſlander, that ſay you perſecuted them, (but be content to beare your part in Popiſh ſlanders, with our Prince and State, our Counſellours and Cleargie, our Parliaments and Lawes, for none of theſe haue eſcaped theſe viperous tongues) for though you haue executed the Lawes vpon ſome of them in your ſeuerall places, yet not with ſharpeneſſe nor ſeueritie, but with mercifull iuſtice, and that alſo not as they were Prieſts, but Plotters, Practiſers, ſubuerters, and ſeducers: and as they were Prieſts, you ſought their reformation, not their ruine. And if they, who can hardly diſcharge themſelues from beeing Prieſts of Baal, haue had but Iuſtice, and that alſo tempered with Mercie, it ſhewes how good regard you haue, and how much you eſteeme all good and faithfull Miniſters, which are Gods Interpreters. In a word, if all our Miniſters were ſuch as this Treatiſe deſcribeth, or came but as neere it as the Author hereof did, and if all our great ones did vſe and eſteeme good Miniſters as you doe, we ſhould then ſoone pull the Miniſterie from vnder that foote of contempt, with which this prophane age doth daily tread vpon it. The Church of Rome, who are farre wiſer in their kinde then the children of light, haue taken other and ſtrange courſes to magnifie the Cleargie. They teach, that the ſtate Eccleſiaſticall, is ſo farre more excellent then the Ciuill, as the Sunne is then the Moone, and that not in ſpirituall onely, (for that we denie not) but in temporall power, pompe, and eſtate: and that therefore the chiefe of their Cleargie, is as far aboue the mightieſt Emperour, as the Sunne is aboue the Moone; and as the Moone borroweth her light from the Sunne, ſo doth the Emperour his ſtate and power from the Pope.

They teach, that the Cleargie is a ſtate ſo diſtinct, and ſo abſolute of it ſelfe, as it hath not to doe with the Ciuill ſtate, yea they exempt their Cleargie, from beeing any way ſubiect to the temporall Magiſtrate. And though their crimes, be neuer ſo many or monſtrous, yet the Prince, or Ciuill authoritie, hath nothing to doe to take notice thereof, much leſſe to puniſh them: and hereupon great volumes are written, and many Acts and decrees are made in their Canon Law, De exemptione Clericorum. They extoll their Cleargie aboue the Temporaltie, allowing the Prieſts both bread and wine in the Sacrament, but leauing the Laitie bread alone. They make them in their Maſſe, mediatours betwixt Chriſt and God the Father, and creators of their Creator and Redeemer, when and as often as themſelues liſt. And finally, they ſend for the moſt part, all their Cleargie immediately to heauen without let, whereas all the Temporaltie (except Martyrs) muſt paſſe by Purgatorie. Here are great buildings, but on a ſandie foundation, goodly Caſtles, but built in the ayre; if theſe deuiſes were of God, they would certenly ſtand, but their long tottering, threatens a ſudden fall.

Contrariwiſe, our Church, or rather the corruption of our Church, by auoiding this Scilla, haue fallen into Charibdis, by auoiding one extremitie, haue fallen into the other, by taking too much dignitie and authoritie from our Miniſterie, and by laying too much pouertie, contempt, and baſeneſſe vpon it. It were a worke worth the labour of the wiſeſt heads, to put downe the true meane betwixt both extreames, and worth the labour of our Noble King, to take order that the meane be kept, without riſing to the right hand, or falling to the left. This ſhort Treatiſe may happe to giue ſome light and directions therein, or at leaſt may encourage and ſtirre vp their hearts, in whoſe hands it is to doe it: Vnder your worthie names would I haue it ſee the world, not ſo much for that I am bound to you both in many priuate and particular reſpects, (though that be much) as for that I know you both to be of ſo right and reformed a iudgement in this caſe, as you would haue none Miniſters but of ſufficient gifts, and vnblameable liues, nor thoſe Miniſters put to their penſions, or vncertaine ſalaries, but to haue certen and ſufficient maintenance proportionable to their charge, and beſeeming the honour of a Chriſtian Church: God continue you both ſtill in that minde, and make many more of the ſame with you, ſo ſhould we haue as flouriſhing a Church as any Chriſtendome hath ſeene. Goe forward in that, and other your religious reſolutions, it is the true way to honour, both here and in a better world: ſtand firmely for the truth, and boldly againſt the Popiſh enemies thereof, as hitherto you haue done: Religion had neuer more cauſe to thanke you, and all that doe ſo, then now it hath, for her enemies were neuer ſo inſolent ſince they were our enemies: but if you and others hold on, as in your ſeuerall places you haue well begunne, and others take the like courſe, there is hope their inſolencies will be eaſily (if timely) repreſſed, and themſelues neereſt the fall, when they imagine they are in the full. The Lord bleſſe and aſſiſt you in your painfull places, and make you on earth Instruments of his glorie, to the good of his Church, ſo ſhall you be veſſells of glorie in the kingdome of Heauen. And thus commending this little Treatiſe to your reading, and my ſelſe to your fauour, I take leaue, and will euer reſt, 1605.

A TREATISE OF THE DVTIES AND DIGNIties of the Miniſterie.

Iob 33.23,24.

If there be with him a Meſſenger, an Interpreter, one of a thouſand to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe:

Then will he haue mercie on him, and will ſay, deliuer him that he goe not downe into the pit, for I haue receiued a reconciliation.

cohe- of words the reſt.

A IN this Chapter and the former, Elihu a holy, learned, noble, and wiſe young man, had conference with Iob in matters of high and excellent Diuinitie: the points of his conference are theſe: From the firſt verſe of this Chapter, to the ſeauenth verſe, is a Preface to his ſpeech. From thence to the 13. he repeateth certaine propoſitions of Iob, and reproo ueth them: from thence to theſe words, he inſtructeth Iob in certaine points touching Gods dealing with ſinners: and thoſe are two.

1 How God preſerueth a ſinner from falling.

B 2 How God reſtoreth a ſinner beeing falne.

1 The meanes whereby God preſerueth a ſinner, are ſet downe to be two principally.

1 By Admonitions in dreames and viſions.

2 By ſcourges and chaſtiſements, when the firſt will not preuaile. And theſe are laid downe from the thirteene verſe, vnto theſe words.

2 Then followeth the 2. point, namely the reſtoring of a ſinner when both the meanes formerly ſpoken of, haue not preuailed with him, but that thorough his corruption he is fallen: and concerning this point, he handleth theſe particulars.

C 1 The remedie and meanes of his reſtoring.

2 The effect that followeth thereupon.

1 The remedie is layde downe in theſe words now read vnto vs; then followeth the effect, which is, that when a ſinner is reſtored by repentance, then the graces of God are plentifully powred vpon him, both for ſoule and bodie: from theſe words, to the end of the chapter.

The ſumme and ſcope of this Text is a deſcription of the Inſtrument by whome God raiſeth a ſinner into the ſtate of grace and ſaluation: namely, a Miniſter of his word, and he is deſcribed.

The intent then of this Scripture, is that God vſeth meanes in his mercie, to preſerue ſinners from falling into ſinne, but if they do, then he in much greater mercy afordeth thē meanes and helps to riſe againe. And this is the ſumme and ſubſtance of the words. Now, that meanes and remedie, is the matter I purpoſe to ſpeake of, out of theſe words: The meanes then to reſtore a ſinner after a fall, is to raiſe him by repentance to a better eſtate thē he was before, and that is incluſiuely, and by implication taught in this text: But the inſtrument by whom that great worke is to be wrought, is here in plaine termes laide downe to be a Miniſter of God, lawfully called and ſent by God, and appointed by his Church to that great dutie. So that theſe wordes containe a worthie deſcription of a true Miniſter, and he is here deſcribed:

1 By his titles, which are two, An Angell. An Interpreter.

2. By his rareneſſe, One of a thouſand.

3. By his office: which is, to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe.

4. By the bleſſing that God giueth vpon the labours of this true Miniſter: which is, then God will haue mercie vpon the ſinner.

5. By his Commiſſion and authoritie in the laſt words: God will ſay, Deliuer him that he goe not downe into the pit, for I haue receiued a reconciliation. Let vs ſpeake of them in order as they lie in the text, and firſt of his titles.

1. Title, an Angel.

1. The firſt title of a Miniſter of God is, he is called a Meſſenger, or an Angel: and not here alone, but elſe where in the Scripture. Mala. 2. 7. He is the meſſenger of the Lord of hoſtes. And in the Reuelation, the Miniſters of the ſeauen Churches, are called the Angels of thoſe Churches. So that it is apparant, a true Miniſter is an Reuel. 2. and 3. chap.

19649a

He is Gods Angel & the Churches.

Angel of God in one place, and in the other place, the Angell of the Church. He is an Angel, or Meſſenger, ſent from God to his Church.

Vſe 1. for Miniſters.

This conſideration affords matter of much vſe. And firſt for Miniſters themſelues.

a This Sermon was preached in the Vniuerſitie Church, to the bodie of the Vniuerſitie.

The moſt of vs in this place [a] are either Prophets, or ſonnes of the Prophets.

1. Vſe for Miniſters. They muſt preach Gods word, as Gods word.

If thou be a Prophet, thou art Gods Angell. If a ſon of the Prophets thou entendeſt to be, then marke thy dutie, Prophets and Miniſters are Angels, in the very inſtitution of their calling. Therefore thou muſt preach Gods word, as Gods word, and deliuer it, as thou receiueſt it, for Angels, Embaſſadors, and Meſſengers, carry not their own meſſage, but the meſſage of their Lords and Maſters who ſent them, and miniſters cary the meſſage of the Lord of hoſtes, therefore they are bound to deliuer it as the Lords, and not their owne.

For they carie not their own meſſage but Gods.

In the firſt Epiſtle of Peter 4.11. we are bid, If any man ſpeake, let him ſpeake, not onely the word of God, but as the word of God. Gods word muſt be ſpoken, and as Gods word: then ſhew thy faithfulneſſe to the Lord, in diſcharging thy hands ſincerely of that meſſage, which he hath honoured thee to carry: Gods word is pure, therefore purely to be thought vpon, and to be deliuered. Then let all that are Gods Angells, and would be honoured as his Angells and Embaſſadors, thinke it no leſſe reaſon to doe the dutie of Gods Angels, leaſt (as many men marre a good tale in the telling) ſo they take away the power and maieſtie of Gods word, in the maner of deliuering it.

2. Vſe for Miniſters. They muſt preach Gods word in the euidence, & demonſtration of Gods Spirit.

The ſecond vſe concernes the Miniſters alſo: are they Gods Angels? therefore they muſt preach Gods word in euidence and demonſtration of the ſpirit of God: for he that is Gods Angell, the ſpirit of that God muſt ſpeake in him: Now to ſpeake in the demonſtration of Gods ſpirit, is to ſpeake in ſuch a plaineneſſe, and yet ſuch a powerfulneſſe, as that the capacities of the ſimpleſt, may perceiue, not man, but God teaching them in that plainneſſe, and the conſcience of the mightieſt may feele, not man, but God reprooning thē in that powerfulneſſe: That this is ſo, appeares by S. Paul. If a man propheſie aright, (ſaith the holy Ghoſt) the vnlearned or vnbeleeuing man comes in, he thinkes his ſecret faults are diſcloſed and laid open, he thinkes all men ſee his nakedneſſe, and doe reproone him for it, he therefore falles downe, and ſaith, Surely God ſpeakes in this man.

1.Cor.14. 24,25.

Thisis done, Firſt, by teaching plainly.

In which words, obſerue an admirable plainneſſe, and an admirable powerfullneſſe (which a man would thinke could not ſo well ſtand together.) Firſt plaineneſſe, for whereas the vnlearned man perceiueth his faults diſcouered, it followeth neceſſarily he muſt needs vnderſtand, and if an vnlearned man vnderſtand it, then conſequently it muſt needes be plaine. Secondly, powerfulneſſe, in that his conſcience, is ſo conuinced, his ſecret faults ſo diſcloſed, and his verie heart ſo ript vp: that he ſaith, Certainely God ſpeakes in this man. This is the euidence and demonſtration of Gods ſpirit: It is thought good commendation before the world, when men ſay of a Preacher, Surely this man hath ſhowne himſelfe a proper ſcholler, of good learning, great reading, ſtrong memorie, and good deliuerie, and ſo it is, and ſuch commendation (if iuſt) is not to be contemned: but that that commends a man to the Lord his God, and to his owne conſcience is, when he preacheth ſo plainely to the capacitie, and ſo powerfully to the conſcience of a wicked man, as that he thinkes doubtles God is within him. Art thou therefore an Angel of God, then magnifie the ſpirit of God, and not thy ſelfe in thy Preaching of his word.

Secondly, powerfully in that plaineneſſe.

Miniſters muſt magnifie God. ſpirit, and not themſelues in preaching.

The 2. vſe for hearers. They are to receiue thē and their doctrine willingly and reuerently.

The next vſe is for the hearers, and they are here taught, that if their Miniſters be Angels ſent them from God, then they are to heare them gladly, willingly, reuerently, and obediently: gladly and willingly, becauſe they are Ambaſſadors; reuerently, and obediently, becauſe they are ſent from the high God, the King of Kings, and doe deliuer his embaſſage. God ſaith, the people muſt ſeeke the Law at his mouth: and good reaſon, for if the Lawe be the reuealed will of God, and the Miniſter the Angel of God, then where ſhould they ſeeke the will of God, but at the mouth of his Angel? The reaſon therefore followeth well in that place: they ſhould ſeeke the Law at his mouth, for he is the meſſenger of the Lord of hoſtes: and this muſt all Chriſtians doe, not onely if their Doctrine be pleaſing vnto them, but though it croſſe their corruption, and be quite contrary to their diſpoſitions, yea though it be neuer ſo vnſauoury and hard vnto nature, yet in as much as it is a meſſage from thy God and King, and the teacher the Angel or Meſſenger of that God, therefore both he and it, muſt be receiued with all reuerence, and with the very obedience of the heart and ſoule. And this is the cauſe why a conuenient reuerence and honour is to be giuen of all good chriſtians, euen to the perſons of Gods Miniſters (eſpecially when they adorne their high calling with a holy life:) euen becauſe they are Angels of God. Saint Paul teacheth, that women ought to be modeſtly attired in the congregation, becauſe of the Angels: it is not onely, becauſe the holy Angels are preſent, and alwaies beholders of our ſeruice of God, but euen becauſe the Miniſters which are Angels and Meſſengers ſent from God, are there, deliuering their Meſſage and Embaſſage receiued from God. And thus we haue the firſt title giuen to the Mniſter: he is an Angel.

Malach.2.7.

For it is Gods meſſage, though they be men that bring it.

1.Cor.11.

An Interpreter.

2. Title, an Interpreter, and that two waies.

Secondly, he is an Interpreter: that is, one that is able to deliuer aright the reconciliation, made betwixt God and man: I ſay not, the Author of that reconciliation, for that is the Godhead it ſelfe: nor the Worker of this reconciliation, for that is the ſecond perſon, Chriſt Ieſus: nor the Aſſurer or Ratifier, for that is the holy

1. Gods Interpreter to his Church.

Ghoſt: nor the Inſtrument of it, for that is the glad tidings of the Goſpel: but I ſay he is the Interpreter of it; that is, firſt one that can open and explane the couenant of grace, and rightly lay downe the meanes how this reconcilation is wrought. Secondly, one that can rightly and iuſtly apply meanes, for the working of it out.

Thirdly, one that hath authority to publiſh and declare it when it is wrought: and by theſe three actions, he is Gods Interpreter to the people.

2. Mans Interpreter to God.

Then he is alſo the peoples Interpreter to God, by being able to ſpeake to God for them, to lay open their wants and nakedneſſes, to confeſſe their ſinnes, to craue pardon and forgiueneſſe, to giue thankes in their names for mercies receiued, and in a word, to offer vp all their ſprituall ſacrifices vnto God for them: and ſo euery true Miniſter is a double Interpreter, Gods to the people, and the peoples to God. In which reſpects, he is properly called Gods mouth, to the people, by preaching to them from God, and the peoples mouth to God, by praying for them to God: & this calling ſheweth how great and glorious a calling this Miniſterie is, if it be rightly conceiued. Now then for the vſe of it.

1. Vſe. Miniſters muſt haue the tongue of the learned.

Firſt, if euery true Miniſter muſt be Gods Interpreter to the people, and the peoples to god, then hence we learne, that euery one, who either is or intends to be a miniſter, muſt haue that tongue of the learned, whereof is ſpoken in Eſay. 50. 4. where the Prophet ſaith (firſt in the name of Chriſt, as he that is the great Prophet and Teacher of his Church, and ſecondarily, in the name of himſelfe, and all true Prophets, while the world endureth.) The Lord God hath giuen me a tongue of the learned, that I ſhould know to ſpeake a word in ſeaſon to him that is wearie, where note the weary ſoule, or troubled conſcience, muſt haue a word in ſeaſon ſpoken to him for his comfort, and that cannot be ſpoken without the tongue of the learned. And laſtly, that tongue of the learned muſt be giuen of God. Now to haue this tongue of the learned, which Eſay ſpeakes of, what is it but to be this interpreter, which the holy Ghoſt here ſaith a Miniſter muſt be: But to be able to ſpeake with this tongue is, Firſt, to be furniſhed with humane learning. 2. With diuine knowledge, as it may by outward meanes be taught from man to man: but beſides theſe, he that will ſpeake this tongue aright, muſt be inwardly learned, and taught by the ſpirit of God: the two firſt he muſt learne from men, but the third from God; a true Miniſter muſt be inwardly taught by the ſpirituall ſchoole-maſter the holy Ghoſt. Saint Iohn in the Reuelation muſt take the booke, that is the Scripture, and eate it, and when he hath eaten it; then (ſaith the Angel) he muſt goe preach to Nations, tongues, people, and to Kings; which was done, not that Saint Iohn had not eaten that booke, in the comming downe of the holy Ghoſt, the very ende of whoſe comming was to teach them ſpiritually: but that in him Chriſt might teach his Church for euer, that no Miniſter is fit to Preach, to Nations and to Kings, vntill they haue eaten the booke of God: that is, till after and beſide all the learning that man can teach them, they be alſo taught by the ſpirit of God himſelfe, and this teaching is it that makes a man a true interpreter, and without this he cannot be: for how can a man be Gods interpreter to his people, vnleſſe he know the minde of God himſelfe, and how can he knowe the minde of God, but by the teaching of the ſpirit of God. For as no man knoweth the thought of a man, but the ſpirit of man that is in him: So the things of God knoweth no man, but the ſpirit of God. Indeede we may be mans interpreter by humane teaching, and may interpret the Scriptures truely and ſoundly as a humane booke or ſtory, for the increaſe of knowledge; but the diuine and ſpirituall interpreter, which ſhall pearce the heart, and aſtoniſh the ſoule of man, muſt be taught by the inward teaching of the holy Ghoſt.

1. He muſt be furniſhed with humane learning.
2. With Diuinitie.
3 He muſt be inwardly taught by Gods ſpirit.

Reuel. 10. 8.

Act. 2.

This is to eat the booke of God.

1. Cor.

This is no approbation to Anabaptiſts who depend onely on reuelations, and neglect all meanes.

Let no man thinke I here giue the leaſt allowance to Anabaptiſticall fancies, and reuelations, which are nothing, but either dreames of their owne, or illuſions of the Deuill, for they contemne both humane learning, and the ſtudie of the Scripture, and truſt wholly to reuelations of the ſpirit; but Gods ſpirit worketh not but vpon the foundation of the word: onely I teach this, that a Miniſter muſt be a diuine Interpreter, an Interpreter of Gods meaning. And therfore he muſt not onely reade the booke, but eate it, that is, not onely haue the knowledge of Diuine things flowing in his braine, but ingrauen in his heart, and printed in his ſoule by the ſpirituall finger of God: and therefore for this end, after all his owne ſtudy, meditation, conference, Commentaries, and after all humane helps, he muſt pray with Dauid, Open thou mine eyes, that I may ſee the wonders of thy lawe. The diſcerning of thoſe wonders requires a ſpirituall illumination, and the opening of them, requires the tongue of the learned. Therefore after all the ſtudie which fleſh and blood, and humane reaſon can yeelde, pray with the Prophet, Lord giue mee the tongue of the learned, that I may be a right Interpreter of thy holy will.

Pſal. 119. 18.

2. Vſe for Miniſters. Eſay 13. They muſt be holy and ſanctified men: and ſo be firſt of all interpreters to themſelues.

Furthermore inaſmuch as Miniſters are Interpreters, they muſt labour for ſanctitie, and holineſſe of life. In Eſay, the kingdome of Aſſiria is ſaid to be ſanctified or ſet apart, to deſtroy Gods enemies. If there be a certaine kind of ſanctification, neceſſarie for the worke of deſtruction, then how much more is true ſanctification neceſſarie for this great and glorious worke of the edification of Gods Church? A Miniſter is to declare the reconciliation betwixt God and Man, and is he himſelfe not reconciled? Dare he preſent another man to Gods mercie for pardon, and neuer yet preſented himſelfe? Can he commende the ſtate of grace to another, and neuer felt the ſweeteneſſe thereof in his owne ſoule? Dare he come to preach ſanctification with polluted lips, and out of an vnſanctified heart? Moſes might not ſtand vpon the Mount in Gods preſence, till he had put off his ſhooes from off his feet, Exod. 3. and dare any man preſume to come into this moſt high & holy preſence of the Lord, vntill he haue mortified his corruptions, and caſt off the vnrulines of his affections?

Leuit. 10. 3.

In Exodus, the Prieſts are bid to ſanctifie the people, and in Leuiticus it is ſaid, that God will be ſanctified in all that come neere him, but who come ſo neere vnto him as the Miniſters doe? So that it is apparant, Miniſters doe ſanctifie the people, and in ſome conſtruction, God himſelfe: Now, ſhall they one way be ſanctifiers of the people, and no way of themſelues? Surely if it be ſo, they are but lame Interpreters. And this is the reaſon doubtleſſe, why vnſanctified Miniſters, and ſuch as are of a looſe conuerſation, beſtow ſuch fruitleſſe labours in the Church: many want no learning, no abilitie to interpret, and yet how fewe ſoules doe they bring to God? Some it may be are conuerted by their Miniſterie, that God may ſhew, the efficacie is not in the perſon of man, but in the ordinance of God, but few doubtleſſe (for ought that we can ſee:) to teach vs, how God hateth him which will take in hand to reconcile others to God, himſelfe being vnreconciled. Seeing then Miniſters are Gods Interpreters to the people, to declare and publiſh their reconciliation with God, and that they cannot be reconciled, vnleſſe they be ſanctified, and can ſo hardly be ſanctified by the miniſterie of an vnſanctified man: let therefore all true Miniſters of God, firſt, be Gods Interpreters to their owne conſciences, and their own ſoules Interpreters to God, then ſhall they knowe more perfectly how to diſcharge the office of true Interpreters betwixt God and his people.

For els they will hardly doe good to others.

And thus we haue the true titles of a true Miniſter.

Now it followeth in the Text, One of a thouſand.

2. Part of the deſcription is the rareneſſe of a good Miniſter. He is one of a thouſand.

Here is the ſecond part of this deſcription, which is by the rareneſſe, or ſcarceneſſe of good Miniſters: which is laid downe in a very ſtrange phraſe, namely, that a true Miniſter, one that is a right Angell, and a true Interpreter, is no common or ordinarie man, but thin ſowne, one of many, Nay one of a thouſand.

The meaning.

The meaning hereof is to be conceiued either properly, or figuratiuely: in the figuratiue ſenſe, it is ſpoken in relation to Miniſters themſelues: in the proper ſenſe, it hath a compariſon with all men: the figuratiue and hyperbolicall ſenſe is, that of all the Miniſters in the world, not one of many is a right Angell, and a true Interpreter: the plaine and proper ſenſe is, that amongſt the men of this world, there is not one of a thouſand which prooues a true miniſter. For this point let vs examine three points: the truth of it, the reaſons of it, and the vſe of it.

1. The truth hereof.

The truth hereof is manifeſt, by the experience of all ages, wherein it is ſtrange to obſerue, how fewe men of any ſort, eſpecially of the better ſort, affect the calling of a Miniſter: and which is more ſtrange, how few of thoſe that are miniſters in name and title, do deſerue theſe honourable names of an Angell, and an Interpreter; and the truth is too manifeſt in common practiſe, to inſiſt much vpon it: rather therefore let vs ſee the reaſons of it, & they be theſe principally.

2. The reaſons hereof.
1. Reaſon the cõtempt of it: it beeing hated by wicked men.

Firſt, the Contempt that lyeth on that calling, it beeing alwaies hated, by wicked and prophane men, becauſe it diſcouers their filthineſſe, and vnmaskes their hypocriſie: and their doctrine ofttimes is a fretting corraſiue to their conſcience, that they cannot welter, and wallow ſo quietly, and ſecretly in their ſinnes, as otherwiſe they would, therefore is it that they ſpurne both againſt the calling, and the men, and watch them narrowly, & take hold of their leaſt infirmities, thereby to diſgrace them: iudging that to caſt contempt on that calling, is to remooue ſhame from their own ſhameful courſes: nor is it poſſible, but that they ſhould thus hate this calling, in aſmuch as they hate ſo deadly both that Lawe and Embaſſage which they bring, and that God, whoſe Embaſſadors they are.

This hatred & diſgrace in the wicked world, was that that cauſed Ieremie to cry, woe is mee, and made him in the ſeeming of his natural reaſon, curſe the time that euer he was a Prophet, for ſaith he, I am a man of contention, euery man is at ſtrife and at enmitie with me.

Ierem. 15. 10.

2. Reaſon, the difficultie of diſcharging the duties.

The next reaſon is, The difficultie of diſcharging the duties of his calling: to ſtand in Gods preſence, to enter into the holy of holieſt, to goe betwixt God and his people, to be Gods mouth to the people, and the peoples to God: to be the Interpreter of the eternall law of the olde Teſtament, and the euerlaſting Goſpel of the New: to ſtand in the roome, and to beare the office of Chriſt himſelfe, to take the care and charge of ſoules: theſe conſiderations are ſo many amazements to the conſciences of ſuch men, who do with reuerence approach, and not with raſhneſſe ruſh vnto this ſacred ſeate: this made Saint Paul cry out, who is ſufficient for theſe things. And if Paul ſaid, Who is? no maruell though many a man ſay, I am not ſufficient, and do therefore draw their neckes from this yoake, and their hands from this plough, vntill God himſelfe or his Church doe preſſe them to it.

2. Cor. 2. 16.

3. Reaſon, want of maintenãce.

The laſt reaſon is more peculiar to this age of the new Teſtament, namely, want of maintenance and preferment, for them that labour in this calling: men are fleſh and blood, and in that reſpect muſt be allured, and wonne to embrace this vocation, by ſome arguments, which may perſwade fleſh and blood: the world hath in all ages beene negligent herein, and therefore God in his law took ſuch ſtrict order for the maintenance of the Leuites: but eſpecially now vnder the Goſpel, this calling is vnprouided for, when Deut. 10. 9. & 28. 2. Num. 18. 26.

it deſerues beſt of all to be rewarded: certainely it were a worthy Chriſtian policy, to propound good preferments to this calling, that thereby men of the worthieſt gifts might be wonne vnto it, and the want thereof, is the cauſe why ſo many young men of ſpeciall parts, and greateſt hope, turne to other vocations, and eſpecially to the Law, wherein at this day the greateſt parts of the fineſt wits of our kingdome are imployed, and why? But becauſe they haue all the meanes to riſe, whereas the miniſterie for the moſt part yeeldeth nothing, but a plaine way to beggerie: this is a great blemiſh in our Church, and ſurely I wiſh the Papiſts, thoſe children of this world, were not wiſer in their kinde, (in this point) then the Church of God: the reformation hereof is a worke worth the labour of Prince and people: and ſpeciall care is to be had in it, elſe it will not be reformed, for doubtleſſe had not God himſelfe in the old Teſtament, taken ſuch ſtraight orders for the liuings of the Leuites, they had beene put to no leſſe extremities, then is the miniſterie of this age. And this reaſon added to the other, makes them perfect; and all put together make a reaſon infallible: for who will vndergoe ſo vile a contempt, and vndertake ſo great a charge for no reward: and where there is ſo great contempt, ſo heauie a burthen, and ſo meane a reward, what maruell, if a good Miniſter be one of a thouſand?

This makes many of our beſt wits turne from Diuinitie to aw.

Now let vs make vſe of this doctrine: The vſe is manifold, and yeelds inſtructions to many ſorts of people: Firſt, Rulers and Magiſtrates are here taught, if good Miniſters be ſo ſcarce, therefore to maintaine and increaſe, and doe all good they can to the ſchooles of the Prophets, to Vniuerſities, Colledges, and Schooles of good learning, which are the Seminaries of the Miniſterie: herein the example of Samuel is very worthy to be followed, in whoſe dayes the ſchooles of the Prophets floriſhed, and euen Saul himſelfe, though he did much hurt in Iſrael, yet when he came to the ſchooles of the Prophets, his hard heart relented, he could doe them no hurt, nay, he put off his robes and prophecied amongſt them. So ſhould all Chriſtian Princes and magiſtrates aduance their ſchools, and ſee them both well maintained and well ſtored, the reaſon is euident and forcible.

3. The vſe of it.
1. To Rulers to maintaine Vniuerſities, Colledges, and ſchooles of the Prophets.

1.Sam.19.20, 21,22,23,24.

A good Miniſter is one of 1000. If therefore they would haue the number increaſed, let them maintaine the Seminaries. And againe, if Antichriſt to vphold his kingdome, the kingdome of Satan, be ſo carefull herein, to erect Colledges, and indowe them with liuing, to be Seminaries for his Synagogue, and vſe ſo great meanes to ſowe his tares in the hearts of young men, that ſo they may ſowe them in the hearts of the people abroad: ſhall not Chriſtian Princes be as carefull, or rather much more zealous, for the increaſing of the number of godly miniſters? ſhall Baal haue his 4. hundred Prophets, and God haue his Elias alone? great ſhame muſt it be to Ahab, or to any king, whoſe kingdome is in that eſtate.

The rather, becauſe the Pope doth ſo to vphold his ſuperſtition.

2.King.18.22.

The Ieſuites diligence is ſuch in teaching, and the readineſſe of ſome of their nouices ſuch in learning, (the diuell himſelfe doubtleſſe putting to his helpe withall) that in three yeares (as ſome of them ſay of themſelues) they proceede in humane learning, and in the fourth, in Diuinitie: which if it be ſo, then it may be a good Leſſon, for theſe our ſchooles of learning, and an inducement to mooue all that haue the gouernment therof, to labour to aduance learning by all good meanes, and to giue it more ſpeedie paſſage: And it may ſhame ſome that ſpend ſo many yeares in the Vniuerſitie, and yet alas for all that prooue not one of a 1000. In theſe our ſchooles are by Gods mercy, many young trees planted by the riuer ſide of this godly Orchard, which by good ordering and dreſſing, may prooue goodly trees in the Temple of God, and ſtrong Pillars in the Church: but they are like tender plants, and muſt be cheriſhed. Princes and great men, by allowing maintenance; and the Gouernours by eſtabliſhing good orders, and looking carefully to their execution, muſt ſee that theſe plants haue ſufficient moiſture to grow ſpeedily to perfect ripenes, and that then they be tranſplanted in due time, into the church and common wealth: theſe be the trees ſpoken of in Ezekiell, which growe by the ſides of the riuer, which floweth out of the ſanctuarie: Waters out of the Sanctuarie muſt nouriſh them, and ſo they growe vnto their perfection: but take away theſe waters: take away the liberality of Princes, and good diſcipline from the Vniuerſities, and theſe trees muſt needs decay and wither: which if they do, then the ſmal number of good Miniſters will be fewer and fewer, and of one of a 1000. there will not be one of 2000.

And the Ieſuits to continue their late founded Hierarchie.

Ezek 47.1. &c.

In the next place, Miniſters themſelues are here taught: Firſt if good miniſters be ſo ſcarce, then let euery man feare to make them fewer then they be: euery man therefore for himſeſe, labour firſt for abilitie, then for conſcience to diſcharge his duty: namely to be an Angel, to deliuer faithfully Gods-Embaſſage, and a true interpreter betwixt God and his people: thus if thou doeſt, then howſoeuer the number of good Miniſters is ſmall, yet it ſhall be nothing ſmaller for thee.

2. Vſe for Miniſters.
1. Let euery man feare to make them fewer.

2. If they be ſo few, labour to increaſe them, for the more they are, the leſſe burthen lieth vpon each particular man, therefore let euery Miniſter by his teaching, and by his conuerſation labour ſo to honour his calling, that he may thereby allure and drawe others to a loue and liking thereof.

2. Labour to encreaſe thē by winning others to it.

3. Are good Miniſters too thinne ſowne? are there ſo fewe of them: then let all good and godly miniſters giue the right hand of fellowſhip one to another, and ioyne together in loue, and by that meanes arme themſelues againſt the ſcorne and contempt of the world: we ſee they Galat 2.9.

3. Let them one loue an other and ioyne together.

that are of a kindred, or a brotherhood, or any kind of ſociety, the fewer they are, the more cloſely doe they combine, the more firmely doe they hold together againſt forraine force: ſo ought Gods Miniſters to doe, becauſe their number is ſo ſmall: if they were many, leſſe danger in their diſvnion. But ſeeing they are ſo fewe, the more it concerneth them to cut off contentions, and all occaſions of debate, and to ioyne hand in hand againſt theſe common aduerſaries.

3. Vſe for Students.
1. To conſecrate themſelues and their ſtudies to that calling.

In the third place, young Students are here taught, ſeeing a true miniſter is but one of a thouſand, that therefore they bend their ſtudies, and their thoughts to the Miniſterie, for they well know it is an old Prouerbe, the beſt things are hard to come by: and certainely there are ſo fewe good Miniſters, becauſe the holy miniſtery in it ſelfe is ſo high and excellent a calling, and as it is a ſhame to the men that there are ſo fewe good miniſters, ſo it is a commendation to the calling: whoſe honour and excellencie is ſuch, that as we ſee here ſcarſe one of a thouſand attaines vnto it, therefore men of the moſt excellent gifts, are here inuited to dedicate themſelues vnto the moſt excellent vocation, yea, very reaſon it ſelfe would vrge a man to be one of a thouſand.

To furniſh themſelues with the true ornaments of a Miniſter.

2. And further, as they are to intend this calling as the moſt rare and excellent: ſo this muſt teach them likewiſe, to haſten to furniſh themſelues with all good helpes and meanes, that they may become true Miniſters and able Interpreters, and not too long to ſticke in thoſe ſtudies, which keepe a man from the practiſe of this high function: for it is not to liue in the Vniuerſitie, or in the Colledge, and to ſtudie, though a mā neuer ſo faſt deuoure vp learning, but to be a good Miniſter, is that that makes a man one of a thouſand.

4. Vſe for hearers.
1. To reuerence the perſon and receiue the doctrine.

In the laſt place, Hearers are here taught their duty, firſt to reſpect with reuerence the perſon, and to receiue with reuerence the Meſſage of euery true Meſſenger, ſeeing it is ſo rare a thing to finde a true Miniſter, for as nothing is more vile and baſe then an euill and lewde miniſter, (whom Chriſt compares to ſalt which hath loſt his ſauour, which is good for nothing but to be caſt out, and troden downe of men:) ſo is there none worthy of more loue and reuerence then a holy Miniſter: for as Eſay ſaith, their very feet are beautifull which bring glad tidings, and we ſhould kiſſe their feet which bring newes of peace: therefore all good Chriſtians are to receiue and vſe a good Miniſter, as S. Paul ſaith the Galathians did him, euen as an Angel of God. Haſt thou then a godly paſtor? runne to him for conference, for comfort, for counſell, vſe his company, frequent his ſermons, account him worthy of double honour, thinke it no ſmall or ordinarie bleſſing, for thou haſt one of a thouſand, and bleſſe God for beſtowing his mercie on thee, which he had denied to ſo many others: for ſome haue no Miniſter: ſome haue a Miniſter, but yet alas, he is not one of a thouſand.

Matth. 5. 13.

Galat. 4. 16.

2. Fathers to dedicate their ſonnes to the Miniſterie.

And further, all men that are Fathers, may here learne to conſecrate their children to God in the ſeruice of the Miniſterie, conſidering that it is ſo rare and excellent a thing to be a good Miniſter: nay, that man ſhould thinke himſelfe happie, and honoured of God, who may be father to ſuch a ſonne, as ſhall prooue one of a thouſand.

5. Vſe for all men.
Pray that God would encreaſe the number.

In a word to conclude this point, all men muſt here learne, ſeeing good Miniſters are ſo ſcarce, to pray the Lord of the harueſt, to thruſt out more labourers into the harueſt: and for thoſe that are called already, that God would make them faithful in that high function. And as Eliſha craueth of Elias, that the good ſpirit may be doubled and trebled vpon them, ſo that the number may be increaſed. And thus we haue the truth, the reaſon, and the vſe of this, that a good miniſter is one of a thouſand.

2. Reg. 2. 9.

It followeth, To declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe.

3. Part of the deſcription by his office, that is, to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe.

Here is the third part of the deſcription of a miniſter, that is, by his office to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe: that is, when a poore ſinner, by his ſinnes (the fouleneſſe whereof he ſeeth, and the burthen whereof he feeleth) is brought downe, as it were to the very gates of hell, when this ſinner by the preaching of the Law, is brought to a true ſight of this miſerie: and againe by preaching the Goſpel, is brought to lay hold on Ieſus Chriſt: Then it is the proper office of a Miniſter, to declare vnto that man his righteouſneſſe. Namely, that though in himſelfe he be as ill, and as foule as ſinne can make him, and as the law can diſcouer him to be: yet in Chriſt he is righteous, and iuſt, and by Chriſt ſo iuſtified, as he is no more a ſinner in the preſence and account of God; this is the righteouſneſſe of a Chriſtian man, this is the iuſtification of a ſinner. And to declare this righteouſneſſe to him that repentts and beleeues, is the proper dutie of a true Miniſter.

Act. 20. 21.

In the Acts Paul ſaith of himſelfe, that he witneſſed to the Iewes, and to the Gentiles, the repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. In which words is laide downe the complete duty of a Miniſter (as he is a publique Angel or Interpreter,) firſt, to Preach repentance, which a man muſt performe to God, whom by his ſinnes he hath grieuouſly offended; ſecondly, to preach faith in Chriſt, and free forgiueneſſe, and perfect ſaluation through that faith in Chriſt, to all that ſhall truly beleeue in him. And after both theſe followeth that which is here ſpoken of, which comprehendeth both the former; namely, to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe. So that in theſe words, are incluſiuely laide downe, theſe points of a miniſters calling: Firſt, a true Miniſter may and muſt declare vnto a ſinnefull man where righteouſnes is to be found, namely in Ieſus Chriſt the righteous. Secondly, how that

It comprehendeth theſe points.

1. He muſt declare where true righteouſneſſe is.

1. Ioh. 2.

2. How it may be obtained. 3. He muſt declare it to him, that is, 1. Shew that it is readie for him if he beleeue and repent.

righteouſneſſe may be obtained, namely, by doing two duties: Firſt by denying and diſclaiming his owne righteouſneſſe, and that is done by repentance; Secondly, by clayming and cleaning to Chriſts righteouſnes, & that is done by faith. Thirdly, a true Miniſter may & muſt declare this righteouſnes to him, that is, firſt publiſh and proclaime, that it is ready to be beſtowed on euery ſinner, which will thus apprehend it, and that it is able to iuſtifie and ſaue him: ſecondly, beſides a bare publication of this iuſtification, he muſt (as Paul did) witneſſe and teſtifie it to the conſcience of the ſinner, that it is as certainly true, as God is true. For as a witneſſe in doubtfull caſes is called, that by his Teſtimonie he may cleere the truth, ſo when the conſciences of poore ſinners are wauering and doubtfull what to beleeue, when they doubt of this righteouſneſſe, then is a true miniſter as a faithfull witneſſe of God to auerre and teſtifie the truth, from his owne conſcience, knowledge, and feeling of the infallible certaintie of Gods promiſes, vnto the doubtfull and diſtreſſed conſcience of the ſinner.

2. He muſt teſtifie, and aſſure him of it.

3. He muſt maintaine it, & auerre it againſt all doubts and temptations

Thirdly, beſides declaration and teſtification, he is to maintaine this truth, and this righteouſneſſe, (if the ſinners conſcience be yet not quiet) againſt all gaineſayers, againſt the power of darkneſſe, and all the gates of hell: that this is true and perfect righteouſneſſe to him that apprehends it, as afore is laid downe: and this is ſo infallible to euery ſoule that repents and beleeueth, that the Miniſter may aſſure it to the conſcience of the ſinner in the word of truth, and in the name of God, and may call to witneſſe all Gods Saints, and all his holy Angels, and may pawne vnto him his owne ſoule vpon it, that it is moſt true, that this is true, perfect, and all ſufficient righteouſneſſe.

This dutie is ordinarily peculiar to Miniſters.

Thus we ſee in ſome meaſure, what it is to declare vnto a man his righteouſneſſe. And this is the peculiar office of a Miniſter of God, and this is the height and excellency of his office. In the want of godly miniſters, I confeſſe that godly Chriſtian men may one helpe another in the performance of theſe duties, and that with profit, but it is the proper function of a godly miniſter to doe it, and the promiſe and bleſſing belong properly to him: as the conſciences of all penitent ſinners, will teſtifie in this caſe: let Dauids ſerue for many, who when he was caſt downe euen to the mouth of hell, by that fearefull diſcouerie of his two hideous ſinnes by Nathans Preaching: and when the faith of his ſoule beganne to wreſtle againſt Hell, and ſtriue againſt deſpaire, and to apprehend the mercie of God in Chriſt: then I ſay, could not the Teſtimonie of all the men in the world haue giuen him that ioy, comfort, and aſſurance, that Nathan did, when he ſaide in the word of a Prophet, and of a true miniſter, God hath taken away thy ſinne, thou ſhalt not die: what did Nathan here, but declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe? what did Nathan here but the duty of euery true Miniſter?

2.Sam.12.

1. Vſe for Miniſters.

If this be the office and dutie of a Miniſter; and if ſuch be the height and excellencie of his office, let vs ſee then what vſe we may make of it.

First, for the Popiſh Miniſterie, they doe inſufficiently declare it.

Firſt, concerning the miniſterie: It firſt diſcouereth how nakedly, weakely, and inſufficiently, the Popiſh Church doth declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe, who wil let a man ſeeke it in himſelfe, where alas it is not: for Paul himſelfe teſtifieth, that his deſire is, that he may be found out of himſelfe, and in Chriſt; and yet certainely, if euer man had righteouſnes of his owne worth truſting to, Paul had: this is the cauſe why ſo many of that Religion finde not that righteouſneſſe, which will pacifie and ſatisfie their conſciences, when they come to die; and why ſo many of them, when it comes to the pinch, doe then go out of themſelues, and with vs do ſeeke for this righteouſneſſe in Chriſt, where both aſſuredly, and ſufficiently is it to be found.

Philip.3.8,9.

Secondly, our owne.

Then for our owne Miniſterie, here they are taught: firſt the true manner of teaching, and declaring righteouſneſſe, namely this, not to preach the law alone, or the Goſpel alone, as ſome vnaduiſedly doe (but both without profit) but both the law and the Goſpel; the law to breede repentance, the Goſpel to worke faith: but in order firſt the law to breed repentance, and then the Goſpel to worke faith and forgiueneſſe, but neuer before.

Both the Law and the Goſpel.

2. To be holy men themſelues.

Secondly, they are taught to be holy, to be ſanctified and reconciled themſelues: for is it thy office to declare vnto man his righteouſnes, and not thy owne to thy ſelfe? and how canſt thou be a true witneſſe to teſtifie betwixt God and the ſoule of a ſinner, when thy owne ſoule knoweth not, nor feeleth the truth of it? certenly ſuch men are lame witneſſes betwixt God and the ſinners ſoule. Dauid ſaith to the ſinner, I will inſtruct thee in the way wherein thou ſhalt goe: but he firſt of all in the ſame, ſets downe his owne experience in a large ſtorie of his own repentance, and of Gods mercie on himſelfe. And though God ſometime doe ſatisfie, and ſaue the poore diſtreſſed ſoule of a ſinner, by the teſtimonie of ſuch men, to teach vs that the vertue is not in the men, but in the truth of Gods couenant: yet alas how few are they, to teach vs, how pleaſing it is vnto him, when a Miniſter is a declarer of that righteouſneſſe to others, which he firſt hath himſelfe: and is a witnes of that truth to others, which he firſt knoweth in his owne experience.

Pſal.32.

For els they will conuert but few.

3. Vſe to Miniſters: not to care for the contempt of the world.

Thirdly, the conſideration of this high excellencie of their calling, muſt arme all true miniſters againſt the ſcorne and contempt of the world, which by wicked men is caſt like duſt and myre into the face of Miniſters: let this ſuffice them, they are the men that muſt declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe, euen he that ſcorns and contemnes the miniſterie, he hath no righteouſneſſe in him, vnleſſe it be by the meanes of a poore Miniſter: then doe thou thy dutie, and he

2. Vſe for Students. To conſecrate themſelues to that high calling.

that mockes thee, hath cauſe to honour thee. And let this encourage Students to conſecrate themſelues to the miniſtery, for what calling hath ſo high an office, as this, to declare vnto man his righteouſnes? And aſſuredly how euer in this wicked world, thou art little accounted of (for if it did not ſo, it were not wicked:) yet thou art honoured in the hearts of all Gods children, and euen in the conſcience of ſome, whoſe tongues doe ſmite thee: & the ſoules of thouſands, when they die ſhal bleſſe thee, who in their liues cared not for thee: and the deuil himſelfe doth enuy, and the holy Angels themſelues doe wonder at the excellencie of thy calling, in that thou haſt power to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe.

3. Vſe for the hearers. Seeke righteouſneſſe both in the Law and the Goſpel.

2. What to eſteeme of Gods Miniſters.

4. Vſe for Fathers to make their ſonnes Miniſters.

In the next place, hearers may here learne; firſt if their righteouſnes be thus to be declared as afore, then if they will haue it, they muſt ſeeke it as it may be found, namely, both in the law, and in the Goſpel, and not in the Goſpel alone: and firſt in the law, then in the Goſpell: for he muſt neuer looke to taſte the ſweetneſſe of the Goſpel, which hath not firſt ſwallowed the bitter pills of the law: if therefore thou wouldeſt be declared righteous by the Goſpel, be content firſt to be pronounced miſerable by the law: if thou wouldeſt be declared righteous in Chriſt, then be content firſt to be pronounced ſinfull and vnrighteous in thy ſelfe. Secondly, all men may here learne, how they are to eſteeme of Gods Miniſters, and what reuerence and obedience is due to their perſons, and their doctrine: theſe are they which muſt declare vnto thee thy righteouſneſſe, if thou haſt any: Art thou beholden to him, who, when thou haſt loſt a Iewell (which was all thy wealth) can tell thee where it is, and helpe thee to it againe? or to him, who, when thy cauſe is in triall at the bar, will pleade it for thee? or to him, who, when thy health is loſt, can tell thee how to get it againe? then behold how thou art beholden to a godly Miniſter, who, when Adam had loſt both for himſelf and thee, that Iewel of righteouſnes, which was, and is the whole wealth of thy ſoule, can truly tell thee where it is, and how it is to be had againe: and who, when the deuill haleth thee to the barre of Gods iuſtice, to receiue triall for thy ſinnes, can drawe thee there ſuch a declaration, as the deuill himſelfe ſhall not be able to anſwer? and who, when thy ſoule is ſicke to death, and euen to damnation, can heale the deadly wounds thereof. A good miniſter therefore is worthy (as the Apoſtle ſaith) of double honour, whoſe dutie we ſee is to declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe. And to conclude this point alſo, the conſideration of the height of this office of a miniſter, may encourag fathers to dedicate their ſonnes to this holy calling: for the Phyſitians care for the bodie, or the Lawyers for thy cauſe, are both inferiour duties to this of the Miniſter. A good Lawyer may be one of tenne: a good Phyſitian one of twentie, a good man one of 100. but a good A Miniſter is one of 1000. A good Lawyer may declare the true ſtate of thy cauſe: a Phiſitian may declare the true ſtate of thy body: No calling, no man cā declare vnto thee thy righteouſneſſe, but a true miniſter. And thus we ſee the office or function of a Miniſter. Now followeth the bleſſing.

Then will he haue mercie vpon him.

4. Point, the bleſſings: then will God haue mercie on the ſinner.

The fourth generall part of this deſcription, is the bleſſing which God giueth to the labours & function of a true Miniſter: then, that is, when a man by the preaching of the law, is brought to true humiliation and repentance, & by the preaching of the goſpel, to true faith in the Meſſias: then will he (that is God) haue mercy on him, (that is, on the penitent and beleeuing ſinner.) B Behold here the admirable ſimpathy, and the cooperation of God, and the Miniſters office. Man preacheth, and God bleſſeth: Man worketh on the heart, and God giues grace: a Miniſter declares vnto man his righteouſneſſe, and God ſaith ſo be it, he ſhall be righteous: a Miniſter pronounceth mercy to a penitent ſinner, and forthwith God hath mercie on him. Here we ſee the great and glorious account which God makes of the word of his miniſters, by them truly taught and rightly applied; namely, that he as it were tieth his bleſſing vnto it: for ordinarily till a man knowe his righteouſneſſe, by the meanes of an Interpreter, God hath not mercie on him, but aſſoone as he doth knowe it, then as we ſee here, God will haue mercie on him, and C will ſay, deliuer him, &c. This is no ſmall honour to Miniſters, and to their Miniſterie, that God himſelfe giues a bleſſing vnto it, and worketh when they worke, and as it were ſtayeth waiting, when they declare vnto man his righteouſneſſe, and then hath he mercie on him: ſo powerfull, and ſo effectuall, is the word ſpoken by a Miniſter of God. This is that which Chriſt auoucheth, Whatſoeuer you looſe in earth, ſhall be looſed in heauen. Will you knowe the meaning hereof? Reade Saint Iohn, Whoſe ſinnes ſoeuer you remit, they are remitted; whoſe you retaine, they are retained: will you haue the meaning of both? read Eſay, God deſtroyeth the tokens of Soothſayers, and makes wizards, and Aſtrologers D fooles, turneth worldly wiſe men backeward and makes their knowledge fooliſhneſſe: but he confirmeth the word of his ſeruants, and performeth the counſell of his meſſengers. Thus God bindeth and looſeth with them, remitteth, and retaineth with them, by confirming their word, and performing their counſell.

God and his Miniſter worke together.

Matth.16.16.

Ioh.20.23.

Eſa.44.25,26.

For example,

A true Miniſter ſeeth a ſinner hardened in his ſinnes, and ſtill rebelling againſt the will of God he therefore declareth vnto him his vnrighteouſnes, and his ſinne, and denounceth vnto him the miſerie and curſes of Gods iuſtice, as due vnto him for the ſame: here he bindes on earth, here he retaines on earth, this mans ſinnes are likewiſe bound and retained in heauen. On the other ſide, he ſeeth a man penitent and be-

leeuing, he pronounceth forgiueneſſe of ſinnes and happineſſe vnto him for the ſame: he looſeth him from the band of his ſinnes, by declaring vnto him his righteouſneſſe; this mans ſinnes are likewiſe looſed and remitted in heauen, & God himſelfe doth pronounce him cleare in heauen when the Miniſter doth on earth. Thus God confirmeth the word of his ſeruants, and performeth the counſell of his meſſengers.

1. Vſe for Rulers, to giue due reuerence to the Miniſters.

The vſe of this doctrine is, Firſt, for Rulers and great men of this world, this may teach them to be nurſing Fathers, and nurſing Mothers vnto the Church, whoſe authoritie they ſee is ſo great ouer them, as that their decree ſtands ratified in heauen: Therefore though their place be great, and they be Gods vpon earth, yet muſt they withall acknowledge, that in iuſtifying a ſinner, in interpretation, in declaring vnto man his righteouſneſſe; in binding and looſing, their power alſo is immediate from God, and aboue theirs, and they themſelues, as the are men, muſt ſubmit themſelues to this powerfull word of the miniſters, to be taught by it, and to be reconciled by meanes of it, and highly muſt they reſpect it; for though a man ſpeake it, yet it is the word of God: this is to licke the duſt of Chriſts feete, which the the Prophet ſpeaketh of: not as the Pope would haue it, to holde the ſtirrop, and lead the horſe, and hold the water to the Pope, to kiſſe his toes to hold their kingdomes of him, as tenants at will, or by curteſie, but reuerently to acknowledge the ordinance to be Gods, the function and duty to be high and excellent, to acknowledge the power of their keyes and cenſures (being rightly applyed) their promiſes and their threatenings to be as from God, and to ſubmit to them accordingly.

Pſal 82.

2. Vſe for Miniſters.

2. Vſe Gods word reuerently.

Secondly, Miniſters themſelues here muſt learne, when they take the word of reconciliation into their hands and mouthes, to call to minde whoſe it is, euen the Lords, and that he worketh with them, and that therefore they muſt vſe it in holy manner, with much feare and reuerence: It is not their owne, they may not vſe it as they liſt. And laſtly hearers are here taught, firſt to ſee how madde ſuch men be, which careleſly, and ſeldome heare Sermons, but vpon any occaſion flie to Wizzards and Charmers, which are the deuils prophets: for ſee the difference of theſe two, the wizzard and charmer hath ſocietie with the deuill, the Preacher with God: the charmer hath his calling from the deuill, the Preacher his from God: the charmers charme, is the deuils watchword, (when he charmeth the deuill doth the feate:) the preachers doctrine is Gods watchword, when he truely aplyeth it, God himſelfe ratifieth and makes it good: therefore let all men feare to haue thus to doe with the deuill, by ſeeking to his ſlaues, and let them drawe neere to God, by entering into fellowſhip with his holy Prophets and godly Miniſters.

3. Vſe for hearers.

1. Heare Gods word often, and reuerently.

2. See the dignitie and prerogatiue of the Miniſter. calling.

And further, if when they preach, and thou beleeueſt, then God hath mercie on thee, then learne what reuerence they and their word is worthy of, which is thus accompanied with Gods mercie and forgiueneſſe: and then learne to heare the word of God with feare and trembling, for it is Gods word, and not theirs: and when a true Miniſter ſaith vnto thee, on a true ground, I denounce thee a ſinnefull man, or vnder the curſe, or I declare thee to be righteous and a child of grace, it is all one, as though God from heauen had ſaid ſo vnto thee. If any man aske, But is it not as good, if another man pronounce forgiueneſſe vnto mee vpon my repentance? I anſwer, yes vndoubtedly, if it be in extraordinarie times, or places, when there are no Miniſters: for otherwiſe, certainely this bleſſing is principally tied vnto the Miniſters calling: for it is not ſaid of any priuate mens calling, any where in the ſcripture, as it is here ſaid of the Miniſters, If an Angel, an Interpreter come to a man and declare vnto him his righteouſneſſe, then (marke the connexion) then will God haue mercie on him, and will ſay, Deliuer him, &c.

Obiect. But may not an other Chriſtian doe it?

And not ordinarily.

1 For they haue not the ſame promiſe.

Whence comes this bleſſing? from this promiſe of God. If therefore other callings will challenge ordinarily the ſame bleſſing, then muſt they haue the ſame promiſe. Beſides, other Chriſtians beeing priuate men, though they be ſanctified, and haue a good meaſure of knowledge yet haue they not the ſame ſpirit of diſcerning that godly Miniſters haue: nor can ſo fully and truely iudge when a man hath repented, when not; and therefore cannot ſo truely pronounce the ſentence of the lawe or goſpell, nor haue the abilitie ordinarily by their good conference and Chriſtian counſell, to conuert a ſoule, but to confirme one conuerted: but that power ordinarily belongs to the publike miniſtery of the word, therefore it followeth, that ordinarily they haue not the power to pronounce the ſentence of binding or looſing vpon any man: I confeſſe, in times, or places where no miniſter can be had, God bleſſeth the labors of priuate men, that haue knowledge, ſometimes euen for the conuerting of a man to God, and for comforting him at the houre of death, and giues a vertue and power to that ſentence which they ſhall pronounce one vpon anothers repentance: but as this is extraordinarie, and in the want of ordinarie miniſters, ſo in that caſe a priuate man of knowledge and godlineſſe is made a Miniſter for that time to himſelfe, or to another, euen as a priuate man in caſes of extreame danger, when no magiſtrate is preſent, is made a magiſtrate himſelfe to defend his owne life. So then as in want of a Magiſtrate, the ſword of the Magiſtracie is put into the hand of a priuate man; ſo in the want of miniſters, the keyes of the miniſterie are committed and put into the hands of priuate men, (as in the daies of perſecution) that then they may with comfort admoniſh and aduiſe: & with power pronounce mercie and forgiueneſſe one

2. They haue not the ſame power to diſcerne.

In extraordinarie times and in want of Miniſters they may.

vnto another, vpon their true repentance. Yet alwaies remember that in ſo doing, a priuate man is as a Miniſter for that time and in that caſe: but ordinarily (and alwaies in ſettled churches) this power pertaineth to the Miniſterie, and is theirs alone by ordination; and to them belongeth the promiſe and the bleſſing, that when he hath declared to a man his righteouſneſſe, then God will haue mercie on him. And thus we ſee alſo the bleſſing of God vpon the function of the Miniſterie, and annexed thereunto by the mercifull diſpenſation of God. It followeth,

And will ſay: Deliuer him, that he go not down into the pit: for I haue receiued a reconciliation.

5. Part, the Commiſſion, which is, Deliuer the penitent man from hell.

The fift and laſt part of this deſcription is, the Commiſſion and authoritie giuen vnto him, which is ſo great, as neuer was giuen to any creature, and is this, when a miniſter of God hath declared vnto man his righteouſneſſe, hath brought him to the ſtate of grace, and God in his fauour hath had mercie on him; then God ſaith to the Miniſter, Deliuer that ſoule from hell, for I haue pardoned him in Chriſt, I am reconciled to him.

How a Miniſter is a Redeemer.

More then Angels.

Hebr.1.vlt. More then any other calling of men.

In which words, authoritie is giuen to a Miniſter of God, to redeeme a man penitent from hell, and damnation: not that he is the meanes of working out this redemption, for that whollie and onely is Chriſt himſelfe: but he is Gods inſtrument, and Chriſts inſtrument: Firſt, to applie thoſe meanes vnto him: Secondly, to pronounce his ſafetie and deliuerance when theſe meanes are vſed. Here is the principall honour of all, belonging to that calling: and it is the greateſt that euer was vouchſafed to any creature, Man or Angel: for it is a plaine Commiſſion, to goe and deliuer ſuch a man from the power of hell, and to redeeme him into the ſtate of Gods children, and to make him heire of Heauen: Angels neuer had this Commiſſion, they are Meſſengers ſent out for the good of thoſe whom miniſters haue redeemed, and they haue brought many comfortable meſſages vnto them: but it was neuer ſaid to any Angel, Deliuer that man that he goe not downe into the pit, as it here is ſaid vnto a miniſter, nor any but miniſters haue this Commiſſion. To ſome callings God ſaith, worke thou for man, build him houſes, prouide him ſuſtenance; to the Phyſition, heale that man: to the Lawyer, doe that man iuſtice: to the ſouldier, fight for him: to the magiſtrate, defend him: to the King, gouerne him, and ſee that euery one doe his duty: to none but to the Miniſter doth he ſay, Deliuer him that he goe not downe into the pit.

1. Vſe for Miniſters. Ergo, they muſt pray & preach diligently.

If this be ſo, then for the vſe, firſt Miniſters muſt learne here, that if they will haue the honour of Redeemers, then muſt they doe the duty of Redeemers, they muſt pray earneſtly for the people, for that is one meanes whereby they redeeme men.

1.Sam.12.

Pſal.119.

For ſo doing they are redeemers.

Idle Miniſters are no redemers.

They muſt ſay with Samuel, God forbid that I ſhould ceaſe to pray for you: They muſt mourne for the impenitent, when they will not turne to God. So did Dauid, his eyes guſhed out with riuers of water, becauſe men kept not Gods law. And Ieremie, who wiſhed a fountaine of waters, in his eyes, that he might weepe for the ſinnes of the people. They muſt priuately conferre, viſit, admoniſh, and rebuke, and principally they muſt preach, and that in ſuch good manner, and in ſo diligent meaſure, as they may redeeme and winne ſoules, and the ende that they muſt aime at, muſt be to winne ſoules. Some preach for feare of the Lawe, to auoyde cenſure or puniſhment: ſome for faſhion ſake, that they may be like to others: ſome for oſtentation ſake, to win credit and praiſe: ſome for ambition, to riſe in the world: all theſe forget their Commiſſion which is, Deliuer a man from hell.

This ſhould be the ende of their preaching to deliuer a ſoule from Hell: and what ſhould Commiſſioners doe, but execute there Commiſſion? High Commiſſioners are worthy to be low Commiſſioners, or rather no Cõmiſſioners, if they will not put this in execution. It is therefore lamentable to ſee, that ſome by not preaching: ſome by vaine preaching, ſhewe that they intended any thing, rather then the winning of ſoules to God.

Let then all good Miniſters ſo Preach, as they may ſay with Eſay, Behold Lord, here am I, and the Children whome thou haſt giuen mee. And that they may returne their Commiſſion thus: Whereas thou O Lord gaueſt me this people, and badſt me deliuer them, that they goe not downe into hell, I haue done it: it is the thing my ſoule aymed at with all my deſire and endeauour: and by thy mercie I haue effected it accordingly.

Turkes and Ieſuits, are carefull to ſeduce ſoules.

And the rather muſt all Chriſtian Miniſters ſeriouſly intend the ſauing of ſoules, inaſmuch as Antichriſt doth ſo earneſtly ſeeke the deſtruction of ſoules, by winning them to his Synagogue. The Turke ſpares no labour, no coſt, to infect young children of Chriſtians with his impure and blaſphemous ſuperſtition. The Pope and his vaſſals (eſpecially Ieſuits,) vſe all means, deuiſe many ſtratagems, ſpare no coſt, nor labour, to ſeduce and inveagle young men, and the beſt wits. Surely their care and policy herein is admirable: and yet alas, when (like the Phariſies) they haue compaſſed ſea and land to make a Proſelyte, they make him like themſelues, the child of hell.

And they are ſo farre from hauing any Commiſſion from God to doe this, or any bleſſing promiſed, as contrariwiſe God forbids them, and his curſe lyeth vpon them for ſo doing.

Shall they be ſo diligent to deſtroy ſoules without a Commiſſion, and incurre Gods curſe for their labour? & ſhall not Chriſtian Miniſters be much more diligent to winne and redeeme ſoules, hauing ſo large a Commiſſion for the purpoſe, & ſo great a bleſſing promiſed thereunto.

In the next place, this doctrine hath vſe to

2. Vſe for hearers. To ſee the excellencie of this calling.

the hearers. Firſt, to let them ſee the excellencie of this calling, which hath a commiſſion and power to redeeme them from hell and damnation, and what honour is due vnto it: and to let the wicked man ſee (which any way abuſeth either the perſons, or the function) how baſe and vnthankfull men they are, to recompence euill for good, and therefore no maruell though euill doe neuer depart from the houſes and families of ſuch men: and further, to encourage all men to giue themſelues to God in this calling; for ſee here what they are, euen the high Commiſſioners of God. We haue in our State, a power deligated to certaine men of worth, and it is called the high Commiſſion, becauſe they haue power to doe great things, and that man thinkes himſelfe happie who can bring his ſonne to this, to be thought fit to be one of this Commiſſion: but behold here a higher Commiſſion, a Commiſſion from God, to redeeme Soules from the power of hell, and the deuills clawes: this is indeede a high Commiſſion, and ſo high as this was neuer granted out of the Court of heauen to any Creature, but to Miniſters: they therefore are the High Commiſſioners of the high God. Is it not then an honour and happineſſe vnto thee, to A bring thy ſonne to this eſtate?

Miniſters are Gods high Commiſſioners.

3 Hearers, Ergo, muſt ſubmit themſelues to be redeemed.

And laſtly, this muſt teach all hearers, their duty to Gods word: namely, to ſubmit themſelues vnto it; for if the Miniſter haue a commiſſion to redeeme thy ſoule, it muſt be by the word and holy diſcipline. Therefore thy duty is to heare Gods word patiently, to ſubmit thy ſelfe vnto it, to be taught and inſtructed, nay to be checked and rebuked, and to haue thy ſinnes diſcouered, and thy corruptions ript vp. If thou wouldeſt haue thy cauſe ſucceede well, thy Lawyer muſt diſcouer the weakeneſſes of it: If thy body to be cured, thy Phiſitian muſt purge the corruption of it. So if thy ſoule be to be redeemed, thy Miniſter muſt ſee the weakeneſſe, B and purge the corruption of it; and though his doctrine be harſh, and hard vnto thy nature, and the diſcipline of the Goſpell ſeeme rough vnto thee, yet muſt not thou rage and rebell againſt it, nor hate him, nor raile at his perſon, but ſubmit thy ſelfe vnto it, for it is the meſſage and Miniſterie of thy ſaluation: If otherwiſe, thou doeſt indeede a great wrong to the Miniſter, for thou fruſtrateſt his commiſſion, but alas, a farre greater to thy ſelfe, for thou fruſtrateſt thine owne ſaluation.

coſt: and hath not God ordained (marke, it is his Ordinance) that thoſe which preach the Goſpel, ſhall liue of the Goſpell? But alas, how ſhall the Miniſterie of England liue of the Goſpel, when my ſmall experience can ſhewe, that in one corner of one Countie of this Kingdome, wherein there are ſome 105. Pariſhes, or parochiall Chappels, almoſt a 100. of them, (if not a full 100.) are Impropriate: and amongſt them, I can ſhew the moſt pariſhes haue but 10. pound, or thereabouts, ſome 8. li. ſome foure pounds, ſome not 4. pounds yearely liuing for the Miniſter, and thoſe impropriations worth ſome 300. li. many 200. li. almoſt all 100. li. per an. yea there is one worth 400. pound per An. where there were but 8. li. left for the Miniſter, vntill of late with much adoe, 10. pound more was obtained for a Preacher, and ſo there is out of 400. 8. pound ſhared for a Miniſter, and 10. pound earned for a Preacher, in that pariſh where there are 2000. Communicants. Of all the reſt, the Crown hath ſome 100. pound rent, or not ſo much, and the remainder of 280. pound (beeing a rich liuing, for a worthy learned Miniſter, a competent liuing for 2. and more then ſome 7. painfull and able Miniſters haue) I knowe not what becomes of it, vnleſſe it goe to the feeding of Kites and Cormorants. Are not theſe goodly liuings for learned men? and may not we expect a learned Miniſterie, where there is ſuch maintenance? and I heartily wiſh that other countries, be not able to ſhow the like preſidents. I haue the rather made relation hereof, that our high Court of Parliament, may ſee how great cauſe they haue, to go forward with that motion already by them made, for the eſtabliſhing of a learned Miniſterie.

The Eaſt-riding of the Countie of Yorke.

But if they bring it not to paſſe, what then remaineth, but to hope that the great God of heauen, will put it into the heart of the God on earth, our noble King (into whoſe hands he hath put the ſword of ſoueraigne authoritie) an irreuocable and vnreſiſtable reſolution to execute his ſupreme power, for the reformation of this euill, which (as Maſter Perkins ſaith in this Treatiſe) may well be called the Kings euill, for it will hardly be healed, but by the will and power of a King. In the meane time, this Treatiſe of that worthy man, may be a motiue to our zealous profeſſours, who haue any impropriations in their owne hands, to excite and prouoke them to a conſcionable reſtitution, in whole or in part, as their ſtate may beare, or their conſcience ſhall mooue them. For herein are laid downe and mixed together, both the duties to be done by faithfull Miniſters, and the Dignities due vnto them for their Duties: and ſo ſeeing the Dignities of that calling to be moſt honourable, and the Duties ſo chargeable, it cannot but grieue their Chriſtian hearts to ſee the maintenance ſo miſerable.

This Treatiſe I firſt of all ſend to you, and vnder your names to the world, and to you firſt, for as I am ſure you loued the Author, and honoured thoſe excellent gifts of God in him, ſo you cannot but except this after-birth of his (as a fatherleſſe child for the fathers ſake.) And for my ſelfe, to conceale all perſonall and priuate reſpects, in the name of many thouſands in the Northeren countries, I praiſe God, for the good done in thoſe parts, by your painefull courſes, and religious care, not doubting, but if your ſelues, or the like be imployed there, to aſſiſt our honourable and Religious Lord Preſident, that the multitude of Popiſh Prieſts there lurking, will be daily leſſened, the number of Preachers augmented, Poperie put downe, and the Goſpell maintained more and more. Which bleſſing, God graunt to that and all other Countries of this Kingdome, for his mercies ſake, and giue vnto you, and all others in your place, the ſpirit of courage and conſtancie, in theſe declining dayes, that beeing faithfull in your great charges, vnto the ende, you may receiue the Crowne of life: for which he heartily prayeth, who will euer reſt, yours to command,

W. Craſhawe.

THE SECOND TREATISE OF THE DVTIES AND DIGNITIES of the Ministerie.

Esai 6. 5,6,7,8,9.

Then I ſaid, Woe is me, I am vndone: for I am a man of polluted lippes, and dwell in the middest of a people of polluted lippes: for my eyes haue ſeene the King and Lord of hosts.

Then flew one of the Seraphins vnto me, with a hote coale in his hand, which he had taken from the Altar with the tongs:

And he touched my mouth, and ſaid; Loe, this hath touched thy lippes, and thine iniquitie ſhall be taken away, and thy ſinne ſhall be purged.

Also I heard the voice of the Lord, ſaying, Whome ſhall I ſend? and who ſhall goe for vs? Then I ſaid, Here am I, ſend me.

The Coherence.

IN the fiue former Chapters are contayned ſuch Sermons, as the Prophet had made vnder Vzziah, King of Iudah. At this chapter begin ſuch as he preached in the raigne of Iotham, and ſo forward: But before he either preach or prophecy of any thing, in King Iothams daies, or his ſucceſſors, the Lord in this chapter giues a new confirmation to this calling; the olde king, in whoſe dayes Eſayah was first called beeing now dead, and another ſucceeding him, God with the new king reneweth the calling and commiſſion of the Prophet: wherein God doth not giue him another calling, for one calling to the office of the miniſterie is ſufficient: but he confirmeth the calling formerly giuen, by repeating, and ratifying it. And this God did to Eſay, not as he was an ordinarie, but an extraordinarie Prophet: for ordinarie miniſters neede no renouation of their calling, nor any new ſignes of confirmation, but extraordinarie Prophets, who came in extraordinarie manner, and to doe many extraordinary works, God in his wiſdome will haue their calling confirmed, againe and againe, and that by very extraordi- A narie meanes. Out of which practiſe of the Lord, we learne, how great cauſe we haue to doubt theſe men, to be either fantaſticall or worſe, who pretend extraordinarie callings in theſe daies, and yet ſcarſe can ſhew vs any good ſignes of an ordinarie, much leſſe of an extraordinarie motion: for if in thoſe dayes when ſuch courſes were more common, God will haue his extraordinarie Prophets calling to be renued and confirmed, againe, and againe, then certainly in theſe dayes, we may iuſtly require, more, and more wonderfull ſignes of an extraordinary calling afore we beleeue it: and if God himſelfe was ſo carefull to ſatisfie his Church in thoſe dayes of the vocation of his Prophet, ſurely B the Church in theſe daies hath much more cauſe to doubt in ſuch caſes, and to require manie and extraordinarie ſignes, afore it acknowledge any ſuch extraordinary calling: Theſe mē therefore offer much wrong to the Church, and deſerue both the cenſure thereof, & the ſword of the magiſtrate, who dare ſo boldly offer and obtrude to the Church their owne fancies and dreames, as extraordinarie motions of Gods Spirit. This is the occaſion and coherence.

With a new King, God giues the Prophet a new Commiſſion.

Ergo, extraordinarie.

Callings or motions in theſe daies are eaſily to be beleeued.

The parts of the Chap.

This chapter hath two parts, firſt, the meanes of his confirmation, from the beginning to theſe words: ſecondly, the confirmation it ſelfe, from theſe words to the end: the meanes of his confirmation is a viſion he ſaw from heauen, of certaine holy Angels appearing and ſpeaking to him, in the firſt foure verſes. In the confirmation, which followeth in theſe words, are three points.

The parts of the text.

1. The effect of the viſion which is wrought in the Prophet, it cauſed him feare, it aſtoniſht him, and caſt him downe: in the fifth verſe.

2. His Conſolation and raiſing vp againe, after his feare, in the 6. and 7. verſes.

3. The renuing of his Commiſſion againe, from thence to the end.

The feare and aſtoniſhment of the Prophet, is deſcribed.

1. By ſignes, of which are two.

1. A note of exclamation, Woe is me.

2. By a note of extreame deiection in himſelfe, I am vndone.

2. By the cauſes of it, which are alſo ſet downe to be two.

1. He was a man polluted, and dwelt amongſt people polluted.

2. He had ſeene the Lord.

Then ſaid I, woe is me, I am vndone.

1. Point is the feare of the Prophet.

The firſt point in order is, the feare and extaſie into which the Lord droue his holy Prophet, which the Lord did not in his anger, but in his loue vnto him, not for a puniſhment of ſinne, but as an euidence of his further loue: for the intent and purpoſe of God in ſtriking this feare into him, was to inable him to be a true Prophet, and a fit meſſenger for himſelfe. It may ſeeme a ſtrange courſe, which God taketh to confirme and raiſe vp his ſeruant in zeale and courage, to ſtrike him into an extreame feare, euen to aſtoniſh and amaze him, and yet we ſee it is the courſe which the Lord taketh: out of which practiſe of the Lord, we learne this doctrine: That all true Miniſters, eſpecially ſuch as are deputed to the greateſt works in his church, muſt be firſt of all ſtriken into a great feare, in conſideration of the greatnes of their function, yea, into an amazement and aſtoniſhment, in the admiration of Gods glory and greatneſſe, whoſe roome they occupy, and whoſe meſſage they bring, and the more they are afraid and ſhrinke, ſo it be vnder the contemplation of Gods Maieſtie, and their owne weakneſſe, the more likelier it is that they are truly called of God, and appointed for worthy purpoſes in his church; but he that ſteps to this functiō without feare, he may thruſt in himſelfe, but it is doubtfull whether he be cald of God, as here the Prophet was: Nor is it ſo here alone, but euery where when God called any of his ſeruants, to any great worke, he firſt droue them into theſe feares and amazements, as is euident[a] in Moſes, in [b] Ieremie, in [c] S. Paul, and others. The reaſon of this dealing of the Lord is plaine: namely, becauſe mans nature is alwaies readie to take enough and too much, vpon it ſelfe, God therefore in his wiſdome puts a bridle vnto the corrupt nature of man, and aſtoniſheth it, leaſt it preſume too much, and take too much vpon it ſelfe. Againe, a Miniſter is to preach vnto the people, feare and reuerence of the Lord: but how can he doe ſo to others, when he hath not tyed that bond in his owne conſcience, nor was euer caſt downe in admiration of Gods glorie and Maieſtie: And laſtly, the miniſterie is an high and excellent calling (eſpecially the office of extraordinary Prophets in the old teſtament) and is therefore ſubiect to pride, and to be puft vp with ſelfe conceit, and therefore teacheth the Apoſtle to Timothy, that a Miniſter may not be a young ſcholler, leaſt he be puft vp and fall into the condemnation of the wicked, giuing vs to vnderſtand, that it is the peculiar dāger of that calling to haue high conceits of thēſelues, becauſe of the height & dignitie of their function. Therfore to preuent this inconuenience, God in mercie appointeth that all his true Miniſters ſhall haue ſome meanes or other, to be caſt downe euen to nothing in themſelues, and ſhall be driuen into ſuch feares and amazements, at ſight of their owne wickedneſſe, as they ſhall throwe downe themſelues at Chriſts feete, and denying themſelues wholly, ſhall acknowledge that they are in him whatſoeuer they are: and doe relye, and truſt onely on his grace and helpe.

Doctr. Beſt Miniſters moſt amazed at their entrance.

c Act.9.6.&c

1.Tim.13.

The vſe of this doctrine, as it is for all Miniſters, ſo ſpecially for vs which liue in the Vniuerſity: we liue as it were in a Seminarie: we many of vs are hereafter by Gods grace to bee framed to the Miniſterie, as ſome of vs alreadie are. Now here we haue many occaſions to be puft vp in ſelfe-conceit: we ſee our ſelues grow in time, in degrees, in learning, in honour, in name and eſtimation: and to many of vs God giues good portions of his gifts: what are all theſe, but ſo many baites to allure vs to pride, and vaine opinions of our owne worths? but let vs remember the end we aime at, is not humane, nor carnall: our purpoſe is to ſaue ſoules, Then the weapons of our warre muſt not be carnall, as pride, vaine-glorie, and ſelfe-conceit. If therefore we euer looke to be made inſtruments of Gods glorie in ſauing of ſoules, then at the firſt ſet we not before our eyes the honour, but the danger of our calling, and humble we our ſelues vnder the mightie hand of our God, that he may exalt vs in his due time: and let vs be content that God giue any occaſion or meanes to pull vs downe, either by outward croſſes or inward temptation: and let vs reioyce, when we are thereby ſo farre caſt downe, that we cry out in the aſtoniſhment of our ſpirits, as the Prophet here; Woe is me, I am vndone: but otherwiſe if we will needs followe the ſwinge of our proud natures, and truſt in our owne abilitie, gifts, and learning, let vs know, we vſe carnall weapons in a ſpirituall warfare: & let vs be aſſured the Lord will worke no great worke in his Church by our Miniſterie: we may raiſe our ſelues in worldly eſtimation, and worke out our

Vſe. Ergo Miniſters, & eſpecially in the Vniuerſities, labour to be humbled in ſight of Gods greatnes, & their owne meaneneſſe.

owne purpoſes, but we ſhall doe little in the ſaluation of ſoules: for thoſe men doe pronounce the moſt powerfull bleſſings on other mens ſoules, and ſpeake the beſt wordes of comfort to other mens conſcience, which ofteneſt ſay vnto themſelues; Woe is mee, I am vndone.

2. Doctr. Ergo, the Prophets hold not the opinion of the interceſſion of Angels.

Furthermore, whereas the Prophet at this viſion and Reuelation of Gods glorie vnto him, cryeth out of himſelfe, Woe is me, I am vndone: beeing words of extreame feare and aſtoniſhment, and of ſo low a deiection as is a degree towards deſperation(if it had gone forward)let vs learne, that the Prophet helde not in his iudgement, the doctrine of Interceſſion of Angels and Saints for particular men, for if he had, he needed not at the ſight of Gods maieſtie, foorthwith to haue cryed out, Woe is me, I am vndone: but he might haue ſtaied himſelfe a while in this cogitation, I will deſire Moſes, Samuel, or Dauid, to pray to this glorious God for mee, or here are holy Angels of the Seraphins preſent, they ſee in what fearefull caſe I am, I will pray to them to ſpeake to this glorious and mightie Lord for me, that I periſh not in this feare: but he inſtantly ſeeing the Lord appeare in Maieſtie, and fearing his iuſt wrath (beeing guiltie of his owne corruptions) without any hope or expectation, or (as he ſeemes) without the leaſt cogitation of helpe or aſſiſtance from any creature, cryeth out, I am vndone.

3. Doctr. Ergo, the calling to the Miniſterie is a work like vnto the calling of a ſinner to the ſtate of grace.

Vſe. Ergo, much muſt be required to qualifie a man for the Miniſterie.

Laſtly, whereas he exclaimeth, Woe is mee, I am vndone: beeing words of a ſoule humbled and deiected, and hereby ſhewed himſelfe to be in that caſe, which a poore ſinner is, when the preaching of the Law hath humbled him, by ſhewing him his ſinnes, and his extreame danger by them: We may learne, that to be called to the miniſterie, is to be as it were conuerted and regenerate: and that when a man is called thereunto, it is a worke little leſſe then that whereby God calleth a ſinner from his ſinne, to the ſtate of repentance: for as God firſt caſteth downe the ſinner, before he giue him grace, or any feeling of his loue in Chriſt: ſo here he firſt abaſeth and caſteth downe the Prophet in the ſight of Gods Maieſte, and his owne miſerie, afore he honour him with a Commiſſion to preach his word vnto his people. Which I note againſt thoſe men, which holde it ſo ordinarie a matter to enter into the Miniſterie, as many do, which take it vpon them in worldly and politique purpoſes. And ſome of better Ranke, which thinke if a man haue Learning, degrees, age, he is ſufficiently qualified for that calling. But alas, this is not all; there is a greater worke to be wrought then ſo, he muſt be humbled and caſt downe in ſight of the greatneſſe of that calling, of the maieſtie of that God, whoſe roome he is to execute, and of the vnworthineſſe of himſelfe to ſo great a worke: he muſt be reſolued, that to call a man to the Miniſterie, is the greateſt worke that God worketh in his Church, but the conuerting of a ſinner, and calling him to the ſtate of grace: nay it is a worke euen like vnto it: for as a ſinner in his conuerſion, ſo he at his Vocation to that place, is often to cry out in the amazement of his ſoule, Woe is me, I am vndone. As therefore they are fouly deceiued, which thinke any holineſſe or ſanctification, can ſufficiently qualifie a man without learning, ſo are they no leſſe which thinke all outward complements to be ſufficient without this work, which here was wrought in the holy Prophet. Thus we ſee the feare and aſtoniſhment of the Prophet. It followeth, Cauſes of his feare, 2. 1. Cauſe pollution of himſelfe and his people. 1. His owne. He was a man of polluted lips.

For I am a man of polluted lippes.

And he was a polluted man.

And he complaineth not of capitall ſinnes.

But of the corruption of his nature.

2. Of ſome omiſſion in his calling.

Doctr. Ergo, Miniſters muſt be men of tender conſcience.

Now followe the cauſes of his feare, which are two. The firſt is, his owne pollution and ſinfulneſſe, and the ſinfulneſſe of his people: his owne he freely confeſſeth in theſe words; I am a man of polluted lippes: that is, I am a miſerable and ſinfull man, and therefore I feare and tremble to ſtand in Gods preſence: nay, I dare not looke vpon the Lord, for my ſinnes. But it may be demaunded, how could the Prophet ſay thus truly? for he was a holy man, and iuſtified in Gods preſence, by his true faith in the Meſſias, and ſanctified by repentance? can a man iuſtified and ſanctified ſay, he is a man polluted? I anſwer. It is doubtleſſe he was ſo, he therefore complaineth here not of any great and enormous ſinnes, which he had committed to the publike ſcandall of the Church, but firſt of the corruption of his nature, which in him, as in all men, is a very ſea of iniquitie, and which alwaies appeares the more, the nearer a man comes to God, and therefore did now moſt apparantly diſcouer it ſelfe in the Prophet, when he was in the preſence of the Lord himſelfe. Secondly, he complaineth of ſome actuall ſinnes of his life, and it is more likely of ſome ſinnes of omiſſion, then of commiſſion: for we finde not that the Prophet was euer touched with any great ſinne, and where we know it not, we are in charitie not to imagine it. So that it is moſt probable, he complaineth of ſome ſmaller faults, or negligences in his Miniſterie: as not preaching to the people at ſome time when he ought, or not preaching ſo willingly or cheerefully as he ſhould, or deſire to leaue Preaching, becauſe the people were ſtubborne and diſobedient, or ſome impatience in his Miniſterie, when the people were rebellious and reſiſted his doctrine, which paſſion might the rather vexe him (as we reade it did Ieremie) the Iewes were ſo ſtubborne and ſtifnecked a people: or it may be ſome want of zeale or forwardneſſe, theſe, or ſome ſuch were the cauſe of his feare: And the conſcience of theſe makes him here cry out that he cannot ſtand in the ſight of God. Where we learne, firſt, what a tender conſcience godly Miniſters muſt haue aboue all men: namely, that they muſt make conſcience, not of the great and groſſe ſinnes onely, but euen of the loweſt and leaſt ſinnes: and he muſt endeuour in his calling, not onely to be cleere of great crimes, And make conſcience of the leaſt ſinnes.

And be moſt carefull in his miniſterie both publikely & priuately.

A but as farre as may be, to be free from the leaſt appearance of euill, and from the leaſt negligences in his place, for a ſmall fault in other men is great in them, and that which may be ſome waies pardonable in other men, is no way in them: they muſt therefore watch ouer themſelues moſt carefully, and take heed to all their waies: and for this ende is it that a Miniſter in godly wiſedome muſt often depriue himſelfe euen of many things (which it may be, lawfully he might vſe) leaſt his libertie be an occaſion of euill to others: and muſt abſtaine from the leaſt ſinnes, leaſt euen they be blemiſhes to his calling, and burthens to his conſcience. And hence is it, that a miniſter cannot be too carefull in his calling, in his words, diet, company, recreation, apparell, geſtures, and in his whole carriage, becauſe little ſinnes are ſo great in him. Eſpecially miniſters muſt here learne the Apoſtles leſſon, to be inſtant in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon: to preach and exhort, to comfort and rebuke, publikely and priuately: to good, to bad, when it is well taken, when it is ill taken, when they willingly receiue it, and when they ſtubbornly reſiſt it: when they commend him, and reward him, and when they raile at him, and perſecute him for it: thus muſt he be diligent in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon, for the leaſt negligence in his dutie, or omitting the leaſt opportunity of doing good, will when God viſits his conſcience, be a burthen and vexation to him, as it was here to the Prophet.

Vſe. Ergo Miniſters for great ſinnes ſhould be greatly humbled.

And furthermore, if theſe ſmall ſinnes thus afflicted the Prophet, then alas what is to be thought of thoſe miniſters who make no conſcience of foule and ſcandalous ſinnes? how ſhall Symonie, Incontinency, Vſury, Inhoſpitality, Couetouſneſſe, Ignorance, Idleneſſe, careleſſe Nonreſidency, how ſhall theſe (I ſay) and other like grieuous crimes oppreſſe and burthen the ſoule, when as the ſmalleſt ſinnes doe ſo affright this holy man? Surely, when God ſhall viſite them, their ſtates will be moſt fearefull, nor ſhall any mans caſe be ſo miſerable, as an vnconſcionable miniſters; And though nowe ſuch looſe and licentious Miniſters ſeeme to liue in iollitie, and without any feare, yet when God ſhall appeare vnto their conſcience, then will they cry out in fearefull anguiſh, Woe is me, I am vndone.

And for great negligence in their calling, els they haue no conſcience.

And againe, if theſe ſmall faults ſo affrighted this holy Prophet, and burdened his conſcience, then what pitifull conſciences haue thoſe miniſters, whoſe daily negligence, and vnconſcionable careleſſeneſſe in their places is ſuch, as all men ſpeake of, and yet they are not touched: ſurely theſe men are not of ſo tender conſciences as the Prophet was: and either the Prophet here was much more nice then needed, or elſe theſe men will prooue to be in a miſerable eſtate.

Good and faithfull Miniſters not to be diſcouraged, though they haue ſome wants, for ſo the Prophets had, but let them complaine of them as here the Prophet doth.

Laſtly, let Miniſters of care and conſcience, be here comforted in the example of the Prophet: who is there, but may finde imperfections and blemiſhes in himſelfe, which will often make him crie out, Wo is me? but let not that diſcomfort them, but rather reioyce, that they can ſee their owne weakeneſſe, as the Prophet did here: If they haue cauſe to exclaime againſt themſelues, they are not alone, it was this, and all other holy Prophets caſe before them. In hauing imperfections in themſelues, they are no more miſerable then the Prophet was: but let them labour to be bleſſed in ſeeing and complaining of themſelues as he was: And let euery miniſter aſſure himſelfe, that the more he makes conſcience, euen of the leaſt ſinnes of all, the more he reſembleth the auncient holy Prophets, and the more likely is he to worke B effectually in his miniſterie. For his duty is to worke in his people a conſcience, not of great ſinnes onely, but euen of all: but how can he doe that in them, if he haue not firſt of all done it in himſelfe? hence it is therefore, that godly miniſters finde fault with themſelues when other men cannot, and cry out againſt themſelues for their pollution, (with the Prophet here) when no other man can accuſe them of the leaſt crime: nay, when other men doe magnifie God for his graces on them, and praiſe their gifts, and commend their good liues, euen then doe they condemne themſelues, and exclame againſt their owne corruptions: and their owne ſmalleſt negligences, or omiſſions, are great wounds to their conſciences: and their leaſt ſinnes, and their moſt pardonable infirmities, are C ſore burthens vnto them; for of all men in the world, a Godly Miniſter is a man of a moſt tender conſcience.

Godly Miniſters finde fault with themſelues when the world cannot.

Hitherto hath the Prophet complained generally of his pollution.

Particularly he complaineth againſt the pollution of his lips

For a Prophets dutie conſiſts in the vſe of his tongue.

Particularly, he exclaimeth againſt the pollution of his lippes. But why will ſome ſay, complaines he of the pollution of his lippes, rather then of his heart, or his hands, or any other part of him, were they not polluted? yes, all in ſome meaſure: and was not he grieued at them all? yes aſſuredly, we muſt grant that alſo. But the reaſon is he was a Prophet, his duty was to vſe his tongue: for a Miniſter is an interpreter as he is called, Iob. 33.23. that is, D the peoples to God by prayer, and Gods to the people by preaching: he is Gods mouth, and the peoples mouth: ſo that the tongue of a miniſter is that part of his body, which is to be vſed as a principall inſtrument of Gods glory, and more to the ſetting forth of his honour then any other: Now euery man is to be tryed what he is by his calling, rather then by any other collaterall courſes: therefore the honour or diſhonour of a Miniſter, is the vſe or the abuſe of his tongue, and his comfort or diſcomfort, is the wel vſing, or not vſing of it. The Prophet therefore here affrighted at Gods preſence, and therefore retyring into himſelfe, preſently his conſcience checkes him for his moſt proper ſinnes: namely, for ſome fault or negligence in his Miniſterie (which is the proper ſinne of that calling) and

A therefore is it that he exclaimeth againſt the pollution of his lips: out of which practiſe of his we may learne.

Vſe 1. Ergo Popiſh doctrine of mans merits is falſe. And of workes.

Firſt, the vanitie of the Papiſts, who magnifie the Merits of holy mens workes: for if this holy Prophet, a man truly iuſtified, and extraordinarily ſanctified, yet durſt not ſtand before God in this little appearãce of his glorie, notwithſtanding all his zeale, and courage, and conſcience, and paines, and ſufferings in his function, but was caſt downe ſo farre, from a conceit of his owne worth, that he cryed out; Woe is mee, I am vndone: How then can we who are no better, but much worſe then he, ſtand before God in the day of Iudgement, in the great appearing of his infinite iuſtice and glorie? Rather B doubtleſſe, as here the ſmalleſt pollution of his lips, and negligence in his calling, droue him out of all conceit of merit, when once he came into the preſence of God: ſo the due conſideration of our ſo many and foule pollutions aboue his, ſhould beate downe all proud conceites of our owne goodneſſe, when we appeare before God. It is therefore to be feared that the Papiſts, who thus magnifie their owne merits, doe ſeldome or neuer enter into earneſt conſideration of their owne infirmities, doe ſeldome preſent themſelues in the preſence of Gods Maieſtie. For if they did, then doubtleſſe the leaſt ſight of their leaſt pollution, would make them farre from euer thinking of their owne merits.

And of works of ſupererrogation. And perfect fulfilling the Law in this life.

They alſo tel vs, of works of ſupererrogation, C but it ſeemes here, this holy Prophet had none of them. And they teach, a man may in this life perfectly fulfill the Law, but who can doe it, if not Miniſters? And what miniſters, if not extraordinarie Prophets? And yet Iſaiah (the firſt and chiefe of them) exclaimeth here in pitifull manner againſt his pollutions: Doubtleſſe, if the Papiſts would ceaſe flattering themſelues, and not examine their conſciences by their owne pleaſing corruption, but preſent themſelues in the face and preſence of Gods Maieſtie, they would be far from theſe conceits.

2. Vſe. Ergo Miniſters muſt take heed of negligence in their function aboue all ſinnes, for that burtheneth the cõſcience moſt heauily of al.

In the next place, whereas the Prophet complaineth of the pollution of his lips, as of the peculiar ſinne of his place: Miniſters are here D taught, to auoide that ſinne aboue all other; & to labour in that dutie aboue any other: for the doing of it, is his moſt comfort; the want of it, is his moſt vexation: his tongue is the Inſtrument giuen him to honour God, if he vſe it well, it yeeldes him comfort, more then any other duties.

Other vertues are excellent, but cannot ſuffice, if this want.

But if he vſe not, or abuſe his tongue, the pollution of his lips will be the heauieſt burthen of all: they therefore are greatly deceiued, who thinke a Miniſter to diſcharge ſufficiently his dutie, though he preach not, if he keepe good Hoſpitalitie, and make peace amongſt his Neighbours, and performe other works of charitie and good life: for if a miniſter haue not this vertue, he hath none: If he Preach not; If he abuſe his lips: or if he open them not, he hath A no conſcience, nor can haue any comfort, for that is the principall dutie of a Miniſter (though all the other be required to make him compleate:) the want of them may condemne him before men, but it is the pollution of his lippes, which preſently checkes him before God, as we ſee here in this holy Prophet: the concluſion then is to euery Miniſter, that if he had all the vertues and good properties, that can commend a man in the world, yet if his lips be polluted, either by not preaching, or by negligent, idle, or careleſſe preaching, this pollution will ſo ſtaine his conſcience, and ſo burthen him in the preſence of God, that the time will come (notwithſtanding all his other good qualities) he will crie out in farre more pittifull manner B then here the Prophet doth; Woe is mee, I am vndone, becauſe I am a man of polluted lips. It followeth;

2. His peoples pollution. He complaines of it to teach.

The Prophet not onely complaines of his owne pollution, but of his peoples alſo amongſt whom he liued, & this he doth for theſe cauſes: Firſt, to teach vs, that it is the Miniſters dutie to confeſſe not onely his owne ſinnes, but the ſins of his people, and to complaine of them to God: for as he is the peoples Interpreter to God, he muſt not thinke it enough to put vp their petitions, to vnfold their wants, and craue releefe for them at Gods hand, but he muſt further take knowledge of the ſinnes of his people, C and make both publique and priuate confeſſion of them to God: and the more particularly he can doe this, the better: and this he is to doe, both for the peoples good, and for his owne alſo, becauſe it cannot be but the ſinnes of his people, are in ſome ſort his: for this is the peculiar danger of the Magiſtrates & Miniſters calling, that generally the ſinnes of their people are theirs: I meane that they are acceſſarie to the ſinnes of their people, either by prouoking thẽ by their euill example, or by not reprouing, or not hindring or ſuffering, or winking, or couering and concealing, or not puniſhing them, or not carefully enough vſing meanes to preuent them: by all which meanes and many D more, it comes to paſſe, that the peoples ſinnes are the Miniſters by communication: ſo that as well for his owne ſake as theirs, he is to confeſſe to God their ſinnes, as well as his owne.

For generally he is acceſſarie to his peoples ſinnes.

1. Vſe. Ergo, a Miniſter muſt know his peoples ſinnes.

Now if a Miniſter muſt confeſſe his peoples ſinnes, then it followeth conſequently, that he muſt know them, and take notice of them: for elſe he cannot confeſſe them. And this is one cauſe why the holy Ghoſt commands a Paſtor to know his flocke.

Prou.27.23.

He muſt not onely haue a flocke, and knowe which is his flocke: or haue a generall eye ouer it, but he muſt haue a particular and diſtinct knowledge of the ſtate of it, and the more particular the better.

Ergo, it is beſt for a Miniſter to be with his people.

And if the Miniſter ought to knowe and confeſſe his peoples ſinnes, then it followeth,

19649a

A firſt, that it is beſt for a miniſter to be preſent with his people, that ſo he may the better know them and their ſtate: and certainely if it be a Miniſters duty to confeſſe to God the pollutions of his people, then willfull and careleſſe Non-reſidencie, & all abſence, without iuſt and conſcionable cauſes, muſt needes be a foule and fearefull ſinne. For how could Iſaiah haue confeſſed, that his people were a people of polluted lipps, but that he dwelt amongſt them. Nay ſaith the Prophet, he dwelt in the midſt among them, indeed well may he knowe and confeſſe his peoples pollutions, that dwelles in the midſt among them.

2. Vſe. Ergo, people muſt cõfeſſe their ſinnes, and reueale thẽ to their miniſter.

Not Popiſh, but voluntarie. And of ſuch ſinnes as diſquiet the cõſcience.

Againe, if the Miniſter be to confeſſe his peoples ſinnes, and therefore muſt needs know them, then it followeth alſo that they muſt diſcouer B and confeſſe them vnto him, or elſe it is not poſſible he ſhould perfectly knowe their eſtate: the want of this is a great fault in our Churches: for how euer we condemne Auricular confeſſion, as a very pollicy in the deuiſers, and a racke to the conſciences of poore Chriſtians, yet we not onely allowe, but call and cry for that confeſſion, whereby a Chriſtian voluntarily at all times may reſort to his Paſtor, and open his eſtate, and diſburthen his conſcience of ſuch ſinnes, as diſquiet him, and craue his godly aſſiſtance, and holy prayers: great bleſſing and comfort doth doubtleſſe followe them that vſe this godly practiſe, and the want of it, is cauſe that a miniſter cannot diſcerne the C ſtate euen of his owne flock, nor can complaine to God of there pollutions, and confeſſe their ſinnes ſo particularly, as would be good both for him and them.

2. To teach vs that a polluted people make their Miniſter more or leſſe polluted alſo.

Secondly, the Prophet couples together his owne pollution, and the pollutions of his people, as the adiuuant, or helping cauſe and the effect: For the pollution of a people, helpes forward the pollution of a Miniſter, and the worſe people they are, the worſe doe they make him, though he be otherwiſe neuer ſo good: For euen the Prophet, though called of God himſelfe, and iuſtified, and ſanctified, and a man of extraordinarie grace, yet dwelling in the midſt of a people ſo ſtubborne and diſobedient, as the Iewes were, was ſomething touched D with their pollutions: Miniſters (euen the beſt) are men, and this comes to paſſe by reaſon of the corruption of their nature as they are men, the nature of which corruption is to apprehend any euill where euer it findes it, and to partake with it: regeneratiõ qualifieth & abats this corruption, but takes it not away perfectly in this life: whereby it comes to paſſe, that a miniſter, liuing amongſt euil people, cannot but be ſomwhat ſtained with their pollution, of what ſort ſoeuer they be: inſomuch as it is often ſeene, that one knowne to be otherwiſe diſpoſed of himſelfe, is found to be diſpoſed to this or that euill, by liuing amongſt a people ſo diſpoſed. And againe, that a miniſter in ſuch a place, and amongſt ſuch people, free from ſuch and ſuch ſinnes, remooued to another place, is there found more or leſſe tainted with them, becauſe they abound amongſt the people: and yet further, that a Miniſter, knowne to be faithfull, painefull, and zealous, and comming to a diſobedient, and ſtubborne, froward, or prophane, and diſſolute people, his faith is weakened, his zeale and courage abated, Gods graces in him dulled, and much decayed: godly Miniſters doe daily complaine hereof, and experience euery where ſhewes it too true. Out of this we may learne ſomething both for our inſtruction, and for our conuerſation.

A wicked people dull and decay Gods graces in good Miniſters.

Vſe double.

1. For inſtruction.
1. See how corrupt our nature is.

For our inſtruction, it here appeares how wicked and wretched the corruption of our nature is, which cannot but receiue ſome contagion from the pollution of thoſe with whom we liue, for this is ſo, not onely in them who carry a looſe hand ouer themſelues, but euen in ſuch as looke moſt narrowly vnto their ſteps: as we ſee here in this holy Prophet, who was a man of more then ordinarie ſanctification: how little cauſe therefore hath any man to extoll nature? and how much leſſe cauſe the ſchoolemen and ſome other Papiſts, to giue the leaſt commendations to our pure naturals: for if nature rectified by grace, be ſo hardly kept within compaſſe alas how outragious and peruerſe is it, when it raignes without controlment?

2. What a creeping nature ſinne hath.

It will creep from Miniſters to people, & from people to Miniſters.

Ergo, ſtoppe ſinne in the beginning.

And for our further inſtruction, here we may ſee of what a creeping and inchroaching nature ſinne is, which like a ſecret venome in the naturall bodie, ſo it in the politique body reſtes not in the place or party poiſoned, but cloſely creeps and diffuſeth it ſelfe into euery part and member of the whole: it creeps from man to man, yea from an euill man to a good, from the worſt man to the beſt: from prophane men, to godly Miniſters: and as from publike perſons (as Magiſtrates and Miniſters) it deſcendeth viſibly, and the example of their euill life is palpably ſcandalous: ſo from the people to the Magiſtrate, or Miniſter, it creepeth cloſely, and aſcendeth in more ſecret and inſenſible manner, yet in the effect it is too ſenſible, for it is alwaies ſeene, that they are ſomething touched with their peoples pollutions: ſinne is not onely as a poiſon ſpreading from the heart to all parts, from the Miniſter to the people: but as a gangrene, if it begin in the foote, will without ſpeedie preuention ſpread priuilie to the heart: ſo ſinne ſhewes it ſelfe, euen from the people to the Miniſters: So great cauſe is there for all men to ſtoppe ſinne in the beginning, to breake it in the egge, to giue water no paſſage, no not a little: for let this gangrene beginne at the feete, it will not reſt till it be in the heart.

2. For our conuerſation.
1. Miniſters: Ergo, labour to liue amongſt a good people.

For our conuerſation we are here taught, firſt, if a Miniſter, by reaſon of the corruption of his owne nature, and the creeping nature of ſinne, is in ſuch danger to be ſtained with the peoples pollutions, then let all Miniſters deſire, and vſe all good meanes to dwell with a

A people as little polluted as may be:otherwiſe let him aſſure himſelfe to be polluted with them, which is both a great diſcomfort to his owne conſcience (as here it was to the Prophet)and diſgrace to his profeſſion: for if it be a duty of euery good profeſſor of religion, to keepe himſelfe vnſpotted of the world, then how much more is it the miniſters duty ſo to doe? and how foule a ſtane is it to the honour of his calling, to be polluted in the common pollutions of the people.

And in diſpoſing thẽſelues, rather regard it, thẽ other commodities.

It may be therfore good counſell to all godly Miniſters in the placing and diſpoſing of themſelues, not to enquire onely how good a liuing ſuch and ſuch a place is, how well ſeated, B how healthful, and beneficiall it will be, (which are alas the common and almoſt the onely queſtions now a dayes) but principally, to regard what a people they be, and how affected, amongſt whom they are to liue: if godly and wel diſpoſed, or at the leaſt tractable and gentile, and willing to be taught, then leſſe to regard other incommodities: but if wicked, and prophane, or (which is worſe,) ſtubborne, froward, and vntractable, then leſſe to regard the greateſt commodities: and certainely if this point be well conſidered of, and how bitter it hath been in the ende, to many who haue not regarded it, it will appeare, that this is the beſt encouragement or diſcouragement, the greateſt commoditie or diſcommoditie, and the beſt C reaſon, either to winne a man to a place; or to drawe him from it, how good ſoeuer it be other waies: they that neglect this duty, and are led (or miſled rather) with carnall and worldly reſpects, how iuſt is it vpon them when they are made to crie in the ſorrowe of their ſoule, Woe is me, I dwell in the midſt of a people of polluted lippes.

A poore liuing with good people, better then a great liuing and euill people.

And here ſuch Miniſters as haue poore liuings but good people, let them not faint nor be diſcouraged, they haue more cauſe to bleſſe God, then to be grieued, for doubtleſſe they are farre better then thoſe who haue great liuings and an euill people.

But as for thoſe to whom God hath beene ſo good, as to beſtowe vpon them competent D liuings, and a willing and wel diſpoſed people, let them thanke themſelues double bleſſed of God, and treble bound to honour God, and to doe good in his Church: and if ſuch men goe not before their brethen in all Miniſteriall care and duty, their fault is aboue all men, and they make themſelues vnworthy of ſo great mercies.

2. Ergo, Miniſters muſt take heede of their cõpanie.

All companies and all recreations are not for Miniſters.

Againe, if that a polluted people pollutes their Miniſter, here is a good warning for all miniſters to be warie and choyſe of their company, with whom they will priuately conuerſe; for as on the one ſide they may not retire themſelues into any ſolitarineſſe, nor ſequeſter themſelues from all ſocietie with their people, (which is rather a Cinnicall and fantaſticall, then any way a religious practiſe:) ſo of all men are they to be moſt carefull, that they doe not looſely and lauiſhly beſtowe themſelues on all companies, as too many doe in our Church, to the great ſcandall thereof, who care not with whom they conuerſe, but all companies, all places, all times, all ſports and recreations, all meetings, all occaſions, are one with them: but alas, what maruell, though ſuch men keep not themſelues vnſpotted of the world, but prooue too offenſiue to their calling: for ſeeing the beſt mẽ cannot liue with the beſt people, but they ſhall receiue ſome contagion frõ them, how carefully ought ordinarie Miniſters to make difference of men and meetings, times and places, and not diffuſedly and careleſly to thurſt themſelues into all: So doing ſhall they keepe their calling from much reproach, and preſerue themſelues from much pollution, which otherwiſe from their polluted people, they ſhall be ſure to receiue.

And people muſt not draw their Miniſters too much into companie.

And here people are to be admoniſhed, not too ſharpely to cenſure their Miniſter: though he be not ſo ſociable with them all, as it may be many would expect, for it concernes no man to be ſo wary of his company and his ſports, as it doth the Miniſter: and if they would haue comfort and honour by their Miniſter, let them be carefull, into what recreations and company they drawe or deſire him: for the more polluted the people are amongſt whom he liues, the more carefull muſt he be to keepe himſelfe cleare from their pollutions.

3. People muſt not cõdemne too ſharply ſuch Miniſters as are faultie in their liues, for thẽſelues are the cauſe of it, beeing of euill liues themſelues.

Laſtly, here people are taught, not to be too ſharpe condemners of thoſe Miniſters, whoſe conuerſations are not ſo vnblameable as were to be wiſhed: for as they liue ill, generally the cauſe is, becauſe they liue amongſt an ill people.

Why then ſhould they ſo much condemne them, for ſuch faults wherein themſelues haue made them faulty? I ſay not, but our church and ſtate, and Miniſterie, are to cenſure ſuch men, (and it were good they did it more) but it is againſt all reaſon the people ſhould doe ſoe, whereas themſelues are the cauſe of it? For alas if this holy Prophet was a man of polluted lipps becauſe he dwelt with a people of polluted lippes, what maruell then, though ordinarie Miniſters be polluted with the common and vniuerſall pollutions of their people: People therefore, are firſt of all to ſee that themſelues be well ordered and godly, and then iuſtly may they complaine, if the liues of their Miniſters be not agreeable: but otherwiſe, it is not poſſible without very ſpeciall grace of God, but that a miniſter ſhall be more or leſſe touched with thoſe crimes which are the common faults of his people. And lamentable experience daily lets vs ſee, that where a people in a towne is giuen to drunkenneſſe, there the Miniſter, is either ſo for company, or at the leaſt too good a fellowe: where a people are giuen to contention, there the Miniſter hath too many ſuites: where the people be Popiſh, there the Miniſter is too ſuperſtitious: where the people are ignorant, there the Miniſter is no great clark, where the people are giuen to any great ſinne, there the Miniſter generally is not cleare from the ſame pollution: and it is ſeene, that the beſt Miniſters and moſt carefull of all, doe complaine bitterly of the pollutions of their people: for that howſoeuer it may be they eſcape partaking with their ſinnes: yet they alwaies finde, at the leaſt a dulling and decaying of Gods graces in themſelues, where the people are vntoward and diſobedient. If therefore a Miniſter liues with ſuch a people, his caſe is pitifull and dangerous, for he walkes in the midſt of nets and ſnares, which are laid for him on euery ſide, and if he eſcape them (I meane, if he keepe himſelfe vnſpotted, in the midſt of a ſpotted and polluted people) his care and his conſcience is worthy both admiration and imitation, and himſelfe is worthy double honour, as beeing both a zealous Miniſter and an holy man. But he whom God hath bleſſed with a good and tractable people, and well affected to the word, and yet himſelfe liueth looſely and ſcandalouſly amongſt them, a heauie burden and a hard account lyeth on that miniſter, and no rebuke is too rough, no puniſhment too great, no cenſure too ſharpe for him. And, if this holy Prophet, feare ſo much the preſence of God for his ſmal pollutions, & yet liued amongſt ſo wicked and polluted a people, then what heauines and horror, ſhall be heaped on his ſoule, who cares not with how foule pollutions his life be ſtained, and yet liueth amongſt a godly and well diſpoſed people? And thus we haue the firſt cauſe of his feare, his owne, and his Peoples pollutions.

But ſuch miniſters as liue with a good people and yet are looſe, they are not worthie to be miniſters, but to be depriued.

It followeth, And mine eyes haue ſeene the King, and Lord of Hoſtes.

2. Cauſe of his feare, he ſaw the Lord. How? in a viſion.

The ſecond cauſe of the Prophets feare and aſtoniſhment is, He ſawe the Lord, who then appeared in glorie vnto him: not that he ſawe the ſubſtance of God (for that is inuiſible and incomprehenſible) but his glory: Not the fullneſſe of his glorie, for that cannot be endured, but a glimpſe of it: nor that with the eyes of his bodie in ordinarie manner, but in a viſion: wherein how farre the eyes of his body were vſed, neither the Prophet expreſſeth, nor we can well conceiue. The menaing then is; In a viſion he ſawe ſuch glorie and Maieſtie, as he knewe there was an extraordinarie preſence of the Lord of Hoſtes, who is the King of glory at whoſe ſight, and thought of his preſence, inſtantly his conſcience is ſmitten with feare, for his owne infirmities, and the pollutions of his people.

Wherein let vs firſt of all obſerue the connexion and dependauce of theſe two cauſes one vpon another: for as they are both ioyntly the cauſe of his feare, ſo one of them is in a ſort the cauſe of another: he feareth, becauſe of his owne and his peoples ſinnes, and becauſe he ſawe the Lord: but why is he afraide to ſee the Lord? A the cauſe thereof is his owne and their ſinnes, without which, he would neuer haue beene affraid, but rather haue gloried to ſee the Lord: but his conſcience checking him, for ſome defect of duty in his calling, therefore he trembleth at the leaſt glimpſe of Gods glorie. Here let vs marke the ground of his reaſon, which is this: That man that is in his ſinnes, is not able to ſtand in the preſence of God: this is a generall and certaine truth, and the reaſons of it are; Firſt, the contrarity betwixt God, and the nature of ſinne, it beeing the only thing which offends him, and which prouokes his wrath and iuſt diſpleaſure: therefore as a ſubiect cannot but be much amazed, if he hap to come into B the Kings preſence, with any thing about him which the king hates, or cannot abide to ſee: ſo a man cannot but be extreame aſtoniſht, if he knowe himſelfe to be in Gods preſence with his ſinnes, which Gods ſoule hateth.

Doctr. The man that is in his ſinnes, endures not Gods preſence.
1. For God hates ſinne, aboue all things.

Secondly, ſinne makes a man indebted to God: for as the Law tieth him firſt to obedience, ſo if he ſinne, and faile in that, it bindes him to puniſhment: and the more a man ſinneth, the deeper is he in Gods debt. If then in this world a man willingly endures not the ſight of him, in whoſe debt he is; what maruell, though a poore ſinner tremble at the preſence of God, to whom he hath forfaited ſoule and all.

2. Sin makes a man a debter to God.

Thirdly, ſinne is that which prouoketh God to wrath: therefore a ſinnefull man feareth the C preſence of God, as a traytor the face of the Prince, or a malefactor of the Iudge. For theſe cauſes, a wicked man endures not Gods preſence.

3. Sinne is that, that makes God angrie.

Now Gods preſence hath diuers degrees, Firſt, God is preſent to our conſcience, when we thinke of him. 2. He is preſent, when we name him, or heare him named or mentioned by others, and theſe are the furtheſt off. Thirdly, God is neerer vnto vs in the preſence of his Ordinances, as his Word and Sacraments, and publike ſeruice in the Congregation. Fourthly, there is a moſt apparent and ſenſible preſence of God, which ſhal be at the laſt Iudgement, when all men ſhall ſtand before him in his immediate preſence, to receiue their iudgement. Now all D theſe preſences of God, are hatefull to a wicked man: for the firſt, a wicked man by his good will neuer thinkes of God, and if ſometime a thought of God (like lightening) flaſhes in his minde, preſently he quencheth it, as beeing a moſt vnwelcome and burthenſome thought vnto him: therefore ſaith Dauid; The wicked is ſo prooud, he careth not for God; neither is God in all his thoughts: Nay, God himſelfe is ſo little thought on by them, that they will willingly thinke of nothing, that might bring God into their thoughts: as namely Gods great workes of his wonderfull iudgements: of whom the ſame Prophet ſaith, in the ſame place, Thy iudgements are farre aboue, out of his ſight: as if he had ſaid, hee labours to ſet them farre from the eye of his minde, that

Pſal.10.5.

A he may neuer haue occaſion to thinke of them, nor on God by them. That this is true for his thoughts, I haue endeauoured thus to prooue by Gods owne teſtimonies, becauſe thoughts cannot be diſcerned by man. But alas, for the ſecond, that is, for his words, that is too apparent in the ſight of all men. For obſerue it, and you ſhall neuer ſee a wicked man, by his good will haue God in his mouth, (vnleſſe it be to abuſe his name, by ſwearing or blaſphemie) nor willingly doth he heare any other man talke, or diſcourſe largely of God, or of his greatneſſe and his iuſtice; but ſuch talke is tedious and comberſome vnto him: and if he cannot breake it off, with other diſcourſe, then he B ſits as mute as a fiſh, and inwardly either freets with anger, or is tormented with feare. All this is true in Felix the Gouernour: who whileſt Paul diſcourſed of righteouſneſſe, temperance, and iudgement to come: the text ſaith in the meane time he trembled.

He neuer ſpeakes of God, vnles it be to abuſe his Maieſtie.

Act.24.26.

And for the third, we ſee daily wicked men, endure not Gods preſence in the Church: for nothing is more troubleſome vnto them, then many Sermons, often praying, and much receiuing of the Sacrament: and therefore they neuer come to the Church, nor receiue ofter then the Lawe layes vpon them: But further then that, as the Pſalmiſt ſaith; they neuer call vpon God. But as for the laſt, that they feare and abhorre aboue all, they wiſh in their heart it may neuer be. And therefore S. Paul makes it a token of C a true beleeuer, and a holy man, to loue, and look for the appearing of Ieſus Chriſt. Whereupon it followeth, that euen ſo it is a ſigne of a wicked man, to feare the laſt iudgement, and to wiſh it might neuer be: And when it comes indeede and they ſee they cannot eſcape it, what then doe they? Euen cry to the mountaines, fall vpon vs: and to the Hills, couer vs, and hide vs: from what? from the preſence of God: ſo fearefull and ſo hatefull is Gods preſence to a ſinnefull man.

3. They loue not the word nor Sacraments.

Pſal.14.4.

4. They wiſh Chriſt would neuer come to iudgement.

2.Tim.4.8.

Reu.6.16.

Beſides theſe, there is another way, whereby God ſheweth his preſence: and that is by extraordinarie reuelation of his glorie immediately: which was vſuall in the olde Teſtament, as here D to the Prophet, but now it is not to be expected. But how terrible that is to the ſinnefull nature of man, appeares in this place: for if the Prophet a moſt holy man, whoſe conſcience accuſed him but of a fewe ſmall ſinnes, yet thus cryes out, amazed and affrighted, at the reuelation of ſome part of Gods glorie: alas how would they be terrified with it, whoſe conſciences are burdened with great and grieuous ſinnes, and that without repentance? Thus we ſee the ground of this reaſon, how true it is, that a man in his ſinne, cannot cheerefully come nor boldly ſtand in Gods preſence. The vſe of this doctrine: Firſt of all, let vs ſee the monſtrous preſumption of ſuch Miniſters as dare venture raſhly into the miniſterie, to tread vpon the holy ground of God with vncleane feete, to handle the holy things of God with vnwaſhen hands: For what is it to enter into the Miniſterie, but to enter into the chamber of preſence of the great King? and ſhould not a man looke about him, afore he come there? Therefore if God rebuked Moſes, for ſtepping too haſtily towards the buſh, where his preſence was, & ſaid; Come not too neere, for the place where thou ſtandeſt is holy ground: then how will God rebuke and cheecke the conſciences of ſuch carnall men, as careleſly and carnally ruſh into the Pulpit, and to Gods holy table, where God is preſent, in a farre more excellent manner then he was in the Buſh? And if they be ſo to be blamed, who enter into this calling without feare and reuerence, then how much more faulty are they, who beeing Miniſters, dare venture to preach, or miniſter the holy Sacraments, without holy and priuate preparation, and ſanctification of themſelues: but ruſh vpon them, as vpon common and prophane actions? Whereas God is preſent there, in a moſt holy and glorious manner: theſe men ſure will ſay, the Prophet heere was of too nice a conſcience: but fearefully and terribly ſhall God appeare at the laſt vnto ſuch men, as care not how they appeare in his holy preſence.

Extraordinarie apparitions of Gods Maieſtie, a ſinfull man cannot endure.

Nor come to doe the dutie of that calling, without repentance, and holy preparation.

Secondly this ſheweth the reaſon of the practiſe of all Chriſtian Churches: who vſe to pray before the Sermon and after: namely, not for Decorum onely, and to grace the action, but to ſanctifie and to humble our ſelues, becauſe then we came before Gods preſence: they therefore do not thinke reuerently enough of God and his preſence, who doe by their practiſe in any ſort, make way to the contrary.

2. Ergo, they are to pray before and after Sermō.

Thirdly, we may here learne, the pitifull caſe of thoſe Miniſters, who are ſo preſumptuous, as to exerciſe that holy function, and yet remaine in their ſinnes without repentance: what doe theſe men? they approach to the burning Buſh, with their ſhoes on their feete: that is, into Gods preſence in their ſinnes: what ſhall come of it in the ende? ſurely, that burning fire ſhall conſume them. The leaſt ſinne, and ſmalleſt negligences affrighted the holy Prophet, when he ſhould goe into Gods preſence: But theſe men dare come into the Sanctuarie of God; yea dare take Gods word in their mouthes, and yet hate to be reformed: and doe caſt the Glorious word of God behinde their backes, which they preach to others with their mouthes: theſe men may wonder at this holy Prophets niceneſſe, or elſe all the world may wonder at their prophaneneſſe. A little pollution of his lipps, feared him to come into Gods preſence: but theſe dare doe it, with eyes, eares, lipps, feete, hands, heart; and all polluted: their eyes polluted, with careleſſe looking at all vanities: their eares with hearing: and their lips with ſpeaking wanton and wicked talke: their feete with running into wicked company: their hands with practiſing, and their hearts, with deuiſing and conſenting to all wickedneſſe.

The 3. vſe. Ergo, ſuch men are extreamely deſperate, who dare come to preach, & miniſter Sacraments in their ſinnes.

Pſal.50.16.

Such mens labours are fruitleſſe.

This is the cauſe, why the labours of ſuch men are moſt vnprofitable: becauſe they dare come into Gods preſence in their ſinnes. In many places of our land, there is by Gods bleſſing much teaching, yet there is little reformation in the liues of the moſt: but contrariwiſe ſome fall to Atheiſme, ſome to Papiſme: ſome into foule ſinnes, not to be named amongſt Chriſtians.

And their looſeneſſe doth more hurt, then their doctrine good.

Where is the cauſe? ſurely not in the goſpell: nor in our doctrine, nor in the teaching of it; but one very principall cauſe is, many Miniſters come into Gods preſence vnſanctified, and in their ſinnes: not caring how looſely they liue, in the face of their people: and therefore God in iuſtice, though he inſtantly ſmite not them, with viſible vengeance for their preſumption: B yet he ſmites the people with ſpirituall blindneſſe, that they regard not their doctrine, but looke at their liues, and doe rather follow the prophaneneſſe of the one, then the holineſſe of the other. Miniſters are ſuch, in whom God will be ſanctified, therefore becauſe they doe not ſo, but diſhonour him, by comming into his preſence in their ſinnes: therefore he cannot abide them, nor giue any bleſſing to their labours.

By Gods ſecret iudgement.

Good words are vaine where there is no good life.

All miniſters therefore, as they would ſee any fruite of their miniſterie, let them firſt ſanctifie themſelues, and cleanſe their hearts by Repentance; before they preſume to ſtand vp, to rebuke ſinne in others: elſe let them not think that their golden words ſhall do ſo much C good, as their leaden liues ſhall doe hurt: and they may happe to confirme men, that alreadie are conuerted, but hardly ſhall any ſuch men, conuert any ſoule from Poperie or prophaneneſſe. And it is a vaine conceit for men to imagine, there is any force in eloquence, or humane learning, to ouerthrowe that ſinne in others, which ruleth and raigneth in themſelues. Our Church, and all reformed Churches may make vſe of this doctrine? for it is the glory of a Church to haue their doctrine powerfull, and effectuall for the winning of ſoules, therefore it concerneth them to take order, as well that their miniſters be godly men, as good Schollers; and their liues be vnoffenſiue, as well as their doctrine ſound: or els they will finde in D wofull experience, that they pull downe as much with one hand, as they build vp with the other.

But moſt neerely this doctrine toucheth Miniſters themſelues: who muſt knowe their caſe is moſt fearefull of all mens, if they come into Gods preſence, in their prophaneneſſe: for as no man is more honourable then a learned and holy miniſter; ſo none more contemptible in this worlde, none more miſerable for that to come, then he that by his looſe and lewde life doth ſcandalize his doctrine: and let him aſſure himſelfe, that for his preſumption, in ruſhing into Gods preſence in his ſinnes, he ſhall in this world, be caſt out as vnſauorie ſalt and troden down of men, with the foote of contempt: and in A the world to come, he ſhall aboue all men cry out in moſt extreame torment of conſcience; Woe is me that my eyes muſt ſee the King and Lord of hoſtes: and ſo becauſe he would not in this world, come into Gods preſence in ſanctification and holineſſe; he ſhall therefore in feare and horror, be haled into the preſence of Gods glory, at the laſt day: there to receiue the iuſt ſentence of his condemnation.

Math.5.13.

The 4. vſe for Miniſters: Ergo, good miniſters muſt not flie from Gods preſence becauſe of their ſinnes, but repent, and ſo approach to his dutie.

Laſtly, all painful & godly Miniſters may receiue comfort, not to be diſcouraged or driuen from Gods preſence, becauſe of their corruptions or infirmities; for we ſee it was the Prophets caſe: but let them ſtill approach in feare and reuerence, and be ſo farre from beeing driuen from their duty, becauſe they beeing B ſinnefull men, dare not come into Gods preſence, without much feare; as let them contrariwiſe be aſſured, that the more they tremble at Gods preſence here, the leſſe ſhall they feare it at the laſt day: and when prophane and vngodly men, who in this world feared not to ſtand in Gods preſence in their horrible ſinnes, ſhall crie to the Mountains, fall vpon vs, and to the hils, couer vs, and hide vs from the preſence of God: then ſuch miniſters as in this world in feare and trembling, and alwaies in repentance, did approach into Gods preſence, ſhall then looke vp, and lift vp their heads, and ſhall ſay to the holy Angels and all the powers of heauen, helpe vs, and haſten vs to come into the glorious preſence of our God and Sauiour.

And thus we ſee the manifolde vſe of this C Doctrine, to our Church and miniſterie.

The ſecond vſe againſt the Papiſts.

Secondly, In as much as here the Prophet in a conſcience of his corruptions, feareth and crieth out at the leaſt apparition of Gods glorie: The vanitie and falſe dealing of the Church of Rome, is here diſcouered, in whoſe Legends and ſtories of their Saints, nothing is more common then apparitions from heauen, of Saints departed, of glorious Angels, of the virgine Marie, (and that ſo familiarly, as ſometime ſhe ſung with them in their Cell, kiſſed ſome of them, and let them ſucke her breſts.) Nay, of God himſelfe: and eſpecially of our Sauiour Chriſt Ieſus: who they ſay, appeared (I knowe not how oft,) to one man Saint D Franciſ: and appeared as he was crucified with his wounds, and imprinted thoſe wounds of his, in Franciſ his body; which they ſay he bare all his life, and that they bled whenſoeuer he would ſuffer them, which he alwaies did on Good Friday, that he might be like to Chriſt. This, and many more ſuch, may you ſee in the fabulous and blaſphemous booke, of the conformities of S. Franciſ.

Ergo, the apparitions of God, and Chriſt, which they make ſo ordinarie, are but colluſions.

But for the matter: Are apparitions from heauen ſo ordinary in the popiſh church? how then came it to paſſe, that the greateſt and holieſt men in the olde Teſtament, were ſo amazed at the very apparition but of an Angell: as wee may ſee in the whole courſe of the Storie? Some ranne away, and hidde them-

ſelues:

ſelues: ſome couered thir faces, ſome fell flatte on the ground: and the Prophet here cryed out; Woe is mee, I am vndone; my eyes haue ſeene the King and Lord of Hoſtes. But in the church of Rome, looke the ſtories: that Saint or Monke is no bodie, that hath not had ſome apparition, either of the Virgin Mary, or ſome of the Apoſtles, or an Angell, or Chriſt Ieſus appearing and talking with him: and yet alas, Peter, Iames, and Iohn, thoſe three great pillars, they were as good as beſide themſelues, at the appearing of a little part of the glory of Chriſt in his transfiguration.

Gal.2.9. Math.17.6. Luk.9.33.

Either therefore muſt it follow, that theſe men haue no ſinne in them, which dare and can behold Gods glory ſo eaſily, and ſo ordinarily, (which is impoſſible) or rather, which indeed is truth, it appeares that theſe are but deceitfull fancies and forgeries of their own deuiſe, to deceiue the world, and to magnifie themſelus, before the eies of the common people; for it is firſt of all moſt falſe, that apparitions are ſo common as they make them, for if they were, then are they more ordinarie in the new Teſtament, then in the Old. For whereas the Scripture hath one, their Legends haue twenty: and whereas one, namely, Saint Paul, was once rapt into heauen, they haue 20. that were rapt thither. And as that is falſe, ſo is it impoſſible that anie man clothed with fleſh, can endure any extraordinarie apparition of Gods glorie, without extreame amazement, as is plaine here in the Prophet: who I hope was as holy a man, as the holieſt Monke that euer was. I haue noted this, that young Diuines may be occaſioned to looke a little into their fabulous legends, that ſo they may diſcouer the falſe trickes, & iuggling caſtes of that Religion; which euill ſhiftes it needed not, if it were of God.

Reaſons. 1.
1. Apparitions of God cannot be more common in the new, then they were in the old Teſtament.
2.Cor.12.
2. No man in his fleſh can endure gods glorie.

Thirdly, the people may here learne, Firſt, in that Gods preſence is ſo glorious and fearefull to mans nature, how mercifully God hath dealt with them, in teaching them not by him ſelfe, or by his Angels from heauen, which they could neuer endure, but by men who are like themſelues: and how vaine and fond theſe men are, who would be taught from heauen, and not by men, who are ſo full of wants. In the old Teſtament, when the people receiued the law from Gods owne mouth, it is ſaid, they ran away, and cried out, Why ſhould we die? if we heare the voyce of God any more we ſhall die: for what fleſh euer heard the voice of the liuing God, and liued? therefore they ſay to Moſes, Goe thou neere, and heare all that the Lord ſhall ſay, and declare thou vnto vs what God ſaith to thee, and we will heare it, and doe it. And then ſaith the text, the Lord ſaid, I heard the words of this people, they haue ſaid well in all that they haue ſpoken. And ſo, from that day forward, God ordinarily taught his Church by men like themſelues: and we ſee, that the beginning of it was not in iudgement, but in mercie vnto them. It is therefore the dutie of all men, both to acknowledge this mercy of God, in due thankfulneſſe, and withall to remember, when they ſee infirmities in Miniſters, that they are but men, and that, if they had not the Miniſterie of men, how heard it would goe with them: conſidering, that the leaſt meaſure of Gods owne preſence, cannot be endured, by any man.

3. Vſe to the people: they may ſee Gods mercy to them, in teaching thē by men like themſelues, and not by apparitions from heauē.

Deut.5.25. 26,27,28.

2. Inaſmuch as Gods preſence, is ſo glorious in it ſelfe, and fearefull to our nature, all men are taught to prepare themſelues by holy prayer, by humiliation, and confeſſion of their ſinnes, and vnworthineſſe, afore they come to Gods word or Sacraments: for they come at that time into Gods preſence: they therefore are not to come in their ſecuritie, nor in their ordinarie ſinnes vnrepented of, leaſt God ſtrike their conſciences, with a ſenſe of his fearefull diſpleaſure, and make them cry out, vpon far greater cauſe, then here the Prophet did.

2.Vſe. Ergo, they muſt prepare thēſelues, before they come to the word, or Sacraments.

Thirdly and laſtly, we learne here the different natures and properties of ſinne and holines: Sinne, euen the leaſt ſinne, nay, a very ſinfulneſſe of nature makes a man afraide of Gods preſence: That ſinne vnrepented of doth ſo, appeares in Adam, who as in his integritie, he ſpake and conuerſed euen in a familiar ſort with God: ſo no ſooner had he ſinned, but he ran from God, and hid himſelfe: and that euen the leaſt ſinnes not repented of, doe ſo alſo, appeares in this Prophet, who beeing a holy man, yet his conſcience being priuie to it ſelfe of ſom ſmall omiſſions or negligences in his calling, he crieth out, he is vndone, becauſe he ſeeth the Lord of hoſts. But contrariwiſe, the ſtate of perfect holineſſe, and the want of all ſinne, makes a man bolde in Gods preſence, and rather deſirous, then afraide to behold Gods glorie, which ſhall be moſt apparant at the laſt day: for when the wicked ſhall deſire rather to be couered with the hilles, and ground to duſt by the mountaines, then to appeare before the face of God: then ſhall the godly, whoſe holineſſe ſhall then be perfect, looke vp, and lift vp their heads, becauſe their redemption is ſo nigh. And Iob teſtifieth of himſelfe, that he knoweth his Redeemer liueth. And that he ſhall ſtand before him, and looke vpon him with his eyes. Thus as guiltineſſe driues a man from the kings preſence, but innocencie makes him bold before him: So ſinfulnes makes a man auoid Gods preſence, but holines makes him draw neere vnto God, and to reioyce in his preſence.

3. Vſe, ſee the different natures of ſinne, and holines. Sinne drawes a man from Gods preſence.

Holineſſe inuites a man into Gods preſence.

Reu.6.16: Luk.21.28. Iob 19.25, 26,27.

Then for a concluſion of this point, let all men here learne the way to true courage and boldneſſe before God: namely, to repent daily of their ſinnes, and labour to growe in true holineſſe: wealth nor wit, learning nor authority, can doe this for thee, but onely a good conſcience, which muſt be made good by grace, & by repentance, then ſhalt thou reioyce in Gods preſence in this world, and delight to think of God, to ſpeake of God, to pray vnto him, to meete him in his word and Sacraments, and at the laſt day ſhalt thou ſtand with confidence before the throne of his glory.

Vſe. Ergo, if a man would haue boldnes with God, he muſt be a holy man.

Hitherto of the feare & aſtoniſhment of the Prophet, & of the cauſes thereof. Now followeth his conſolation.

Then flew one of the Seraphims, &c.

2. Generall points. His conſolation, wherein are 2. points.

In theſe two verſes is laid downe the ſecond generall point: namely, the conſolation of the Prophet: concerning which, there are two points in the text:

1. Circumſtances of it. Circumſtances are many.
2. The groũd of it.

1. The ground and matter of his conſolation, that is the forgiueneſſe of his ſinne.

2. Diuers circumſtances of that conſolation.

1. The time; Then.

2. The Miniſter by whom it was done: an Angell, one of the Seraphims.

3. The manner how he did it, ſpeedily, He flewe.

4. The inſtrument or outward ſigne, a coale from the altar.

5. The outward action or application of it; He touched his lips.

The matter of the conſolation is laſt in order. Let vs therefore firſt ſpeake of the circumſtances.

1. Circumſtance, the time, that is, after his feare.

The firſt circumſtance is, the time when this Prophet was comforted and raiſed from his feare. Then, ſaith the text: that is, after his feare and aſtoniſhment, but not afore. Thus dealt God alwaies with all his Saints, he beſtoweth no graces on them pertaining to ſaluation, but after he hath by ſome meanes or other brought them to true humiliation in themſelues, and to ſorrow for their ſinnes: Humiliation is the preparatiue for grace: for when by ſight and ſenſe of their ſinnes, and their owne miſerie by ſinne, he hath euen driuen them quite out of themſelues, finding nothing in themſelues, but cauſe of feare and aſtoniſhment, then powres he the oyle of grace, and of ſweete comfort into their hearts, and refreſheth their weary ſoules with the deawe of his mercie: this point needs no further proofe, for looke into the Scriptures, and we ſhall finde, God neuer called any man to the ſtate of grace, or to any notable worke or function in his Church, but he firſt humbled them, and then brought them out of all conceit with themſelues, and then wrought in them, & by them, his wonderfull workes.

Doct. No conſolation, but after humiliation.

Vſe 1. To all men: Ergo, eſteeme of afflictions.

The vſe of this doctrine, is firſt of all to teach all men to eſteeme aright of the afflictions that God layeth vpon them in this world: commonly men take them impatiently, and our nature grudgeth againſt them: but let a Chriſtian man conſider with himſelfe, how God hath alwaies dealt with his children, and he hath cauſe not to thinke ſo: for doth God lay ſome great affliction on thee? it may be he hath ſome mighty worke of his grace to worke in thee, or ſome great worke of mercie to be wrought by thee in his Church, and hereby prepareth thee for the ſame. Say therefore with the holy Prophet; I held my tongue, O Lord, and ſpake nothing, becauſe it was thy doing: and what God may intend A in his doing to thee, thou canſt not tell: and therefore in ſilence, and patience poſſeſſe thy ſoule.

Pſal.39.9.

2. To men diſtreſſed in conſcience, that their ſtate is not deſperate as they imagin, but moſt comfortable

Againe, here is a comfort to all ſuch as are diſtreſſed in minde, in ſenſe of their ſinnes, and ſight of Gods wrath: their ſtate is not miſerable, much leſſe deſperate, for they are in the high way to grace & fauour. God iuſtifieth not, but him that repents; God exalts not, but him that is humble: God comforts not, but him that is diſtreſſed: God hath mercie on none, but ſuch as both knowne and feele they want it: and know alſo, that they know not where to haue it, but at his hands. Happie therefore is that ſoule, that feeles the waight and burden of ſinne, for B to him will Chriſt bring moſt eaſe and comfort: Gods miniſters therefore are hereby to comfort diſtreſſed conſciences, to aſſure them, that if with this Prophet they be ſo deeply touched with ſight of their ſinnes, and Gods iuſtice, as that they cry, Woe is mee, I am vndone; Then, euen Then, are they moſt capable of comfort, and beſt prepared to receiue it, as here it fell out to the holy Prophet. Thirdly, here is the way taught vs how to attaine to any excellent graces of God, either for our owne ſaluation, or the good of the Church, namely to labour for a ſenſible feeling of the want of them in our ſelues: for God vſueth to beſtowe no gifts on any man, but ſuch as doe in humility and lowlineſſe, confeſſe to God, and acknowledge in C themſelues, the want of them. So the bleſſed Virgin ſignifieth, God filleth the hungry with good things, but the rich he ſends emptie away; And ſo the Pſalmiſt, God ſatisfieth the hungry ſoule, and filleth the emptie ſoule with goodneſſe: So then if thou be rich in thy conceits, God hath not for thee: but if thou be hungry, he is ready to fill thee with good things: and doſt thou acknowledge thy ſoule empty, thẽ behold treaſures of goodneſſe, to feede and fill thee: and art thou caſt downe with the Prophet, and is thy ſoule emptie of hope, and fraught with feare, then, behold, euen then, God and his Angells are ready to raiſe thee vp, and to fill thee with conſolation. Thus much for the time of his conſolation: now for the Miniſter, by whom it D was.

Vſe 3. The way to get excellent graces at Gods hand, is to labour to feele the want of thẽ.

Pſal.107.9.

2. Circumſtance of the Miniſter: an Angel, a Seraphim.

The 2. circumſtance of his conſolation is the Miniſter by whom it was done: An Angell, one of the Seraphims: that is an Angell of that order ſo called: out of which we learne, Doct. 1. Ergo there are ſeuerall degrees of Angels, that we know not.

Firſt, that there are diuers degrees and ſeuerall orders of Angels, though we know not the true diſtinction thereof: nor thinke it lawfull to imagine them to be 9. nor to ſet them downe particularly, as the Church of Rome doth, who make many of their owne deuiſes, which they call traditions of equall authoritie with the Scriptures. Secondly, that theſe holy Angels are the glorious guard of God, and doe continually ſtand about the throne of his glory, and attend his holy will, both in heauen and in earth.

Doctr. 2. That they are Gods guard.

Pſal.34. Hebr.1. Doct.3. That they are the guard of Gods children.

Thirdly, that they are alſo by the mercifull appointment of God, the guard of Gods children, and miniſtring ſpirits ſent out, as it were with a commiſſion, of the good of the Elect. All theſe points becauſe they are plain in the Scripture,and doe leſſe concerne our generall ſcope, which is touching the Miniſterie, I paſſe them ouer.

Doct.4. That they haue ſpeciall charge and care of godly miniſters.

Fourthly, here it is apparant, that as the Angels are ſent out for the helpe and ſeruice of the elect, ſo eſpecially of Gods miniſters, as is plaine in this place, where the Prophet beeing afrighted, a holy Angel is readie to giue him comfort: and ſo ouer the whole courſe of the Prophets: and at this day, their protection and comfortable aſſiſtance, is no leſſe preſent to the godly Miniſters of the new Teſtament, though not in ſuch ſenſible ſignes, and ſuch viſible manner, as in the olde: for if they be miniſtring ſpirits,ſent out for the good of them which ſhall be ſaued, how much more for their good, which ſhall be both ſaued themſelues,and ſaue others alſo.

Vſe to Gods Miniſters. 1. Let them be content with their calling, though it be full of croſſes,and contempts,for it is honoured of the Angels,aboue others.

A doctrine of great comfort, and much good vſe to all Miniſters: who firſt of all may here learne contentment in their calling: for howſoeuer no calling hath more croſſes,ſo none againe hath more comfort: and howſoeuer none be more diſgraced by euill men,yet none is more honored by the holy Angels: and howſoeuer in this world they aboue any calling, are ſeruants to all men; yet none hath the ſeruice and attendance of Angels ſo much as they: for though we haue them not to help vs to do the outward actions of our miniſterie with vs, or for vs, (as ſome popiſh Doctors teach, that in their Maſſe, Amen is not ſaid to one collect, becauſe the Angels ſay Amen to it) yet doubtles they are preſent alwaies,as at all holy exerciſes and lawfull actions, ſo eſpecially at the publike ſeruice of God, performed by the Miniſters: and beſide that,they are witneſſes thereto,and of the paines, and diligence,and faithfulneſſe of a good Miniſter; they alſo doe miniſter vnto them oftentimes, bodily ſtrength, and aſſiſtance,and many comforts in their troubleſome trauels, which they know not how by any naturall meanes they come vnto them. And as this doctrine doth thus yeeld them contentment againſt the contempt, ſo alſo courage againſt the daunger of this calling. For what though thou haſt mighty men of this world againſt thee,when thou haſt Angells for thee? and what though thou fighteſt againſt principalities and powers, when thou haſt Cherubins, and Seraphims on thy ſide? godly Miniſters haue many enemies, but if by the eye of faith they can ſee as well who are with them, as with the eye of reaſon who are againſt them, they will confeſſe with Eliſha, there are more with vs, then againſt vs. The ſtories of all ages doe affirme, and the comfortable experience of theſe dayes of ours doth verifie the truth hereof. Miniſters that liue in places verie prophane, or very popiſh, it is admirable to ſee how many dangers they haue eſcaped,and what plottes they haue auoyded, which by their enemies, (or rather the enemies of their doctrine) haue beene laide for their liues: which their deliuerance,and many other comforts in their miniſteries, whence are they but from Gods protection, by the miniſterie of his Angels.

2. Ergo, let them haue courage,for though men be againſt them,Angels are with thē.

Before we learne this point, two queſtions may be asked, not amiſſe briefly to be reſolued.

1. Queſtion. 1. Ergo, Whence is it that Angels attend Miniſters, more then other men. Anſ. 2. reaſons.

1. Fró God, he will haue it ſo,becauſe they worke his worke more then other callings. Pſal.91.11,12

Firſt if any aske whence comes it that Angels performe more ſeruice to good Miniſters then to other men: I anſwer,the reaſon is partly from God,partly from the Angels: firſt, God hath a principall care of them aboue other men, becauſe they worke his worke aboue all other callings: for their labours immediatly concerne the good of mens ſoules: whereas others doe firſt concerne the body, and conſequently the ſoule: therefore, whereas he hath giuen his Angells charge ouer all his elect, to keepe them in all their good waies,they haue a ſpecial charge doubtleſſe ouer all godly and faithfull Miniſters, whoſe waies are Gods in a ſpecial manner.

2. From the Angels thēſelues.

Againe, Angels themſelues as they willingly performe any ſeruice to the Church, or to any part thereof, ſo moſt willingly of all are they imployed for the good of godly miniſters,and that for two cauſes:

Becauſe thei are fellow-labourers. 1.Cor.4.2. Heb 1.14. Mal.2.7. Reuel.2. & 3.chap.

Firſt,becauſe they are their fellow-labourers, both for that the Angels and good Miniſters are both called Gods embaſſadors,& Gods own ſeruants or officers,in a more peculiar manner then any other calling: and for that their ſeruice is ſo like,that their names are common,one to the other. Angels beeing called Miniſters, and Miniſters Angells, as though they were almoſt all one.

Becauſe thei conuert ſoules,which delighteth the Angels aboue any thing in this world. Heb.1.14. Luk.15 10.

Secondly, becauſe the Miniſters dutie is, to conuert and ſaue ſoules, beeing a worke,which (next to the glorifying of God, and doing his will) the Angels do take moſt delight in,aboue any other: for if they be ſent out for the good of them which ſhalbe ſaued, how much more willingly for their good, by whom they are ſaued, which ſhall be ſaued? and if the Angels reioyce at the conuerſion of a ſinner, ſurely they much loue him,and deſire to doe him good,by whom the ſinner is conuerted: and in theſe reſpects, angels and Miniſters haue the ſame names: & are both imployed in the ſame great worke; namely, doing good to the Elect.

Reuel.19.10. and 22.9.

Therefore is it, that the Angell calls himſelfe S. Iohn the Euangeliſts fellow in the Reuelation: If then they be fellows, euen fellow ſeruants, and fellow-labourers,in a more ſpeciall manner then any other, what maruell though the Angells be moſt willingly imployed in doing any ſeruice of help or comfort to godly miniſters.

2. Queſtion. What duties then are good Miniſters to performe to Angels. Not worſhip thē ſo as the Papiſts doe.

In the ſecond place. If any aske, if it be ſo, then what duties are Miniſters to performe to Angells, for this their ſo carefull ſeruice,and eſpeciall attendance vpon them, aboue other men?

A Papiſt would anſwer; Miniſters muſt therefore worſhippe them,and keepe their faſting, holy-dayes, and ſay their ſeruice, and pray vnto them, as to their keepers and Mediators. But alas,cannot the Kings Meſſenger or Officer be honoured, vnleſſe he be ſet vpon the Kings throne? will nothing ſerue him, but the Crowne and Scepter? ſo cannot Angels be honoured,vnleſſe they be made Gods, or Sauiours,or mediators: But I anſwer therefore,we dare not goe ſo farre, leaſt we remember the ſeruant ſo much, that we forget the maſter:but rather we anſwer thus:ſeeing Angels are thus ſeruiceable to gods miniſters, it ſhould firſt of all teach all men to honour that calling, with all due reuerence:For they cannot but pleaſe the Angels,in honouring good Miniſters,whome they eſteeme their fellowes.

As all men ſhould therfore honour that calling.

1. So Miniſters ſhould labour to be faithfull in their calling.

Secondly, it ſhould teach all Miniſters, not to content themſelues with the name and title, but to labour to be good and faithfull. For ſo doing, they are fellowes to the Angels, and it is a diſgrace to the Angels, when thoſe that are their fellows are vnfaithfull.

2. To adorne it with a holy life.

And it ſhould further teach them to adorne their calling with a holy life, for as ſinne is that, that grieues the Angels, and driues them away, ſo it is grace & holines, which makes them delight in the fellowſhip of men.

3. To be painfull in their calling.

And it may alſo encourage any man, to take paines in that holy calling, wherein he is ſure to haue Gods Angels, in a ſpeciall manner to attend him, to aſſiſt him, to protect him, and to be a witneſſe of his faithfulneſſe: & who would not work cheerefully in that labour, wherein he hath the Angels to be in a ſort fellow-workers with him?

Thus to doe, is to honour them.

To doe theſe three duties, is to honour good Angels: and that Miniſter that conſcionably performeth them, the Angels will take themſelues ſufficiently honoured of that man.

And if a Miniſter would reioyce thē, let him labour ſeriouſly,ſo to preach as he may winne ſoules.

And if beſide this honour, we would reioyce Gods Angels, and miniſter matter of ioy vnto them,then in the fourth place, let all Miniſters propounde to themſelues aboue all things, the conuerſion of ſoules, rather then their owne praiſe or liuing, or pleaſing of men, and ſo endeuour it both in teaching, and all their other courſes, that the Angels may ſee it, and be witneſſes of it: for if they reioyce at the conuerſion of a ſinner, (as Chriſt ſaith they doe,) then thoſe men make them ofteſt reioyce, which doe moſt ſeriouſly aime at the conuerſion of ſinners.

And thus we ſee, both the ſeruice of Angels to Gods Miniſters, and the duties they are to performe to them in that regard. The due conſideration of this point, may raiſe the world to a better conceite of this Calling, and perſwade fathers to dedicate their ſonnes to it, and ſtirre vp young ſtudents to conſecrate themſelues thereto,and turne their ſtudies to that ende:for no man in no calling hath ſo ſpecial attendance, and aſſiſtance of Gods Angles, as godly Miniſters haue: At leaſt, if it worke not this in the world; yet it may yeeld comfort and contentment to all faithfull Miniſters in their painfull calling.

But let vs ſee how the Angell performed his ſeruice to the Prophet: not vnwillingly, not lingringly, but ſpeedily:ſo ſaith the Text,

3. Circumſtance, the manner:He flew.

He flewe.

Which is not ſo to be vnderſtood,as though the Angel had wings: for they haue no corporall nor ſenſible bodies,but ſpirituall and inſenſible ſubſtances, the actions whereof are performed with ſuch nimbleneſſe and agilitie, as cannot fall within the compaſſe of outward ſenſe: But the phraſe is vſed for our capacities,to ſhew how readily and ſpeedily the Angell went about to miniſter comfort to the Prophet. For as nothing moueth ſo quickly to our ſenſe, as doth the creature that flyeth: and as we ſay,that man doth flie about his buſineſſe; which doth it quickly and diligently: ſo here the holy Ghoſt ſets downe the willingneſſe and quickneſſe of the Angell, to comfort this holy Prophet, and to doe the will of God. Where we learne;

That is readily,ſpeedily,willingly.

Doctr. 1. See what excellent ſeruants of God,Angels are.

Firſt, what excellent ſeruants of God the holy Angels be,which ſo readily, willingly, and ſpeedily execute the will of their Lord. This muſt teach all Gods ſeruants to doe the like, and to imitate them in this excellent obedience: And the rather, becauſe we pray daily to God; Thy will be done in earth as it is in heauen: In earth of vs, as it is in heauen of the holy Angells: but they doe it moſt cheerefully, and without all lingring, therefore ſo ought wee. Magiſtrates in their places, and Miniſters in theirs, and euery man in his function, is to apply this to himſelfe, and to be ſtirred vp thereby to a cheerfulneſſe and quicknes in their duties, for therein they reſemble the bleſſed Angels, & then their deeds accord with their praier: but contrariwiſe,he that doth his dutie vnwillingly, and vnreadily is like the Deuill: which indeed doth Gods will,and yet againſt his will:and ſurely vnto ſuch obedience there belongeth no reward. But as God loueth a cheerefull giuer, ſo doubtleſſe loues he a cheerefull worker.

The fourth petition.

Vſe. We muſt ſo ſerue God in our places.

2.Cor.9.7.

Doctr. 2. What good friends they are to good men,eſpecially to good Miniſters.

Secondly,we ſee here how great loue Angels beare vnto Gods children, eſpecially vnto godly Miniſters, how willingly they are imployed to doe them good.Willingneſſe,and readineſſe to doe good to any man, muſt needes come from loue:and yet alas all men, euen the beſt, and all Miniſters, euen the beſt, are creatures far inferior to the Angels.

1. Vſe. Ergo, ſuperiours loue their inferiours,& contemne them not.

Here Magiſtrates and Miniſters,muſt learne to be farre from contempt of their inferiours:and to doe their duties of ruling and teaching carefully, though the people be far their inferiours: it is the nature of loue to make any man doe ſeruice moſt willingly,to him that he loues,though he be far meaner then himſelfe.

And ſhew it by doing thē good.

If therefore Princes loue their ſubiects,they will not ſpare any care, coſt, nor paines, nay, they will reioyce to do them good, and they wil labour to be like the Angels, who are far grea-

A ter then men, as they are then their ſubiects.

And if Miniſters loue their people, they will forget their own dignitie, which oft-times they might ſtand vpon, and will make themſelues euen ſeruants to all, that they may winne ſome.

1.Cor.9.19.

2.Vſe.Ergo, Miniſters muſt,

And ſeeing Angels do flie ſo faſt to giue help and comfort to good Miniſters: this muſt teach them further,

1. Be faithfull.

2. Painfull.

Firſt, euery one to labour to be a good Miniſter, for then are they ſure of the loue of Angels, and then moſt willingly doe the Angels any ſerſeruice to them. Againe, let it teach them to flie as faſt to the diſcharge of their duties to Gods Church, as the Angels flie to doe them ſeruice, ſo ſhall Gods Angells thinke their diligence and carefull ſeruice well beſtowed vpon B them.

3. Vſe. Ergo, al men ſerue God cheerefully: If we be like Angels, therein we ſhall eue̅ be like the̅ in glorie.

Prou.22.29.

Laſtly, this diligence of the Angels, and their willingneſſe, proceeding from loue, muſt ſtirre vp all Chriſtians, to performe all duties of godlineſſe to God, and of loue vnto his Church, with alacritie and cheerefullneſſe: ſo doe Gods Angels. We looke to be like the Angels in glorie in the world to come, then be like the Angel in glory in this world. The wiſe man ſaith, He that is ſlothfull in his buſineſſe is good for nothing: but the diligent man ſhall ſtand before the King. And ſurely, he that is willing and diligent in the duties of Chriſtianitie, ſhall ſtand before the King of kings in heauen. And let this ſuffice for the Angels ſeruice, and his diligence in his C ſeruice. Now let vs ſee what inſtrument the Angel vſed;

A coale from the Altar.

4. Circumſtance, the Inſtrument a Coale of fire. A ſtrange & wonderfull meanes.

And which ſeemes contrarie to reaſon.

The fourth Circumſtance of this conſolation, is the Inſtrument which it pleaſed God, the Angell ſhould vſe to miniſter comfort to the Prophet, a ſtrange inſtrument for ſo great a worke, coale of fire. Here let humane reaſon hide it ſelfe, and worldly wiſedome be confounded, to ſee the wonderfull works of the Lord: God could haue healed the Prophets infirmities, and giuen him comfort againſt his feare, & courage in his calling, without meanes, but he will vſe meanes: and what? a weake meanes: nay, a meanes that ſeemes contrary; A coale of fire muſt touch his lips: that which in all reaſon would haue D made him ſpeake worſe, by Gods appointment, and the power of his word, ſhall make him ſpeake better. Out of which practiſe of God, we learne many points.

Doctr.1. See God commendeth the vſe of meanes. Gen. 1. from 4 to 17. Seeing himſelfe alwaies vſeth them.

Firſt, ſee how God magnifieth meanes: he can worke without them, and ſo he did in the Creation, giuing light to the world, diuers daies before there was Sunne: but ſince the order of nature was eſtabliſhed, he generally vſeth meanes, not onely in his ordinarie, but euen in his miraculous actions: and though he vſe not alwaies the ordinarie and direct meanes: yet meanes he generall vſeth, though they ſeeme contrary, as here in this place; and the ſame will be found true in almoſt all the miracles, both of the olde and newe Teſtament.

Vſe. Ergo, we are to vſe the meanes appointed in all our purpoſes.

This therefore commends vnto all men, the vſe of ſuch good meanes, as Gods prouidence haue ordained of any duties, or effecting of any thing, that doth belong vnto vs to doe: and not to depend vpon immedate helpes from Heauen, as many fond and fantaſticall men do, who are therefore oftentimes iuſtly forſaken of God, and left deſtitute of all helpe; and ſo expoſed to ſhame and reproach.

Doctr. 2. See how Gods power doth ſhew it ſelfe in weaknes.

Secondly, ſee here the mightie power of Gods ordinance, how it appeareth in weakeneſſe: ſuch are all his great workes; In the Creation, he brought light out of darkeneſſe; In our Redemption, he brought vs life out of death; In our conuerſion, he works vpon vs by his word, & by it he draws vs to him, which in all reaſon would driue vs from him: and by it confounds the wiſedom of the world, which is ſtarke fooliſhneſſe to the wiſdome of the world.

And ſo here, he cleanſeth the Prophet by a Coale of fire: which would rather defile him, and ſeaſoneth his mouth with it, which in reaſon ſhould haue burned him: ſo great, ſo admirable, and ſo powerfull are the ordinances of God, though they ſeeme ſo contrary, or ſo weak in themſelues, or in their meanes.

Vſe. Ergo, God can worke by his word and ſacraments, & mans miniſtery, though neuer ſo baſe.

Let this teach all men not to contemne the Sacraments, though the outward Elements, Bread, Wine, and Water, be weake and common, and dead creatures in themſelues: nor the Miniſterie of the Word, though it be exerciſed by a weake man, mortall and miſerable as others are: for that God, which can ſeaſon the Prophets mouth, and clenſe his heart by a coale of fire, no maruell though he worke vpon the conſciences of men, by his word & Sacraments.

And againe, when we ſee Grace and Holineſſe conueyed into mens hearts by the Word and Sacraments; let vs learne, not to aſcribe it to the dignitie, either of the Miniſter, or the Elements, but to the ſupreme power of the mighty God, who can purge the Prophet, by a coale from the Altar. × Myſterie Doctr.3. The apt teacher muſt haue a fierie to̅gue.

Neither is it altogether without Miniſterie, that God here ſanctifieth the Prophet, by touching his lippes with a fierie coale: for it ſignifieth, that the apt and ſufficient teacher, muſt haue a fiery tongue, and to that ſame purpoſe, the holy Ghoſt came downe vpon the Apoſtles in fierie tongues, and it may be that the one is a tipe of the other. Certaine it is, that they both teach vs thus much, that all true and able Miniſters, muſt pray and endeuour to haue a tongue full of power and force, euen like fire, to eate vp the ſinnes and corruptions of the world. For though it be a worthy gift of God to ſpeake mildely, & moderately, ſo that his ſpeech ſhall fall like deawe vpon the graſſe: yet it is the fierie tongue that beates downe ſinne, & workes ſound grace in the heart: It may be there are ſome, which neede the fierie tongue.

Act.2. That is a powerfull tongue, to reprooue & burne vp ſinne.

Ergo, ſuch Miniſters are faultie, who reprooue not ſinne.

This ſhewes apparantly, that thoſe Miniſters neuer had their lips touched with a coale from Gods Altar: that is, their ſoules with a coale from Gods Altar: that is, their conſciences ne-

uer touched, nor their ſoules ſeaſoned with the ſanctifying grace of Gods ſpirit, which ſit ſtill and ſee great and grieuous ſtaines in a Church and corruptions in a State, and can be content neuer to reprooue them, as though Miniſters were perſwaders onely, and not reproouers.

But when this comes to be waied in the ballance of a good conſcience, it will be found, that not the pleaſing tongue, but the fiery tongue is the principull grace of a good Miniſter.

But to goe further: whence came this Coale;

Whence came this coale from the Altar: which fire came from heauen. Leuit.10.1,2.

This coale of fire was taken by the Angel from the altar of God, where was a fire which neuer went out: and this fire was that, that came from heauen, ſent downe by God, at the dedication of the Temple by Salomon. And this fire kindled by God neuer went out: for no man could kindle the like, but all other was counted ſtrange fire; As Nadab and Abihu, tried in woefull experience, when they would needes offer with it.

Doctr. The fire & zeale of the Miniſter muſt come from Gods ſpirit. Act.1.5. Matth.3.11. Not from carnall affections.

Now the Prophet muſt be cleanſed with the fire which came from Heauen: teaching vs, that the Miniſter muſt haue his fierie tongue frō the holy Ghoſt: As the Apoſtles were ſaide to be baptiſed with the holy Ghoſt and with fire. A fierie tongue, is a ſpeciall ornament of a Miniſter, but that fire muſt come from heauen: that is, his zeale muſt be a godly and heauenly zeale, but he that hath a rayling, a lying, a ſlanderous, malitious, or a contentious tongue, he hath a fierie tongue indeede. But this is kindled of the fire of hell, as S. Iames ſaith; The vnbridled tongue, is a world of wickedneſſe, and defileth the whole body, ſetteth on fire the whole courſe of nature, and is ſet on fire of hell.

Iam.3.6.

For that is from hell, not from heauen.

So then, a ſpitefull and malitious tongue we ſee, is a fierie tongue, but that fire is taken from hell, and not from Gods altar.

And he that ſtands vp to preach with this tongue, God will neuer ſuffer any great worke to be done by him in his Church, though his tongue be neuer ſo fierie, and his ſpeech neuer ſo powerfull.

As therefore Miniſters muſt abhorre the flattering and pleaſing tongue, and muſt haue a fierie tongue: ſo on the other ſide, this fire muſt be from Gods altar: that is, the fire of their zeale muſt be kindled by Gods ſpirit, and not by the ſpirit of diſcord and diſſention. Ambitious humors, turbulent and proud humours, new opinions, priuate quarrells, all theſe, nor any of theſe are for the pulpit.

Theſe may make a man fierie tongued, but this fire, was neuer taken from Gods altar, as the Prophets was: this fierie tongue neuer came from heauen, as the Apoſtles did. It followeth,

5. Circumſtance, the Application of the remedie to his lippes which were polluted.

This fifth and laſt circumſtance, is the Application of the remedie. The coale which is the medicine, is applyed by this Angell to his lipps, that is, to that part which was polluted: and as he formerly complained of the pollution of his lips, ſo the medicine, is applyed to his lippes: Here the Angell, which in this caſe is made Gods miniſter doth teach all Gods Miniſters, a great point of wiſdome, in heauenly Diuinity, namely, to apply their doctrine to their audience in ſuch manner, as the circumſtances of place, times, or perſons, doe require; ſome Miniſters come to an ignorant and vnhumbled people, and teach them the Goſpel, which neuer knewe the lawe: here the fierie coale is vſed, but the lips are not touched, that is, good doctrine taught but not well applyed; for that the lawe ſhould firſt be laid to their conſciences; others beate all vpon the Law, when it may be their hearers are people ſufficiently caſt downe, and haue more neede to be raiſed vp with the ſweete comfort of the Goſpell: other vſe to lay open the nakednes of the Court, in the country, & to reprooue the faults of Princes and great magiſtrates before the common people, who haue more need of the Catechiſme: others bring the Catechiſme or points of ordinary inſtruction into the Court, where the duties of Kings and Counſellours ſhould be taught in all plainneſſe and ſinceritie: others bring their new opinions, or controuerſall points vnto popular audiences, which indeed are fit for the ſchooles: other buſie themſelues about ceremonies, when the ſubſtance is in danger to be loſt: All theſe (haue it may be) the Coale of fire, but it is miſapplied, and not applied to the polluted lipps. Let all miniſters therefore learne this point of wiſedome of the Angel, to apply the medicines of their doctrine to the times, perſon, sand places, which are infected, ſo ſhall they be ſure not to take paines in vaine. And thus much of the circumſtances of his conſolation.

Doctr. Ergo, Miniſters muſt applie their doctrin fitly.

It followeth in the text, Loe thma iniquitie ſhall be taken away and thy ſinnes purged.

2. Point, the ground of his conſolation: which is the forgiueneſſe of his ſinnes.

Doctr.1. Forgiueneſſe & the meanes, are annexed together.

After the Circumſtances, followeth the ground and matter of his conſolation, and that is the forgiueneſſe of his ſinnes; where firſt, let vs marke how it and the inſtrument are annexed together: Loe, ſaith the Angell, this coale hath touched thy lippes, and thy iniquities ſhall be forgiuen, and thy ſinnes purged, as though he had beene clenſed by the Coale; where we may note, how greatly God magnifieth the meanes which himſelfe ordaineth, euen true remiſſion and ſaluation to the right and holy vſing of them, though it come not from them, but from his owne mercie, and power of his ordinance. It is therefore no maruell, though God ſanctifieth the child by the Miniſterie of water in Baptiſme, and feede our ſoules in the Lords Supper, by feeding our bodies with bread and wine: and no maruell though the careleſſe neglect of either of them, be damnation to them that deſpiſeth them, ſeeing they are Gods inſtruments ordained by him to conuey his grace vnto vs. And yet for all this, we are to knowe, that remiſſion or ſaluation, is no more tyed to the very elements, or the actions, then here the Prophets Vſe. Ergo, vſe the meanes with reuerence, and deſpiſe them not.

forgiueneſſe to the Coale of fire.

But the maine point is, that for the Prophets conſolation, the Angell tells him his iniquities ſhall be taken away, and his ſinnes purged, as if thereby he had ſaid, thy ſinnes were the cauſe of thy feare, therefore that thy feare may be taken away, thy ſinnes ſhall be forgiuen.

Doct.2. Here comfort is from forgiuneſſe of our ſinnes.

Where we learne, that as feare comes by ſinne, ſo all true comfort comes from the forgiueneſſe of ſinnes: this is that, that only pacifieth the conſcience, and ſatisfieth the ſoule. When Dauid had ſinned againſt the Lord in his two great ſinnes, and thereby prouoked Gods wrath againſt him, and wounded his owne conſcience, if the Prophet had told him he had made him King of 10. kingdomes more, he had not ſo reioyced his heart, as when he told him, after his repentance, thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee, thou ſhalt not die: So whē this Prophet was extreamly affrighted at Gods preſence, becauſe of ſome ſinnes and negligences in his calling, it had bene no comfort to his poore ſoule, to haue beene told, thou ſhalt haue a more eloquent tongue, and a more powerfull ſpeech, thou ſhalt haue better acceſſe to the Court, and audience before the King: all theſe, and all ſuch like, would haue beene no better then guilded poyſon vnto him, beeing in this caſe: but the happy anſwer that refreſheth his weary ſoule more then al the world, was this, Loe thy iniquities are forgiuen, and thy ſinnes purged.

True in Dauid.

2.Sam.11.

And in this Prophet.

Vſe. Here is the true way to comfort diſtreſſed conſciences.

All faithfull Miniſters muſt here learne the true way of comforting troubled and diſtreſſed conſciences, namely, firſt to drawe him vnto a ſight of ſome particular ſinnes, then to ſummon him into Gods preſence, and there to arraigne him for thoſe ſinnes, vntill the view of the foulneſſe of his ſinnes, and the glory of Gods iuſtice, haue ſufficiently humbled him, and then to labour to perſwade his conſcience vpon good groundes of the pardon of thoſe ſinnes by Chriſt Ieſus, this is the way that God vſed and deuiſed, this is the ſure way, that can not faile.

Phyſick and outward cōforts wil not ſerue.
Pſal.2.3.6.7.
Pſal 32.3.4.
Pſal.51. the whole Pſal.

Some thinke that all trouble of minde is nothing but melancholy, and therefore thinke nothing needes but Phyſicke and outward comforts: but he that conſiders in what caſe the prophet here was, or Dauid when he made the 6. the 32. or the 51. Pſalmes, will be of another minde, and will finde that nothing can properly trouble the minde but ſinne; therefore as the wiſe Phyſition in his cure, firſt ſearcheth out the cauſe, and then endeauours to take it away: ſo the good Phyſitian of thy ſoule, muſt firſt of all ſearch into the cauſe of his ſickneſſe, that is his ſinnes, and muſt take them away: which if they doe not, then all their labour is loſt: for all the company, muſicke, recreation, wine, diet, nay all worldly comforts and delights; if it were the aduancement to a kingdome, cannot ſo much comfort the diſtreſſed ſoule of a ſinner, as this voice of a Miniſter ſpoken from God vpon good groundes; thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee.

This is done by the Author in his Caſes of cōſcience.

Now to lay down what be thoſe true and good groundes, whereupon a Miniſter may ſafely and comfortably pronounce pardon of ſinnes to a ſinner, belongs properly to another place.

Doct.5. True qualification of a miniſter, is to be hūbled, and to repent.

In the next place: Let vs here obſerue how the Lord afore he renue the Prophets commiſſion, or ſend him to preach to the people, firſt humbles him for his ſinnes, and then vpon his repentance, giues him pardon: teaching vs, that no Miniſter is well qualified to the holy duties of the Miniſterie, vnleſſe he haue truly repented of his ſinnes, and haue obtained pardon and mercie in the Meſſias.

Miniſters labour for qualifications, but the true Miniſter of God will labour for this qualification aboue all other: for doubtleſſe he ſhall pronounce moſt powerfully the pardon of ſinnes to others, to whoſe conſcience God hath pronounced pardon of his owne.

Doct.6. Trüe Prophets & Miniſters ſhall haue helpe and comfort in their labors, els Angels ſhal come to comfort thē.

In the laſt place, let vs obſerue how the Prophet beeing to be comforted before he goe this newe Embaſſage, the Lord is ſo carefull for him, that rather then he be not comforted (if there be no man to doe it), An Angell ſhall be ſent to be his comforter, and (if there be not another Prophet to doe it) An Angell ſhall pronounce vnto him the pardon of his ſinnes.

Let this be an encouragement for all Paſtors and Miniſters of Gods Church, to labour painfully & faithfully in their places, for the goodnes of the Lord will neuer faile them, nor ſhall they want comfort, when euer they ſtand in neede thereof. Yea rather ſhall Angels from heauen be helpers and comforters, then faithfull Miniſters ſhall be left deſtitute.

Hitherto of the ſecond generall point, namely, of the Prophets conſolation.

Generall points, the renuing of his commiſſion, which containeth 3. points.

The third and laſt generall point is, the renouation of the Prophets commiſſion, in the eight, and part of the ninth verſes, and it containeth three parts, 1. A queſtion or inquirie made by God; Whome ſhall I ſende, and who ſhall goe for vs?

2. The anſwer of the Prophet: Here am I, ſend mee.

3. The commiſſion renued vnto him: The Lord ſaid, Go, and ſpeake vnto this people.

1. Gods queſtion. Whom ſhall I ſend.

The firſt part is a queſtion made by God, by way of proclamatiō, wherein he enquireth who ſhall go preach vnto this people.

Alſo, I heard the voice of the Lord, ſaying, whome ſhall I ſend? and who ſhall goe for vs?

Not as though God had none to ſend, or knew not whome.

In which Proclamation, and inquirie of the Lord, we are not to imagine, that the Lord was either vnprouided of ſuch as ſhould execute his will, or knewe not who were able, or who were willing to goe preach his word: For as the Apoſtle ſaith, in the matter of Election; The Lord knoweth who are his: ſo much more in particular vocations, The Lord knoweth who are his, and neede not to aske, whome ſhall I ſende, or who ſhall goe? But then it may bee demaunded, why the Lord ſaith ſo? I anſwer, not for his owne ſake, but for ours: whome hereby

2.Tim.2.19.

But to our conceits and for our ſake, to teach vs many good doctrines.

he would inſtruct, in diuers points of holy doctrine.

Doctr.1 How hard to find a good Miniſter.

First,hereby he would giue vs to vnderſtand, how hard a thing it is, to finde an able and godly Miniſter: for if there were not a great ſcarcitie of ſuch men, the Lord needed not aske this queſtion. But ſome will obiect againſt this,that there are in many Chriſtian Churches ſo many Miniſters, as they cannot all be maintained, but ſome goe vp and downe vndiſpoſed, and vnprouided for. I anſwer, this is too true in all ages: there were wandring Leuites in the Olde Teſtament,which went vp and downe and offered their ſeruice, and ſerued for 10.ſhekels of ſiluer, and a ſute of apparell,and meate and drink; but this calamitie was vpon the Church of the Iewes,(neuer but then,)when there was no king in Iſrael, and euery one did that which was good in his owne eyes. If therefore there be any in our Church, and in Chriſtian nations, which goe vp and downe, and offer their ſeruice at ſuch rates, it is much more miſerable,ſeeing now there are kings in Iſrael: and therefote it is no reaſon that euery man rob the Church, as it ſhall pleaſe his couetous minde. But ceaſing to enquire whether this be ſo or no: and if it be ſo, leauing the reformation thereof to thoſe Churches and States whom it may concerne:I anſwer, for the matter in hand, that this may bee ſo, and yet the Lord may complaine as here he doth; Whom ſhall I ſend? for the Lord meaneth not ſuch as beare the name of Leuits or Prieſts in in the olde, or of Miniſters in the newe Teſtament( for there were alwaies enough of them: who,ſome for preferment ſake, ſome for their eaſe, and ſome for a refuge how to liue, are willing to enter that function, and accordingly in that calling,ſeek not the lord,but themſelues and their owne ends.)

Ob. There are too many miniſters, for ſome go vp & down.
Anſ.1.Then it is a diſorder in a Church.

Iudg.1.9.1,8. and 17.8.6.

Iudg.17.6.

Anſw. 2. He ſeekes not for any.

But for good Miniſters.

But here the Lord enquireth for ſuch men, as firſt, purely doe ſeeke and vndertake that function, therein to honour God, and to gather his Church, and then in all their labours and miniſteriall duties, truely and faithfully endeauour to the ſame ends; Preaching Gods word, and as Gods word,diligently reprouing,exhorting,and admoniſhing and ſhining before their people in good workes: for ſuch men, it is no maruell though the Lord light a candle at noon day, and make open Proclamation to ſeeke for them, ſaying; Whom ſhall I ſende? for ſuch a man is as Iob ſaith,One of a thouſand: for ſome want abilitie to diſcharge their duties, as Paul ſaith, Who are ſufficient for theſe things? And ſome want willingneſſe to vndertake the labour, as God here complaineth; Who ſhall goe for vs? Now to make vſe of this doctrine to our Church.

Iob 33.22.

2.Cor 2.16.

Good Miniſters ſcarce, euen in theſ daies.

It were to be wiſhed,that in theſe dayes,and for our Chriſtian Churches, the Lord had not as great cauſe to cry out in the want of able, faithfull, and godly Miniſters, Whome ſhall I ſend,and who ſhall goe for vs? But alas,this want is too apparent, and this blemiſh is too notorious, and it is a worke worthy the labour of Kings and Princes to reforme it: and is a kings euill; not to be healed but by the power of a King: for as long as there are ſo few and meane preferments for painefull Miniſters, there will neuer want aboundance of ſuch Miniſters as do want either conſcience or abilitie to diſcharge their duties.

Vſe 1. To Miniſters.
1. They in the Vniuerſities frame themſelues to the Miniſterie.

In the meane time, till God put into the hearts of Parliaments and Princes, to looke to this great and needefull worke; let vs Miniſters learne our duties: and firſt, we who are in the Vniuerſities, are here admoniſhed to looke to our ſelues. By Gods bleſſing we are many, and daily growe more and more: let vs therefore ſo furniſh our ſelues, as that when God or his Church ſhall ſay, Who ſhall goe for vs, and whom ſhall I ſend? then he may finde many amongſt vs, whom he may ſende to that great worke of the Miniſterie: and let vs feare to be ſuch,as that God may affirme of vs,as he did in the dayes of Iob, that he cannot finde One of a thouſand.

2. Labour to be worthie Miniſters.

Secondly, all Miniſters learne here not to content themſelues with the name and title of Miniſters, but labour for the ſubſtantiall ornaments thereof, nor to be willing to take the honour and liuings, and to refuſe the burden and duties of the Miniſterie.

For God hath vſe of them, but none of vnconſcionable or idle Miniſters.

For elſe let them knowe,God hath no neede of them: for had the Lord pleaſed or contented himſelfe with ſuch kinde of men, as ſeeke to be Miniſters for themſelues and not for his ſake: or beeing Miniſters, doe feede themſelues, and not their flocke: or Preach themſelues,and not Chriſt: then had he not needed to haue made this Proclamation, for Ages haue yeelded ſtore of ſuch. But contrariwiſe, he that is painfull and faithfull in this function, let him knowe, that God and his Church hath neede of him.

2.Vſe.To the Cleargie of Rome. A ſhame to them, that beeing ſo many,then are ſo few them fit for God to ſe

Most of all their Prieſts and Monks are ignorant drones.

The Ieſuits haue learning,but no conſcience: and are rather Statesmen, then Diuines.

Laſtly, here the Romiſh Cleargie are iuſtly to be taxed,whoſe nūber is infinit: but it is lamentable to ſee how few among thē be ſuch as the Lord here ſeeketh for. Their Orders of Regulars are exceeding many,beſide all their Secular Prieſts, and it is almoſt incredible, how many thouſands there be of Dominicans or Franciſcans, or in ſome one of their orders: and yet amongſt the many millions of their Monkes, there is ſcarce to be found one of many,who for his learning and other gifts, is fit to be ſent to the worke of God: nay,their ignorance was palpable and ridiculous to the world, vntill of late beeing by Luther, and others of our Church, made aſhamed thereof, they haue laboured (eſpecially the Ieſuites) to become learned. How foule a thing is it that amongſt ſo many, the Lord ſhould haue cauſe to complaine; Whome ſhall we ſende? The Ieſuites indeede, many of them, are learned, but for other qualities: they are fitter to be plotters and practiſers in State-matters, Spies, or Intelligencers, reconcilers, ſeducers, and ſubuerters, then Miniſters: and fitter to be inſtruments of policie to euill kings, A then miniſters of the Goſpel vnto God. But take away them, and ſome fewe ſelected Monkes (and thoſe but a fewe out of many thouſands) and then euen for learning God may cry, and call and proclaime in their Monaſteries; whome ſhall I ſend? And if it be a ſhame and miſerie to a Church to want ſuch as God may ſend, or to haue but a fewe, then the Romiſh Church is ſhameleſſe, which ſhames not to haue ſo many, and yet amongſt them all, whom God may ſend, almoſt none.

Doctr. 2. No man is to go vntill God ſend him.

And not to runne vpon priuate motions.

In the next place. By this inquirie, and queſtion made by God, Whom ſhall I ſend, and who ſhall goe for vs? The Lord would teach vs, that no man is to vndertake this function, vnleſſe God call and ſend him: therefore here are condemned, the prophane fancies of the Anabaptiſts, B and all like them, who thinke that any man vpon a priuate motion, may ſteppe forth and vndertake the duties of a Prophet, to preach and expound, &c. Oh but ſay they, theſe motions are from Gods ſpirit: ſurely they can ſay litle for themſelues, who cannot ſay ſo much: but that cannot ſerue their turne: for if we ſay, contrariwiſe nay, but they are from the deuill, or at leaſt from your owne vanitie and pride, how can they diſprooue it? Againe might not the Prophet haue aleadged that with a better pretence and colour then they? yet he ſtaieth till God here call him: euen ſo all good Miniſters are to ſtay Gods calling.

Ob. How ſhal I know whē God calls me?

Anſ. If Gods Church allow thy calling.

If any aske, how he ſhall knowe when God calles him? C I anſwer, God calleth ordinarily by his Church, her voice is his: therefore whenſoeuer the Church of God, ſaith vnto thee, thou ſhalt be ſent, and thou ſhalt goe for vs, euen then doth the Lord call vs out to this holy function.

Doctr. 3. Out of the repetition of ho[illegible] times, [illegible] is no [illegible]cient [illegible]fe of [illegible] Trinitie, as ſome thinke.

Thirdly, let vs obſerue howe the Lord ſaith: whom ſhall (I) ſend: and who ſhall goe for (vs?) Some Interpreters gather out of this Chapter, an argument for the trinitie of perſons; as namely, out of the third Verſe, where the Angels ſing: Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God, &c. But it is not ſound enough to ouerthrow our ſtubborne enemies the Iewes, and therefore it ſeemes thoſe Diuines are of a ſounder and wiſer judgement: who ſeeing we haue other places pregnant and D plaine enough, therefore thinke it no good diſcretion to vrge this or any ſuch place which may probably admit another Interpretation, leaſt that the Iewes finding the weakeneſſe of the Argument, doe iudge all our proofes to be as weake: and ſo take occaſion to perſiſt the rather in their blindneſſe, by that which we brought to haue conuerted them. And as for that ſong of the Angels in the third verſe, where they aſcribe holineſſe to the Lorde three times: that their repetition ſignifieth nothing elſe, but the continuall ioy and delight which the holy Angells take in praſing of God, who cannot ſatisfie themſelues in honouring his name: teaching vs in their example, neuer to be wearie of prayſing God by praiers & holy hymnes, and of honouring him in our liues and callings.

For the repetitiō made by the Angel, ſheweth onely how he cannot content himſelfe in praiſing God.

But here may be proued a pluralitie of perſons.

But to prooue out of the words; Holy, Holy, Holy, the three Perſons in Trinitie, ſeemes to be no fit nor ſound collection. Rather in my opinion, we may ſafely collect and conclude out of theſe words (I and vs) that there are more perſons in the Trinitie then one: for firſt, God the Father, or the whole Deitie ſaith: Whom ſhall I ſend? and then changing the number, he ſaith: Who ſhall goe for vs? For howſoeuer God may imply in the word (Vs,) that he that is ſent to Preach, is ſent as well for the good of the Church, as for his owne glorie, yet can it not be denied, but that the plurall number here, and elſe where, aſcribed to the Dietie, muſt needes argue a certaine pluralitie of perſons in that Deitie: as in Geneſis it is written, that God ſaid, Let vs make man: and here, Who ſhall goe for vs.

Gen. 1. 26.

Out of the euidence of which places, ſeeing the enemies of this doctrine muſt needes grant a pluralitie, namely, that there are more then one: then we ſhal ſufficiently proue out of other places, and by other arguments, that there are three.

Doct. 4. Miniſters are Gods ſeruants, they go for God.

In the laſt place, let vs marke what God ſaith Whom ſhall I ſende, and who ſhall goe for vs; God ſends a Miniſter to preach, and he goeth for God. Then behold here, what is the trade & profeſſion, of a Miniſter, he is the ſeruant of God. So ſaith God here, he goeth for me: and ſo ſaith the Apoſtle of himſelfe and all other good Miniſters, that they are Gods Labourers.

1. Cor. 3. 9.
Act. 27. 23.

And in another place, the Angell of God appeared, Whoſe I am, and whom I ſerue. But if any man thinke that either God ſpeaketh too fauourably of them, or S. Paul too partially of themſelues, then let the Deuill himſelfe bee iudge in this caſe, who plainly and freely confeſſeth (though he did it not in loue to the truth or them, Theſe are the ſeruants of the moſt high God, which teach vnto vs the way of ſaluation. Let therefore either God be beleeued, who is for them, or the deuill who is againſt them. But what kinde of ſeruants are they? what place of office haue they? They are his Meſſengers or Embaſſadors, this is their profeſſion, and their place.

Confeſſed euen by the deuill himſelfe.
Act. 16. 16, 17.

Queſt. What place is it they hold?
R. His Embaſſadors.
Iob 33. 23.

Now then for the vſe hereof.

Vſe 1. Then they muſt ſeeke to pleaſe God their maſter, not themſelues.

If they be Gods ſeruants, then are they not their owne Maſters, they haue a Maſter, euen God whoſe they are, and for whom, and from whom they come: they may not therefore pleaſe themſelues, nor ſerue their owne pleaſures, nor ſeeke the ſatisfying of their owne carnall luſtes, either in matter of pleaſure, credite, or profite: if they do, then will he cal them to a heauy account, whoſe ſeruants they are.

Vſe 2. Then let them do their ſeruice diligētly, & expect their reward aſſuredly.

Againe, if they be Gods ſeruants, then let them doe their ſeruice to God, and expect their reward from God: ſome Miniſters will expect the reward, and honour of Gods ſeruants, but will doe no ſeruice: that beſeemes not ſeruants:

let ſuch men remember for whom they come, euen from that God, who as he can giue reward, ſo he will expect ſeruice.

Though the world doe not, yet God will, for they are his Embaſſadors.

And as for ſuch men as painfully do their ſeruice, but are not regarded, not rewarded of men as they deſerue, let them be content and continue in their faithfulneſſe, for they are Gods Embaſſadors: and we know Embaſſadors may haue gifts giuen them of thoſe to whome they are ſent; but they expect their maintenance from the kings their owne Maſters: So the maintenance which the world ſhould giue Miniſters, is like gifts giuen to Embaſſadors: if it come, it is no more then they deſerue: if it come not, yet will faithfull Miniſters doe their dutie, and expect their payment from their king and Maſter, God, whoſe they are, and whome they ſerue.

3. Vſe. Let no man therefore wrong thẽ, for God will not ſuffer his Embaſſadors to be abuſed. No king ſo poore that ſuffered it.

Thirdly, if they be Gods Embaſſadors, ſent by him, and come from and for him, then let all ſuch as either condemne, or any way iniury them, be aſſured, that as God is mightie and powerfull, ſo he will mightily reuenge it.

There was neuer King ſo poore or weak, but thought himſelfe ſtrong inough to reuenge any wrong offered to his Embaſſador. And ſhall God ſuffer ſo foule a wickednes to lie vnpuniſhed? Nay, they and their poſterities ſhall ſmart for it: let Ahab, and Iezabel, and Iulian, ſay if it be not ſo: and all ages or ſtories ſhewe the contrarie if they can, that euer any contemner and abuſer of godly Miniſters, eſcaped the viſible vengeance of Gods reuenging hands on him or his.

1. King 22. 26, 27, 28. 34, &c.
2. king 9. 33. &c.
Act. 12. 1, 2. and 23.

4. Vſe. Ergo, they muſt not be ſeruants of mẽ: that is, men pleaſers: but his that ſent them.

Fourthly, ſeeing they are Gods Meſſengers and ſeruants, they muſt not be the ſeruants of men, to pleaſe, or flatter, or ſatisfie humours, this is not for them that are Gods ſeruants: they therefore that will be ſlaues to the perſons, and pleaſures, and humours of men, they forget that they are Gods ſeruants, and came for him: yea, they muſt not endeuour the pleaſing of themſelues, nor the bringing of their owne purpoſes to paſſe, but in euery motion, either made to them by others, or ſuggeſted from their own hearts, they muſt forth-with call to minde, Who ſent me hither, and for whom am I come? Euen from and for God: therefore they are to yeelde to nothing, nor ayme at any thing, but which may be both to the will, & for the glorie of him that ſent them.

Great men muſt not thinke to haue Gods ſeruant at their command.

And if the great men of this world, doe thinke it wrong that any man ſhould command their ſeruant againſt their will, or expect any ſeruice from him againſt their owne honour; then let them thinke it reaſon that Gods Miniſters ſhould not be commaunded any thing contrarie to Gods will, or againſt his honour.

5. Vſe. Ergo, they muſt regard the glorie of God, their maſter, both in life & doctrine.

And further, if Miniſters be Gods ſeruants, then let them regard their maſters glorie, and be aſhamed to doe any thing, either in their doctrine or liues, which may diſhonour him: that ſeruant is vnworthy of a good maſter, who ſeeks not his maſter credit in all his courſes.

6 Vſe. Ergo, they muſt deliuer Gods Embaſſage, not their own, as they receiued it.

Laſtly, if they be Gods embaſſadours, then muſt they not deliuer their owne fancies or inuentions, but that meſſage they receiued: and as they receiued it, ſo muſt they deliuer it. And if they doe their duties faithfully, this doctrine is comfortable vnto them, they may take paines, with ioy, they haue a maſter will reward them: they may ſpeake freely, (ſo it be with diſcretion) they haue a maſter will make it good: they may ſtand boldly in the face of their enemies, they haue a maſter wil defend them. And euery faithfull Miniſter may ſay to himſelfe, I will doe my duty, and deliuer my Embaſſadge; He whom I ſerue, and whoſe I am: He who ſent me, and for whom I come, will beare me out. And thus much of the enquiry which God makes, and the meanes of it.

Now let vs ſee the anſwer which the Prophet makes, in theſe words.

Then I ſaid, Here am I, ſend me.

2. Point. The Prophets anſwer: Here am I, ſend me.
Doctr. 1 He whoſe ſinnes are forgiuẽ, comes boldly to God: and to his dutie.

The Prophet after he was comforted by God, and had his ſinnes forgiuen, then anſwereth; Here am I, ſend me. Firſt, marke here, what a great change is wrought on the ſuddaine: he who a little before feared and ſhrunke at the leaſt apperance of Gods glorie; now ſtands forth boldly, as ſoone as he is called, and anſwereth: Here am I, ſend me. So great a matter is it for a Miniſter to haue his ſinnes forgiuen, and to feele the fauour of God to his ſoule and conſcience. Here therefore we haue an anſwer to two great queſtions, often mooued in the world.

Vſe 1. Here is the true way to peace of conſcience, & quietnes of minde.

Firſt, many would haue quietneſſe of minde, and peace of conſcience, and cannot attaine vnto it; If they aske how they might, to them I anſwer, Here is the way, ſeeke it not in worldly wealth, carnall pleaſures, nor humane learning, in company, nor recreations: but ſeeke it in the fauour of God, and pardon of thy ſinnes, and thou ſhalt not miſſe of it. Thus ſhalt thou haue comfort in thy owne conſcience, courage before men, and boldneſſe toward God.

Vſe 2. To Students. 1. If they would be Miniſters, repent and get pardon of their ſinnes.

Secondly, many Students in Diuinitie, would gladly be Miniſters, and doe much honour to the calling: but they finde a feare and ſhrinking in themſelues, and thereby an vnwillingneſſe to venture vpon it. If they aske how they may amend this: I anſwer, or rather the example of this Prophet anſwereth (for me:) Let that man ſet himſelfe in Gods preſence, enter into himſelfe, ſearch his conſcience, finde out his ſinnes, confeſſe and bewaile them to God, craue pardon in Chriſts blood, and leaue them, and ceaſe not till he heare the voice of Gods ſpirit ſounding in his conſcience; Thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee. Then when God ſhall aske whom ſhall I ſend, thou wilt anſwer readily, and with ioy, Here am I, ſend me.

2. If they would be encouraged againſt the contempts and wrongs of the world, be aſſured of Gods fauour in the pardon of thy ſinnes.

And againe, many are driuen from this Calling, beholding the contempt and reproach, and dangers which belong vnto it. But let thoſe men marke here the phraſe of this holy Prophet, when God asked, Whom ſhall I ſend? He might

might haue anſwered; Lord I would goe: but ſuch diſgraces & diſcouragements accompanie this function, as I deſire to be excuſed: but he caſting aſide all ſuch conceits, anſwereth peremptorily, Here am I, ſend me. How came this to paſſe? for certainely the Prophet was as ſenſible of theſe wrongs as any of vs all, for he was nobly borne and brought vp, and was of the blood royall: ſurely, becauſe he ſawe he was in Gods fauour, he had him and his commiſſion on his ſide, and he held this for a ſure ground: If God be on my ſide, who can be againſt mee?

Therefore doubtleſſe, thoſe men who are driuen backe by theſe diſcouragements, were neuer ſetled in aſſurance that their ſinnes were forgiuen; nor ſatisfied ſufficiently, that God is on the ſide of all good Miniſters, and that their Calling, as it hath its authority from God, ſo likewiſe, allowance, bleſſing, aſſiſtance, and defence of God, aboue any other calling: for if they were, they would ſcorne the ſcorne, and contemne the contempt of the prophane world, and with much courage and comfort ſet their hand to Gods Plough, and ſay with the Prophet; Here am I, ſend me.

Doct.2. We muſt not ſet others to the labour of the Miniſterie, but our ſelues alſo.

Secondly, let vs obſerue, how the Prophet when God askes the queſtion ſends him not to others, nor commends others to that ſeruice, as is to be thought he might haue done many in the Churches of the Iewes, but offers himſelfe, Here am I.

Vniuerſitie men muſt not be alwaies ſending out others, but muſt alſo ſend out themſelues.

It controlles the carnall courſes of many amongſt vs in the Vniuerſities, who thinke it ſufficient to liue there and ſend out other men, and giue teſtimonies and Letters of commendations to other men, but themſelues ſtirre not. When queſtion is made, Who ſhall goe to ſuch a place? or who ſhall be ſent to ſuch a pariſh? they ſay not, here am I, but either it is too little a liuing, or too great a charge, or ill ſeated, or ſome fault it hath, that they will not be ſent to it: but will anſwer God and his church, there is ſuch a man, and giue him letters of teſtimonie, or commendation, and ſo all is well: but for themſelues, they liue too ſweete and eaſie liues, willingly to vndertake the contempt and burthen of the Miniſterie.

Let ſuch men therefore learne, when God and his Church giue them a calling, to anſwer with the Prophet, Here am I, ſend me.

And Studēts muſt not defer too lōg, but haſten to the Miniſterie.

And let all ſuch, as are Students of Diuinitie in the Vniuerſities, marke here the Prophets anſwer, not I will be readie, but here am I: Why takes he no longer time? becauſe he was nowe ſufficiently qualified. Where let them learne, not to linger and lie loytring too long in their ſpeculatiue courſes: but when they are competently furniſhed with learning, and other qualities befitting that calling: let them ſhewe themſelues willing and ready to yeeld their ſeruice to the Church, when they ſhall be called.

For ſome too long, as ſome goe too ſoone.

For as an apple may as well hang too long on the tree, as be puld too ſoone, and both make it vnfit for vſe: ſo many men as well ſtay too long, as goe out too ſoone, and both waies are made vnprofitable, or at leaſt leſſe profitable to the Church.

Doct.3. The Prophet will not goe till he be ſent.

And to conclude this ſecond point, It is not vnworthy to be noted, that the Prophet ſaith not, Here I am: and I runne on my owne head, but Send me.

He willes the Lord to ſend him: then where are they who dare bragge of their priuate motions, and will runne when they are not ſent?

And that not by priuate motion onely, but in expreſſe words

The Prophet might haue ſaid: Oh nowe I feele a motion from the Spirit, therefore I will goe and preach: but he ſtaieth till he be ſent in expreſſe termes: Let no man therefore preſume to preſſe into this function, till he be fully reſolued in his conſcience, that God and his Church hath ſaid vnto him, Goe.

Men therefore are to offer themſelues, but not to goe till they be ſent.

And though a man be neuer ſo wel qualified with all manner of ſufficiencie, yet let him ſit ſtill and ſtay Gods leyſure, and let him ſay, Here I am, ſend me: and ſo reſt contented vntill he be ſent. If any man ſay it is vnfit that a man ſhould ſay ſo of himſelfe: I anſwer, let him not ſay ſo in words, but in deedes: let him therefore make proofe of himſelfe, and giue the Church tryall of his gifts. Vpon which experience of his gifts, if he be found ſufficient, that practiſe of his is all one and much more then if he had ſaid, Here I am, ſend me.

Thus we ſee the Prophet would not ſtirre til he were ſent, and therefore in the next word he is bid to Goe.

And he ſaid, Goe, and ſpeake vnto this people.

3. The Commiſſion receiued.

Here is the third and laſt point, Namely, the eſſentiall words of his Commiſſion. Wherein (after God had ſought for one to go, and the Prophet had preſented himſelfe, and offered his ſeruice) God both giues him leaue to goe, and further doth furniſh him with authoritie, both to goe and ſpeake.

Doctr.1. No man is to preach without a Commiſſion.

Wherein the principall point is, that the authoritie of the Prophets calling, is deriued from God himſelfe in plaine and euident words; Goe and ſpeake: and till then the Prophet went not. So in the newe Teſtament, the Apoſtles went not into the world to preach, till they had their Commiſſion, Goe and teach all Nations. And after them S. Paul preached not till it was ſaid vnto him, Ariſe, and goe.

Math.28.19. Act 9.6.&c.

In all which is diſcouered and condemned the pride and preſumption of thoſe who dare runne on their owne heads, and will not ſtay till the Lord ſay vnto them, Goe, and ſpeake. Theſe men are bolder, then either the extraordinarie Prophets of the olde Teſtament, or the Apoſtles which are the extraordinarie Miniſters of the new: who alwaies had their warrant with them when they went. And if any man aske why it is neceſſarie they ſhould haue ſo; I anſwer, the reaſons are many.

This is ſo, for theſe cauſes.

Reaſon 1. Commiſſioners haue no power but from the King.

Firſt, all Prophets and Miniſters, are Gods Deputies and Commiſſioners, it is therefore reaſon that they haue authoritie from their Lord and Maſter.

19649a

Reaſ.2. Elſe what they doe,is without vertue or bleſſing.

Secondly, their words nor deedes beare no credit,nor haue any power in them,vnleſſe they be ſpoken by vertue of a Commiſſion: nor haue their laboures any bleſſing,vnleſſe God giue it.

Reaſ. 3. Elſe their perſõ: haue no protection.

Thirdly, their perſons haue no protection, nor ſafetie, vnleſſe they be Gods Embaſſadors: and how are they ſo, vnleſſe they be called and ſent by God,and haue authoritie giuen of God: For theſe cauſes,no man is to thruſt himſelfe into the Miniſterie, without a calling from God, and therefore no maruell, though thoſe men who will be Chuſers,and Callers of themſelues; and run when they are not ſent, be in their perſons, ſubiect to all daungers: becauſe they are out of Gods protection,and their labours without profit, becauſe no bleſſing, nor promiſe of God was giuen vnto them: for God may iuſtly ſay vnto them: Let him that ſent you, protect your perſous; let him that ſent you, bleſſe your labours.

Obiect. How may I know if God bid me goe? Anſ. We muſt not expect Gods voice from heauẽ.

But he ſpeaketh to man two waies, generally in his word.

But it will then be demaunded, how may I know if God bid me goe? for God ſpeakes not now from heauen as in old time, and as to this Prophet: I anſwer, It is true, we are to looke for no ſuch viſions, nor apparitions from heauen, for ordinarily there are none ſuch, and the Popiſh Church doth but deceiue themſelues, and cozen the world, who tell vs of ſo many apparitions that happen to their Monkes and Friers; for now ordinarily, God ſpeaketh in another manner to his Church: for in generall duties God ſpeaketh to vs out of his word and holy Scriptures, and in particular and perſonall duties,(where the word in plaine tearmes ſerueth not)he ſpeaketh to a man by his own conſciẽce, and by the voice of his Church.

1.Cor.4.1. Iob 33.23. Act.16 17. Prou.29.18.

2. Particularly God ſpeaketh 1. by the voice of his conſcience for his inclination. 2. By the voice of his Church for his gifts.

Out of his word, God ſheweth thee the dignity and excellency of this calling, to be a Miniſter of the word: Namely, they are his Meſſengers and Embaſſadors, &c. that ſo he may winne them to loue and affect it. And againe, the neceſſitie of it, that it teacheth the way to ſaluation, that without it ordinarily Gods Church is not gathered, nor mens ſoules ſaued, and this may ſtir thee vp to vndertake the burthen: this is generall. But now particularly for thy ſelfe: Wouldeſt thou know whether God would haue thee to goe or no? then thou muſt aske thy owne conſcience, and aske the Church, for if thou be heartily willing, and be fully and worthily qualified, then God bids thee goe.Now thy conſcience muſt iudge of thy willingneſſe, and the Church of thy abilitie:and as thou maiſt not truſt other men, to iudge of thy inclination or affection, ſo thou maiſt not truſt thy owne iudgement, to iudge of thy worthineſſe or ſufficiency. If therefore thy owne conſcience tell thee vpon true examination, that thou doeſt not loue and affect this calling aboue any other, then God ſends thee not:and if thou enter with ſuch a teſtimonie, not God,but ſome worldly & ſiniſter reſpect doth ſend thee, & put thee forward, for though thou doſt deſire it,yet if the Church of God haue not allowance A of thy ſufficiencie, God doth not ſend thee:But if contrariwiſe, thy conſcience doe truly teſtifie vnto thee, that thou deſireſt to doe ſeruice to God and his church, in this calling aboue any other: And if withall, vpon ſignification hereof to the Church, and vpon triall made of thy gifts and learning, the Church (that is, many learned,wiſe, and godly,and ſuch as the church hath publikely appointed for that purpoſe) doe approoue of that thy deſire, and of thy ſufficiencie to doe God ſeruice in his Miniſterie, and thereupon by a publike Calling, bid thee goe, then aſſuredly God himſelfe hath bid thee goe. And it is as effectuall a calling, as if thou heardeſt the voice of God from heauen:For as in repentance, If thy conſcience tell thee thou haſt B truly repented, and if thou canſt make that knowne to the Church by ſo good euidence,as thereupon a Miniſter of God pronounceth the pardon of thy ſinnes vnto thee: If thou reſt herein, and knoweſt it to be as effectuall, as if God from heauen had told thee, thy ſinnes are pardoned. So it is here, if thou haſt the teſtimonie, firſt of thy conſcience, and then of the Church, thou art to reſt therein, as in the voice of God: And this is the calling that we are to looke for in theſe daies.

Vſe 1. Againſt them that runne, and crie they be ſent.

2. Againſt ſuch as are called by both voices, and yet will not goe.

By which doctrine, as thoſe are iuſtly condemned of foule preſumption, who dare runne vpon priuate motions, and carnall reſpects, and are iuſtly left without bleſſing or protection: ſo they on the other ſide, doe offer great wrong C to God and his Church, who when they cannot denie, but they affect the Miniſterie aboue any calling, and haue approbation of their giftes from the Church of God, yet will not beleeue the Teſtimonie of the Church herein, but their owne priuate Iudgements, which in this caſe is no way a cõpetent Iudge, either for,or againſt. Let ſuch men knowe, that they oppoſe themſelues euen againſt God himſelfe: it beeing certaine, that where the inward calling of the conſcience, and the outward calling of the Church do concurre,there God himſelfe calleth and biddeth that man goe, and ſpeake.

Doctr. 2. See the authoritie of a true Miniſter immediate frõ God himſelfe.

Vſe 1. Ergo let no man wrong them.

Vſe 2. Ergo let Miniſters be comforted in doing their dutie, for if God ſend them, he wil neuer faile them.

Now then (to drawe to an ende) let vs obſerue in the laſt place, with what authoritie a D Miniſter of God comes vnto vs, and executes his Function: euen with immediate authoritie and Commiſſion from God: whereby he is bid, Goe, and ſpeake. If it be ſo, let it perſwade the world, to feare to doe any wrong, either to that calling, or to thoſe perſons who come with ſo faire a commiſſion from God himſelfe. But if it doe not perſwade the prophane world, at leaſt let this be a comfort & incouragment to all true Miniſters, for if God bid them goe, he will goe with them himſelfe, If he ſend them,he will not forſake them, but aſſiſt them, and bleſſe them,& open their mouthes, and enlarge their hearts,& harden their foreheads, and giue power vnto their words to conuert his children,and to confound and aſtoniſh the hearts of his enemies.If he ſend them, he will defend and protect them, ſo that one haire of their heads ſhall not fall to the earth, without his prouidence. If he ſend thē he will prouide for them, and ſufficiently reward them: and will honour them in the hearts of his owne people, and magnifie them in the faces of their enemies. And laſtly, if he ſend them, he will pay them their wages, euen an eternall waight of comfort here, and of glorie in heauen. A And as they are here bid goe, ſo once they ſhall be bid Come: and that not onely with the generall call of all the Elect; Come ye bleſſed of my father, inherite the kingdome prepared for you: but euen with that particular Call, which eſpecially belongs to them that are faithfull in this ſeruice: Come thou good and faithfull ſeruant, enter into thy Maſters ioy.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE THOMAS LORD SCROOPE, of the noble order of the Garter: and of his Maieſties Honourable Counſell in the North.

Right Honourable, this little Treatiſe was the firſt fruits of the labour of that great and reuerend Diuine M. Perkins, many yeares agoe ſet out by himſelfe: and now (all his Workes beeing to be put together) held fit to be ioyned with the reſt: for though it were written in his young yeares, yet did theſe firſt fruits giue aſſurance of that plentifull harueſt of Inſtruction and Conſolation, which the Chriſtian world haue ſince reaped and receiued from the hand and mouth of that holy man: and in this very beginning did that bleſſed Spirit beginne to ſhew it ſelfe, which afterward was ſo mightie and powerfull in his tongue and penne. It was firſt written againſt couetous hoarding vp of corne (amongſt other ſinnes,) and was publiſhed in a yeare of dearth, the fitter therefore to be now againe reprinted, ſeeing our ſinnes haue brought vpon vs a dearth, and (which is more lamentable) a dearth without ſcarſitie.

Hauing peruſed and reuiſed this Treatiſe, I doe humbly preſent it to your Lordſhips reading, and from you to the worlds view: the honourable conceit your L. hath vouchſafed to hold of me and my poore labours, deſerue at my hand more ſeruice and dutie, then yet I can performe to your L. till I can, giue me leaue thus to ranke your L. amongſt the religious and honourable Patrons of M. Perkins his Workes. Honour and all true happineſſe be multiplied vpon your Lordſh. from God the Father in Ieſus Chriſt. Amen. Iune 4. 1609.

Your good L. in Chriſt to be commanded,

To the Chriſtian Reader.

It is not vnknowen vnto thee (Chriſtian Reader) that Satan is the deadlie enemie of mankinde, and that he goeth about continually like an hunger-bitten Lion, ſeeking whom he may deuoure. For this cauſe, he vſeth infinite ſleights, and conueyances, he layeth innumerable ginnes, and ſnares, to entrap men, and to bring them into eternall bondage vnder him. Of this point thou maiſt haue a plaine view in the people of this land. Some of them neither regarding Gods prouidence, nor his iudgements which he may ſend vpon them for their ſinnes, ſtand agaſt at the ſignes of heauen, at the coniunctions which ordinarily befall: and at this preſent, their minds are greatly occupied with fooliſh dreames of the yeare next enſuing. Some others (and they peraduenture of a better ſort) are profeſſors of the Goſpel, and yet liue ſecurely, ſtill weltring in their old corruptions, and in very truth, not returning to the Lord. For they thinke they haue done their dutie, and are perſwaded they are truly faithfull, if they do not oppoſe themſelues againſt the Goſpell, but giue an outward reuerence to it, and to the Miniſters of it. As the fooliſh virgins contented themſelues with their lampes, neuer ſeeking for oyle, vntill it was too late: ſo theſe men content themſelues with outward ſhew, and profeſſion of godlineſſe, neuer regarding to feele the power of it in themſelues. Others there are, which no doubt might receaue profit by the word which they heare preached, but they cannot abide that the word of God ſhould be applied aright to their conſciences. For they themſelues neuer thinke of any thing but of the promiſes of the Goſpell: and cannot abide the threatnings of the law. Yea, they like the miniſtery of the word, when generall doctrine is deliuered: but if the two edged ſword of Gods word, pearce into the marrow of their bones, and ranſake the ſecret affections, and luſts of the fleſh, then they are forth of order, and ſtorme as furious and madde men. Againe, ſome there are, which partly by reaſon of the tenderneſſe of their owne conſciences, partly by their owne ignorance in the word of God, are euer and anon diſquieted and troubled with manifold temptations. In all theſe ſorts of men, thou maiſt eaſily perceiue, how buſie Sathan is, to deceiue and bewitch men, and to keepe them ſtill vnder his dominion, that his kingdome may not be diminiſhed. Now, for the preuenting of theſe euills, I haue drawne this little Treatiſe: Read it at thy leiſure, and accept in good part this my endeauour: I truſt by Gods bleſſing it ſhall not be vnprofitable vnto thee. W. # A FRVITFVLL DIALOGVE BETWEENE THE CHRISTIAN AND the worldling, concerning the ende of the World.

A Chriſtian.

WELL ouertaken honeſt man: how farre trauell you this way?

Worldling.

As far as Cambridge, God willing.

Chriſtian. What haue you a lode I pray you?

Worldl. As good wheate as euer grewe on Gods earth, I would I had as good a price, as I could wiſh for it.

Chriſt. Why would you ſo?

Worldl. Alas, I haue great ſtore of corne in my houſe at home, and I feare me it will rotte B vpon the ſloares before I ſhall be able to ſell it, becauſe I cannot get almoſt any thing for it: and they which offered me foure markes for a quarter of wheate, will not at this preſent giue mee foure nobles, and ſcarce twenty ſhillings.

Chriſt. Truely, I perceiue, that you are a hard hearted man, voide of any compaſſion to the poore: you haue beene one of thoſe, that haue brought our countrey into ſuch miſerie. Amos 8. 5, 6,7. And to you the Prophet Amos ſpeaketh after this manner; Here this, O ye that ſwallowe vp the poore, that ye may make the needie of the land to faile, ſaying: when will the new moneth be gone that we may ſell corne? and the Sabath that we may ſet forth wheate, C and make the Ephah ſmall and the ſhekle great, and falſifie the weights by deceipt? that we may buy the poore for ſhooes: yea and ſell the refuſe for wheate? the Lord hath ſworne by the excellencie of Iacob, Surely, I will neuer forget any of thy works. And euen now at this time God hath beene mindfull of his promiſe, for he hath fruſtrated the deſires of all ſuch couetous men as you are, and of his mercie he hath heard the cries of the poore, and hath nowe giuen vs plenty in this land.

Worldl. I maruaile why you ſhould ſpeake againſt me, and all ſuch as I am. I tell you plainly neuer any man ſpake ſo much to me as you haue done nowe. In the pariſh where I dwell, I am taken for an honeſt man, I doe no man any hurt: I vſe not to goe to the Ale-houſe and Tauerne, as many naughtie men doe: and I haue a care to prouide for my ſelfe and for my familie, and I hope you will not condemne me for doing ſo.

Chriſt. Did you neuer heare ſo much before, doubtleſſe more is the pitie, and now ye ſhall heare more, euen of me. For all theſe hoarders vp of corne (among which you are one) are as bad, as the vileſt raſcalls that be in the Land? you ſay ye doe no man harme: doe you not? and what good euer did ye? ye ſtoppe your eares at the cry of the poore, and ſay vnto them: Goe thy way thou ſtranger, God ſend thee thou ſtranger meat, drinke, and clothing, as Sirach ſaith: ye play the glutton in the Goſpell, ye doe Luk.16.21. doe not ſhew ſo much fauour vnto poore Lazarus crying vnto you for releefe, as the dogs did which licked his ſores. The richer ſort of you if a man in any neede come to begge or buy ſomething for his ſuſtenance, ye crie out, away with this begger, go whippe this ſlaue, to the ſtocks with this ſtinking raſcall, ſtand further off for filling vs with thy vermine, thou louſie wretch. Contrariwiſe, ye which are of the poorer ſort, ſay, God helpe thee poore man, I haue not for thee: I haue a great charge, and am a poore man my ſelfe: thou wouldeſt haue corne of me, but thou wilt not goe to the price of it: thus deare it is now, I cannot bate a farthing of it: therefore goe thy wayes and trouble me not. And yet forſooth, ye doe no man any harme, ye would be ſorie to be charged with any diſhoneſtie. But in truth ye are murderers, becauſe many are famiſhed by your hording vp of corne: ye are thieues, becauſe ye keep backe that which belongeth to the poore, vpon a reaſonable price: ye are curſed Idolaters, becauſe you ſet your harts vpon your riches: & in one word, 1.Ioh.2. Coloſſ.2. ye are very Athieſts in the world, ye diſtruſt Gods prouidence, ye loue him not, ye feare him not: ye are ſtarke rebels vnto God, bowing the knees of your harts before the prince of the world Sathan. You are the rich men of which it is ſaid, to be an impoſſible thing for them to enter Matth.19.

Worldl. What meane you thus to raile on vs? what doe we but that we may lawfully doe? I pray you for all your skill, is it not lawefull for vs to doe with our owne what we will? and to make as much of it as we can? you tell vs (me thinkes) that we cannot be ſaued, but I will alwaies put a good faith in God, ſay you what you will, and I hope to be ſaued as well as you.

Chriſt. It is a pitifull thing to ſee how the world taketh many things for lawfull, which are flat againſt the word of God. As for example: it is thought no fault to raiſe the market, and to take for a mans owne whatſoeuer he can get, and to ſell of any price: but this is reprooued in the place of the Prophet Amos before alleadged, Where he denounceth Gods iudgments againſt them that wait for a time, in which they may make the meaſure ſmall, and the price great, and take for their corne according to their couetous deſires: you ſay you haue a good faith to God-ward, but alas you deceiue your ſelfe with a phantaſie: for if you had true faith indeede, you would loue God, with all your heart, & louing God, you would alſo loue your poore brother in whom Gods image appeareth: and if you had a loue of your brother, you would be full of pitiful compaſſion towards him, you would no more ſing this ſong, may I not take for my owne what I can get? nay, you would rather doe as the faithfull did, in the primitiue Church, who ſold their poſſeſſions, and tooke money, and deuided it to the poore as they had neede. And as the Churches of Macedonia did, which beeing in extreame pouertie, yet did ſend plentifull releeſe to the Church at Ieruſalem, farre diſtant from them. And you would rather ſee your ſelfe in miſerie and pouertie, then your poore brother, for whom Chriſt hath ſhed his blood: yea, you would be content to fare hardly, and to pinch your ſelfe, that you might releeue your neigbours: For (as 1.Cor.13.4.5.7. Paul ſaith) loue is bountifull, loue ſeeketh not her owne, loue ſuffereth all things, and endureth them.

Worldl. For mine owne part, I could haue beene content to haue ſold my corne all the yeare through for a leſſe price, if other would haue done ſo: but other men were ſo hard, that they would ſticke for a penny. Theſe men indeede were they that did raiſe the market: I tooke nothing but that which was offered me: and for my part, I hope God will haue me excuſed.

Chriſt. The vileſt miſer, and moſt couetous Carle that is amongſt you, can ſay ſo much. And how can you look for any fauour at Gods hands, when by your owne confeſſion you haue done as other haue done, and giuen conſent to their wickedneſſe? In Sodome and Gomorrha, Gen.18.19. no doubt all were not drunkards, and whoremaſters, ſome were ciuill, and did abſtaine from A this filthineſſe: yet becauſe they hated not theſe ſinnes, but approoued the doers of them, nothing diſliking their filthie behauiour, as Lot did, whoſe righteous heart was vexed at their wickedneſſe, behold God deſtroyed them all alike: Rom.1.29.31 and Paul maketh him to be a couetous man that fauoureth and giueth conſent to the doings of a couetous man.

Worldl. How if I ſhould haue ſould my corne cheape all this yeare, and no body elſe, what good would this haue done?

Chriſt. You ſhould haue done great good: for in regard of your ſelfe you ſhould not haue beene guilty of the great oppreſſion of this land, and your doings would haue condemned B the diuelliſh practiſes of other men, and it might haue pleaſed God by your enſample, to haue mooued other men to deale more charitably in their bargaining: and the Scripture is plaine, that the good works and Chriſtian conuerſation of any man, Math.5.16. ſhining as light before the eyes of the world, make many men to glorifie Gods name.

Worldl. You ſay like an honeſt man: and I am perſwaded, if you will ſpeake your conſcience, you that haue ſpoken ſo much againſt vs, cannot but ſpeake ſomething in our behalfe. You ſee euery where what incloſing there is, and you cannot be ignorant, that gentilmen, and Landlords they haue large conſciences, they make nothing of it to take great fines, and to double and treble their rents: now if the poore tenants ſhall not be ſuffered to ſell their corne C of a dearer price, how ſhall they be able to liue? how ſhall they pay their fines and their yearely rents? I tell you plainely, if this may not be ſuffered, we ſhall haue beggers inough within this land: yea, euen they which are now ſubſtantiall men, will ſhortly come to vile beggerie.

Chriſt. Indeede I doubt not but theſe rackers of rents, and theſe incloſers, they are vnmercifull men: ſurely they eate the bread of oppreſſion: Hab.2.11. and the very ſtones in the walles, and the beames of their faire buildings crie vnto God for vengeance againſt them: but what then? they deale vniuſtly with you, they robbe you, wil you deale therefore vniuſtly and robbe others? it is very like that God doth vſe them as D meanes to chaſtiſe you, to make you knowe your ſelues, to knowe God, and to depend vpon his prouidence. You muſt not therefore in any wiſe vſe vnlawfull meanes to auoide this croſſe, which God layeth vpon you by theſe wealthie oppreſſors, but rather you are to beare it with patience, till ſuch time as God ſhall deliuer you: praying to God (if it be his will) to ſoften the hearts of theſe hard harted men, who regard nothing but their owne pleaſure and eaſe.

Worldl. Yea, we ſhould doe ſo indeede: but who are they which doe ſo? I would faine ſee you doe ſo.

Chriſtian. This is the manner of you all. You thinke theſe be dreames which I ſpeake of, ſaid that no man euer did them: but it is a A moſt vnfallible truth, that all they whoſoeuer haue receiued the ſpirit of God, their mindes are ſo enlightened, their hearts and affections ſo reformed, and brought in order, that they cannot but doe theſe things: but you are a worldly carnall man, you can ſhift in the world and make a bargaine for your owne aduantage: but as for the will of God in his word, and the performance of it, it ſeemeth fooliſhneſſe vnto you, you know not the meaning and the reaſon of it. To let this paſſe: I maruell why you dare trauel abroad from your owne houſe, you ſeeme to be ſicke, and very lowe brought with ſickeneſſe, and in my iudgement, you hazard your life, you doe not well, you haue ſmall care of B your ſelfe.

Worldl. I am brought lowe indeede, but (I thanke God) I haue no ſickeneſſe, that I can tell of.

Chriſt. What is the matter then I pray you, if a man may be ſo bold as to enquire of you?

Worldl. As I told you, I haue great ſtore of corne; and I hoped to haue enriched my ſelfe by it: well: on the ſuddaine, the price of corne fell very much: I tell you it ſtroke me to the heart, and it made me at my wits ende. If I had not beene a ſtrong hearted man, and borne out my griefe, I had not beene here now. For when I ſawe I ſhould haue a great loſſe, and be almoſt vndone, I had thought to haue made a- C way my ſelfe, but I hope I ſhall beare it out nowe, and becauſe there is no other remedie, I am content: truely the world is come to that paſſe, it will not laſt alwaies.

Chriſt. You in your talke doe verifie the ſaying of Saint Paul, that they that will be rich, doe fall into tentations and ſnares, and into many fooliſh and noiſome luſts, which drawe men into perdition and deſtruction. And he addeth, that the deſire of monie is the roote of all euill, which while ſome luſted after, they erred from the faith, and pearced themſelues through with many ſorrowes: all which you haue done.

1.Tim.6.9,10.

Worldl. But I am in better caſe nowe then I haue beene: and I comfort my ſelfe as well as I can, for I ſee there is no remedie, and I ſhall D not be alwaies in this miſerie, for the world will laſt but a while.

Chriſt. Theſe are ſilly comforts indeede: you ſhould rather cut off this vice of couetouſneſſe, and then you might haue found comfort. But how commeth this into your minde, that the world cannot laſt long?

Worldl. How? why I am ſure you knowe as much as I: they ſay euery where, that the next yeare eightie eight Doomes day will be.

Chriſt. They are flying tales.

Worldl. Nay, I promiſe you: I haue ſome ſkill, and I haue read bookes of it that are printed; and talke goes, that there be olde propheſies of this yeare found in olde ſtone walls.

Chriſt. I tell you plainely they are very lies.

A Worldl. It ſeemeth that you haue ſkill this way; we haue yet a good way to goe before we come to our iourneyes ende: I pray you let me heare your iudgement of it. And what doe you ſay to theſe verſes which euery man hath in his mouth,

When after Chriſts birth there be expired,
of hundreds fifteene, yeares eightie eight,
Then comes the time of dangers to be feared,
and all mankind with dolors it ſhall freight,
For if the world in that yeare doe not fall,
if ſea and land then periſh ne decay:
Yet Empires all, and kingdomes alter ſhall,
and man to eaſe himſelfe ſhall haue no way.

Chriſt. For my part I make as little accompt
B of theſe verſes as of Merlins drunken propheſies, or of the tales of Robinhood. They import thus much in effect, that either the ende of the world, ſhall be the next yeare, or if the ende of the world be not then, yet that there will be great troubles and ſubuerſions of kingdomes in the world. And for the ſatisfying of your deſire, I will ſhewe you my iudgement betweene you and me: firſt, of the ende of the world; ſecondly, of the troubles which (as men ſuppoſe) ſhall befall vs this next yeare.

Worldl. I pray you then what is your iudgement of the ende of the world? ſhall it not be this next yeare.

Chriſt. My iudgement is this, that it is not poſſible for any to finde out the time of the end
C of the world; and if it were poſſible to appoint that time, yet it were not lawfull.

Worldl. Euery bodie thinketh that vnto learned men it is both poſſible and lawfull; for my part I cannot tell, I would be glad to learne, and vntill I heare what you ſay, I will ſay as moſt doe ſaie.

Chriſt. That we may ſpeake of this point in ſome order, firſt, let vs conſider whether it be poſſible by any meanes to ſet downe the ende of the world: and for a ground of all that I ſhall ſpeake hereafter, this I will propound as a principle, that No man can define or truely coniecture, the houre, the day, the weeke, the moneth, the yeare, or the age in which the end of the world ſhall be.

D Worldl. I thinke not ſo: how can you prooue it by any good reaſon?

Chriſt. The word of God is the ground of this my aſſertion. In a viſion Daniel ſeeth one Angel asking another Angel clothed in linnen, when ſhould be the ende of the miſeries and troubles of the Church: the anſwer was, that it ſhould be after a time; two times, and halfe a time. Now marke the words of Daniel. Then I heard it (ſaith he) but I vnderſtoood it not: and then I ſaid, O my Lord, what ſhall be the ende of theſe things? and he ſaid goe thy way Daniel, for the words are cloſed vp & ſealed till the end of the time. If Daniel could not tell the time, & when an anſwer was made concerning the end, could not vnderſtād it, what means can any man liuing vſe to coniecture at the day, or the yeare, Dan.12.5.8.9.

19649a

A or at the hundred yeare in which the world ſhall ende. Againe, when the diſciples of our Sauiour Chriſt asked him whether he would at his aſcention reſtore the kingdome to Iſraell, this anſwer was giuen them: It is not for you to know the times, or ſeaſons, which the Father hath put in his owne power. Which anſwer maketh very much for me. For it prooueth alſo that the ſpeciall times in which the ende of the world ſhall happen, are vnknowne to man and hidden from him: God keepeth them to himſelfe. And in the Apocalyps, the ſoules of them that were killed for the word of God, longing for a full deliuerance, crie with a loud voyce, how long Lord holy and true? In the anſwer B which they receiue from the lambe, there is no ſpeciall time mentioned of their deliuerance: but it is told them that after a little ſeaſon when their fellow-ſeruants and brethren ſhall be killed as they were, that then they ſhall ſee the ende. In my iudgement theſe proofes are ſufficient to confirme that I ſaid before.

Act.1.6,7.

Apoc.6.9, 10,11.

Worldl. For my part I haue no skill in the Scriptures as you haue: you may ſoone deceiue me. But if this be true which you ſay, then belike all the propheſies which goe of the ende of the world are falſe?

Chriſt. All propheſies are not of God, and from his ſpirit: many are from the phantaſies of wicked men, and from the ſuggeſtion of the Deuill.

C Worldl. I pray you therefore ſhew me how I may diſcerne of a propheſie, whether it be from God, or the deuill, and ſo whether it ought to be regarded as true, or deſpiſed as falſe?

Chriſt. I will to my power doe what I can to ſatisfie your requeſt: and here I will ſet down certaine notes, by which you, or any man elſe may diſcerne of any propheſie. 1 First, if the Prophet be inſufficient it is a ſtrong ſuſpition that he is not ſent of God: but it argueth that his propheſies come from ſome other cauſe. The ſufficiencie or inſufficiencie of a prophet, may be perceiued by theſe markes.

1. If he maintaine hereſies, and doe not embrace the Chriſtian religion.

D 2. If his iudgement be raſh and inconſtant in other matters.

3. If he be giuen to ſome notorious vice, as couetouſneſſe, or pride: for then it may be ſuſpected, that he ſeeketh by his propheſies to win either ſome gaine, or ſome glory vnto himſelfe.

4. If his complexion and the temperature of his body be ſtrange; for then he may be thought to haue ſome diſeaſe which hindreth the reaſonable part: he may haue the weakenes of the braine, the phrenſie, or ſome ſuch like. And it is certaine that in all ſuch Sathan hath great power, and doth trouble them with dreames and viſions: and many ſtrong phantaſies and terrors of minde.

5. If he deſpiſe other mens iudgements and counſels, and ſticke to his owne opinion. Paul, which was rapt vp in the third heauen, and ſaw ſtrange viſions, was for all that moſt humble, 2. Cor. 12. 3.

6. Laſtly, if the Prophet be a young man, not an old; if a woman, and not a man: if babling and talkatiue, not ſilent with wiſedome: if vnruly and diſordered, not quiet: ſuſpicion may be gathered, that the propheſie is an illuſion of Satan. For in the weaker ſort he moſt preuaileth.

2 Secondly, if it be againſt the word of God, or any circumſtance of it: and if it reueale that particularly, which the word of God foretelleth in generall manner, not laying downe the place, the time, the perſons, the manner of doing it, it may be taken for a falſe propheſie.

3 Thirdly, if the propheſie be vttered in ambiguous wordes, or in ſpeaches, which are inſolent, and ſtrange, not vnderſtood of them which heare them, and neuer vſed in the Scriptures, or of the Church: it is like to be ſome ſleight, for the ſpirit of God ſpeaketh plainely, & if it vtter things which are not to be known, miſtically, yet euermore it ſpeaketh like it ſelfe, as appeareth in the propheſies of the olde and newe Teſtament.

4 Fourthly, if the ende of the propheſie be Gods glorie, and the profit of Gods Church, it is to be regarded: but if this be the drift of it to put ſome men into a fooliſh feare, to make diſquietneſſe in the church and commonwealth; if it be a platforme to bring ſome to promotion, it is not to be regarded. For example, this is a flying propheſie. Canterbury was; London is, and Yorke ſhall be. This propheſie; if men will regard it, tendeth to ſtrife, contention, and ſedition: and it may be a meanes of wicked attempts, if hereafter time and place doe ſerue: the deuill oftentimes ſoweth his ſeede a long time before he can haue it growen vp.

In the north they ſay, Lincolne was.

5 Fiftly, if it concerne ſome priuate men, and ſome priuate familie, it is to be ſuſpected, for the propheſies which come from Gods ſpirit are commonly generall, and tend to the profit of the whole Church.

4.Eſdr.

If it be falſe in any one litle point, or in any circumſtance, accompt it of no value. For thoſe propheſies which are of God, are in no iot falſe: for God is truth it ſelfe.

By theſe notes and many other, we may iudge of the propheſies of Merline, of the propheſies of thoſe that tearme themſelues Elias, of Anabaptiſticall reuelations, of dreames, of theſe flying tales of the ſecond comming of Chriſt.

Worldl. I knowe more now then euer I knewe in all my life: and I promiſe you for this I will not beleeue all propheſies, which I ſhall heare, but as well as I can I will trie them out: But in the meane time let me heare your iudgement of ſome ſpeciall propheſies which concerne Domes day? What ſay you to Elias propheſie: Two thouſand vaine, two thouſand the Lawe, two thouſand Chriſt: And for our ſinnes

A which are many and maruelous, ſome years which are wanting ſhall not be expired.

Chriſt. Some men there are, which make great account of this propheſie, but in truth it is not to be regarded. And if we ſhall examine it by the former notes, it will appeare to be but a fooliſh prophecie.

1 Beroald. Cron.l 2.c.3. Talmud.par. 4.lib.2.de Iudic.& Senat.

First, who is the author of this propheſie? not Elias the Thisbite, whoſe hiſtorie we read in the olde Teſtament: but a fond Iewe of the ſame name, and the words of the propheſie are found no where, but in the Iewiſh Thalmud.

2 Secondly, it is againſt the word of God: From the beginning of the world, to the publiſhing of the Lawe were two thouſand yeares, ſaith Elias: two thouſand fiue hundreth and B thirteene yeares ſaith the Scripture. From the giuing of the lawe to the paſſion of out Sauiour Chriſt, were two thouſand yeares, ſaith Elias: from the giuing of the law to the paſſion of our Sauiour Chriſt were onely one thouſand, fiue hundred forty two yeares, ſaith the Scripture. Now ſeeing two parts of this propheſie are againſt the Cronologie which is laid downe in the word of God: why ſhould I beleeue, that Elias ſaith the truth in the third part, which is not yet fulfilled?

3 Thirdly, this propheſie is a plaine viper, it eateth out the guts of the Iewes Thalmud, and coufuteth them for ſaying that Chriſt is not yet come: For Elias maketh but foure thouſand C yeares, from the beginning of the world to the death of Chriſt: and now almoſt ſixe thouſand years are paſt ſince the beginning of the world: ſo that the Iewes, if they will maintaine their propheſie, they muſt grant that Chriſt is already come, which they deny.

Worldl. You ſpeake too ſore againſt this propheſie, ſome learned men doe ſay, that it is agreeable to the word of God. For in the 4. of Eſdras, whereas Eſdras demandeth of Vriel the angel whether the time paſt be greater then the time to come? the Angel doth anſwer by two ſimilitudes: and doth ſhewe vnto him a burning furnace, and afterward a waterie cloud, and ſaith: marke whether the fire doe ouercome the ſmoke, and the ſhowre the droppes, or otherwaies. D To whom Eſdras ſaith, I ſee Lord, that a very great ſmoake doth paſſe away, I ſee alſo a very great ſhowre to come pouring downe: but afterward I perceiue the flame to ouercoure the ſmoake, and the droppes the ſhoure. Then ſaith the Angel, nowe iudge of the continuance of the world. Euen as the firſt ſmoke vanquiſheth the fire, and the droppes the ſhoure: ſo the yeares of the time paſt ſhall exceede the time which is to come. But now according to the computation of yeares, it is euident that Eſdras liued about the third thouſand and fiue hundred yeare after the worlds creation, and a while after Cyrus death: from which time about two thouſand yeares are conſumed. Wherefore we doe ſee, that this propheſie doth maruelouſly agree with that of Elias, and the ende of the world to be nigh at hand.

Ch. I perceiue that you haue read ſome books of this matter: but doubtles your reaſon is of no force: for that booke is not canonicall, and the place which you alleadge may be otherwiſe anſwered. For the Angel by his ſimilitudes, doth not ſo much compare the time paſt with the time to come, as the eſtate, and the infidelitie of the time paſt, with the eſtate and infidelitie of the time to come. For as the ſmoke vanquiſheth the fire, and the droppes the ſhowre: ſo ſhall (ſaith the Angell to Eſdras) the wickednes of the time to come be increaſed more then thou haſt ſeene nowe, or haſt heard in times paſt. And this is that which the Angel principally meaneth in his anſwer to Eſdras.

The very popiſh Church doe hold it not Canonicall.

Worldl. Let vs goe on further in this point. What ſay you to the propheſie of the poet Orpheus? I cannot ſay his words, but the meaning is this, that in the ſixt age, or ſixt thouſand yeare, God ſhall deſtroy the world.

Chriſt. You ſay true, I remember ſuch a thing indeede, alleadged by the ancient Philoſopher Plato. But if the propheſie of Elias is not to be regarded (as in truth it is not,) who is ſo madde as to giue any heede to the ſaying of a fabling poet? But leaue your propheſies, let vs heare what you can ſay elſe? for it ſeemeth that you haue read ſome bookes of the ſecond comming of Chriſt.

Worldl. I Remember ſuch a reaſon as this drawne from the creation. God was ſixe daies in making the heauen and the earth, and he reſted the ſeauenth day: now euery day is a thouſand yeares, as S. Peter ſaith: therefore about ſixe thouſand yeares the ende of the world ſhall bee.

2.Pet.3.8.

Chriſt. You do abuſe the place of Scripture which is in Saint Peter, for his meaning is this, that the greateſt time and the ſmalleſt, differ not in reſpect of God, to whome all times are preſent. And if your reaſon were good, I will make an other as good forth of the ſame place againſt you, after this manner. Saint Peter, which ſaith that one day is as a thouſand yeares, ſaith alſo in the ſame place that a thouſand yeares are but as one day. Out of which words I frame my reaſon thus. A thouſand yeares are but as one day: the world ſhall laſt ſixe thouſand yeares, as you ſay, therefore the world ſhall laſt but ſixe daies. Moreouer, your owne reaſon, may be retorted againſt you thus; You thinke that the ende ſhall be of all things, this next yeare, 88. But, as God was ſixe dayes in creating the world, and he did not reſt in the ſixt day, but in the ſeauenth: ſo in like manner (If the ſixe daies of the creation reſemble the ſixe thouſand yeares of the continuance of the world, as you ſuppoſe) the ende of the world cannot be before the ſixt thouſand yeare be expired: as the reſt was not before the ſixt day of the creation was expired: And ſo neither you, nor any other haue any cauſe to feare the yeare next inſuing.

1.Pet.1.

Worldl. You are to ſubtill for me. I haue not been at the Vniuerſitie as you haue bin, though I trauaile that way now. But becauſe you are ſo friendly in talke, I will be bold with you a little more yet. Are not theſe times in which we liue called the laſt houre, and the laſt times? I know you will graunt it: for the Scripture ſaith, that our Sauiour Chriſt was once offered in the ende of the world: and Saint Peter ſaith, that Chriſt was made manifeſt in the laſt times, and if then were the laſt times when our Sauiour did ſuffer, the end of the world muſt be looked for euery houre.

Chriſt. You muſt vnderſtand, that the whole time of the continuance of the world, is diuided into the olde time, which continueth from the end of the world vnto the comming of Chriſt: and into the latter dayes or laſt houre, which is the whole ſpace of time from the comming of Chriſt vnto the end of the world: as may appeare in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes. So then your reaſon proueth nothing. For theſe may be the latter daies ſtill, and the laſt houre, and the world may for all that continue an hundred yeares, or two hundred yeares longer, for any thing we know. Is not the comming of our Sauiour Chriſt compared to the comming of a theefe, for this cauſe: that as no man is able truly to coniecture the comming of a theefe before he begin to breake into the houſe: ſo no man can truly coniecture the comming of Chriſt before he ſee him in the clouds, and then he may certainly determine that the end of the world is preſent?

Worldl. All the ſignes of the comming of Chriſt are paſt; Oh, what earthquakes haue there been? what famine? what warres and hurliburlies among men? what ſignes in the Sunne and Moone? what flaſhing in the ayre? what blaſing ſtarres? ſurely, ſurely, the world can not laſt long: there is ſome cauſe that ſo many men ſo long agoe haue ſpoken of theſe times, and ſpeciallie of the next yeare. I ſee you doe not feare, but I promiſe you I am afraid.

Chriſt. Some men there be, that thinke that all the ſignes of the comming of our Sauiour Chriſt are paſt. And what if they be paſt, as you ſay: what then? muſt of neceſſitie the end immediatly follow them? what ſhould hinder that the comming of Chriſt ſhould not be two or three hundred yeares after the ſignes which ſignifie his comming? You haue nothing to ſhew but your owne imaginations. But now if the ſignes of Chriſts comming be not all paſt? what will you ſay then? aſſuredly very godly and learned men are of this mind.

Worldl. I pray you ſhew me how all the ſignes are not yet fulfilled which go before the end of the world.

2.Pet.3.10.

Chriſt. According to that meaſure of knowledge which God hath giuen me, I will doe my endeauour to ſhew this point vnto you. The ſignes of the comming of Chriſt are of two ſorts: for either they goe with the comming of Chriſt, or before it. Of the firſt ſort ſpeaketh our Sauiour Chriſt in the Goſpel of Saint Luke, ſaying: then there wallbe ſignes in the Sunne and Moone, and in the ſtarres, and vpon the earth trouble among the nations, with perplexitie: the ſea and the waters ſhall roare: all theſe ſignes ſhall be fulfilled at the very comming of Chriſt, when as the heauens ſhall paſſe away with a noiſe, and the elements ſhall melt with heat, and the earth with the workes that are therein ſhalbe burnt vp. The other ſort of ſignes that go before our Sauiours comming are very many.

Matth.24.14.

1. The firſt ſigne is the preaching of the Goſpel, as Chriſt ſaith: and this Goſpel of the kingdome ſhalbe preached throughout the whole world, for a witneſſe to all nations, and then ſhall the end come: and this ſigne is euery day more and more accompliſhed.

1.Tim.4.1,2.

2. The ſecond is, the ſpreading abroad of errors, hereſies, and ſchiſmes: as Saint Paul ſaith, that in the laſt dayes ſome ſhall depart from the faith, and giue heede vnto ſpirits of errors, and doctrines of Deuils: and our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, that many falſe Prophets ſhall come, and if it were poſſible, euen deceiue the elect: we and our anceſtors haue ſeene this ſigne fulfilled.

Luk.17.26, 27,28,29,30.

3. The third is a generall ſecuritie of men in euery calling, and in euery place. Which now is euident. When was there euer more Atheiſme? more contempt of Gods holy miniſterie? more ſhameleſſe hypocriſie; then is in theſe times in which we now liue?

2.Theſſ.2.3. &c.

4. The fourth ſigne is the Apoſtaſie, and the reuealing of Antichriſt, which now is knowen of all men to be the Pope, and his Church, and they themſelues, if they were not paſt ſhame, would graunt, that the ſecond beaſt comming forth of the earth, hauing the lambes hornes, but the dragons mouth, they (I ſay) would graunt, that this beaſt ſhould be the Pope their Father.

5. The fift ſigne is the afflictions and miſeries of the world by earthquakes, warres, peſtilence, famine, and ſuch like.

Rom.11.26.

6. The ſixt ſigne, is the conuerſion of the Iewes vnto that religion which now they hate: as appeareth in the 11. to the Romanes: and this ſigne which goeth immediatly before the comming of Chriſt to iudgement, is not yet fulfilled, for any thing I can tell. Theſe onely be the chiefe ſignes, of which Gods word maketh any mention: Of theſe, ſome are preſent, ſome are to come: ſo that for any thing I can tell, there is no cauſe why we ſhould think that the ende of the world ſhall be the next yeare.

Worldl. I cannot tell whether all the ſignes of the comming of Chriſt be paſt, or not, but ſure I am that wonderfull things are come to paſſe in theſe daies: and the world is come to that paſſe for naughtineſſe, that it cannot laſt long.

Chriſt. That is your olde ſong, but if the world be naught, it is the worſe by you that are ſo couetous: and if you thinke that the ende of the world wil be ſhortly, euen the next yeare, what a madde man are you to be ſo couetous? will you heape vp riches which you knowe you ſhall neuer inioy? And will you hoard vp treaſure for many yeares, when the world is not to continue one?.

Worldl. Well, well, my couetouſneſſe is an eieſore to you, you are alwaies harping vpon it: take no care, it ſhall neuer hurt you, you ſhall anſwer for your ſelfe, you ſhall not anſwer for me: if you will not talke quietly with me in good neighbourhood, I will hold my tongue.

Chriſt. I muſt needes admoniſh you of this vice which raigneth in you. What if you ſhould ſee a man caſt into a water, ſwimming, and readie to be drowned, would you not with all ſpeede ſeeke to ſaue his life? and were it not a wicked part in him to be angrie with you for your good will?

Worldl. Yes.

Chriſt. Your caſe is the very ſame: You are plunged ouer head and eares in this ſinne of couetouſneſſe: it preſſeth downe your ſoule to the bottome of hell, and by it you are in fearefull danger of eternall death; it pitieth me to ſee you in this caſe, I would with all my heart doe any thing to bring you forth of danger. Yet for all my good will thus I am rewarded.

Worldl. It is but your mind that I am in ſuch danger of hell fire. I would be ſorie, if I had not a good heart to God-ward, and I ſerue him truely morning and euening, as wel as God will giue me grace. And if I were ſo bad a fellowe as you would make me, good Lord! what a miſerable caſe is the world in? For I doe nothing but that which euery body doth. I pray you heartily let vs goe on in our former talke.

Chriſt. Well, goe too, I will follow your humor, ſay what you can.

Worldl. You reiect all propheſies of the ende of the world, and all other coniectures, you account them as friuolous, and not to be regarded: yet the Aſtronomers are men that are gaily learned, and can tell many things, which the world knoweth not: I thinke you dare ſay nothing againſt them.

Chriſt. Aſtronomers that take vpon them to prognoſticate of things to come, are bablers, and there is no heed to be giuen to their ſayings. There is many of them in this Land, that make a liuing by telling of fortunes, and things that are loſt, and ſtolne: but in truth they are verie thieſes, and the good ſtatutes that are made againſt Coſiners, might better be vrged againſt them, then many others.

Worldl. Me thinkes you are very raſh, before euer I tell you what they ſay, you inueigh bitterly againſt them: they write, that about eighty eight, the end of the world ſhall be, or at the leaſt great ſubuerſions of Kingdomes, warres, confuſions, &c.

Chriſt. In a word, they are all Liers and deceiuers, they are not able truely to coniecture theſe things, and I will ſhewe it you plainely. The Egyptians, and Chaldeans, of al other men, were moſt giuen to the ſtudie of the ſtars, & neuer any were ſo skilfull in that matter, as they: Yet for all that, the Lord by the Prophet Eſay, laieth this in their teeth, that for all their skill, yet they were not able to foretell their owne deſtruction, which was at hand. Where are now (ſaith the Prophet) thy wiſe men, that they may tell thee, or may knowe what the Lord of hoſts hath determined againſt Egypt? And vnto Babylon, he ſaith: thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counſels: let now the Aſtrologers, the ſtarre-gaſers, and prognoſticators ſtand vp, and ſaue thee from theſe things that ſhall come vpon thee: behold they ſhall be as ſtubble: the fire ſhall burne them, they ſhall not deliuer their owne liues from the power of the flame: there ſhall be no coales to warme at, nor light to ſit by: thus are they with whome thou haſt wearied thy ſelfe, euen thy marchants that haue beene with thee from thy youth: euery one ſhall wander to his owne quarter: none ſhall ſaue thee.

Eſa.47.11, 12,13.

Worldl. The prophet in theſe places ſpeaketh againſt the vnskilfull, not againſt the arte of Aſtronomie.

Chriſt. Yea, if you marke and conſider the places wel, you ſhall find they are againſt the art it ſelfe, and againſt the moſt wiſe, and skilfull in all Egypt and Chaldea: the ſpirit of God here confuteth their arrogancie, and threateneth reuengement on them, for that they profeſſe to fore-ſhewe thoſe things which God hath hid in his ſecret counſell, and cannot be perceiued by the ſtarres.

Worldl. Doe you thinke, that God would make the Heauens, and the ſtarres in them for no ende? no doubt, God hath made them for ſome great vſe.

Chriſt. The beautifull frame of the heauens, was created for mans vſe and profit. As to be ſignes of the ordinarie and naturall courſe of all things in the world, as of the time of ſowing corne, of reaping, of planting, lopping, &c. Againe, they haue this vſe, to diſtinguiſh, and to make the ſeaſons of winter, ſommer, ſpring, harueſt: they make day and night, and the naturall courſe of yeares is by them: In a word, they are made euen as an henne to foſter and cheriſh the creatures here below: and therefore doe giue heate, and cauſe raine and moiſture in the ſeaſons of the yeare. As the Prophet Dauid ſaith, nothing is hid from the heate of the Sunne. And the Prophet Oſeah ſaith: And in that day I will heare (ſaith the Lord,) I will heare the heauens, and they ſhall heare the earth, and the earth ſhall heare the corne, and the wine, and the oyle, and they ſhall heare Iſrael. Now God did not make the ſtarres to be meanes of foretelling things to come, and that men ſhould learne of them good and euill ſucceſſe:

Pſal.19.6.

Oſe.2.21,22.

ceſſe: they that referre the ſtarres to this ende abuſe the ſtarres, and breake the third commandement, by taking Gods name in vaine. And therefore God threatneth them by his Prophet Eſay, that make ſignes of things to come in the heauens, and ſaith: I deſtroy the tokens of the Soothſayers, and make them that coniecture, fooles, and turne the wiſe men backward, and make their knowledge fooliſhneſſe. And to thinke, that by the ſtarres and their courſe, a man may coniecture the ende of the world, is fooliſhnes, or rather madneſſe. For either the ſtarres muſt be the cauſes of the ende of the world, or bare ſignes. Cauſes they cannot be, for this is a propertie in nature, that euery thing laboureth to preſerue it ſelfe; and therefore it is not like, that by the heauens ſhall be cauſed the end of the world: for then they ſhould be cauſes of their owne ruine. And againe, the courſe of the ſtarres cannot be a token or ſigne of the ende. Dionyſius Ariopagita, when he ſaw the Sun to be eclipſed at the full moone, beeing ſore afraid, ſaid, that either the ende of the world was then, or that the God of nature did ſuffer. And no maruaile, for the extraordinarie eclipſe of the Sunne, was a ſigne of ſome ſtraunge wonder: but that the naturall, and ordinarie courſe of the ſtarres in the heauens, ſhould ſignifie ſtraunge and extraordinarie things, (ſuch as are ſubuerſions of kingdomes, and the ende of the world) that by no reaſon can be ſhewed. And yet this is that which Aſtronomers maintaine, and take as graunted. Againe, the power and vertue, and the operation of the ſtarres is vnknowne to man: and if it were knowen, yet by the ſtarres no many could gather what was to come: which I will ſhewe you by this ſimilitude. Suppoſe twentie eggs of twentie diuers birds, ſet vnder one henne, let her ſit on them all, and communicate her heat vnto them all: can you, or any other, by knowing the properties of the henne, and by feeling of her heate, tell me of euery egge what chickins ſhee will hatch? whether crowes, or partriges, or what other fowle: and can you tell by the ſame meanes when the hene ſhall die?

Worldl. I tell you, my wife hatches many chickens in the yeare, but this paſſeth al my skil, and hers too.

Chriſt. Very well. The heauens are as an henne, foſtering and cheriſhing theſe earthly things vnder them: and you can not by the vertues of the ſtarres, if you knew them neuer ſo well, you can not, (I ſay,) coniecture either the euent of things vpon earth, or the diſſolution of the world: except you could therewithall know the ſecret purpoſe of God, and the particular cauſes of euery particular thing.

Worldl. You ſhew me your minde plainely, and me thinkes it ſhould be true you ſay: but euery where there is great talke of Coniunctions of planets, and you would wonder to ſee, how ſimple men (ſuch as I am) liſten after ſuch things: and ſome men haue beene readie to ſell away all their goods, for feare of coniunctions. I pray you is there no ſuch things? and if there be ſuch things, what are they?

Chriſt. Indeede, Aſtronomers haue written of ſtraunge coniunctions, and among others, one Cyprianus Leouitius, a Bohemian: and becauſe you are ſo earneſt on me in this point, I will repeate ſome of his words. In the yeare of our Lord (ſaith he) 1583. in the moneth of May, there ſhal happen a great coniunction of planets in the laſt ende of Piſces, after which, ſtraightwaies, in the yeare eightie foure, ſhall enſue a wonderfull mixture of all the planets in Taurus about the end of March, and beginning of Aprill. And which is more, a little after that, ſhall be ſeene an eclipſe of the Sunne, in the twentie degree of Taurus, about the head of Algol, a moſt cruell and hurtfull fixed ſtarre, gouerned by Venus, which ſhalbe linked to fiue planets in Aries, tending towards the twelft degree. Here muſt we watch (ſaith he;) and I think it meet that all earthly cogitations be caſt of, leaſt we be deſtroyed beeing vnreadie: for this great coniunction, is of all the laſt which ſhall happen in the ende of the waterie Trigon: and the waterie Trigon ſhall haue an ende, and be turned into the fierie Trigon. Neither ſhall there be any more in the ſpace of 800. yeares: the end of the waterie Trigon ſhal be nigh. But becauſe about the ende of the waterie Trigon this Monarchie did begin: it is likely, that the ſame alſo, in the ende of the ſame Trigon ſhall haue an ende: ſith the Sonne of God himſelfe, Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, euen in the ende of the waterie Trigon, tooke vpon him the nature of man. For ſixe yeares before his moſt glorious natiuitie, the ſame very coniunction in the ende of Piſces, and in the beginning of Aries, happened. Neither came the like ſince that time, but when Charles the great held his Empire, which was in the yeare of our Lord ſeuen hundred eightie nine: and now the ſecond time, ſuch a ſtrange and great coniunction ſhall come, which *VNDOVBTEDLY doth foreſhew the other comming of the Sonne of God and man, in maieſtie of his glorie: at which time, we muſt render an accompt of our life and conuerſation.

*Proculdubio.

Worldl. I remember that I haue reade theſe words in an Engliſh booke of the ſecond comming of Chriſt, and I would deſire your iudgement of them. It ſeemeth, that the man which writ theſe words, was deeply learned in Aſtronomie.

Chriſt. You ſhal heare as much as I am able to tell you, and I can ſaie ſome-what, becauſe I haue laboured in theſe matters. Firſt therefore know thus much, that this Leouitius doth not truly account the motions of the ſtarres, but is far deceiued, as by the moſt exact tables of Eraſmus Reinboldus, and Stadius, may appeare. And whereas he ſaith, that in the yeare of our Lord 1583. in the moneth of Maie there ſhall happen a great coniunction of the ſuperiour planets in the ende of Piſces: in truth there is no ſuch thing. For Iupiter and Saturne are almoſt three degrees aſunder, when they are both in the end of Piſces in May: but in Aprill, the moneth going before, they are in coniunction: and what ſtrange thing can this be, which hath happened ſo oft ſince the beginning? To wit, euery 240. yeares once in the ſame Trigon (as they ſay.) As for that he ſaith, that in the yeare 1584. there ſhall be a mixture of all the planets in Taurus, about the end of March, there is no ſuch thing: but in the beginning of Aprill, Saturne, and Mars are in coniunction, and then Iupiter is aboue twelue degrees diſtant from them: other mixture of planets to be regarded I ſee none. Meſſabala maketh the greateſt coniunction of planets to be, when the three ſuperiour planets are ioined altogether in Aries, which ſhall not be either in the yeare 83. or 84. But be it, that there had bin then ſuch ſtrange coniunctions of the planets, as Leonitius ſpeaketh of, what then? what ſhould follow? forſooth the end of the world. And why ſhould this be, conſidering, that all theſe coniunctions are naturall, and come of the naturall and ordinarie motions of the heauens? and there haue beene ſince the beginning of the world 270. coniunctions of the ſuperiour planets, Mars, Iupiter, and Saturne? heretofore they haue portended no ſuch daungers, as the effects declare: but there is no remedie, now they muſt needs ſignifie ruines of kingdomes, and the ende of the world; Leonitius will haue it ſo: for he ſpeaketh very confidently, as from an Oracle: No doubt (ſaith he) this great and ſtrange coniunction doth foreſhow the other comming of the Sonne of God and man, in maieſty of his glorie: but no doubt, God wil deſtroy the ſignes, and confounde the phantaſies of theſe men, as hitherto in all ages hath bin ſeene. Albumazar, he propheſied, that in the yeare of our Lord 1460. an end ſhould be made of Chriſtian religion: and yet euen then the Goſpel began moſt of all to flouriſh. And a Iewe propheſied, that in the yeare 1364. Meſſias ſhould come, who ſhould deliuer the reſt of his owne nation, out of ſeruitude vnder the Chriſtians: how true this is, let they themſelues iudge.

Worldl. You are too ſore an enemie vnto Aſtronomers, you are now neare the Vniuerſitie; if you were there, you durſt not ſay ſo much, he is a wiſe man indeed that is neuer deceiued, and theſe men, though they are deceiued ſomtime, yet they often tell the verie truth.

Chriſt. That is nothing: for it is no maruaile, if a man vnſkilfull in ſhooting, often hit the marke, if he continue in ſhooting. But I would haue theſe propheticall Aſtronomers ſhew a reaſon, why the great coniunction of planets foreſhow the end of the world: belike they wil ſay, that they know it to be ſo: if they know it, then their knowledge commeth either by experience, or without any experience; If they ſay that they know it without experience, then truely they deceiue vs: for all good knowledge in humane learning is builded vpon experience: If they know it by experience, then they muſt needes haue obſerued this, that the deſtruction of the world hath followed ſuch coniunctions: if they haue ſeene this, then they were either in the world, or forth of the world. If they were in the world, how did they eſcape when the world was deſtroyed? If they were forth of the world, where ſtood they? But I will here ceaſe to ſpeake of Aſtronomers, leauing to them their vanities, till ſuch time as it ſhall pleaſe God to make them acknowledge them, and loath them, as the Epheſians did: who beeing giuen, not vnto wicked and deuiliſh arts, but vnto ſuch vaine and friuolous conceipts, as theſe of the Aſtronomers are, after that they were wonne to the Religion of Chriſt, brought their curious bookes, and openly burned them. Act.9.19. And I would haue you that are an ignorant mā, to remember the ſaying of the Prophet Ieremy: Ier.10.3. Be not afraid of the ſignes of heauen, though the Heathen be afraid of ſuch: for the cuſtomes of the people ar vaine.

Worldl. I haue heard you hitherto, ſhewing that no man by any probable coniecture can tell the ſpeciall time of the end of the world: now ſhew me, that it is not lawful for any to ſearch out the end of world.

Chriſt. Indeede, I thinke it is not lawful to be curious to ſearch out the time, in which the end ſhall be; it is a thing in which Chriſtians are not to meddle. For it is the will of God, that this ſhould not be knowne; therefore whoſoeuer ſearcheth this time, doth againſt the will of God; to this purpoſe it is ſaid in the Actes, It is not for you to know the times and ſeaſons. Act.1.6. Moreouer, God hath kept the knowledge of this ſecret vnto himſelfe: and neither the Angels, nor Chriſt as he is man, knoweth this time: wherefore, it ſhall be pride and vanitie in man, to occupy himſelfe in ſearching it out. 3. Laſtly, the Apoſtles, and Daniell the Prophet, when they were curious, and deſired to knowe the end, and asked this queſtion: when ſhall theſe times be? they had the repulſe, and neuer receiued any anſwer: which declareth, that none ought curiouſly to inquire of that time.

Worldl. But why is it not the will of God, that this time ſhould be knowne?

Chriſt The ſame cauſe that mooued God to conceale from vs the houre of death, the ſame alſo made him hide from vs the houre and time of his comming: to wit, that we might alwayes watch and pray, and haue our loynes girt round about vs, and our lampes in our hands burning, as though we euery houre did wait for the comming of Chriſt. And this is the reaſon which our Sauiour Chriſt vſeth. For after he had ſhewed the vncertainty of the time of his comming, and yet that his comming was moſt certaine, and very ſodaine: he addeth an exhortation, Matt.24.41.

ſaying: Watch therefore; becauſe yee know not when the ſonne of man will come. And indeed becauſe the time is vnknowen, it ſtirreth vs vp to perpetuall watchfulneſſe. The maſter of a family, if he knew the houre in which the thiefe would come, he would watch onely the ſame houre: but becauſe he knoweth that he will come, and is vncertain of the houre in which he wil come, therfore he watcheth the whole night throughout.

Worldl. I thanke you (ſir) heartily, for that you haue ſhewed me your opinion ſo willingly, and ſo courteouſly, of the end of the world: but yet I would make bold with you a little more in this matter. I often come among my neighbours, and now and then we talke of theſe matters, and euery man will haue his owne ſaying, and peraduenture we are all deceiued. You ſay it is neither poſſible, nor lawfull to ſearch the comming of Chriſt by any meanes: how then may a man frame his talke wiſely, and ſpeake the truth in theſe matters?

Chriſt. It is a good queſtion you demand, and I will be carefull to make you an anſwer. Therefore, when you ſpeake with any man of the ende of the world, frame your talke after this manner:

1. That the ende of the world is moſt certaine.
2. That the time of the end of the world is vncertaine to man; and that he muſt not be curious in this matter.
3. That God would haue this time to be vnknowne, that men might liue in the feare of his name, and not deferre their repentance.
4. That euery man muſt long to ſee this day, in which an end ſhall be made of ſinne and wickednes.
5. That God may come ſooner to iudgement then we are aware of, or the world doth imagine: as the parable of the wicked ſeruant ſheweth.
6. That if God ſeem to deferre his comming, it is, that by his long ſuffering he might bring vs to repentance.
7. That though God wil not end the world, yet he may euery moment cut of the life of man.

If you ſhall ſpeake of any of theſe points, you cannot ſpeake amiſſe.

Worldl. Surely my memorie is naught, and now you do me a pleaſure, in that you tell me your whole minde ſo briefly and plainely. I pray you let me make bold to conferre with you of the other part of the propheſie: which is, that if the end of the world be not this next yeare, yet there ſhall be great troubles, & ſubuerſions of kingdomes. If I knew your opinion of this, I would ceaſe to trouble you.

Chriſt. Not to make long diſcourſes, my opinion is this: that there muſt be great troubles in the world, but they are not to be looked for more in the yeare 88. then any other yeare. And this I will briefly declare vnto you, and then we will end this matter.

Worldl. Shew me firſt of all, that there ſhal be many troubles in the world: for I would very faine know that.

Deut.28.15.16.20.

Chriſt. Doubtleſſe, the reaſons of this thing are moſt euident. Firſt, Gods word threatneth plagues, and puniſhments, to the diſobedient, and the tranſgreſſors of his commandements. If (ſaith Moſes) thou wilt not obey the voice of the Lord thy God, to keepe and doe all his commandements, which I command thee this day: then all theſe curſes ſhall come vpon thee, and ouertake thee. Curſed ſhalt thou be in the towne, and curſed in the field, &c. The Lord ſhal ſend vpon thee curſing, trouble, and ſhame, in all that which thou ſetteſt thy hand to doe, vntill thou be deſtroied and periſh quickly, &c. And the Lord ſhall make the peſtilence to cleaue vnto thee, vntill he haue conſumed thee from off the land, whether thou goeſt to poſſeſſe it: the Lord ſhall ſmite thee with a conſumption, and with the feuer, and with a burning ague, & with feruent heate, and with the ſword, and with blaſting and mildew. The heauen that is ouer thy head ſhall be braſſe, and the earth that is vnder thee, iron: the Lord ſhall giue thee for the raine of thy land, duſt and aſhes, euen from heauen ſhall it come vpon thee, till thou be deſtroyed. And the Lord ſhall cauſe thee to fall before thine enemies, &c. Alſo Amos the Prophet ſpeaketh thus: Behold, the eyes of the Lord are vpon the ſinfull nation, and I will deſtroy it cleane out of the earth: neuertheles, I will not vtterly deſtroy the houſe of Iacob, ſaith the Lord. And in the third chapter he ſpeaketh of the houſe of Iſrael, thus: They know not to doe right (ſaith the Lord,) they ſtore vp violence, and robberie in their palaces: therefore thus ſaith the Lord God, an aduerſarie ſhall come euen round about the country, and ſhall bring downe thy ſtrength from thee, and thy palaces ſhall be ſpoiled. And the Prophet Iſaiah pronounceth a fearefull curſe againſt Iſrael for her ſinnes: Behold, (ſaith he) the Lord maketh the earth emptie, and he maketh it waſte: he turneth it vpſide downe, and ſcattereth abroad, &c. Well, to the purpoſe: theſe are the times in which euen through all nations ſinne and wickedneſſe moſt aboundeth. Theſe laſt times are compared to the daies of Noah, and of Lot; in which there was nothing but eating, and drinking, and marying, and building, and a generall ſecuritie poſſeſſed all mens hearts. And Paul ſpeaketh of theſe daies thus: This know alſo, that in the laſt dayes there ſhall come perillous times: for men ſhall be louers of their owne ſelues, couetous, boaſters, proud, curſed ſpeakers, diſobedient to parents, vnthankefull, vnholy, without naturall affection, truce breakers, falſe accuſers, intemperat, fierce, deſpiſers of thē that are good, traitors, headie, high minded, louers of pleaſures, more then louers of God, hauing a ſhew of godlineſſe, but hauing denied the power thereof. Wherefore ſeeing God threatneth his curſe to the diſobedient, and we knowe, that now the whole world is giuen to diſobey God in outragious manner, and Athiſme neuer more abounded: who can not be a Prophet, and make his concluſion of theſe times, that there muſt needes bee plagues and puniſhments in the world, and great troubles? for God is not changeable: but as he threatneth plagues to the diſobedient; ſo his immutable iuſtice will require the ſame.

2. Secondly, becauſe theſe are the laſt times, and Satan ſeeth, that he hath but a ſhort time to continue, therefore he beſtirreth himſelfe, his deſire is to bring confuſions, and to make hauock of al: it is a death to him to ſee gods kingdom to be aduanced, the preaching of his word to haue free paſſage, his name to be glorified in the congregations of his Saints, the clouds of ignorance to be diſpelled, and men that haue long ſat in darkeneſſe, and in the ſhadow of death, now to walke in the true light, and to warme themſelues at the comfortable ſunneſhine of his Goſpel. He doth euen as tenantes doe with their farmes: when their leaſes draw neere an end, then they vſe to rack all things to the vttermoſt, to make monie of euery thing, and to ſcrape vnto themſelues by hooke and by crooke whatſoeuer they can, that afterward they may haue wherewith to maintaine themſelues. Euen ſo fareth it with the Deuill: this is the laſt houre, therefore now he will play reakes euery where, he ruſleth it apace, as though he were wood, he ſtirreth ſeditions, conſpiracies, tumults, warres, and by all meanes with violence he laboureth to ouerlarge his owne kingdome.

3. Thirdly, the Church of God hath alwaies beene ſubiect to the croſſe, and none muſt meruaile if it be ſo: how can the world loue them that hate it, and haue little acquaintance with it, and are on the earth as pilgrimes, wayting euery daie for happie paſſage through the troubleſome ſea of this life, to their owne home, euen to the heauenly citie of Ieruſalem. And how can the prince of the world Sathan loue the faithfull, that hateth God? and how can he ſhew fauour to the members, that bitterly deteſteth the head Chriſt Ieſus? And ſurely, it is the bleſſed will of God, that his children ſhall welter and languiſh vnder afflictions, that they may learne to deſpiſe the world, to know themſelues, to loue God, to ſeeke vnto him, and to ſet their affections, not on things on earth, but on the things that are aboue. He letteth the worldlings haue their hearts eaſe, he letteth them feed themſelues with the pleaſures of this world, and fat themſelues as oxen againſt the day of ſlaughter. With his own children he dealeth after an other manner. He taketh them as it were by the heeles, he flingeth them into a ſea of melting glaſſe, there he lets thē for a time to ſeeth and boile, and in great perplexitie to ſhift for themſelues: at length he draggeth them to the ſhoare, and giueth them eaſe of their former miſeries. And all this is for this end, to ſanctifie and purifie them & to clenſe them of the filthie droſſe of ſinne, and to make them with ioy of heart to praiſe and magnifie his name, for which end they came into this world. And experience teacheth, that as there is a perpetuall intercourſe betweene day and night: ſo there is in the Church of God, not any perpetuall quietneſſe, but trouble and quietneſſe; affliction and eaſe, doe continually ſucceed one another. So that it is verified of the Church: Though ſorrow come in the euening, yet ioy ſhall be in the morning. In the beginning, the Church was in Adams family; and albeit for a time they had proſperity, yet through the malice of Satan, Abel was ſlayne, Adams onely child which feared God.

Before the flood, when Giants were vpon the earth, what miſery was the Church in? how was religion prophaned? what corruption of maners was there when the ſonnes of God married the daughters of them that came of wicked Cain? though the Lord preſerued Noah, and his family, yet pitifull is it, to ſee the daungers in which they were after this: Abrahams family, how was it now at reſt? now in trouble? he beeing oppreſſed with famine, was faine to go downe into Egypt, and there he was in daunger of his life, when he deceiued the King ſaying of Sarah, ſhee was his ſiſter. But afterward, beeing very poore, he was made rich, and the land of Canaan was promiſed him, and he got victory of fiue kings. The propagation of Gods Church was to be preſerued in Iſaac: And ſee now to what a ſtraight it is brought; Iſaac is bound, and layed vpon the altar, Abraham ſtretcheth forth his hand, and taketh the knife to kill his onely ſonne; where now is the Meſſias? where is the promiſed Seed? a man would haue thought, that God would here haue made an end of his Church: but this was to ſhowe what ſhall be the eſtate of the Church, that though in miſeries to mans iudgement it may ſeeme to be deſtroyed, yet God will preſerue it, and gouerne it for euer. This intercourſe of quietnes and afflictions may be ſeene in Iacob, in the children of Iſrael being in Egypt, in the wilderneſſe, and in the land of Canaan. But to let paſſe all other times, this thing is apparant, when the Iſraelites were gouerned by Iudges and Kings: The Iſraelites for the ſpace of eight yeares were in bondage vnder Chuſan king of Aram: by Othoniel afterward they were reſtored to their liberty, for the ſpace of forty yeares. Againe after this 18. yeares togither they were in bondage vnder Eglon king of Moab, and were giuen to filthy Idolatry: after his deceaſe, Ehud gaue them reſt for 80. yeares togither. And ſo vnto the time of Samuel, they were other-whiles in peace, and other-while in trouble: ſo it might be ſhewed through all hiſtories, euen till this day. And therefore no doubt, the Churches of God at this time, if they enioy peace, yet are they continually to looke for troubles and afflictions, and calamities in this

And as all Churches muſt put this in their acounts, that they cannot be free from the Croſſe:ſo, aboue all other muſt this our Church of England. We haue had long peace vnder our gracious Deborah, and no doubt, in Gods good time we muſt drinke of the cup of afflictions: the Prophet Amos ſaith: will a Lyon roare in the forreſt, when he hath no pray? or will a Lions whelp cry out of his den, if he haue taken nothing? And againe, will the Fowler take vp the ſnare from the earth, and haue taken nothing at all? or ſhall a Trumpet be blowen in the City, and the people be not afraid? Manifold and great are the dangers which our Prince hath eſcaped, many aſſaults haue bene made againſt our country. It hath bin in great perill by enemies at home, & enemies abroad: a lingring famin hath this long time afflicted vs. What are all theſe things, and many more: but the roaring of the Lion forth of the forreſt? and the ſounding of the trumpet? theſe things are, no doubt, forerunners of greater iudgements, and except we in England with ſpeede repent, the roaring of the Lyon will not be in vaine: aſſuredly, the Lion will haue his pray. And thus much ſhall ſuffice to declare this point, that in theſe daies we muſt look for manifold afflictions in euery country and kingdome.

Amos 3.4, 5,6.

Worldl. It is well ſaid of you, I con you thanke, I promiſe you, I thinke a man cannot ſpeake a truer word then this that you haue ſaid? for the world is euery where ſo bad, that ſcarce there can be any quietneſſe, or good-fellowſhip among men. Well, I am ſatisfied for this matter: but one thing I will aske you, doe you thinke that there is no more daunger to bee feared the next yeare, then any other yeare.

Chriſt. As I ſaid, ſo I now ſay againe: that afflictions, hurly burlies, ſubuerſions of Kingdomes, are no more to be feared this next yeare, then any other yeare.

Worldl. What reaſon moooueth you to ſay ſo?

Chriſt. This moooueth me to thinke ſo, becauſe I can finde no cauſe of the troubles of this yeare, more then of any other yeare.

Worldl. Nay, there you are deceiued, the ſtrang coniunctions of planets will ſhew their operation this next yeare: and though you will not graunt that they are ſignes of the end of the world, yet you wil confeſſe that they are the cauſes of plague, peſtilence, famine, warres, ſubuerſions of kingdoms, & ſuch like: & by this meanes, wiſemen haue propheſied before of this yeare.

Chriſt. Your ſpeach is full of impietie. For to diuine of things to come, belongeth to God alone, and none muſt be ſo bold as to chalenge this to himſelſe: as the Prophet Eſayah ſheweth. Stand to your cauſe (ſaith the Lord,) bring forth your ſtrong reaſons, ſaith the king of Iacob, let them bring them forth, and let them tell vs what is to come: let them ſhew the former things what they be, that we may conſider them and knowe the latter end of them: either declare vs things for to come. Alſo it is a wicked part, to attribute warres and alterations of kingdomes to the ſtarres, which onely belongeth to God. And Daniel ſaith: God he changeth times and ſeaſons: he taketh away kings, he ſetteth vp kings, &c. And to make warres and peace, is not from any coniunctions of the ſtarres, except the ruling of mans heart may come from the ſtarres, which neuertheleſſe is proper to God: as Salomon ſaith, the heart of the king is in the hands of the Lord, as the riuers of waters: and he turneth it whether ſoeuer it pleaſeth him. Furthermore, betweene the heauens and things below, there is a great ſympathy and conſent, and the ſtarres oftentimes make tempeſts, whirlewindes, drought, continuall raine, and ſo they may be cauſes of ſome diſeaſes, of ſcarcity, and of plenty: but we muſt accompt them onely as inſtruments, which God vſeth to bring to paſſe his counſaile: and this not alwaies, but only at ſome times: For example, whē Dauid was bidden to chuſe of three diuers things which he would ſuffer, he choſe the plague, now, there is not any man (I thinke) that will attribute this plague to the ſtarrs. And the famine which was in Iudea in the daies of Elias, and the want of raine, was not from any conſtellations. Nay rather all theſe things befall vs by reaſon of our ſinnes, and our wickedneſſe is the cheefe cauſe that prouoketh God to powre theſe puniſhments vpon vs, as that bleſſed martyr Maſter Hooper ſheweth, whoſe words I will recite. The pronogſtications (ſaith he) of theſe blinde prophets, are good to be borne in a mans boſome, to knowe the day of the moneth. The reſt of their practiſes is not worth an haw, as Moſes teacheth Deut. 28. Leuit. 26. and Malach. 2. whereas ye may ſee all theſe euills, and many more then the Aſtronomers ſpeake of, come vnto vs for ſinne, and the tranſgreſſion of Gods commandements. It is neither Sunne, nor moone, neither Iupiter, nor Mars, that is the occaſion or matter of wealth or woe, plenty or ſcarcity, war or peace. Neither is peſtilenee cauſed by the putrifaction of the aire, as Galen writeth,) but contempt of Gods commandement is the cauſe as thou maiſt read in the places before alleadged. The aire, the water, nor the earth haue any poiſon in themſelues to hurt their Lord and maſter, man: but firſt man poiſoneth himſelfe with ſinne, and then God vſeth theſe elements, ordained for the life of man, to be the occaſion of his death. Reade the places, and knowe, that good health is numbred among the bleſſings of God, and appertaineth to thoſe that feare and keepe Gods commandements, and not to thoſe that be deſtined to liue long by the fauour and aſpects of planets. And the euill of what kind ſoeuer it be, is the malediction of god againſt ſin. The Phiſitians ſay, that the chiefeſt remedy againſt the peſtilence, is to flie from the place where the aire is corrupt: Gods lawe ſaith, flie whither thou wilt, the Lord ſhall make the peſtilence cleaue and aſſociate thee, till it conſume thee from the world. Againe, in the ſame Chapter, the diſeaſe or ſickneſſe ſhall be faithfull, that is to ſay, ſticke faſt to thee, vſe what medicines thou wilt. Galen ſaith, that the chiefe remedie to preſerue from peſtilence, is to purge the bodie from ſuperfluous humors, to haue a free and a liberall winde, and to auoide the aboundance of meat and drinke. God ſaith, nothing preſerueth, but the keeping of his commandements. If we offend the beſt remedie is, repentance and amendement of life. It maketh no force how corrupt the aire be, ſo the conſcience of man be cleane from ſinne. Though there die a thouſand on the one ſide of thee, and ten thouſand on the other ſide, thou ſhalt be ſafe. Pſal. 90. &c. And now to make an ende, I hope I haue ſatisfied your minde, concerning the yeare next enſuing 88. though I knowe, I am not able to ſatisfie the learned, neither was it euer my purpoſe or my thought.

Worldl. Yea, ſir, you haue indeede: I thanke you for it: I hope I ſhall be the better for your talke as long as I liue: I warrant you I ſhall remember you when you thinke little on me. And becauſe you are now come to Cambridge, if you will, I will beſtowe the courteſie of the towne on you, euen with all my heart.

Chriſt. I thanke you heartely: but the beſt courteſie you can ſhew to me, is this, to releeue the poore, wherein you haue beene faulty.

Worldl. Alas man! what ſhould we doe? the world is hard: but I ſhall not forget you: your ſayings will make me doe more then euer I had thought to haue done. Well ſir, if it doe not pleaſe you to take the curteſie of the towne at my hands, I will take my leaue of you.

Chriſt. The Lord be with you, and with all them that feare his name. Amen.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE WILLIAM LORD RUSSEL, Baron of Thornehaugh: Grace and all good bleſsings from God our Father, and our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

RIght Honourable, as it cannot be but true, which Truth it ſelfe hath vttered: [a] Him that honoureth me, I will honour; no more can it be but ſure paiment which ſuch a creditor hath vndertaken, and not by any ſuretie, but by himſelfe to be performed. Bootleſly had the world beene betruſted with ſuch a charge; which by ſuffering ſome to walke through diſhonour, and by powring out contempt vpon others, vnwittingly ſuiteth the condition of the ſeruants to the caſe of the Sonne, who ſaid: [b] I honour the Father, but ye diſhonour me. Well then is it with vs, that he whoſe bare word is aboue all bonds, hath ſaid, I will honour: not thoſe who by treading downe his honour, honour themſelues, neither whom men honour, nor who honour men; but thoſe who honour him: by [c] louing him as a Father, and fearing him as a Lord. Not that any man can enlarge his honour; the [d] infinite perfection whereof is in it ſelfe vncapable of any acceſsion: nor that any can of himſelfe expreſſe this honour; ſeeing himſelfe [e] worketh both ſuch willes and deedes alſo, of his owne good pleaſure: neither that if any could, he might merit the returne of honour; for all that [f] were but his dutie: nor that if any could and would, he ſhould thereby profit God, to whom [g] mans goodneſſe is not extended: nor laſtly, if any could and would not, God ſhould thereby be diſprofited; for [h] if one be wicked he hurteth not him: but becauſe the Lord, who delighteth to be the portion of Iacob, is pleaſed to accept the broken and homely ſeruice of his children, as an high honour done vnto himſelfe; and themſelues as honourers of him, and ſuch as he (by crowning his owne worke in them) cannot but honour.

But [i] what ſhall be done to the man whom this King will honour? Anſ. If [k] Beltazer King of Babel were to promiſe his higheſt honours: if [l] Haman were to aduiſe Ahaſhueroſh King of 27. Prouinces, in the beſtowing of what honours himſelfe could wiſh or hope: if [m] Pharaoh ſhould call againe his Nobles to conſultation, how to enlarge Ioſephs aduancements: no more could be either promiſed, expected or performed, then that ſuch an one ſhould be arraied with royall attire, as cloath of purple, and fine linnen, with a golden chaine about his necke, the kings Ring on his hand, his princely Diadem ſet vpon his head, and withall by proclamation publiſhed the third man or Viceroy in the kingdome. Which indeede were ſingular aduancements: but yet the higheſt of theſe farre inferiour to the leaſt and loweſt honour, which this King of Kings vouchſafeth to beſtow. For euen thoſe Kings whileſt they enriched and inueſted others with ſuch royalties as belonged to a kind of externall happineſſe, themſelues were exceeding poore and deſtitute of the things truely good; the which (beeing of an higer ſtraine, and of nature internall and eternall) are incomparably and onely the beſt bleſsings. In a word then, thus ſhall it be done, yea [n] this honour haue all his Saints: that beeing borne of God, their deſcent is from the King of glory, all of them Kings ſonnes, all brothers to Chriſt, the firſt borne among many brethren: all younger brothers indeede, but (which is admirable) all [o] Princes apparant, and to the ſame incorruptible crowne of glorie. Tell me now: was it not almoſt the higheſt ſtaire of earthly honour to which Moſes was mounted, when he was called the ſonne of Pha-

But [q] behold what loue the Father beareth vs, that we ſhould be called (not ſeruants any more, but friends, Ioh. 15. 15. nay more) the ſonnes of God. Was it ſuch an aduancement that Dauid ſhould become the ſonne of Saul, a wicked King of Iſrael? and [r] can it ſeeme a ſmall thing to become the ſonnes of the holy one the God of Iſrael? Is it to be reputed a great grace to be nobly deſcended from great men, and backed with the alliance of the mightie? who then can deeme it other, then the top and tower of trueſt Nobilitie, to be (as the beleeuer) ſo neerely allied vnto Chriſt, who ſprouted out of the moſt honourable ſtocke that euer the great field of the earth bare vpon it? vnto which their deſcent, if you adde their whole ſutable eſtate, they will appeare ſo abſolutely glorious, as it ſeemeth no further honour here below can befall them. Whoſe [ſ] garments are the white and vnſtained robes of Chriſts innocencie and righteouſneſſe; their chaine is the golden chaine of their ſaluation, the linkes whereof are deſcribed Rom. 8. 24. their [t] Ring or ſignet is the ſpirit of God, pledging and ſealing vp in their hearts the aſſurance of their ſaluation: their Iewels and [u] ornaments are the graces of that ſpirit, as Humility, Knowledge, Faith, Loue, Hope, &c. their diet more choiſe then that Manna, which was but a ſhadow of this [x] bread which commeth downe from heauen: their miniſters are all the creatures; their attendance are the Angels, not onely going before them and at their heeles, but as a guard [y] pitching themſelues round about them; their Diadem is that [z] crowne of righteouſneſſe, which the righteous Iudge ſhall giue to all them that loue his bleſſed appearing. This is ſuch honour as darkneth all the honour of the world, as the bright ſhining of the Sunne obſcureth the light of the leſſer ſtarres; this cauſeth the heart that hath it to contemne the contempt of the world, and quiet it ſelfe in the holding hereof, as in a choiſe inheritance and a pretious purchaſe.

Now (my Lord) by all that hath beene premiſed, you may behold what goodly grounds your Lordſhips lines are fallen into: whome the Lord hath not onely thus inwardly honoured by putting his feare in your heart, (whereof I might truly relate more then either your Lordſhip would be willing to reade, or my ſelfe (hating euen the ſuſpition of the baſe ſinne of inſinuation) am heartned to write) but alſo in your whole outward eſtate: a great honour is it to be the ſonne of ſo noble and worthie an Earle, as was your father of famous and perpetuall memorie: but that the ſame loue of religion, zeale to the truth, practiſe of pietie, wiſe care of your Countrie, noble and valiant reſolution, bountifull hoſpitalitie and liberalitie ſhould be ſo eminent, and that the beſt part of his better part and vertues ſhould ſo ſeate themſelues in your perſon; this is it which maketh your Lordſhip honourable, not in him ſo much, as in your ſelfe; neither in your ſelfe alone, but (as [a] Samuel was) in the hearts of all the people. Theſe (my Lord) eſpecially of the former kind, are qualities well beſeeming [b] Nebuchadnezzars Nobles. For who are ſo fitted to ſtand before earthly Kings, as they who are often in the preſence of the great King, to whom all Kings are to be countable? or who are ſo worthie to ſtand in the preſence of our earthly Gods, as thoſe whome the God of heauen hath vouchſafed to ſet in his ſight, and gratious acceptance? Whereunto when I haue added how God hath honoured your Lordſhip to be the husband of a vertuous and religious Ladie, the Father of an hopeful heire, the brother of three ſo worthy and religious Counteſſes, (two of whom of late haue receiued the end of their faith, euen their glorie with God, the poſſeſſor of a goodly reuenew: I may well ſay, [c] not many thus noble. Now becauſe to whom much is giuen, much is of them required, and where the Lord ſoweth liberally, there he expecteth a plentifull crop: let your Lordſhip be pleaſed to giue me leaue by writing to ſtirre vp & warne your pure minde, by calling to your remembrance that dutie, which you religiouſly receiued from my mouth (and that not ſeldome) thoſe diuers yeares I employed my paines and poore talents in your Honours houſe, namely, that as either you tender the continuance of the honour, which the Lord hath alreadie powred vpon you; or expect any acceſſe thereunto, ſo you faithfully proceed in the waies wherein honour may redound to the higheſt: perſiſting to honour him with your [d] heart; by giuing it vnto him: with your life; by [e] adorning the doctrine of God: with your counte-

Among other furtherances of your Honour hereunto, may your Lordſhip be pleaſed to receiue this booke, and giue it the reading; after what time I hope you wil not denie it your protection, in regard of it ſelfe: although neither your Honours affection to the Author himſelfe whileſt he liued: neither his loue towards your Honours houſe made knowne to the world, in the dedication of ſundry of his workes vnto the ſame; neither yet my owne dutie (which in many regards as your Lordſhip may iuſtly challenge, ſo my ſelfe am ſtraightly bound alwaies to tender) could ſuffer me elſewhere to ſeeke the ſhelter of this orphane Commentarie. My heartie deſire of the Lord is, that as he hath directed it vnto your Lordſhip, ſo he would alſo direct your Lordſhip by it, and make it as fruitfull vnto your Lordſhip, as it is in it ſelfe, in leading you into all the waies of Gods honour; that as his faithfulneſſe hath honoured you, ſo your faithfull heart may out of ſetled reſolution ſay in it ſelfe: Him that hath thus honoured me, I will ſtill honour: and ſo he who is firſt and laſt in mercies, who [i] giueth to his grace and glorie, ſhall (after your Lordſhip haue many good daies through his grace beene found faithfull before him and your Soueraigne) decke your ſoule with perfect righteouſnes as a Robe, clothe your bodie with immortalitie, crowne your head with glorie, and (in a word) ſhall be all in all vnto you and all his, who beyond all times be bleſſed for euer, Amen.

TO THE CHRISTIAN READER, MVCH PEACE AND proſperitie, from the Author thereof, euen the Prince of peace the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Amen.

SInce it pleaſed the God of light by chaſing away the blacke miſts of popiſh darkenes to reſtore the cleare and ſunne-ſhine light of his glorious Goſpell vnto theſe parts of Europe, he hath neuer beene wanting in raiſing vp moſt faithfull and furniſhed inſtruments, who as golden trumpets haue ſounded out, and like golden Candleſticks haue held forth before his people that great light, euen the word of truth which we preach; wherewith they haue beene mighty through God both by voice and pen, by word and writing; not onely to diſcouer and to detect that Antichriſt, but to ouerthrowe and caſt downe his ſtrongeſt holds: yea and haue by the power of the ſame ſpirit in their mouths, which out of Chriſts owne mouth ſhall moſt powerfully vtterly aboliſh that man of ſinne at the brighteneſſe of his appearing, giuen the beaſt alreadie his deadly wound: yea and by the light haue driuen away that former Egyptiacall darkeneſſe and blind barbariſme wherein men ſate, and could not for many dayes, yea hundred of yeares before ſtirre out of the place wherein the corruption of their nature had ſet them. Witneſſe this truth with me can thoſe incomparable lights of Germany (that I may begin where the Lord began) Luther, Melancthon, Bucer, Oecolampadius, &c. France iuſtly glorieth of her three Worthies, Caluine, Beza, Marlorate: and of her three Nobles, Sadeel, Morney, and Iunius. How happie hath Heluetia beene in her fruitefull gardens, whence ſo many ſweete flowers, ſuch as Bullinger, Lauater, Zuinglius, and others not a fewe haue ſprowted? Yea Italie her ſelfe whoſe ſoyle is a ſtepmother indeed to ſuch plants, hath yet been ſo farre manured by the hand of the good husbandman, that euen from thence two faire branches, neither of them inferiour to the former, Martyr, and Zanchius haue ſprung vp, that as out of the mouth of two witneſſes from among themſelues, their ſentence might be ſealed againſt them. But among the Nations glorious art thou Great Brittayne in this thy greatenes, which as thou haſt ſtripped all theſe thy neighbour nations in other externall beauties: ſo no whit art thou inferiour ~~to them in this honour; yea herein is thy trueſt triumph ouer them, that as peace and truth~~ haue kiſſed each other within thy walls, and as the ſcepter of the Prince of peace hath beene almoſt full fifty yeares vpheld by the ſcepters of Peaceable Princes: ſo thy Seas and Seminaries haue not beene deſtitute of their Iewel, Whittakers, Fulke, Reynolds, Rolock, Sutliffe, Willet, and their late Perkins, whom alone I make mention of, not becauſe either they are alone, or alone worthy; but partly that I may be moderate, and not (as I might) infinite in recitall: and partly for that theſe haue moſt valiantly like Dauids worthies broken through theſe Philiſtims forces, and brought vnto vs in deſpight of them the pure water of the well of life; among whom this our Author laſt named was not the leaſt, nor of ſo ſmall note through the Chriſtian world, that I can thinke by my penne to adde any moment vnto his: whoſe writings ſo ſauory and ſo innocent haue ſufficiently proclaimed his profound knowledge in all learning, his prudent zeale, his mature iudgement, with an admirable dexteritie and facility, yea I may ſay felicitie, (for herein he raigned, that I may vſe the phraſe of the reuerend Deane of his Maieſties Chappel, properly applyed vnto him at his funeralls, which with ſingular approbation he performed) in the direct reſoluing the obſcureſt doubts of Diuinity, and the acute looſing and diſſoluing the hardeſt knots of Papiſts, ſo briefly and ſo perſpicuouſly, as that his moſt polemicall writings, beeing firſt by himſelfe in our vulgar tongue publiſhed, could ſcarce meet euen amongſt our com- mon people, with ſuch an vncapable reader (if any whit chatechiſed) into whom they might not conuey ſome competent conceit and vnderſtanding of the deepeſt and darkeſt differences between the Papiſts, thoſe patrons and defenders of darkeneſſe, and our ſelues. But beſide theſe, ſuch a tongue of the learned had the Lord God giuen him, that he knewe to miniſter, and miniſtred according to knowledge a word in due time to him that was wearie: the which moſt weighty duty of the Miniſterie was ſo familiar vnto him, that he made it his holydayes excercise (as his recreation) to reſolue caſes of conſcience. In his ordinarie Miniſterie how powerfull was he? Which of his hearers cannot confeſſe that he ſpake as one hauing authoritie? Adde now vnto theſe his labours, an holy and harmeles life: for why ſhould I diſioyne them, ſeeing they were ſo happily combined in him? betweene which two (both of them conſpiring to the glory of God, and his cauſe) was ſuch a ſweete harmonie and concent, that in reading his writings any man might ſee the manner of his life, and in ſeeing his life he might alſo therein read his writings: for his life ſpake what his penne writ, and his perſon was the preſident of his written precepts. But when theſe vnweariable labours had quickly worne out ſuch a candle, who ſo freely ſpent himſelfe to giue others light; ſuch a life was not ſhut vp, but by a proportionall, euen a religious and chriſtian death: of the which when God made (with ſome others) my ſelfe a beholder, I could not but conceiue him a meſſenger one of a thouſand, ſingled out by God to giue directions to others, both how to liue, and that well, as alſo in the right manner of dying well, who himſelfe was ſo trained to a bleſſed death, by a holy life; whereby he became both in life and death a moſt happie and bleſſed man, for whoſe written precepts concerning both, the whole Church is bound to bleſſe God with vs: but eſpecially we his ordinarie hearers in Cambridge, who beſides were alſo the beholders of both, cannot be but ſo much the more ſtrengthened and confirmed (our owne heedeleſſe ingratitude not reſiſting or withſtanding vs) by how much the eye is quicker then the eare, and the ſight a more certain ſenſe then can be the hearing. But we will leaue him with God, and omit thoſe worthie works which himſelfe whileſt he liued (according as the relaxation both from the weekly labours of his calling, and the daily weaknes of his body would permit) did publiſh, not onely for the watering of this famous Seminarie where he liued; but euen out of his aboundance and full buckets, to the refreſhing of all the heritage of God, and come to our owne purpoſe. It is not now to be wiſhed; but bewailed rather, that all his workes were not finiſhed by himſelfe before his owne courſe, ſeeing the orphane writings of the learned publiſhed by others are commonly leſſe poliſhed: for ſometimes the Authors minde is not taken, and ſometimes his matter is miſtaken, otherwhiles his forme is inuerted, and not ſeldome either his own elegancies and proprieties which are like goads, are neglected, or ſomthing beſides his own is iniuriouſly inſerted: but yet the Lord hauing looſed him from his labours, the chriſtian care of his executors commendeth it ſelfe to the Church herein, that before it ſhould be depriued of any part of his paines ſo profitably employed, deſirous they are to communicate them, if not altogether in ſuch exact manner as they would, yet as perfectly as they can, contented rather to hazzard the due regard of the author himſelfe, by committing vnto his ſcholers hands the publiſhing of his labours; then that the Church ſhould want them by their holding and hiding them with themſelues. As for my ſelfe, my wiſh was to haue beene ſpared in theſe paines, both becauſe of my owne weekely employments, and that in this place wherein the buſineſſe might haue beene committed to diuers others farre better furniſhed with gifts, and fitted with opportunity then my ſelfe: but eſpecially ſeeing how ſafe and wiſe a thing it is to ſit ſilent where a man neede not ſpeake; and that in theſe dayes, wherein euery mans oare is in euery mans boate, and moſt men are become left-handed in receiuing things which are reached vnto them with the right; to like the 700. left handed Beniamites, whoſe ſole commendation ſeemeth to ſtand in this, that they can throwe ſtones and darts againſt others at a haire-breadth and not faile: yet notwithſtanding conſidering my calling hereunto, as alſo beeing after a ſort reared vp by the Poets rule, not doubting but that the matter following is farre better then ſilence, I was contented, at the inſtant intreaty of the Authors executors, to vndertake the publiſhing of this Epiſtle, which himſelfe had in his heart (if God had giuen him longer time) to haue with his owne hand ſet and ſent out in it owne natiue beautie and perfection: wherein what my paines haue been, they onely knowe who haue fathered other mens poſthumous writings. I haue not troden in their ſteps who make the grounds of the authors ſerue their owne diſcourſes (for ſo ſhould I haue made this expoſition conteining in it the ſumme of 66. Sermons, exceede the meaſure euen of a tedious Commentarie) but in the authors owne, who was wont to tranſcribe out of the notes of ſome of Yea herein imitating not onely the Author of the Commentary, but euen of the text and Epiſtle, the Apoſtle* Iude himſelfe: who perceiuing the men of his dayes quickly waxing wearie of hearing or reading Sermons or Epiſtles, if extended to any length or prolixitie, condiſcended ſo farre to their infirmitie as to contract, and abridge much matter into a very ſhort and ſummarie Epiſtle. Vpon the ſame conſideration alſo haue I ſtudied breuitie, ſo farre as in ſuch multiplicitie of matter I might auoide obſcuritie: hauing herein employed my beſt paines, that it might appeare that though I may haue failed in other complements, yet ſo farre as my endeauour could erect me, not in faithfulneſſe to the author either of the text or Commentarie. The fitneſſe and ſeaſonableneſſe of this expoſition may ſeeme to pleade for the more gracious acceptance of it: which beeing breathed out by the Apoſtolicall ſpirit againſt the heretikes, and hereſies which were to infect, and infeſt the laſt ages of the world, may by Gods bleſſing in the due reading hereof, ſtrengthen the people of God in the land, in diſcerning and reſiſting both the wicked ſeducers themſelues daily ſent in amongſt vs; thoſe Popiſh inſtruments (I meane) who (like ſo many deuills compaſſing the earth) are ſo diligent to compaſſe ſea and land to make carnall Proteſtants Popiſh Proſelytes, and ſo ſeuen-fold more the children of the deuill then they were before; as alſo their diabolicall doctrines which euery where it meeteth withall. Let them out of their malice (as that foule mouthed Franciſcane Feuerdentius, who hath not thoroughout his booke paſſed many lines without ſome egregious lie or other) applie the ſcope of the Epiſtle to blacke the doctrines and liues of thoſe moſt excellent inſtruments of God the reſtorers of true religion, Luther, Caluine, Beza, *&c. yet as a milſtone rolled vp a mountaine, or as a ball toſſed againſt a braſen wall, ſo returneth and recoyleth it vpon themſelues, as this graue Diuine hath thorough this Expoſition in particular diuinely prooued. Reade it (Chriſtian Reader) with diligence, faithfuly conſider and remember what thou readeſt, and the Lord giue thee vnderſtanding in all things, and build thee vp further vpon thy moſt holy faith. # A GODLY AND LEARNED EXPOSITION VPON the Epiſtle of IVDE, explaned in publike Lectures by that reverend man of God, M. W. PERKINS, and now publiſhed for the vſe of the Church of God.

Verſ. 1. Iude (or Judas) a ſeruant of Jeſus Chriſt, and brother of Iames, to them which are called and ſanctified of God the Father, and reſerued to Ieſus Chriſt.

A THe generall ayme and ſcope of this Epiſtle, is partly to declare the dutie of all Chriſtians, and partly to ſet out the corruptions of thoſe, and theſe dayes and times; in both which euery one may receiue edification, who are deſirous either to follow the former, or auoid the latter. In which generall conſideration, note three things concerning this Epiſtle, before we come to ſhew the parts of it in particular.

Firſt the Authoritie, Secondly the Superſcription, Thirdly the Argument or ſubſtance of it.

B First concerning the Authoritie, two queſtions are to be anſwered.

The firſt queſtion, whether this Epiſtle be canonicall ſcripture.

And ſecondly, how we may know the certentie of it.

Concerning the former: Luther and others, who acknowledge it to be a profitable writing, denie it to be Canonicall ſcripture, and alledge foure reaſons.

Obiect. 1. C Firſt they ſay, Iude calleth himſelfe a ſeruant of Ieſus Chriſt, and not an Apoſtle, but all the new Teſtament was penned or approoued by ſome Apoſtle.

Anſ. This hindreth not but that he was one of the Apoſtles, who alſo called themſelues ſeruants of Ieſus Chriſt, as Paul Rom. 1. 1. and Peter, 2. Pet. 1. 1. Secondly, by this reaſon the Epiſtles to the Philip. and Philemon, as alſo of Iames, Iohn, &c. might be reiected.

Thirdly, he calleth himſelfe as much as an Apoſtle.

Obiect. Iude writeth of ſuch things as the Apoſtles themſelues had formerly foretold, verſe 17. Therefore he was no Apoſtle.

Anſ. Iude liued after the Apoſtles Paul and Peter, who with Iohn were the laſt of the Apoſtles, & liuing after their deceaſe (who were the principall) might very well put them in mind of thoſe things they had foretold.

Obiect. 3. In the ninth verſe, he bringeth in a profane Author, concerning the ſtriſe and diſputation between Michael the Archangel, and the deuill, about Moſes bodie, which cannot be found in Canonicall Scripture; as alſo of Enoch the ſeauenth from Adam, out of profane writers.

Anſ. By this reaſon, neither ſhould the Epiſtle of Titus be Scripture, ſeeing Paul makes mention of the profane Poet Epimenides, Titus 1. 12. nor the epiſtle to the Corinthes, where is brought in the ſpeech of Menander, 1. Cor. 15. 33. nor the Actes of the Apoſtles: where Aratus the Poet is cited, Acts 17. 21.

Obiect. 4. This Epiſtle is taken out of Saint Peter from whom this Author hath borrowed both the matter and manner. Therefore this Iude was no Apoſtle, but ſome ſcholer of theirs.

Anſ. If this were ſufficient to prooue this Epiſtle not authenticall, then the whole bookes of Samuel, the Kings, and Chronicles ſhould be caſt out of the Canon by the ſame reaſon: which take the matter from Ciuill Chronicles: Now if it be lawful to take matter out of Ciuil Chronicles, why may not one Scripture be taken out of another? we muſt therefore (notwithſtanding theſe weake allegations) eſteeme this Epiſtle to be the Canonicall Scripture, and the eternall word of God, as our Church, and the Church in all ages hath receiued it. And now in the ſecond place ſee how we may come to be reſolued that it is ſo to be allowed: which we may in this reſemblance. An Indenture betweene man and man is knowne to be ſufficient two waies. Firſt by the matter and contents therein, which plainly ſhewes an acte paſſed, and done: ſecondly, adding and annexing thereunto certaine outward ſignes and teſtimonies, as the hands and ſeales of the parties, the hands and names of the witneſſes corroborating and ſtrengthening the ſame: the firſt is good in it ſelfe (though not ſo confirmed to the parties) without the ſecond: but the ſecond is nothing without the firſt: but if both theſe ſhall concurre and be ſpecified in the Indenture, then it is abſolutely authenticall, both in it ſelfe, and vnto the parties. If this be applied to the Scripture, it ſhall be apparant to be no leſſe ratified then ſuch an Indenture. For firſt conſider but the Contents & matter it ſelfe of it, it will ſpeak the certeinty and truth of it: read ouer the Epiſtle, you ſhall find the whole matter agreed vpon by the Prophets and Apoſtles: and for the teſtimonie, the Catholike and common conſent of the Church, or greateſt part ſince the Apoſtles daies, hath ſet to her hand and ſeale that it is the truth of God, no leſſe aſſured then other bookes of the Canon: which aſſent of the Church, though it cannot make vs, yet may mooue vs accordingly to entertayne it. Beſides, if we conſider the endes, as alſo the effects of this Scripture (which are the ſame with any part of the Canonicall) we cannot but confeſſe that it is the holy and ſacred truth of God, all of it conſpiring with all the other to the aduancing of Gods glorie, and furthering of mans ſaluation. So much of the authoritie of this Epiſtle.

The ſecond point is the Superſcription, which is in theſe words: The Catholique Epiſtle of Iude. This title ſeemes to be prefixed rather by ſome Scribe afterwards, then by Iude himſelfe: firſt becauſe this title (Catholique) was not heard of in the Church wileſt the Apoſtles liued; ſo as it is not ſo ancient as the Epiſtle.

Secondly, the title ſeemes to be vnfit for this and other Epiſtles intitled after the ſame manner, and may be well forborne; as the Epiſtles of Peter are called Canonicall, which are no more Canonicall then others.

Thirdly, moſt of the Poſt-ſcripts are vncerteine, if not falſe: as of that after the ſecond Epiſtle to Timothie: in which Timothie is called an elect Biſhop of Epheſus, and yet commaunded to doe the worke of an Euangeliſt, 2. Timoth. 4. 5. which cannot ſtand together, to be the Biſhop of one place, and alſo vniuerſally to preach vnto the whole world following the Apoſtles, as the Euangeliſtes dutie was: and ſo of others. This title then was not added by the Apoſtle, but by ſome Scribe that copied out the Epiſtle: it is not therefore holy Scripture as the Epiſtle is.

The third point concerning the Epiſtle in generall, is the argument: which doth exhort all Chriſtians to conſtancie and preſeuerance in their profeſſion of the Goſpel. Secondly, to beware and take heede of falſe teachers, and deceiuers which craftely creepe in among them: And thirdly theſe deceiuers are liuely ſet out in their coloures; and with them their deſtruction.

Now concerning the Epiſtle it ſelfe, and the ſpeciall parts of it.

Of it there be three parts; Firſt a Salutation, in the 1. and 2. verſes: Secondly, an Exhortation, from the 3. verſe to the ende of the 23. Thirdly, a Concluſion, from that to the end of the Chapter. In the Salutation conſider three things.

Firſt, the perſon that wrote this Epiſtle Iude.

Secondly, the perſons to whom he wrote: to thoſe which were called, ſanctified of God the father, and reſerued to Ieſus Chriſt.

Thirdly the prayer, ordinarie in Apoſtolicall ſalutations: mercie vnto you, &c.

Concerning the firſt, namely, the writer of this Epiſtle, obſerue three things: firſt his name Iude: ſecondly his office, a ſeruant of Ieſus Chriſt: thirdly his Allyance, and brother-hood, beeing of the kindred of Chriſt himſelfe.

Firſt, of his name, Iude or Iudas, which was the name of two of the Diſciples of Chriſt: the firſt was Iudas the ſonne of Alpheus, the brother of Iames, and ſo neere allyed vnto Chriſt: who was the writer of this Epiſtle. The other was Iudas Iſcariot, or Iudas the traytor, the ſonne of Simon, who could not write this Epiſtle becauſe he died before Chriſt.

In this name conſider two things. Firſt, the occaſion of it, and ſecondly the varietie of his name. The occaſion of this name is ſet downe with the reaſon of it in the 29. of Gen. 35. When Leah had borne 3. ſons vnto Iacob, ſhee conceiued again and bare a forth ſonne, ſaying, Now I will praiſe the Lord, therefore ſhe called his name Iudah, which ſignifieth praiſe or confeſſion: ſo no doubt did Alpheus the father of this Iude, at his birth giue him ſuch a name as might mooue not onely himſelfe, but his child after him to thanfulnes and confeſſion of Gods goodneſſe. So ought euery father in impoſing his childrens names with Alpheus, and euery mother with Leah make ſuch choiſe of names, as themſelues and their children may be put in minde, yea and ſtirred vp to good duties, euen ſo often as they ſhall heare or remember their owne names. The ſecond point in this name, is the varietie of the names of Iude, he was called Thaddeus, Marke 3. 18. and Lebbeus, Mat. 10. 3. all which ſignifie the ſame thing, and all put in minde of the ſame duty. Here two queſtions may be asked. Queſt. 1. Firſt, why was he called by ſo many names? Anſw. Some thinke he had all theſe names giuen him by the people and multitude, as ſignifying all one thing: others (which is more probable) that he was thus called by the Apoſtles themſelues, rather then by his owne

A name, that the horrible fact of Iudas in betraying his Maſter ſhould be vtterly with his name forgotten.

Queſt. 2. A ſecond queſtion is, whither may a man change his name, or no?

Anſwer. If the change thereof be no preiudice to any man; much leſſe hurtfull to the Church or common wealth, nor offendeth the faithfull, but wholly tendeth to the glory of God, and good of men, it may be altered and changed: As Saul a great perſecutor, beeing called to be a publiſher and Patron of the goſpel, changed his name into Paul: as alſo Salomon was at the firſt called by his Mother, Iedidiah: Peter, at firſt called Simon Bariones, Chriſt afterwards gaue him a new name, and he accepted it. Yet hence B the too common practiſe of the world cannot be warranted, who for fraud and deceite doe alter their names: which when it is not intended may warrantably be done: as in time of perſecution in the raigne of King Edward the 6. Bucer changed his name, and both called himſelfe, and ſuffered others to call him Aretius Felinus, ſo did diuerſe other worthy men in thoſe dayes ſeeking no other then the glory of God, and good of the Church in their owne ſafetie: and that the Papiſts not knowing their names might reade their writings without preiudice.

Beza writ two Homilies concerning the ſacrament vnder the title of Nathaniel Neſekius: and Calvins Inſtitutions printed vnder the name of Alcuinus the Maſter of Charles the Great, Ann. 1534.

II. The ſecond thing in the perſon writing is his office: beeing called [a ſeruant of Ieſus Chriſt] C which is not ſo generally to be vnderſtood as ment of euery profeſſor of Chriſt and beleeuer, who is a ſeruant of the Lord Ieſus; but of a ſpeciall ſeruice, namely of Apoſtleſhip, to which he was deputed.

Wherein conſider two things. Firſt, that he was called to bee an Apoſtle and ſeruant of Chriſt to plant the Church of the Gentiles: Secondly, that he did faithfully execute his function, and performed his ſeruice.

Firſt, he pleades his calling; for two cauſes: firſt in regard of others: and ſecondly in reſpect of himſelfe. Firſt that his doctrine might with more attention, and reuerence be receiued of others, ſeeing he run not vnſent but was called, D and that to an Apoſtleſhip; and therefore he ſpake not of himſelfe, but wholly and immediately directed by God.

Secondly, for the confirming and comforting of himſelfe, that the Lord who had called him would ſtand by him, both in protecting his perſon, and proſpering his work in his hand.

Vſe. Seeing the Apoſtle Iude before he writeth laieth downe his calling; ſo ought all Miniſters to make their calling the foundation of all their proceedings, containing themſelues within the compaſſe thereof, euen as they are to teach the ſame dutie vnto all ſortes of men, that they tempt not the Lord, by paſſing the bonds and limites of their calling.

Secondly, in that Iude, though he was of the ſame Tribe, yea of neare allyance vnto Chriſt, yet he paſſeth by all theſe reſpects which he might haue ſtood vpon, and contenteth himſelfe with the title of a [ſeruant of Chriſt:] We learne to make more account, and eſteeme it a greater priuiledge to be a ſeruant of Ieſus Chriſt then to be of the kindred of Kings, and allyed to the greateſt Monarchs of the world: Chriſt himſelfe ſhewes vs what kindred ſhould take vp our chiefe delight, when he turned himſelfe frō his Mother, and Brethren, and beholding his hearers ſaid, thoſe were his mother, ſiſters, and brethren that heare the word of God, and keep it: this alliance in the faith was neuer and dearer vnto him then that in the fleſh. If then thou ſtandeſt vpon thy preferment, ſtriue to be the ſeruant of Chriſt, which is more honourable then to be the ſonne of a King; to be a follower of Chriſt, is more then to goe before the Rulers of the earth. But if thou aske how ſhall I come to this preferment? Himſelfe anſwereth thee, thou muſt giue vp thy ſelfe to heare his word and doe it, that is, learne to know, and obey his will, this is the maine dutie of a ſeruant: endeauour to pleaſe the Lord in keeping faith and good conſcience, thou art in the way of preferment, and art admitted a ſeruant of Chriſt.

Thirdly, If we be admitted the ſeruants and followers of Chriſt, we muſt ſerue no other Maſter, but keep our ſelues from beeing intangled either with the offences, or affairs of the world, as to be vaſſals thereto: no man can ſerue two, much leſſe more maſters of ſuch contrary commaundes. Let none pretend to be the ſeruant of Chriſt, who by louing pleaſure more then God, or ſeeking earth more then heauen, diſgrace ſuch a profeſſion.

III. The third thing in the perſon writing, is the allyance [Brother of Iames] of which name there were two, firſt, Iames the ſonne of Zebedeus, whoſe death is mentioned in the 12. of the Act. by Herod: the ſecond was the ſonne of Alpheus, here mentioned:

Firſt, that he might diſtinguiſh himſelfe from the other Iudas the traytour. Secondly, that he might winne further credit and attention to his doctrine, ſeeing he was no vnknowne perſon, but one that came of the worthieſt ſtock that was vpon the face of the earth; and for this cauſe he mentioneth his brother Iames, who was better knowne, as being the Preſident of the Councell at Ieruſalem, & a choiſe pillar of the church in his time, Act. 15. 13. not to credit himſelfe, but this Scripture (which otherwiſe is in it ſelfe ſufficiently powerfull) by the mention of him.

Now followes the ſecond thing in the Salutation: that is, the perſon to whom Iude wrote, in theſe words [vnto thoſe who are called, and ſanctified by God the father, and preſerued by Ieſus Chriſt] it is, the militant Catholique Church, which is liuely deſcribed to be the nūber of beleeuers diſperſed through the face of the whole world; who are effectually called, and ſanctified, & preſerued vnto life euerlaſting: Out of which deſcription note:

The Scriptures writ properly for the Church, that it might be gathered and ſtrengthened thereby.

A Firſt, who and what they be that are members of this Church: namely, no wicked or profane perſons, but onely the elect, ſuch as are choſen vnto life euerlaſting, who after receiue their calling vnto holineſſe, and therein are aſſuredly preſerued vnto life: which priuiledges no wicked perſon, no vnrepentant ſinner can be partaker of, but onely the Church of the firſt borne, as in Heb. the 12. whoſe names are written in the booke of life, and who receiue daily ſpirituall increaſe: for howſoeuer in the Catholike church there be two ſorts of men profeſſing religion: the one of them that doe vnfainedly beleeue, and are ſanctified; the other of them who make a ſhewe of faith, but indeed beleeue not, but remaine in their ſinnes: of the former B doth the Catholike Church conſiſt, and not of the latter, who are no members ſet into the head of this body, though they may ſeeme ſo to be.

Secondly, this confuteth the Romiſh Church, who teach and hold that a reprobate may be a member of this Church.

Thirdly, that none can be the head of this Church and Catholike congregation but onely Chriſt, for he onely knoweth them, who and where they be thorough the face of the whole earth: not the Pope or any other creature hath any headſhip ouer this company who are giuen and properly appertaine vnto the Son of God.

Fourthly, that this Catholike Church is inuiſible and cannot by the eie of fleſh be diſcerned; C for what eye (except of faith) can ſee or diſcerne the depth of Gods election, or whom he hath effectually called? yea and who can infallibly determine of the things that are within a man? and therefore this is a matter of faith, not of ſenſe, an Article of our beleefe, not the obiect of our ſight, ſeeing faith is an euidence of things not ſeene: which againe ouerthroweth that Romiſh doctrine, which teacheth that the Catholike Church is viſible and apparent vpon earth, and ſo deſtroy that Article of our faith.

Fiftly, that this Catholike Church beeing preſerued by God the Father to life euerlaſting cannot vtterly periſh and be diſſolued: all other congregations and particular Churches beeing mixed, and the greateſt part not predeſtinate, may faile, D yet this cannot be ouercome, Rom. 11. 7. this election of God ſhall obtaine, though the reſt be hardened. The gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt the faith of the Church, becauſe faithfull and true is he that hath ſpoken, & who will preſerue in this Church a ſucceſſion of wholeſome and ſound doctrine, and heauen and earth ſhall be ſooner diſſolued, then one iot of the ſame ſhall faile and periſh.

Obiect. But though that faile not, the Church may fall from that, and ſo faile.

Anſwer. That particular Churches, and of them the moſt famous, haue bene ruined, yea, and fallen away, and ſo may doe, is euident by the Churches of Epheſus, Corinth, Galatia, &c. and no maruell, ſeeing theſe conſiſted euer of mixed perſons, but the Catholike Church conſiſting onely of a number elected and called, though it alſo (not beeing as yet without wrinkle) may erre and faile in ſome ſmaller points: yet beeing preſerued by God to life, cannot poſſibly faile in the maine and foundation.

This doctrine affordeth ſtrong conſolation to the elect of God, both in regard of their frequent falles and infirmities, whereby they might feare to caſt themſelues quite out of fauour; as alſo in regard of the manifold aſſaults and bickerings, which in the world they doe and ſhall endure, whereby they might ſeeme to the outward viewe to periſh: yet the truth is, neither of both neede diſmay them, but that their faith and hope may ſtill be reuiued and ſtrengthened, ſeeing they are preſerued to ſaluation.

Sixtly, here are better notes of a true church then the Papiſts Antiquitie, Succeſſion, Multitude, &c. which can be no notes. Firſt, for Antiquitie: In the beginning was a true Church, but no Antiquitie. Secondly, ſucceſſion failes: for what men ſoeuer are called and ſanctified, are the Church: Thirdly, multitude no note: for if there be a calling and ſanctification of men, there is a Church, be there many or fewe: But the true notes are the meanes of calling to the faith by the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and obedience thereunto, proceeding forward in ſanctification, euen vntill death; without which notes none can truely ſay they are of the Catholike Church: By which we may know the Church of England to be the true viſible Church of God, called and ſanctified in the truth, Ioh. 8. 31.

The Church not tied to perſons or places, but to Chriſts voice.

Now to proceede, we are in the next place to intreate of the order which God obſerueth in bringing men by degrees to life euerlaſting: And firſt of the calling mentioned; which is a worke of God, who of his meere fauour and grace calleth vile and miſerable men out of the world, and inuiteth them to life euerlaſting: to vnderſtand which, we muſt knowe that the calling of God is twofolde. The firſt is generall, when God calles a whole Nation, kingdome, and countrie, that is, when he offers them ſaluation in the meanes; as when he ſends his word amongſt them, affordes them the Sacraments to ſeale the couenant, giues leaue to approach him in prayer; and all this in the Miniſtrie of man, that man might call man: yea when he vouchſafeth priuate meanes farre inferiour to the former, yet often ſeruing for a generall calling, as is the reading of the Scriptures, yea of mens writings, and ſometime reports, as in Rahabs example, and the woman of Samaria: by theſe meanes the Lord generally calleth men, offering, but often not giuing grace offered, in great iudgement turning away from a froward people.

Obiect. If God offer, but giue not grace, it is a deluding of men:

Anſwer. No, for firſt a man was once able to receiue it: ſecondly, hereby he maketh them without excuſe whom he will deſtroy: thirdly, hereby he keepes the wicked in outward order.

Vſe: Conſidering to be called of God is the firſt ſtep to life euerlaſting, and we in this church of England are thus called, it remaines that euery man ſhould anſwer this calling.

Queſtion. Anſwer.

How ſhall this be done? Frame thy heart to anſwer God, as Dauid did when God bad him ſeeke his face: Thy face O Lord will I ſeeke: ſee alſo Marke 9.23,24. of the father of the poſſeſſed child, and Pſal. 40.6.7. when Dauids eare was pearced, he anſwered, Lord, I come: this ought to be the Anſwer of our hearts to the Lords voyce ſounding in the Miniſterie.

The ſecond calling is more ſpeciall, when grace is not onely offered, but giuen alſo by God, through the effectuall working of his ſpirit in our hearts: which is the beginning of grace in vs, he himſelfe laying the firſt foundation of it: by giuing power to receiue the word to mingle it with faith, and bring forth the fruits of newe obedience; for the better conceiuing of the nature of it conſider ſixe points.

Firſt, the ground and foundation of it, namely Gods eternall free election of vs vnto life euerlaſting, as 2. Tim. 1.9. when I ſay free, I exclude not onely whatſoeuer man can imagine within himſelfe as vaine in procuring ſuch good vnto himſelfe, as not of works, ſaith Paul, leaſt any ſhould boaſt; but alſo placing the ground of all our good out of our ſelues in the counſell of God, which the Apoſtle calles his good purpoſe, Rom.8.28. yea to ſhewe the freenes of this grace, it is thence denominated and called the election of grace.

Secondly, the meanes of this calling, which in the Lords hands are diuers; whereof ſome prepare to calling, otherſome are inſtruments of it: as firſt the reading of the Scriptures, ſeruing to beget a generall hiſtoricall faith. Secondly, afflictions in body, goods, name, friends, or otherwiſe tending to humble a man and prepare his heart as ſoft ground. Thirdly, the denouncing of Gods iudgements, and threats of the Lawe which ſends to hell, but giues no grace: theſe are generall preparatiues: others are inſtruments to effect the inward calling, as the preaching of the glad tidings of the Goſpell, which is the moſt principall and effectuall meanes of this ſpeciall and effectuall vocation, and to this Paul aſcribes it, as 2. Theſſ. 2.14. whereunto he called you by our Goſpel: that this is true, conſider a two-fold worke of this Miniſterie, when it is powerfully applyed to the hearts of men. Firſt it openeth the very heart of a man, and laies him out to the beholding of himſelfe, ſhewing him that by his deteſtable ſinnes he hath made himſelfe more vgly in Gods eyes then any Toade can be in mans; whereby he is prepared not to lie aſleepe in this eſtate, but vnto the ſecond worke, which is to apprehend and apply the blood and merits of Chriſt (exhibited in the Goſpell) for the waſhing and bathing of his ſinnefull ſoule, that A ſo he may be ſaued from wrath.

Thirdly, the perſons that are called: thoſe are mentioned, Rom. 30. namely, thoſe whom he had before predeſtinate, thoſe he called: which ſeemes to be expounded in Act. 13.48. So many as were ordained to life euerlaſting beleeued. that is, were called vnto the faith: all therfore are not called.

It pleaſeth ſome to teach another doctrine, namely that God for his part calles all men effectually, and giues them a power to beleeue if they will; but the difference, ſay they, is in the will of man; to prooue which they bring this compariſon. The Sunne ſhines on waxe and clay equally, the waxe is ſoftened, but the clay is hardened. But this is not true out of the Scrip- B tures: for it is not giuen to all to vnderſtand the myſteries of the kingdome, Matth. 13.11. theſe things are hid from moſt of the wiſe of the world, and reuealed vnto babes, Matth. 11.25. Knowledge is giuen to ſome, not to others, and conſequently faith: for they which haue not knowne cannot beleeue.

Fourthly, the time of this calling. The particular time of any mans calling is not reuealed, but laid vp in the ſecret counſell of God, in whoſe hands times and ſeaſons are: yet the extent of the time is large enough though ſtinted, euen the time of this life, ſome at the ſixt houre, ſome at the ninth, & others at the eleuenth, &c. but not after, becauſe that then all meanes of calling of men ceaſe. Now becauſe men knowe not the date of their dayes, it behooues them C out of hand to ſtriue to enter, not to deferre from day to day, alleadging that ſome were called at the twelfth houre, but accept of the Lords call, while it is yet the acceptable time. If the Lord now ſay, Seeke my face, let thy heart anſwer as an Eccho which takes the word out of the mouth, Thy face O Lord I will ſeeke, Pſal. 27.8. ſuch a pleaſant harmony God is delighted with. If he ſay (as the Prophet ſpeaketh) Behold now my people, they are preſently ready to anſwer: Behold now our God; and the rather becauſe the Lord will be free, and not ſtinted by thee, that either he ſhal call thee in thy crooked yeres, or not at al: he wil not be preſcribed extraordinarily to call thee at the twelfth houre, as he D did the theefe on the croſſe, when thou howleſt vpon the bed of thy ſorrow, & gaſpeſt vpon thy death-bed. Therefore while it is called to day let vs heare the voice & harden our hearts no more.

Queſtion. Fiftly, wherin doth this effectual calling ſtand?

Anſwer. Both in the outward and inward calling, becauſe the former is often in the meanes giuen to Nations, people, men, at leaſt to make them without excuſe: but the ſecond beeing ſecret and inward, whereby the Lord makes a mans heart inwardly anſwer the outward calling, poſſeſſeth him with a willing minde ſtedfaſtly to beleeue in the Lord Ieſus, and with an endeauour to pleaſe the Lord in all things: thus is the heart pearced, Pſ.40.6. the heart of ſtone changed into an heart of fleſh, that is, made tractable

Vocantur Electi vel foris, per prædicationem externã: vel intus efficaci operatione ſpiritus.

A and pliable, Ezech. 11. 19. and an heart which is a ſacrifice accepted of God; ſuch a heart was Lydias, Act. 16. 15. when God had opened it, it was heedefull and attentiue to the words of Paul: this heart can reliſh the ſweete promiſes of the Goſpell, and no other.

Sixtly, the excellencie of this calling: which we ſhall perceiue by theſe conſiderations. Firſt, in that it is a great worke, as was the creation of man at the firſt, Rom. 4. 18. ſo the Apoſtle maketh it, 2. Cor. 4. 6. he that at the beginning called light out of darkeneſſe, the ſame hath ſhined in our hearts, &c. that as God calls the firſt time and dead creatures come forth to life: ſo with no leſſe powerfull voyce the Lord calls the heart of man dead in ſinne, and it is quickned with the life of God. B

Secondly, this effectuall calling goes beyond the worke of our creation: for here a man is taken out of the firſt Adam, and ſet into the ſecond, and at the ſame inſtant power is giuen to beleeue, beeing in time both together, though in order faith is firſt, and then ingrafting, wherein is not onely a bare priuation as in the creation when God called things that were not, as though they were: but here is a plaine reſiſtance and rebellion, God calling not onely things that are not, but things that would not and refuſe to be. Thus to raiſe a man out of the blood of Chriſt, is more then to raiſe Eue out of Adams ſide; to raiſe a dead ſoule from the death of ſinne farre more glorious and powerfull then to raiſe a dead bodie from bodily death; to raiſe a man to ſupernaturall life, farre greater then to a naturall onely. C

Thirdly, this calling ratifies all our couenants with God. Men in their Baptiſme enter couenant with God, but often ſtart from it, and will not ſtand to it, ſo as the couenant is only made: but when as a man is effectually called, the couenant is not onely made but truely accompliſhed, and that on mans part.

Vſe. Seeing we are called of God himſelfe in the miniſterie of the word, (for Paul calles it Phil. 4. 14. an high calling) we muſt labour to ioyne the inward calling with it which is higher then that, by hauing firſt a griefe becauſe we cannot beleeue: ſecondly, a readie minde: thirdly, an endeauour to beleeue: fourthly a ſorrowe becauſe we beleeue no more, and faile ſo much in the ſeruice of God; which if we want we muſt labour for them; and if we haue them be thankefull vnto God for them. D

2. Vſe. Learne the duty laid downe by the Apoſtle, Epheſ. 4. 1. that we ſhould walke worthie of our calling. To doe which, firſt we muſt look that we frame our liues holily; being holy in our conuerſation as he that hath called vs is holy. Secondly, there muſt be the ſame ende of our liues which is of Gods calling, that is, to bring vs to heauen. The ende of our beeing in the world, is to be called out of the world, and (as Abraham) to obey God, as looking for a city in heauen not made with hands.

Sanctification followeth effectuall calling.

Now we proceed to the ſecond ſtep of life eternall, which is ſanctification: this name is taken from the Latines, and by it is vnderſtoood Regeneration, renouation, new creation, and to be ſanctified is to be made holy and be born anew. That we may the better know this grace conſider ſundrie points.

Firſt, what ſanctification is: It is an inward change of a man iuſtified, whereby the image of God is reſtored in him. For the opening of which deſcription, marke that firſt I call it a change of a man, to put a difference betweene it and ciuill conuerſation, which is a gift of God likewiſe as this is, but farre different from it; becauſe this onely reſtraineth the corruption of the heart, whereas ſanctification reneweth the heart: and thus the gifts of God are of two ſorts: firſt, reſtraining, which doe keepe in the wickedneſſe of the heart, ſuch as are all ciuill vertues. Secondly, renuing or altering the mind, which not onely repreſſeth but aboliſheth corruption; of this kind is ſanctification.

Secondly, I call it an inward change, namely in the minde, will, affections, as working vpon the inward corruptions and luſts of the heart: to diſtinguiſh it from outward ſanctificatiō which a wicked man may haue, whereby he reformeth his outward man and cariage by the miniſterie of the word, ſuch are they whom the Apoſtle ſpeakes of Heb. 10. 27. which tread vnder their feete the blood of Chriſt, whereby they were ſanctified, namely externally: this is of another kinde working the inward change of the heart.

Thirdly, I adde of a man iuſtified; for two cauſes: firſt to ſhew that iuſtification and ſanctification are two diuers gifts of God, and their difference may appeare in three things: firſt, in that iuſtification is out of a man; ſanctification is within him. Secondly, iuſtification abſolues a ſinner, and makes him ſtand righteous at the barre of Gods iudgement; ſanctification cannot doe this. Thirdly, iuſtification brings peace of conſcience; ſo doth not ſanctification, but followeth that peace.

Thus the Apoſtle hath them diſtinct, 1. Cor. 6. 11. Ye are waſhed, ye are iuſtified and ſanctified: as alſo 1. Cor. 1. 30. Chriſt is made to vs righteouſneſſe and ſanctification. Secondly, becauſe iuſtification goes with ſanctification, though iuſtification be before in nature, yet they are wrought at the ſame time. For when God accepts a mans perſon, then is he made iuſt, who is alſo ſanctified. Fourthly, I ſay the image of God is hereby reſtored, the which that we may know wherein it conſiſteth, conſider the threefolde eſtate of man; the firſt of innocencie, the ſecond after the fall, and the third vnder Chriſt. Firſt, in innocencie man had three things: firſt, ſubſtance of bodie and ſoule: ſecondly, the faculties of ſoule, as reaſon and vnderſtanding: thirdly, the image of God ſtanding in the conformitie of the whole man, to the will of God. Secōdly, in the ſtate after the fall, man hath two

A of theſe: firſt, ſubſtance of bodie and ſoule: ſecondly, faculties as before. But the third is wanting, ſtanding in righteouſneſſe and holineſſe, and in ſtead of it is originall ſinne, which diſtempereth and diſordereth the whole man, his minde will and affections, and carieth him againſt the will of God. In the third condition vnder Chriſt we haue three things: firſt, ſubſtance of bodie and ſoule: ſecondly, faculties of the reaſonable ſoule: thirdly, a newe created holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, before loſt, but now reſtored by grace aboue nature; and this is a renewed conformitie to the will of God, and the image of God againe reſtored.

Religion rectifieth affections, but aboliſheth them not.

Where note that ſanctification is ſuch a gift B of God, as changeth the man, not the ſubſtance of bodie, or the faculties of the ſoule, but the corruption, diſorder, and ſinneſulneſſe of man, it rectifyeth, but aboliſheth not affections: if a man be of ſad diſpoſition, it neither increaſeth nor taketh away, but moderates his ſorrow and keepes it in order: ſo if a man be of a merrie diſpoſition, it depriues him not of his mirth, but corrects it that it exceede not: ſo in Choler, and other complexions. Then thoſe that feare to labour in their ſanctification, becauſe then they muſt be ſolitarie, ſad, and cannot be merrie, and thoſe that thus obiect againſt thoſe who endeauour ouer their owne reformation, may ſee themſelues deceiued, ſeeing it onely tempereth the affections to ſuch moderation as becōmeth holineſſe.

Queſtion.

The ſecond point is, Whence haue we our ſanctification? whether from our Parents, or from what originall.

Anſwer.

No it cannot flow from the parents, no although they be holy; *Ioh. 1. 13. the newe birth is not of blood, nor the will of fleſh, nor of man: for parents muſt be conſidered two waies: firſt, as they are men, children of Adam. Thus they bring their children, and conuey no more to their children then Adam did, which ^nature, together with the corruption of it.

*Who can bring a clean thing out of filthineſſe? there is not one.

Obiect.

Holy parents haue no ſinne, for it is mortified in them, therefore they cannot deriue it to their children.

Anſwer.

Notwithſtanding their ſanctification they D conuey the nature and ſinne of Adam: which comes thus to paſſe. God in the beginning gaue this law, that whatſoeuer Adam receiued, he ſhould receiue it for himſelfe and his poſteritie; and whatſoeuer he loſt, he ſhould loſe it from himſelfe and his poſteritie: by vertue of which law parents ſanctified bring forth children vnſanctified, which may appeare by this compariſon. Take wheate, and make it as cleane as you can, ſowe it, and it will come vp not as it was ſowen, but in ſtalke blade and eare, and it brings vp as much chaffe as euer it did, though none were ſowen with it; what is the reaſon herof, but onely the order ſet in nature by God at the firſt? So parents, let them be neuer ſo holy, by vertue of the former law bring forth vnholy children.

Secondly, parents muſt be conſidered as holy men, ſonnes of the ſecond Adam by a ſecond birth: and thus they produce not their children, nor deriue their holines into thē, although their holines may be a meanes to bring them within the Couenant.

Whence note that the ſoule of the child is not deriued from the ſoule of the father, as the bodie is from his bodie, for then ſhould they haue the ſame properties with the ſoule of the parents: ſo euery regenerate man ſhould deriue a regenerate ſoule vnto the infant, which is falſe not onely in many examples, but in that originall ſinne infecteth euery infants ſoule, aſwell of the beleeuing as vnbeleeuing parent.

Queſtion.

But if ſanctification be not from the parent, whence is it?

Anſwer.

From Chriſt, who is made of God vnto vs ſanctification, 1. Cor. 1. 30. Coloſſ. 1. 19. In him are hid all the treaſures of it, of whoſe fulneſſe we receiue grace for grace, Ioh. 1. 16. wherein two further points are to be knowne: firſt, what thing in Chriſt is the roote of our ſanctification: namely Chriſt his holines as he is man, euen as Adams vnrighteouſnes is the roote of our corruption.

Secondly, that ſeeing he is the roote of our ſanctificatiō, it is neceſſarie there be a coniunction and vnion betweene him and vs, before we can partake of his holineſſe, and it is the bond of faith which knits vs as members vnto him the head: in which regard the Apoſtle ſaith, he is made of God our ſanctification, 1. Cor. 1. 30. that is, the root and author of it.

A third point is, the meaſure of our ſanctification, which is but in part giuen vs in this life, the moſt regenerate man beeing partly fleſh and partly ſpitit, appearing in this compariſon: Take a veſſell full of water, let a portion be taken out and an equall portion of hot water put in, it becomes luke-warme all of it, partly hote, and partly cold: euen ſo euery man is a veſſell of water filled with corruption to the brim, if a part of his corruption be taken away, and a proportional part of holineſſe put in ſtead of it, the whole man becomes partly holy, partly vnholy: of which we haue an example in Moſes, Num. 20. 8. 9. who in ſmiting the rock ſo as the water guſhed out, bewrayed the mixture of faith with vnbeleefe in the ſame action; he takes the ſtaffe, therein he obeyed God; but he ſtrikes the Rocke twice, beeing commanded onely to ſpeake to it, and therein he diſobeied, for which the Lord was angrie.

A fourth point is, touching the parts of ſanctification, which may be diuided two wayes: firſt it is diuided into mortificatiō & viuificatiō.

The firſt diuiſion of ſanctification.

Mortification is a part of ſanctification, whereby the power, tyrannie, and ſtrength of originall ſinne is weakned, and alſo by little and little aboliſhed, which be conſidered to be not in one part onely, but throughout; ſo as when one part of originall ſinne decaieth, ſo doth alſo the reſt, the ground of which is the vertue and efficacie of Chriſts death: which if any aske what it is,and what power it can haue ſince it is ended? I anſwer, it is that power of his Godhead whereby on the croſſe he ſuſtained his Manhood, and ſo made his death a ſatisfaction to the iuſtice of God for mans ſinne.

Queſtion.

It will be further asked, how come we to be partakers of this vertue of Chriſts death, and to feele the power of it in our hearts?

Anſwer.

So ſoone as any man by faith begins to be vnited vnto Chriſt,his death is applyed vnto him, ſo that by means of our cōiunction with Chriſt, we as truely partake of that power of his, as he himſelfe was on the croſſe ſuſtained by it: then he feels ſinne wounded in him and dying daily, to which he cannot liue as before.

The ſecond part of ſanctifycation, is viuification, or quickning, and it is when Chriſt dwels and raignes in our hearts by his ſpirit; ſo as we can ſay, we henceforth liue not,but Chriſt in vs: the foundation of which is the vertue of Chriſts reſurrection:which is nothing elſe but the power of his Godhead raiſing his Manhood, and freeing him from the puniſhment and tyrannie of our ſinnes: this power is conueied from him, vnto all his members, who beeing myſtically conioyned with him,are thereby raiſed from the graue of their ſinnes.

The ſecond diuiſion.

The ſecond diuiſion is taken from the faculties of man: which are ſeauen in number: 1.The Minde: 2. Memorie: 3. Conſcience: 4. Will: 5. Affections: 6. Appetite: 7. The life it ſelfe.In all which this grace of God muſt appeare.

Minde.

1. The Minde is that part of man which frameth the reaſon: this Paul calleth Epheſ. 4. 5. the ſpirit of our minde,which muſt be renewed; the ſanctification of which is called, Reuel. 3. the eie ſalue; it is a grace clearing the darke minde and dimme vnderſtanding: containing in it theſe three things. Firſt, ſauing knowledge, 1. Cor. 2. 12. whereby we knowe the things giuen vs of God. Some will ſay, what be they? Anſ. This knowledge may be referred to two heads. The firſt is the knowledge of God. The ſecond is the knowledge of our ſelues. The former of theſe hath two branches: firſt, that knowledge of the true God, which is life euerlaſting, Ioh. 17. 3. Secondly, to knowe the mercie of God in Chriſt to my ſelfe in particular, Epheſ.3. 18. This is to knowe the height, length, and depth of the loue of God to me in ſpeciall; as that God the Father is my father; God the Sonne my Sauiour:God the holy Ghoſt my Sanctifier:this is the ſauing knowledge of God.

The ſecond head of this ſauing knowledge is to knowe a mans ſelfe, when he ſees the ſecret corruptions of his heart againſt the firſt and ſecond Table: to ſee and to feele this is a worke of grace, and an argument of an heauenly light enlightening the ſoule.

The ſecond thing in the ſanctification of the minde(is after the knowledge of theſe) to approoue the things of God: that is, to minde and meditate on things ſpirituall, Rom. 8. 5.to ſauour the things of the ſpirit, namely, things pertaining to the kingdome of God. Contrary to the practiſe of them whoſe glorie is their ſhame, yea whoſe end is damnation,Phil.3.19. who minde earthly things.

The third thing is a ſetled purpoſe in the minde, not to offend God in any thing, but to endeauour the doing of his will, and the pleaſing of him in all things: this is called the turning of the minde, and is the ſubſtance of true repentance.

Memorie.

2. The Memory: the ſanctification of it,is an aptneſſe by grace to keepe good things,ſpecially the doctrine of ſaluation, by which Dauid was preſerued from ſinning, Pſal. 119. 11. and Mary pondred things concerning Chriſt, and laid them vp in her heart, Luk. 2. 15.

Conſcience.

3. The ſanctification of the Conſcience is an aptneſſe to teſtifie alwaies truely that a mans ſinnes are pardoned, and that he preſerueth in his heart a care to pleaſe God, 2. Cor. 1. 12. This teſtimony was Pauls reioycing: and Hezekias comfort on his death-bed was the teſtimony of his conſcience of his vpright walking before God: yea this conſcience is apt alſo to checke and curb vs when we encline to euill: ſo Dauid ſaith, Pſal 16. his reines did correct him in the night ſeaſon: and to ſtirre vs vp to good as the voyce behind vs ſaying; Here is the way, walke in it, Eſay 30. 21.

Will.

4. The Wil is ſanctified whē God giues grace truely to will good; as to beleeue, feare, obey God; when a man can ſay, that though he find not to performe that which is good, yet to will good is preſent with him,Rom.1.18.This is much accepted of God: for where the minde and other faculties faile in their dutie, then comes this will and ſupplies their want, which beeing willing to doe much more then it can,the Lord of his mercie accepts it for the deede it ſelfe.

Affections.

5. For the Affections, ſome of them concerne God, ſome our Neighbour, and ſome our ſelues. Sanctified affections concerning God are firſt feare of God, when a man ſtands in awe of Gods preſence, and in regard of his Commandements. Secondly, a contentment and quietnes of minde in all conditions of life, when a man at all times can ſubmit his will vnto the will of God, Iob 1. The Lord hath giuen and taken away, bleſſed be his name: and Dauid Pſal. 39. 2. I held my tongue and ſaid nothing, becauſe thou Lord didſt it. Thirdly, loue to God in Chriſt and to Chriſt in man, 2. Cor. 5. 14. Rom. 9. 3. Fourthly, an high eſtimation of Chriſt and his blood aboue al things in the world:Phil.3.8.I count all things dung for Chriſt.

Secondly,the affections towards our Neighbour is to loue him,becauſe he is Gods child in my iudgement,1.Epiſt.Ioh.3.14. and in Chriſt my brother.

Thirdly, concerning our ſelues, to haue a baſe eſtimation of our ſelues in regard of our knowne ſinnes and corruptions: Paul cried out that he was the head of all ſinners: ſo the prodigall ſonne; I am not worthie to call thee father: Dauid; Haue mercy on me according to the multitude of thy mercie.

Appetite.

6. The ſanctification of Appetite ſtands in the holy ordering of our deſires in meate, drinke, apparell, riches, &c. and in the practiſe of three maine vertues: firſt, Sobriety: ſecondly, Chaſtity: thirdly, Contentation: by which the appetite muſt be gouerned.

Life.

7. Sanctification of life ſtands principally in three things: firſt, in an endeuour to doe the will of God, that herein we may teſtifie our thankfulneſſe. Secondly, in teſtifying our loue to God in man. Thirdly, in deniall of our ſelues: which is, firſt, when we hold God to be wiſer then we are, that ſo we ſhould be both directed and diſpoſed of by him. Secondly, when we account him more carefull for vs, then we our ſelues can be, and ſo reſt wel ſatisfied with what condition of life ſoeuer he ſets vs in. Thus are we to practiſe this grace through our whole conuerſation: for we may not meaſure it, nor iudge of it by one action good or bad; but look to the whole courſe of life, if that be good, the heart is ſanctified.

V.

The fifth point is, how ſanctification is here aſcribed to God the Father, ſeeing all outward workes are common to the whole Trinitie. Anſ. Sanctification is attributed and that truly to all the three perſons, who haue all ſtroke in the worke of it, but diuerſly. The Sonne ſanctifieth by meriting ſanctification; the holy Spirit ſanctifieth by working it and by creating the new heart; the Father ſanctifieth by ſending his ſonne to merit, and giuing his ſpirit to worke it. And here the worke is thus aſcribed vnto him, as beeing the ground and firſt author of it.

Vſe. Labour for the ſpeciall grace of God. The meanes we are to vſe is laid downe in Rom. 6. 1. to the 14. verſe, namely, to beleeue that we were crucified with Chriſt, buried with him, yea and roſe againe with him; becauſe he was vpon the croſſe, in the graue, as alſo in riſing from thence in our ſtead and roome, ſuſtaining our perſons vpon him: this is the foundation of our holineſſe. Some will aske how this can be a ground of our holineſſe? I make it plaine in this compariſon: As a Traitour arraigned, and hanged according to law, is then freed from his fact, the Iudge ceaſeth to puniſh him, and he ceaſeth to be a Traitour, committeth no more miſdemeanour; ſo the ſinner beeing arraigned at the barre of Gods iuſtice, and attainted of high treaſon, is according to Gods lawe condemned and executed in Chriſts condemnation and execution, is now as a dead man vnto ſinne, and cannot thenceforth liue thereunto any more.

Now follows the third degree of life eternall, in theſe words [and reſerued to Ieſus Chriſt.] The meaning of which words is plain in the 1. Epiſt. of Peter, the 1. 5. where he ſaith, that the elect are kept by the power of God vnto ſaluation: in the adding of which words to the former, we are taught that with the gifts of true faith, calling and ſanctification, is ioyned vnſeparably the grace of perſeuerance vnto the end: of which truth we will conſider foure maine grounds.

4. Grounds to prooue the perſeuerance of the Elect.

The firſt ground, is the election of God: that is, his decree whereby he ſetteth ſome apart to life. This decree is as vnchangeable as God himſelfe is: and as election is vnchangeable, ſo is the fruite of it in vs, in reſpect of the ground: & hence followeth it that faith and ſanctification are vnchangeable. Rom. 8. 3. the predeſtinate are glorified. Matth. 24. 24. the exception ſheweth it impoſſible the elect ſhould be deceiued.

The ſecond ground is the promiſe of God in the Euangelicall couenant, which is largely propounded in Ierem. 32. 40. where is promiſe made of two things: firſt, the Lord promiſeth that he will not turne from them to doe them good, which is a promiſe of eternal mercie, ſhewing the pardon of ſinne, being once giuen, is giuen for euer. Secondly, that he will put his feare into their hearts, there is promiſed continuance of faith and ſanctification, for they ſhall not depart from it.

The third ground, is the office of Chriſt: in it conſider firſt his Prieſthood, ſecondly his kingly office. Firſt, he was a Prieſt, partly to offer ſacrifice, partly to make interceſſion for euery beleeuer, for ſo he did for Peter, Luk. 22. 32. that his faith might not faile, and not onely for him, but as appeares in that worthy prayer recommended in Ioh. 17. for all the Diſciples, & not for them onely, but for all beleeuers through their word. The ſame requeſt is in that Chapter repeated thrice. Secondly, for his kingdome; as he is the head of his Church, his office is 1. to kepe all that are giuen him vnto life, Ioh. 10. 28. I giue vnto them life: and none can plucke them out of my hands. 2. To giue ſpirituall life to his members, Rom. 6. 8. 9. If Chriſt the head died but once, and liueth for euer, then all his members die but once to ſinne, and after alwaies liue to righteouſneſſe: for this life admits of no corruption neither in nor out of temptation.

The fourth ground is the qualitie of grace, as of faith, ſanctification, &c. whoſe nature is to endure to life euerlaſting: for he that once beleeues, remaines euer a beleeuer, 1. Ioh. 3. 9. He that is borne of God ſinneth not; becauſe the ſeede remaineth in him. Now if that remaine whereby he is borne of God, himſelfe muſt alſo ſtill remaine borne of God, vpon which foure grounds we may perſwade our ſelues of the gift of perſeuerance.

Obiect.

It is alledged, nothing is vnchangeable but God, and therefore grace is changeable.

Anſwer.

Euery gift is changeable in it ſelfe, ſo man in himſelfe conſidered may fall away: but God hath promiſed a ſecond grace confirming the firſt, by vertue whereof a man cannot fall away.

Obiect.

It will be further ſaid, that the child of God when he falleth into a grieuous ſinne,(as Dauid did)is guiltie of death,and therefore is not iuſtified,and conſequently falleth away.

Anſwer.

When Dauid fell he was guiltie of death, but onely in regard of that ſinne into which he was now fallen,al his former ſinnes being pardoned: yea that ſinne alſo was pardoned (though not actually to him before his repentance) yet in Gods counſell: ſo as that ſinne beeing on Gods part pardoned, he remaines ſtill in the fauour of God.

Obiect.

But in time of perſecution many fall away.

Anſwer.

If any fall quite away they neuer had true faith: which ſtands in three things; 1. Knowledge: 2. Aſſent: 3. Apprehenſion of Chriſt. The two former they might haue, but the third was wanting vnto them. Againe, thoſe that fall off in perſecution, if they haue true faith, they fall not wholly, becauſe the ſeede of God remaines in them;not finally,becauſe in time they ſhall returne vnto the Lord againe.

Obiect.

But this Doctrine leades men to ſecuritie.

Anſwer.

No, it leades a man from ſecuritie vnto a new life and watchfulneſſe: ſeeing grace is added vnto grace to keep vs in the ſtate of grace.

Vſe.Firſt,in that the gift of peſeuerance is ioyned with true faith; I gather that the doctrine of the Papiſtes is not of God,but a doctrine of deuils, which teacheth that he which is choſen of God, who hath true faith, and is iuſtified, may in regard of his preſent right fall away: for how can that be if he that be choſen be called, ſanctified, and preſerued vnto life?

Secondly, it is falſe that a man truly iuſtified may loſe his grace, ſeeing with iuſtification is ioyned preſeruatiō:neither that which teacheth, that a true beleeuer may fall wholly,though not finally, is true.

Thirdly, thoſe alſo are deceiued who thinke that mans ſaluation is pinned vpon his owne ſleeue, and hangeth vpon his owne will; for God would haue all ſaued, Chriſt died for all, the holy Ghoſt giues grace to all: why then are ſome ſaued, ſome not? It is (ſay they) from their owne will, grace in ſome preuailes againſt fleſh, and they are ſaued; but fleſh againſt grace in the other, who therefore are damned: but this Scripture ſhewes that to be but a deuice of man, ſeeing whoſoeuer are once elected,are called, ſanctified, and preſerued to life;and what malice is able to reſiſt this will of God.

2. Vſe. Note here the vnſpeakeable goodneſſe of God in the worke of Regeneration; in that he not onely giues a new life,but preſerues it in vs. Adam once had this life of grace betruſted vnto him and had it in keeping, but he quickly loſt it from himſelſe and his poſteritie. Now God hath reſtored this life againe to beleeuers; but that they might be ſure of it he will now keepe it for them himſelſe.

And reſerued vnto Chriſt]that is, to be preſented and ſet before Chriſt, and that partly in the day of death,partly in the day of iudgement holy and without blame, Epheſ. 5. 27. Whence note: firſt, beleeuers need not feare the day of death or iudgement; nay rather they may reioyce in it, as the day of their redemption, yea and of triumph. What an honour was it for Pharaohs daughter to be preſented to Salomon, and Heſter to becom the ſpouſe of Ahaſueroſh? much more glorie is it for the faithful thus to ſtand before Chriſt at that day.

Secondly, we muſt, all our life long prepare & fit our ſelues to be preſented as pure ſpouſes to our Bridegrome: both theſe duties are laide downe. Reuel.19. 7. Be glad and reioyce, for the marriage of the Lambe is come, and his wife hath made her ſelfe readie. This preparation ſtands in two things: firſt, we muſt betroth our ſoules to Chriſt: this is done when God giues Chriſt, and we receiue him by faith, cleaue vnto him alone, depend on him as the ſpouſe vpon whome her ſoule loueth. Secondly, we muſt beautifie our ſoules hauing giuen them to Chriſt: this is done when the holy Ghoſt ſanctifieth the ſame, & we daily labour in the renewing of our owne hearts.

Thirdly,we muſt hence be ſtirred vp to prayer for this gift of preſeruation to life euerlaſting, and reſeruation to Chriſt, hungring for grace after grace, to be ſtrengthened in temptation, eſpecially in this laſt and declining age, wherein the Goſpell takes little place in our hearts.

V. 2. Mercie vnto you, and peace, and loue be multiplied.

In theſe wordes is laide downe the third point in the ſalutation; namely, the prayer vſually obſerued in Apoſtolicall ſalutations. In which firſt he prayeth for three things; mercie, peace, and loue. Secondly, that theſe may be multiplied; that is, continued and increaſed in and vpon them. Firſt, of the multiplying of mercie:The mercy of God towards the creature is taken in Scripture two wayes; generally, and ſpecially: Gods generall mercie is that, whereby he is inclined to helpe the creature in miſerie, Luk. 6. 36. Gods ſpeciall mercie (called riches of mercie, whereby he will haue mercie on whome he will,Rom.9. 15.) is that, by which is granted pardon of ſinne,and acceptance in Chriſt to life euerlaſting:and for this he prayeth in this place. Now becauſe this ſpeciall mercie cannot be multiplied in it ſelfe,being infinite in God, as himſelfe is infinite, therefore by mercie we muſt vnderſtand the fruites and effects thereof. And for our better inſtruction herein,three things are to be conſidered.

Gods mercy in Chriſt as ſet in the firſt place,ſo to be ſought for aboue all things in the world.

Firſt,that mercie is asked in the firſt place,before peace and loue: teaching vs,that the mercie of God in Chriſt is to be ſought for aboue all things in the world. Pſal. 4. 6. Many ſay, who will ſhew vs any good? but Lord lift thou vp the light of thy countenance vpon vs. Pſal. 119. 77. Let thy tender mercie come vpon mee, that I may liue. This is the foundation of all bleſſing.

A Secondly, note the perſons for whom hee thus prayeth, To you:] that is, as in the firſt verſ. to thoſe who were called, ſanctified, and reſerued to Chriſt; not for vnbeleeuers, vnrepentant, and Apoſtatates: whence we learne, firſt, that a man iuſtified, ſanctified, and made heire of life, cannot merit any thing at Gods hands: for merit and mercie cannot ſtand together, and he that ſtill ſtands in neede of mercie, can neuer merit: which doctrine muſt be maintained againſt the Romane Church, which teacheth, that a man may put his truſt in the merit of his works, ſo he doe it ſoberly. Secondly, that men effectually called and ſanctified, becauſe they ſtill ſtand in neede of mercie, muſt be in their owne eyes ſtill vile and miſerable. Abraham beeing B to ſpeake to God, tearmes himſelfe duſt and aſhes. Iacob acknowledged that he was leſſe then the leaſt mercie. Iob cries out that he was vile, and abhorres himſelfe. After theſe examples we muſt euer keepe our hearts as emptie veſſels, readie to receiue more mercie.

Thirdly, note the meaſure of mercie asked; he praies for continuance and increaſe of mercie to thoſe who had alreadie the riches of mercie. Whence we learne, firſt, that all the good we haue, or can doe, is of meere mercie; not onely for the beginning and continuance, but alſo for the increaſe thereof: as grace is no grace, vnleſſe it be euery way grace; ſo alſo of mercie. Which takes away all conceit of merit, ſeeing mercie filleth vp all the roome, and leaues no C place for merit. Secondly, that the Apoſtle here alſo confirmeth the former grounds of our perſeuerance: for by this prayer, grace is to be added to the former graces, yea multiplied: ſo the Lord dealeth, not giuing ouer when he hath giuen one grace: for firſt, he giues his ſeruant power to beleeue: ſecondly, he giues an execution of this power. Neither there giues ouer, but by a third grace giues continuance of that power: yea, and addes a fourth, which is an execution of that continuance. Thus he deales with all true beleeuers, not onely in reſpect of faith, but of obedience alſo: Phil.2.13. God worketh both the will and the deede. Phil.1.6. *He that hath be*D*gunne this good worke in you, will performe it vntill the day of Chriſt.* So as this may well be called a multiplication of grace, ſeeing euery beleeuer hath one grace more then Adam had: he had power to obey; ſo the renewed haue. Secondly, he had the act of obedience; ſo they alſo haue. Thirdly, he had power to perſeuere; which they likewiſe haue: but he had not the act of perſeuerance; which they hauing, therein farre excell him.

The ſecond thing deſired in the prayer is peace; namely, the peace of God, whereof he is the author: and it is the vnitie and concord of man with God, and with the creatures. Touching this peace, note three things; the foundation of it, which is Chriſt the ſecond Adam; euen as the firſt Adam was the author of diſcord and enmitie, Eph.2.14. Secondly, the manifeſtation of it; this peace is offered in the preaching of the Goſpel, which therefore is called the glad tidings of peace, Rom. 10. 15. and the Miniſters of it, the Embaſſadors of peace, 2.Cor. 5.20. Thirdly, the kinds of this peace, it is twofold: firſt, betweene perſon and perſons: ſecondly, betweene perſon and things. The former hath ſixe heads: I. Peace betweene man and God, the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt, properly called reconciliation, whereby God in Chriſt is at one with man, and man thorough Chriſt at one with God, of which when man is once perſwaded in his heart, then comes this peace, Rom. 5. 1. from which ſprings another, namely, tranquillitie of minde, when the minde is quieted in all things that befall, without grudging or impatience, and that becauſe it is the reuealed will of God, Phil.4.11. II. Peace with the good Angels, Eph.1.10. for men beeing at peace with God, the Angels are become ſeruants and miniſtring ſpirits vnto them, Heb.1.14. III. Peace with a mans ſelfe, conſiſting in two things: firſt, when the conſcience ſanctified ceaſeth to accuſe, and in aſſurance of Gods fauour beginneth to take his part, to excuſe, and ſpeake for him before God. Secondly, when the will, affections, and inclinations ſubmit themſelues to the enlightened minde: of which if either be wanting, man is at warre with himſelfe, and the peace of God ruleth not in his heart, Coloſſ. 3.15. IV. Peace of true beleeuers among themſelues, who before they beleeued were as Lyons, and cockatriſes, Eſa.11. 6. but now in the kingdome of Chriſt, haue put off that ſauage nature, and become peaceable; as Act.4.32. the number of beleeuers were all of one heart. V. Peace of the faithfull with profeſſed enemies; namely, when they endeauour to haue peace with all men, Rom. 12.17, 18. not requiting euill with euill. VI. Concord of the enemies themſelues, with the true Church: for often the Lord reſtraineth the malice and rage of his enemies, and inclines them to peace. Thus Iacob and Ioſephs family were preſerued in Egypt, and Daniel was brought in fauour with the chiefe Eunuch, Dan.1.9.

The ſecond branch of this peace, is when all things, and creatures conſpire and agree for the good of the godly. This is called good ſucceſſe; promiſed Pſalm. 13. Whatſoeuer the righteous man doth, it ſhall proſper.

Vſe. Firſt, in that mercie is firſt asked and then peace, we are by the order taught that peace and good ſucceſſe are grounded on mercie: ſo as men for the moſt part, take a prepoſterous courſe, who would haue good ſucceſſe in health, wealth, peace, honour, learning, &c. in that they ſeeke it out of aſſurance of mercie in the pardon of ſinne: whereas this ground muſt firſt be laid as the foundation of all bleſſing and good ſucceſſe.

Secondly, we muſt endeuour that this peace grounded vpon mercie, may haue place in our hearts, that we may haue boldnes in regard of God,

A God, comfort in our conſciences, peace with our brethren, quietneſſe and contentedneſſe in all conditions of life,&c. This peace ſhall preſerue our hearts in all things, Phil. 4.7. This was Dauids ſecuritie in the middeſt of his enemies, and danger of death, he would now lie downe in peace, becauſe the Lord did ſuſtaine him, Pſalm. 4.ver. 8. This grace preſerueth the heart vndanted in many afflictions, euen as a ſouldier that takes the enemies Enſigne, cares for no blowes or woundes ſo he may carrie a way the Enſigne: ſo he that preſerues the peace of God in his heart, makes light of afflictions, ſeeing he holdeth that which counteruaileth all of them.

B The third grace deſired in the prayer is loue, which is a moſt excellent vertue, preferred [a] before faith and hope, in ſome reſpects, and made [b] the ende of the commandements. Loue is diuerſlly taken in the Scripture; ſometime it ſignifieth the loue of God to the creature: and ſometime, the loue of man to God and man; and ſo it is taken in this place, beeing ſet after mercie and peace as a fruite of them.

b 1.Tim.1.5.

In the handling of this vertue conſider three points in generall, before we come to the ſpeciall parts of it: Firſt, what this loue is; The loue of God and man is a certaine diuine and ſpirituall motion in the heart, cauſing it to be well pleaſed in the thing loued, and moouing it to C affect communion therewith: in theſe two conſiſts the nature of true loue to God and man.

Secondly, Whence hath loue his beginning? A. Not from nature, for the [c] wiſedome of the fleſh is enmitie with God: yea there is in euery mans nature a diſpoſition to hate God and man when occaſion is offered; let the naturall man ſay neuer ſo often he loueth God, herein he lieth and deceiueth himſelfe: for vrge him to frame and conforme himſelfe vnto the word wherein he ſhould teſtifie his loue, here his wicked heart hating to be reformed, reſiſteth plainly, ſaying, I will not haue this man to rule ouer me, I deſire none of his waies. This loue then comes from grace, 1. Ioh. 4. 7. Loue commeth from God, Tim. 1. 5. it hath his beginning from D a pure heart, true faith and good conſcience. Which muſt be maintained againſt the Papiſts, who ſay that nature affordeth the inclination, but grace the practiſe; wheras indeed grace giueth both.

c Rom.8.7.

Thirdly, conſider the vſe of loue; It is the inſtrument and companion of true faith, which worketh by loue, Gal. 5. 6. The proper worke of faith is to lay hold on Chriſt, this faith as a hand can of it ſelfe doe; but when it commeth to the practiſe of morall duties, it can no more work without the grace of loue, then a hand (which can lay hold alone and of it ſelfe receiue and retain) can cut any thing without any inſtrument. Whence it appeareth, that faith in iuſtification is alone, but in the life of man it worketh by loue: and whereas it hath bin taught for many hundred yeares that loue is the life of faith, that is vntrue, for it onely teſtifieth that faith hath life. It is alleaged, that as the bodie without the ſpirit is dead, euen ſo faith without workes is dead: therefore workes are the ſoule, and giue life to faith. But this conſequence from this compariſon is not good, becauſe the ſoule is not properly the ſoule of the bodie, but of the man, and ſo it prooueth not that loue is the ſoule of faith. Againe, the word Spirit there betokeneth the breath, without which the bodie is dead, and thus is the compariſon to be returned; that as breath maketh not a man liuing, but ſheweth him to be aliue, ſo loue maketh not faith liuing, but teſtifieth it ſo to be; yea indeed is the fruit and effect of faith, as breath is of life.

Iam.2.26.

More particularly this grace of loue is twofold: firſt, that whereby man loueth God: Secondly, that whereby man loueth man. In the former note two points: firſt, what it is; namely, a motion of the heart, whereby it is affected to God, cauſing it to be well pleaſed in God, and his works for himſelfe; as alſo to ſeeke fellowſhip with God ſo much as it can. Secondly, note the meaſure of this loue, which in Scripture is double: firſt, that which the lawe requireth, and that is the full meaſure of loue, loue in the higheſt degree, when man loueth God with al his ſoule, with all his ſtrength, and all the powers of the whole man, ſo as in man no loue can be aboue it; vnto this all men are bound, yet no man ſince the fall can attaine. Secondly, that which the Goſpel deſcribeth, ſtanding in an vnfained wil, and true endeuour to loue God, with all the heart, all the ſtrength, and all the powers; which is a ſmaller meaſure then the former, yea and a qualification and moderation of it, yea to none but thoſe that are in Chriſt. Whereby we com to the right vnderſtanding of diuers places of Scripture; as 2. King. 23. 25. of Ioſiah: 2. Chron. 15. 15. all Iudah ſought the Lord with their whole heart. Theſe and ſuch other places muſt be vnderſtood as they are qualified by the Goſpell, in that they willed and endeuoured by all good means to ſeeke God; yea this text alſo muſt be vnderſtood of this ſecond meaſure, ſeeing the former beeing in the higheſt degree, cannot bee multiplied, no not if men were glorified.

The ſecond kinde of this loue is that whereby man loueth his neighbour: which is a certaine diuine and ſpirituall motion, cauſing the heart (as the former) both to be well pleaſed in man for God, (that is, becauſe he is Gods image and his owne fleſh) as alſo to powre out it ſelfe and communicate goodnes to his neighbour, in wiſhing, ſpeaking, and hoping the beſt of him. Wherein by the way obſerue a plaine difference betweene faith and loue: faith is a hand, but to pull Chriſt to our ſelues: loue is a hand alſo, but opening it ſelfe and giuing forth vnto others.

In this loue of the neighbour conſider theſe three things: 1 firſt, the order of it: The order that hath beene taught for many hundred yeares is, that firſt we muſt loue our ſelues, and then others, from this ground, Thou ſhalt loue thy neighbour as thy ſelfe; for the rule (ſay they) muſt go before the thing ruled. But this is not ſound, ſeeing worthy men haue beene commended in Scriptures for louing others as well, yea and better then their owne ſelues; ſo Dauid loued Ionathan, 1. Sam. 20. 17. Chriſt loued his enemies better then himſelfe; theſe began not with themſelues: yea indeed the right beginning of loue is in God, and then as a man is a more principall inſtrument of Gods glorie, he muſt be for God preferred in our loue aboue our ſelues. Thus euery man is bound to loue and preferre the life of his Prince aboue his owne; ſee the perfect rule of direction herein, Ioh. 13. 34. 2 Secondly, note the manner of it, ſet downe in that precept: Thou ſhalt loue thy neighbour as thy ſelfe: that is, as we are cheerefull, and free to practiſe the duties of loue to our ſelues, ſo muſt we doe it to others: for this precept aimeth at the manner, rather then the rule of our loue to man; for that is, as Chriſt hath loued vs. 3 Thirdly, the kinds of it: it is two-fold: firſt ſingle, when men loue others, but are not repaid with loue againe; yea when a man loues his enemie, but is not loued againe. The ſecond is mutuall loue, that is, when loue is requited with loue, called in Scripture brotherly loue; ſee Phil. 2.2. 1 Cor. 1. 10. when men are of one iudgement, like minded, ſpeake one thing; and one ſoule is as it were in many bodies.

The ſecond point is the multiplication of loue which the Apoſtle prayeth for vpon good ground, becauſe it ioyneth man to God, and man to man, and ſo becommeth as it is called the bond of perfection, the bond of the Church, Common-wealth, and of all ſocieties. 1. Cor. 13. Loue edifieth, that is, it helpeth to build the kingdome of God, yea it conſtraineth men to all good duties in their particular callings. Qu. But how ſhall this loue be multiplied? Anſ. By certaine meditations, and practiſes. The meditations are many; firſt on Gods commandements: Be ſeruants one to another in loue, Gal. 5. 13. Secondly, of Gods image, which all men ſhould beare in loue, 1. Ioh. 3. 16. Thirdly, of the fellowſhip of the faithfull, hauing all one father, one brother, one ſaluation, all linked by one ſpirit, Epheſ. 4.4. Fourthly, of the loue of God, Ioh. 13. 35. which hereby we ſhall be aſſured of, 1. Ioh. 3. 14. The practiſes alſo are diuers: firſt, we muſt labour to be aſſured of Gods loue to vs, and encreaſed vpon vs, Epheſ. 5. 2. Secondly, the law of nature muſt teach vs to doe as we would be done vnto. Thirdly, our care muſt be more to loue, then be loued: for to loue is a vertue in our ſelues, to be loued is the vertue of another. Fourthly, pray daily for multiplication of loue towards God and man, yea towards our enemies; ſeeing the more this is multiplied the happier is our eſtate, yea and the condition of the Church vpon earth.

v. 3. Beloued, when I gaue all diligence to write vnto you of the common ſaluation, it was needfull for mee to write vnto you that yee ſhould earneſtly contend, for the faith which was once giuen vnto the Saints.

Here begins the ſecond part of this Epiſtle, which is the Exhortation, reaching to the end of the 23. verſe. In this verſe two things are contained. Firſt, the cauſes which mooued the Apoſtle to write the Epiſtle. Secondly, the matter of his exhortation. The cauſes of his writing are three. Firſt, his loue, noted in the word Beloued. Secondly, his readie and willing minde of himſelfe, noted in the word diligence, which ſignifieth a carefull endeuour and ſtudie to do the Church good, and it is enlarged by three arguments: firſt, in that he gaue all diligence, and not ſome part onely, to further the Church. Secondly, when he could not ſpeake to the Catholike Church, he gaue diligence to write. Thirdly, he writeth not of ſmall matters, but of things moſt weightie, ſuch as concerne their ſaluation: againſt which ſeeing it might be obiected, that he was not able to write of ſuch a weightie matter, he therefore calles it common ſaluation to cut of that ſurmiſe, as alſo to ſhewe that it is common to himſelfe and the whole Church, of which therefore hauing a ſhare therin he is not ignorant.

3 The third cauſe in the word [needfull] a neceſſitie was laid vpon him in that he was called to bee an Apoſtle, and ſo bound to further the ſaluation of the Catholike Church.

Out of theſe three motiues which cauſed the Apoſtle to write, obſerue; 1 Firſt, that euery Miniſter that would deliuer the word faithfully muſt haue three things to excite him thereto: firſt, loue towards the Church, to which he is called. Secondly, a readie minde to further the ſaluation of their ſoules. Thirdly, the bond of his calling, ſtirring him vp to faithfulneſſe and diligence. All theſe three concurred in Paul: firſt, his loue appeared, 2. Cor. 5. 14. Secondly, his readie mind was not wanting, Phil. 2. 17. Thirdly, for his calling that vrged him, ſee 1. Cor. 9. 16.

2 Note hence alſo, that whoſoeuer would heare the word, or reade it to ſaluation, muſt bring three things in his heart: firſt, a loue to the word deliuered: This cauſed Dauid often to muſe thereupon, Pſal. 119. 97. Secondly, a readie and diligent minde to receiue and retaine it: this was in the Bereans, Act. 17. 11. and in the Galathians, when they receiued Paul as an Angel of God, Gal. 4. 14. Thirdly, a conſideration of the great neceſſitie of hearing, and reading the word; Prou. 29. 18. Where viſion failes, the people periſh.

3 Thirdly, in this example of the Apoſtle, all Paſtors muſt learne diligence in all good meanes for the furtherance of the ſaluation of their flock: for which cauſe they are called Watchmen, becauſe they are to watch ouer their ſoules. Yea Sauiours, Obadiah 21. to put them in minde, that they are to be the meanes of ſauing men. They had not neede then be entangled with many charges: and other buſineſſes.

4 Fourthly, as the Apoſtle writeth of the [cōmon ſaluation] of which he hath good experience; ſo euery Miniſter muſt ſee that he haue experience in himſelfe of that he teacheth others; and haue a taſt of that in his owne heart which he would haue others ſeaſoned withall, elſe his teaching ſhall be colde.

The ſecond part of this verſe is the exhortation: the whole matter and ſubſtance may be reduced to three heads. Firſt, that faith is a notable treaſurie, which hath many enemies. Secondly, that the Saints are the keepers of it. Thirdly, that the office of euery member of the Catholike Church is to hold and maintaine this treaſure. For the firſt, that faith is a treaſure, appeareth 2. Pet. 1. 1. where it is called pretious faith: 2. Cor. 4. 7. a treaſure in earthly veſſels; and by this, that a fight is here inioyned againſt the enemies of it. For the clearing of which, conſider two things: firſt, what it is. Secondly, who be the enemies of it, againſt whom we muſt fight; and them we ſhall ioyntly obſerue with the ſeuerall grounds of faith. For the firſt, this faith is nothing els but the holeſome doctrine of the Goſpell, called by Paul to Titus 1. 1. the truth according to godlineſſe. So 1. Tim. 4. 1. this faith, which many ſhall denie, is oppoſed to the doctrine of Deuils. Now for our more orderly proceeding, we muſt conſider that this doctrine of faith admitteth a diſtinction, which Paul himſelfe maketh 1. Cor 3. 11. 12. Some doctrines are of the foundation, without which religion cannot ſtand ſuch as are ſet downe Heb. 6. 1. Others pertaine to the foundation but are not of it, as gold and ſiluer built vpon the foundation: It ſhall not be amiſſe here to ſtand awhile to ſet downe the holeſome doctrine of ſaluation which is fundamentall, reduced by the Apoſtle to two generall heads, Faith and loue. The wholeſome doctrine of faith, containes things needefull to be beleeued. The wholeſome doctrine of loue containes things neceſſarie to be practiſed. And both theſe are expreſſely ſet down in Scripture, as we ſhall ſhew in order.

2. Tim. 1. 13.

Grounds of doctrine to be beleeued.

1. Ground.

Firſt, that all doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles is giuen by diuine inſpiration: 2. Tim. 3. 16. All Scripture is giuen by diuine inſpiration: that is, all the doctrine both for matter, ſtyle, and words of Scripture is deliuered by the inſpiration of the holy Ghoſt. Hence it followeth that all Scripture is authenticall, as hauing the authoritie from God, yea & muſt be beleeued as if God from heauen ſhould ſpeake, without diſputation, or calling any part of it into queſtion. This ground muſt firſt be laid. If it be ſaid the Scripture may be prooued by reaſon, and by the generall conſent of the Church. Anſ. That is vntrue, for reaſon cannot ſettle the conſcience to beleeue in any point. But Scripture telleth there is a God, which reaſon prooueth. Anſ. Reaſon out of nature teacheth there is a God, but by the word of God onely I doe beleeeue it: inducements to faith may be brought out of nature, but Gods word onely cauſeth true beleefe. Secondly, for the authority of the Church; I beleeue not becauſe the Church ſaith ſo, but becauſe the Scripture ſaith it: and the Church I beleeue ſo farre as ſhe conſents with the word, and ſpeaketh out of it.

The aduerſaries of this ground againſt whom we muſt fight.

Firſt, the Turkes, and Turkiſh religion, who denie Scripture to be giuen by inſpiration, and denie the bookes of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and in ſtead of them ſtand to there Alcaron. Secondly the Iewes, who refuſe the bookes of the new Teſtament. Thirdly the Atheiſts, who will beleeue nothing of all this. Fourthly, the painted aduerſarie the Papiſt, who vndermines this ground; firſt, ſaying that the Hebrew and Greek text is corrupted, ſo as we may not build vpon it, that thereby they might bring their Latin Bible into credit as moſt authenticall; and yet (that they might make the ſentence of their Church the rule of faith) the moſt learned of that Church hold that the Latin Bible is alſo corrupt; ſo indeed they couertly renounce all Scripture, that the ſentence of the Church may haue the chiefe ſtroke. Secondly, in teaching that the authoritie of the Church in regard of vs, is aboue the Scriptures, becauſe we knowe not the ſenſe thereof, but by the Church; Thus putting downe the true and principall ground of Scripture, that they might more eaſily ſet vp their owne dotages.

Papiſts enemies to Hebrew and Greeke.

2. Ground.

The ſecond ground concerneth the ſufficiencie of Scripture, and is this: The Scripture of the Prophets and Apoſtles is a perfect rule of faith and manners: It is of all men to be beleeued or done to ſaluation. 2. Tim. 3. 16. The Scripture is profitable to teach, improoue, correct, inſtruct in righteouſneſſe, to make the man of God abſolute, yea perfect in euery good worke. If it make him perfect in all kind of teaching, it is alſo able much more to make euery man perfect to all the duties of his calling; Gal. 1. 8. If an Angell ſhould teach otherwiſe, that is, diuers or beſides, though not contrary to that which is taught, he ſhall be accurſed; many doctrines indeed of Arts and other things are diuers and beſides it: but the meaning is, that no doctrine of ſaluation muſt be brought, no not beſides it, therefore the bookes of the Prophets and Apoſtles containe a perfect rule.

Many things which cannot be found in Scripture may be ſupplied by tradition? Anſ. Traditions can neuer ſetle the conſcience, for though diuerſe of them are found in the writings of the Fathers, yet they were ſubiect to errour, and ſo might and did erre in them.

Aduerſaries of this ground to bee contended with.

Firſt, all men by nature; Iob. 22. 14. Who ſay to the Almightie, Depart from vs, for we deſire not the knowledge of thy waies: yea our common Proteſtants, who in iudgement acknowledge this rule, yet in their life they leaue it, & take the leaden rule of natural reaſon, ſenſe, ſight, and feeling, and fewe there be that liue by faith.

The myſtery of iniquitie ſupported by a myſticall Scripture.

Secondly, the Romiſh Church, for firſt, they make the written word a thing ruled by ſetting vp another Rule: ſaying, that there are two kindes of Scripture: The firſt is inward, written in the heart of all Catholikes, which is the vniuerſall conſent of the Church: The ſecond is outward, written by the Prophets and Apoſtles, an inken ſcripture (ſay they) and a dead letter without the former. Whereas the cleane contrarie is true, the true rule beeing the Scripture of the Prophets and Apoſtles: and the other in the heart in this life, but an imperfect patterne drawne according to the former. 2 Secondly, they ouerturne the ground, in ioyning to the written word vnwritten traditions; ſo making it but halfe a rule, and indeed as good no rule: but where are theſe traditions? In the writings of the Fathers they ſay: But how ſhall we know them to be Scripture? Becauſe the Fathers ſay ſo: But how ſhall we know they ſay true? Here muſt they flie to man, whereof yet no man can aſſure vs. 3 Thirdly, in teaching that the true ſenſe of Scripture cannot be found without the churches determination, and ſo indeede make it no rule, becauſe a right rule both ruleth it ſelfe, & is plaine to rule other things alſo.

3. Ground.

The third ground is: There is one true God. By one, I meane one in number, not two: 1. Cor. 8. 6. To vs there is but one God, that is, to the Church, to vs that looke to be ſaued: which is plain by this reaſon, for there can be but one infinite, and if there were two or moe Gods, there ſhould be two or moe infinites, which is impoſſible.

Aduerſaries to this ground.

Firſt, the common Proteſtant, who in iudgement holdeth one God, yet in heart and life he ſetteth vp two or moe: ſome riches, ſome pleaſure, ſome one ſinne or other: for where a mans heart is, there is his God. Paul ſaith, ſome make their bellie their God: and that the Deuill is the God of the world.

Poperie a monſter of many heads; ſetteth vp many gods.

Secondly, the maine Enemie is the Popiſh Church, which in word holdeth one God, but diuers waies ſet vp diuers Gods. As firſt the Pope himſelfe, who (by their reformed Canon law) is to iudge all, and to be iudged of none. Who maketh himſelfe a forgiuer of ſinnes and that properly: yea, a maker of lawes to binde conſcience aſwell as Gods laws, which is horrible blaſphemie. Secondly, the Virgin Mary, whom they make a Goddeſſe as Chriſt a God: as Chriſt a King, ſo her a Queene; as he a Lord, ſo her a Ladie: yea they ſet Chriſt below her, whom they deſire to commaund her ſonne by the right of a mother: yea and in ſome of their reformed Seruice bookes, they truſt in her for ſaluation.

Thirdly, the Saints whom they pray vnto; wherein they attribute vnto them the knowledge of the ſecrets of mens hearts, and omnipreſence, for they muſt alſo bee in all places; which are things proper vnto God alone.

4. Ground.

The fourth ground is, that God is all-ſufficient in himſelfe. Gen. 17. 1. I am all-ſufficient: that is, he hath in himſelfe all perfection: for firſt, he taketh beeing from none, but giueth beeing to all. Secondly, for ſubſtance he is a Spirit of perfect nature. Thirdly, euery way infinite, in regard of time, place, attributes. This may well be called a ground, for whoſoeuer placeth any want or imperfection in God, denieth God, and maketh him no God.

Aduerſaries hereof.

Firſt, the common people, who conceiue a God made all of mercie without his iuſtice.

Papiſts rob God of his mercie and iuſtice.

Secondly, the Papiſt, who robbeth God of his perfection two waies: firſt, they attribute an imperfect iuſtice vnto him, namely, ſuch a one as may be ſatiſfied by mans ſatiſfaction. Secondly, an imperfect mercie, whereof our owne merits muſt make a ſupplie: teaching that indeede Chriſt muſt make vs iuſt: but wee muſt make our ſelues more iuſt and merit ſaluation.

5. Ground.

Anſwer.

The fifth ground is: There be three in heauen, the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt, and theſe three are one God, 1. Ioh. 5. 7. How can it be that three are one God? Anſ. It is a myſterie, which the ancient Church anſwereth thus; They be three in perſon and one in ſubſtance; ſo we alſo ſay they be three in manner of ſubſiſting, but one in nature and Godhead: Three they be diſtinguiſhed in perſon, the Father not beeing the Sonne, nor the holy Ghoſt, and ſo in other perſons, three ſubſiſtences in one nature. Ioh. 17. 2. This is life euerlaſting, &c. This is a ground becauſe we muſt worſhip one God in in three perſons, neither can we aright thinke of God out of the Trinitie.

Aduerſaries of this ground.

Papiſts become Antitrinitaries.

Firſt, Heretikes innumerable whoſe memorie is accurſed; as Arians of former and latter times, denying the Godhead of Chriſt. Secondly, the Turke and Iew, who hold an abſolute God out of the perſons. Thirdly, our common people, who pray to ſuch a God in their owne names out of the Sonne and holy Ghoſt. Fourthly, the Popiſh Church, which denieth by their doctrine the three perſons: for he that denieth the Sonne, denieth the Father and holy Ghoſt, 1. Ioh. 2. 23. Now they denie the Sonne both in his natures aboliſhing his Manhood in their doctrine of the Sacrament, as alſo his offices of King, Prieſt, and Prophet, for which we muſt vtterly ſeparate from them.

The ſixth ground is: That nothing commeth to paſſe without the ſpeciall decree, will, and prouidence of God. Matth. 10. 23. A ſparrow falleth not to the ground without his will. Obiect. Sinne is againſt Gods will, and therefore commeth to paſſe without his will. Anſ. That which is againſt the will of God is not without his will. Queſt. How can this be? Anſ. No ſinne commeth to paſſe but God decreeth the permitting and beeing of it, now to permit ſinne and the beeing of it, is neither the cauſing of ſinne, nor the doing of it, but the not hindring of it, to which he is not bound. This ground being denied chance will be brought in, and God himſelfe denied.

7. Ground.

The ſeauenth ground is, That God hath choſen ſome men before the world was, to be partakers of the riches of his mercies, and paſſed by others becauſe it was his will. Rom. 9. 18. He will haue mercie on whome he will. Epheſ. 1. 4. 1. Pet. 2. 9. Some are a choſen generation, and therefore ſome are not choſen. Againe, whome he will he hardeneth: he hideth the myſteries of the kingdome from ſome: why? becauſe his pleaſure was ſuch, Matth. 11. 25. And of this there is good reaſon, for in nature the firſt cauſe ordereth the ſecond cauſes, and not the ſecond the firſt. Now Gods will is cauſe of all cauſes; which therefore muſt rule all as the ſupreame, and not bee ruled by any other. That this is a ground appeareth, 2. Tim. 2. 19. The foundation of God remaineth ſure, the Lord knoweth who are his: and indeed none other can bee the ground of grace and happineſſe vnto vs, then the counſaile of God in electing vs, called therefore of the Apoſtle a foundation.

Aduerſaries hereof.

Firſt, our common people that thus abuſe this doctrine: If I bee choſen to ſaluation, I ſhall be ſaued, therefore I may liue as I liſt. They might as well reaſon thus; The tearme of my life is ſtinted, none can lengthen or ſhortten it, I will therefore neither eate nor drinke, nor vſe Phyſicke, nor other meanes of prolonging my daies: which what were it elſe but to murther the bodie? So theſe from the ſame ground become murtherers of their ſoules; whereas men choſen to the end, will preſſe after the meanes and conclude otherwiſe, and ſay, I will vſe meanes that I may come to life. Secondly, others more learned are aduerſaries to this ground, who teach, that God for his part hath choſen all men to life; and for his part would haue all ſaued, and that Chriſt for his part hath redeemed all, and the holy Ghoſt giueth or offereth grace to all. If we aske, why then are not all ſaued? They anſwer, becauſe God foreſaw thoſe who would beleeue, whome he appointed to ſaluation: hee foreſawe alſo others who would not beleeue, and adiudged them to damnation. But by this doctrine ſhall Gods will hang on the will of man, and be ruled by it, ſeeing he would haue men ſaued, but man will not; and ſo this ground is in part raſed.

The eight ground is: That God made the heauens and the earth, and all things that haue being in them. Col. 1. 16. By him were created all things which are in heauen and in earth. This is a principle; for if creatures had no beginning, then are they become Gods; which would ouerthrow the Godhead. But all things were not made beſides God. For the higheſt heauen the Throne of God is eternall as God himſelfe is. Anſw. The Throne of God is a creature as well as the reſt: Hebr. 11. 10. He looked for a citie hauing a foundation, whoſe builder and maker is God. In the world are many euills, which could not be from God, the foundation of all goodneſſe. Anſ. Euill is of three ſorts: firſt naturall, which commeth by nature corrupted, as ſickeneſſe, diſeaſes, plagues, and death it ſelfe. Secondly, materiall euills, as hurtfull beaſts, poiſons in trees, plants, beaſts; theſe are created, and the very poiſon of them is a creature. Thirdly, morall euils, which be tranſgreſſions againſt the Morall lawe and Commaundements of God. Of the two former God is the author & cauſe: Eſay 45. 7. I create euill: that is, naturall and materiall: but of the third, that is, morall euils which be ſinne, God is no cauſe. Obiect. But God is the cauſe of all things, and ſinne is ſome thing. Anſ. Sinne is no creature, but the deſtruction of Gods image which is a creature, effected by the creature: for though the creature cannot make a creature, yet it can deſtroy a creature.

The aduerſarie to this ground is the Atheiſt, who holdeth the creatures to haue bin from euerlaſting, and ſo by denying one God, he maketh many thouſands.

9. Ground.

The 9. ground is, that God made man according to

A to his owne image, Gen. 1. 27. For by creation man had three things: Firſt, the ſubſtance of bodie and ſoule. Secondly, in them the powers and faculties of minde, will, affections, &c. Thirdly, an excellent conformitie of all theſe to the will of God: This is the image of God, called in the Scripture righteouſneſſe and holineſſe. This is a ground: for the image of God is the ſubſtance and bodie of the Law; he therefore that denieth this, denieth the Law, the fall from it, and the reſtoring vnto it by Chriſt.

10. Ground.

The 10. ground is, that by Adam, ſinne and death entred into the world, and in him all meere men ſinned, Rom. 5. 12. To the conceauing of B which we muſt know, that the firſt ſinne of Adam was eating the forbidden fruite; the next was, the putting out of Gods image; in ſtead of which corruption of heart tooke place ſo farre, as (the ſeede of all ſinne beeing within him) he was prone and readie to euery ſinne. Now Adam beeing a publike perſon, and hauing receiued whatſoeuer he had for himſelfe and his poſteritie either to hold for, or loſe from both; hence is it that both thoſe ſinnes are become the two firſt ſinnes in our conception, he ſinning we ſinned, and with him haue the ſeeds of all ſinne within vs by nature, no ſinne excepted, no not the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt. Yea no otherwiſe is it with vs then with a noble man practiſing treaſon, whoſe whole blood is C thereby ſtained. Obiect. But Chriſt came of Adam, therefore he in Adam ſinned. Anſ. God made this law with Adam, that all who came of him by ordinarie generation ſhould be guiltie of his ſinne: but Chriſt was extraordinarily conceiued by the holy Ghoſt, and tooke of Mary Adams nature, but not Adams ſinne. Againe, Chriſt came of Adam, but from him as a beginning, and not by him as by a father; whereas all other men are both from Adam and by him. This is a maine ground of our religion, without which there coulde bee no redemption.

Aduerſaries hereof are:

D Firſt, our common people, who ſay they euer kept Gods lawe, and loued him with all their heart, and their neighbours as themſelues, and thinke hence all is well: but were it ſo as they dreame, they had neuer fallen in Adam, and ſo Adams ſinne had not gone ouer all men.

Papiſts controll the Apoſtle where he ſaith, that ſinne entred by one ouer all.

Secondly, the Popiſh Church: firſt, in teaching that the Virgine Marie (who came of Adam by ordinarie generation) was conceiued without ſinne: notwithſtanding ſhee was ſaued, not by her bearing of Chriſt in her wombe, but by beleeuing on him with her heart. Secondly, in that they teach, that men are not wholy dead in ſinne, but in part, or halfe dead, yea that beeing a little holpen, they can keepe the law: as though by ſinne men had not beene wholly depriued of the glorie of God.

11. Ground.

The 11. ground is, that the Law and Goſpell are two parts of the word of God, and are diuers kindes of doctrine. By the Law I vnderſtandſtand that part of Gods word which promiſeth life to the obeyer. By the Goſpel that part which promiſeth it to the beleeuer. Theſe I ſay are diuers kindes of doctrine; to the cleering of which conſider firſt, their conſent and agreement. Secondly, their diſſent and difference. Firſt, the Law and Goſpel conſent: firſt in the Author; of both which is God. Secondly, in their generall matter, for both require iuſtice and righteouſneſſe to ſaluation. Thirdly, in their end, namely the glorie of God. Secondly they diſſent in ſixe things: Firſt, the Morall law is written in nature by creation; yea and ſince the fall we haue ſome remainder of it in vs. Rom. 2. 15. The Gentiles ſhew the effect of the law written in their hearts: but the goſpel is not in nature, but aboue the reach of nature created, much more corrupted. The ground of the Law is the image of God; but the ground of the Goſpell is Ieſus Chriſt. Secondly, the Law will haue vs doe ſomething that we may be ſaued by it, and that is to fulfill it. The Goſpell requireth no doing of vs, but onely beleeuing in Chriſt. Obiect. But beleeuing is a worke to be done. Anſ. The Goſpell requireth it not as a worke, but as it is an inſtrument and the hand of the ſoule to lay hold vpon Chriſt, Rom. 4. 5. and 3. 21. and 10. 5. Hence is it that the Law requireth righteouſneſſe inherent; but the Goſpell, imputed. Thirdly, the law is propounded to the vnrepentant ſinner to bring him to faith: but the Goſpel to the beleeuer to the begetting and increaſe of faith. Fourthly, the law ſheweth ſinne, accuſeth and reuealeth iuſtice without mercie; but the Goſpell couereth ſinne, and is a qualification of the rigour of the Law. The Law ſaith, Curſed is euery one, &c. The Goſpel qualifieth that, and ſaith, Except he beleeue and repent, euery man is accurſed. Thus the Law which manifeſteth iuſtice is moderated by the goſpel, which mingleth mercie and iuſtice together: iuſtice vpon Chriſt, mercie vnto vs. Fiftly, the law telleth vs what good workes muſt be done; the Goſpel, how they muſt be done: the former declareth the matter of our obedience, the latter directeth vs in the manner of obeying: the former is pleaſed with nothing but the deede, the later ſignifieth that God is pleaſed to accept the will and vnfained endeuour for the deed it ſelfe. Sixtly, the law is no worke of grace and ſaluation, no not inſtrumentally, for it is the miniſtery of death; the Goſpel preached worketh grace only, though the law may be a hammer to break the heart and prepare the way to faith and repentance.

Aduerſaries hereof are;

The Papiſts who holde that they are one doctrine onely, but herein differing, that the Law is more darke, the Goſpel more plaine, the former more hard to fulfill, the latter more eaſie; that is as the roote of a tree, this as the bodie and branches: by which premiſes they would conclude Chriſt to be no Sauiour: but an inſtrument rather for vs to ſaue our ſelues by, he giuing vs grace to keepe the Law: for a ſinner muſt needes be ſaued by workes, if there be no difference betweene the Law and the Goſpell, and if the Law which requireth workes were not moderated by the Goſpel, which requireth not workes but faith.

12. Ground.

The 12. ground is, The word was made fleſh, Ioh. 1. 14. This is a maine ground, as in 2. Ioh. 4. 3. Euery ſpirit that doth not confeſſe that Chriſt is come in the fleſh, that is, euery doctrine in which Chriſt is denied to be come in the fleſh, is not of God, but of Antichriſt. Now by [Word] I vnderſtand the eternall ſonne of God, the ſecond perſon in Trinitie, the very ſubſtantiall word of the Father. It is added [was made] not as though the ſonne of God was turned into fleſh, and ceaſed to be Gods ſonne, but as Heb. 2. 16. in that he tooke not the ſeede of Angels, but of Abraham. The meaning then is, that the Sonne of God * abiding ſtill the word, tooke (that is) receiued into his perſon our nature; Phil. 2. 7. He tooke vpon him the forme of a ſeruant. The word [fleſh] ſignifieth firſt mans nature which Chriſt tooke vnto him, namely a true nature of man, not phantaſticall or apparant onely. Secondly, the whole nature of man conſiſting of true and perfect ſoule and bodie, with all things that belong to the entire nature of man; for if he had taken mans nature onely in part, he had redeemed it but in part. Thirdly, the properties of man in ſoule, minde, will, affections; in bodie, breadth, length, circumſcription, &c. Fourthly, the infirmities and frailties of mans nature without ſinne; where muſt be noted, that Chriſt tooke not all infirmities of mans nature, as ſinne and corruption, neither euery perſonall infirmitie of euery perſon, as blindneſſe, Gowte, or this and that particular diſeaſe. Here by the way it may be asked, whether Chriſt had obliuion in his agonie, as ſome haue thought? To which may be anſwered: That euen when he vttered thoſe words [Father if it be thy will let this cup &c.] it is not fit to attribute obliuion vnto him, which properly is a forgetfulneſſe of thoſe things which we are bound to remember, for thus we ſhould draw ſinne vpon him: but rather to aſcribe it to ſuſpending of the memorie: which is when a man neither forgetteth nor remembreth. For as in the will be three things, 1. willing, 2. nilling, 3. ſuſpending of the will, which is neither of the former; ſo alſo is it in memorie, which remembreth, forgetteth, and ſuſpendeth memory for a time. Now the ſumme of the whol ground is; That the Sonne of God, the ſecond perſon, and ſo abiding, tooke vnto him the perfect nature of man, in all things beeing like vnto vs, ſinne onely excepted: for the further cleering of which, conſider theſe foure concluſions: firſt, The Sonne of God made man is not two perſons diſtinct, but one alone. Queſt. How can this be? for as he is the Sonne of God he is a perſon; and as he is a man he is a particular perſon, as euery ſeuerall man is, and therefore he is two perſons. Anſ. Euery particular man is a perſon, becauſe he ſubſiſteth of himſelfe; but the manhood of Chriſt ſubſiſteth not in it ſelfe, but in the ſecond perſon onely, ſo that Chriſt God and man is but one perſon; for euen as bodie and ſoule make one man, ſo Godhead and Manhood make but one Chriſt. Secondly, this one perſon cōſiſteth of two diſtinct natures, the Godhead, and the Manhood ſtanding of bodie and ſoule. Thirdly, theſe two natures are vnited and ioyned into one perſon, for the Godhead doth take the Manhood and ſupport it. Fourthly, theſe two natures after coniunction remaine diſtinct, the Godhead is not the Manhood, neither on the contrarie: but ſtill diſtinguiſhed, firſt in regard of themſelues. Secondly, of their properties; for the properties of the one are not the properties of the other. Thirdly, of their actions: for the actions of the Godhead are not communicated to the Manhood, neither is the worke of one nature the worke of another.

15.Ground.

The 13. ground is, that Ieſus is Chriſt. 1. Ioh. 2. 22. Who is a lier but he that denieth that Ieſus is Chriſt, the ſame is the Antichriſt: From which place we may gather two things. Firſt, That Ieſus is Chriſt. Secondly, That it is a ground ſuſteyning our whole ſaluation. For whoſoeuer denieth it is Antichriſt; ſee 1. Cor. 3.10. The meaning of the ground, by Chriſt I vnderſtand the annointed Sauiour and Redeemer; who is a King, Prieſt, and Prophet. Firſt, as he is a King his power manifeſteth it ſelfe in three things; Firſt, in ſauing and deſtroying not the bodie onely as other Kings, but the ſoule alſo. Secondly, in pardoning ſinnes or reteyning them. Thirdly, in making lawes to bind conſciences. Secondly, his Prieſtly office ſtandeth in two things: Firſt, in a power to offer ſacrifice propitiatorie for the ſinnes of whole mankind. Secondly, in making interceſſion to God for mankind: Thirdly, his Propheticall office conſiſteth in three things: Firſt, in reuealing to man the will of his father. Secondly, in enlightning of the minde to vnderſtand that wil reuealed. Thirdly, in framing of the heart to performe obedience vnto it, together with the ſetling of it in the truth. Thus he is the Chriſt, that is the annoynted of God.

But we muſt yet here go further and vnderſtand by Chriſt a perfect Chriſt, a perfect Redemer, without any partner, fellow, or deputy: for if he haue a partner, he is but halfe a redeemer, and if he haue a fellow or deputie, how is hee omnipotent, or omnipreſent? This is plaine by teſtimonie of Scripture; There is none other name, Actes 4. 12. therefore there is no fellow or partner. There is one Mediatour, that is but one, 1. Papiſts worſe then the ſoldiers in parting Chriſts garments.

The Romiſh Church, who rob Chriſt of all theſe 3. offices. For firſt, his kingly office they giue part of it to the Pope, in making him to remit ſinnes properly; to make lawes to bind conſcience properly, as Gods lawes do, which is a power equall to Chriſts, and ſo they make him check-mate with Chriſt. Secondly, his Prieſtly office is giuen to the Maſſe-prieſt, who by their doctrine hath power to offer a propitiatorie ſacrifice for the ſinnes of the quicke and dead; yea euery Papiſt hath a peece of it, becauſe euery one of them may ſatisfie the iuſtice of God for his ſinnes by his owne merit. And for his interceſſion, the ſecond worke of his Prieſthood, that is dealt among the Saints (among whom the Virgin Mary hath the greateſt part) who are inuocated as interceſſors, not onely by their prayers, but by their merits in heauen. Thirdly, his Propheticall office is beſtowed likwiſe vpon euery Pope, who is without ſcripture to determine infallibly, by an inward aſſiſtance of the Spirit locked vp in his breſt, of all matters concerning faith and manners, which is the proper office of him who is the proper Doctor of his Church. Therefore this Romiſh doctrine eſtabliſhed by the Councell of Trent, is an hereticall and Antichriſtian doctrine, making God an Idoll-God, which is concluded out of this place alleadged, thus: Hee that denieth Ieſus to be Chriſt, is Antichriſt. And againe, Hee that hath not the Sonne, hath not the Father. But the Romiſh Church denie Ieſus to be Chriſt, and hath not the Sonne, becauſe it ouerturneth his perſon and oppugneth all his offices: and therfore neither haue they the Father, but an Idoll-God, and conſequently their doctrine is Antichriſtian and hereticall. For which cauſe the reformed churches haue iuſtly ſeparated from thē, & ought euer ſo long as they denie this ground, ſo to doe.

The Romiſh Church denie Ieſus to be Chriſt.

14. Ground.

The 14. ground is: Hee that beleeueth in Chriſt ſhall not periſh, but haue life euerlaſting, Ioh. 3. 16. God ſo loued the world, &c. For the better handling of it conſider firſt for the meaning, what this faith is. Secondly, that it is a maine ground of true religion. Thirdly, the enemies of it. For the firſt: In this faith are two things: firſt, knowledge. Secondly, application of the thing known. The knowledge is, of Chriſt and his benefits; of which ſome meaſure muſt be had, or elſe there can be no faith. Eſay. 53. 11. By his knowledge ſhall my righteous ſeruant iuſtifie many. Ioh. 17. 3. This is life eternall, &c. And this ſtands with reaſon, that the thing to beleeued muſt firſt be knowne: for faith without knowledge is fancie.

The caſtle of Romiſh faith hangeth in the aire without foūdation.

The Romane Church hath then erred, which teach that there is a faith to ſaluatiō whereto knowledge is not required, ſuch a one that ſtandeth only in an aſſent to the faith of the Church. The ſecond thing in faith (which is the more principall) is an application of things knowne: namely of Chriſt and his benefits vnto our ſelues in particular. And herein ſtandeth the very ſubſtance of true faith, which is not cauſed by any naturall affection of heart, or action of will, but by the ſupernaturall action of the minde enlightened by the ſpirit of God, reſoluing vs that Chriſt and his merits belong vnto vs in particular. That this true particular application is required in true faith, is prooued by theſe reaſons: Firſt, that which we lawfully aske by prayer we muſt beleeue by a ſpeciall faith: but in prayer we lawfully aske the pardon of our ſinnes in particular, and life euerlaſting by Chriſt; therefore we muſt beleeue the pardon of our ſinnes and life euerlaſting by Chriſt. The aduerſaries can denie nothing but the firſt part of this reaſon, which is the very word of God it ſelfe. Mark. 11. 24. Whatſoeuer ye deſire when you pray, beleeue yee ſhall haue it, and it ſhall be done vnto you. Where in euery petition of praier our Sauiour requireth two things: firſt, a deſire of things promiſed. Secondly, a particular faith of things deſired, ſtanding in aſſurance that they ſhall be granted. Secondly, whatſoeuer the holy Ghoſt doth infallibly teſtifie to vs particularly, that we muſt beleeue particularly: but the holy Ghoſt doth particularly teſtifie by infallible teſtimonie to euery beleeuers conſcience, his owne adoption and pardon of ſinne, and acceptance to life euerlaſting; and therefore it muſt be particularly beleeued.

Obiect.

Here the Papiſt excepteth and ſaith, that this teſtimonie of the ſpirit of God, is not certaine, but probable onely, and a man may be deceiued in it.

Anſwer.

But the Apoſtle Rom. 8. 16. anſwereth this allegation: The ſpirit of God teſtifieth with our ſpirits that we are the children of God; and cleerth this teſtimonie of fearefulneſſe & weakeneſſe in the former words: where he ſaith, it is not the ſpirit of feare which we haue receiued, but ſuch a ſpirit as maketh vs crie Abba, father, and with a ſtrong voice: yea and for the further aſſuring vs in this teſtimonie, it is called the * ſeale, and earneſt penny of the ſpirit in our hearts, then which things what are more ſure and certaine ratifications among men, whoſe teſtimonie (though it be but of two men, but much more of three) ſeale, or earneſt, if it be ſufficient confirmation vnto men, how much more ſure is the teſtimonie, ſeale, and earneſt, of the ſpirit of God vnto vs? Thirdly, that which God offereth and giueth vs particularly, we muſt particularly receiue: but God offereth & giueth vs Chriſt and all his ἐν ᾧ κράζομεν.

* 2.Cor.1.22.

A benefits particularly in the Word and Sacraments, and therefore we muſt haue particular faith to receiue him.

Obiect.

It will here be ſaid, we grant all this, we muſt receiue Chriſt and his benefits in ſpeciall; but we doe it by hope; as the Papiſts teach to hope well.

Anſwer.

Anſ. It is a worke of faith alone: Ioh. 1. 12. As many as receiued him, &c. Who were they? The next words ſhew, euen they that beleeued on his name. Againe, in the Sacrament of the Supper, Chriſt is offered as the bread and water of life to euery one in particular: and therefore euery beleeuer muſt haue ſomething in his ſoule proportionall to a hand and mouth, for the receiuing and feeding vpon him; which is nothing elſe but faith ſpecially B applying Chriſt and his benefits: ſee Ioh. 6. 35. Foutthly, the example of beleeuers in the Scriptures prooue the ſame truth. Abraham beleeued by a particular faith, which was imputed to him for righteouſneſſe, Rom. 4. 23. So alſo Paul, Gal. 2. 20. I liue by the faith of the ſonne of God, who loued me, and hath giuen himſelfe for mee. Now both theſe are patternes and preſidents for vs to follow, that as they beleeued, and particularly applied Chriſt to themſelues, ſo muſt we: ſee Rom. 4. 14. 1. Timoth. 1. 16. Now from theſe two, namely knowledge and application, followeth Confidence, whereby we truſt and relie our ſelues vpon Chriſt and his merits thus knowne and applied vnto ſaluation; which becauſe it inſeparably followeth faith, is often C in the Scripture put for faith it ſelfe: I diſtinguiſh it from faith, becauſe it hath beene ſaid (though falſely) that it is a part of faith, which indeede is a fruite and follower of faith: and the Apoſtle Epheſ. 3. 12. doth manifeſtly diſtinguiſh them: By whom we haue boldnes and entrance with confidence by faith in him.

The ſecond point in this ground is the weight of it. That it is a maine ground of Religion, appeareth thus: If the inheritance of life (ſaith Paul) be not by faith, it is not ſure, Rom. 4. 15. For if we were intitled by workes, the promiſe ſhould not be certaine: he then that oppugneth this ground of particular faith, ouerthroweth the Goſpell, as which cannot aſſure a man of ſaluation. Secondly, in the Catechiſme D of the Primitiue Church, faith in God is made one ground, Heb. 6. 1. Thirdly, this ground beeing the moſt maine promiſe of the Goſpell, whoſoeuer ouerthroweth it, he depriueth men of all comfort of religion.

Aduerſaries.

The aduerſaries of this ground are, firſt the common people, who for the moſt part profeſſe that they are not certaine of the pardon of their ſinnes; they hope well, becauſe God is merciful; but to be certaine they thinke it impoſſible: as though there can be hope & confidence where is no aſſurance: but ſpeciall hope alwaies preſuppoſeth ſpeciall faith. Secondly, the Papiſts, for they condemne ſpeciall faith for theſe reaſons: Firſt, where is no word, there (ſay they) can be no particular faith; but there is no word that ſaith, thou Cornelius, Peter, Iohn, Indeede no word ſaith, thou Boniface the 8. or thou Pope Iohn the 22. ſhalt be ſaued.

&c. ſhalt be ſaued. Anſ. It is true indeede, there is no particular faith where there is no particular word, or which is proportionall: but the Miniſter truely applying the generall promiſe to this and that particular man, it is as much as if a mans name were regiſtred in the Scripture. Secondly, we haue in ſubſtance a particular word, in that God who hath giuen the promiſe hath giuen alſo a commandement, to euery beleeuer to applie the ſame vnto himſelfe, 1. Ioh. 2. 23. This is his commandement, that we beleeue in the name of his ſonne Ieſus Chriſt, which is equiualent to a particular word. As a King giues a pardon to a thouſand men, but nameth neuer a one of thē: yet euery of them truely applying the pardon, according to the Kings intention, haue the benefit of it, as ſurely as if all their names had beene ſet therein.

Obiect.

II. Obiect. Many that apply the generall promiſe to themſelues, are deceiued and faile; yea euery wicked man ſaith he beleeueth in the ſonne of God, wherein he is deceiued.

Anſwer.

Anſ. Many indeede faile in their ſpeciall application, but it is onely vnbeleeuers; but they muſt prooue that none truly can apply the promiſe ſpecially, which all true beleeuers doe.

Anſ. Yea in regard of our ſelues we muſt not onely doubt but deſpaire: yet beleeuers beeing found not in themſelues but in Chriſt, may prooue themſelues whether they be in the faith or no, 2. Cor. 13. 5. For whoſoeuer repenteth, knoweth that he doth repent: We knowe we are of God, 1. Ioh. 5. 19. Ob. But all men in the world are full of doubting, and how can doubting ſtand with the certaintie of ſaluation? Anſ. Conſider faith firſt as it is in it ſelfe, ſo it is certaine. Secondly, as it is in vs, and ſo it is mingled with much doubting, which is not of the nature of faith, but contrarie vnto it; and yet theſe may and muſt ſtand together in the beleeuer, for doubtings may diſturbe, but not deſtroy true faith, for the Lord (notwithſtanding them) accepteth our weake faith as perfect, and our will to beleeue for beleefe it ſelfe, where he ſeeth griefe conceiued for doubtings, ſtrife againſt them. and endeauour to haue our faith increaſed. Ob. But to beleeue pardon for our ſinnes is to enter into Gods counſell. Anſ. That is falſe, becauſe pardon of our ſines is reueiled. Ob. But your Church (ſay they) abhorreth reuelation. Anſ. Neither the Scripture, nor our Church condemneth Reuelations contained in Scripture, but thoſe that are without, beſide, or againſt Scripture: Epheſ. 1. 7. The ſpirit is called the ſpirit of Reuelation: ſee alſo 1. Cor. 2. 12. As for this reuelation of pardon of ſinne to the beleeuer it is contained in the Scripture, and is no more a prying into Gods counſell, then it is for a Traytor to beleeue that he is pardoned when certaine newes of his pardon is brought vnto him from the King, of whom none can ſay he entreth into the Kings counſell. Hence we conclude, that ſeeing the doctrine of the Papiſts ouerthroweth this maine ground, we muſt take heede of ioyning our ſelues vnto thē.

15. Ground.

Rom. 5.18.

The 15. ground is; That a ſinner is iuſtified by faith, without the works of the Law, Rom. 3. 28. Wherein conſider firſt the meaning; ſecondly, the weight; thirdly the aduerſaries. For the meaning three things muſt be knowne. Firſt, what it is to be iuſtified. Secondly, what it is to be iuſtified by faith. Thirdly, what workes are to be excluded from iuſtification. Concerning the firſt. In iuſtification there be three diſtinct actions of God; firſt, the freeing of a ſinner from his ſinnes for the merits of Chriſt: Act. 13. 39. From all things from which they could not be iuſtified by the law of Moſes, by him euery one that beleeueth is iuſtified: that is, acquited from them. Paul oppoſeth it thus to condemnation, Rom. 8. 33. which is nothing elſe, but a binding of a man to iuſt puniſhment. The ſecond action is, the reputing and the accepting of a ſinner as iuſt for the merit of Chriſt. Eſay 5. 22. Woe vnto him that iuſtifieth a wicked man: that is, not to make but accept him as iuſt; and in the Goſpell, Wiſedome is iuſtified of her children, that is, approoued and acknowledged. The third is, the acceptation of a ſinner to life euerlaſting in Chriſt. For after that God hath abſolued a ſinner, and reputed him as iuſt, there muſt follow this acceptation to life, which is therefore called the iuſtification of life, with the reaſon rendred in the ſame place: for that like as Adams ſinne is imputed vnto all, by which death entred; ſo Chriſts obedience imputed to beleeuers, bringeth life and iuſtification. Out of which three actions we may gather a true deſcription of iuſtification, to wit, It is an action of God the Father, abſoluing a ſinner from his ſinnes, for the merit of Chriſt, accounting him as iuſt, and accepting him to life euerlaſting.

II. Point. What it is to be iuſtified by faith. For the cleere vnderſtanding of this waighty point, we muſt anſwer 2. queſtions. Firſt, what is the very thing for which a ſinner is iuſtified? Anſ. It is the obedience of Chriſt the Redeemer and Mediatour, paſſiue and actiue: the former ſtanding in ſuffering the death of his body, and the paines of the ſecond death in his ſoule; the latter, in fulfilling the Lawe. The truth of this anſwer appeareth thus: Since our fall we owe to God a double debt: we breake the law, and thereby are bound to make ſatisfaction. Secondly, being creatures we muſt fulfill the rigour of the lawe, and performe what it requireth: neither parcell of which debt, ſeeing we (beeing bankerupts) are able to pay, we flie to our ſurety who muſt pay both for vs: the former he doth by his death, beeing made a curſe for vs, and ſo redeemed vs from the curſe, Galath. 3. 13. the latter by perfect obedience vnto the lawe: that ſo in him we doing theſe things, might liue in them, verſ. 12. The ſecond queſtion is: Seeing the obedience of Chriſt is the mat-

A ter of our iuſtification, and is out of our ſelues; how commeth it to be made ours? An. To make it ours, firſt God muſt giue it vs: ſecondly, we muſt receiue it. Firſt, God giueth it vnto vs, when he giueth vs Chriſt himſelſe, for it is giuen with him, and it is made ours, when God in mercie eſteemeth, iudgeth, and accounteth it to be ours, for it is ours by imputation: which appeareth by theſe two reaſons: Firſt, as Chriſt is made our ſinne, ſo we are made his righteouſneſſe, 2. Cor. 5. 21. but he is made our ſinne by imptation, and therefore his iuſtice beeing inherent in him, is made ours by imputation. Secondly, as the firſt Adams diſobedience is made ours, ſo Chriſts the ſecond Adams obedience is ours, Rom. 5. 17. 18. but that is ours by imputation, and therefore Chriſts obedience alſo. Secondly, to make this obedience ours we muſt receiue it, and that can be onely by faith, which is the hād of the ſoule receiuing into it the things that are giuen vs of God: where note by the way, that a ſinner is not iuſtified by the dignitie of his faith, but as it is an inſtrument whereby Chriſts obedience is applyed vnto the ſoule.

Note.

III. Point. What works are excluded from iuſtification. Anſ. The works of the Morall and Ceremoniall law, workes of nature and grace. That euen workes of grace are excluded; appeareth by theſe reaſons. Firſt, a ſinner muſt ſo be iuſtified, that all cauſe of boaſting may be cut off Rom. 3. 27 But if a man were iuſtified by works of grace he might boaſt ſtill, yea though he acknowledge the workes to be of God: ſee the Phariſies example, Luk. 18. Secondly, if a man were iuſtified by the workes of the lawe, then our iuſtification ſhould ſtand by the lawe; but that it doth not, Rom. 4. 14. for then the promiſe were made voide; yea the tenour of that whole Chapter prooueth, that Abraham hauing ſtore of good works, was yet iuſtified by faith without the works of the Lawe; the which thing alſo that obiection in chap. 6. 1. witneſſeth: What then, ſhall we continue in ſinne? drawne out of the fiue former chapters thus: If a man may be iuſtified by faith without works, we may continue in ſinne; which obiection were no obiection, if that had not beene the intent of the Apoſtle, to prooue iuſtification by faith onely, without the works of the lawe. Thirdly, Paul was not iuſtified by any works: 1. Cor. 4. 3. I knowe nothing by my ſelfe, yet am I not thereby iuſtified: where he noteth two things of himſelfe; firſt, that he had a good conſcience within him: ſecondly, that he was not thereby iuſtified; where he debarreth all works of grace. Fourthly, we are ſaued by grace without works: theſe workes excluded are workes of grace, for they are all ſuch as God hath prepared to walke in, Epheſ. 2. 8. Fiftly, a man muſt firſt be iuſtified before he can doe a good worke: and therefore works followe iuſtification, and cannot cauſe it. Yea and as all works are excluded, ſo all vertues alſo excepting faith are here reiected. For as in a man that ſtandeth to receiue a gift, no part doth any thing to receiue it but the hand, yet hauing receiued it, all other parts teſtifie thankefulneſſe, the tongue, the feete, and all the bodie: euen ſo we receiue the matter of our iuſtification by faith alone, not by hope, or loue; but after the receiuing of Chriſt, theſe with the other graces worke and ſhewe themſelues.

The ſecond point in this ground is the weight of it, appearing herein, that he that ouerthroweth it, ouerturneth the faith: Rom. 4. 14. If they of the Lawe be heires of life, faith is made voide, and the promiſe of none effect. And Gal. 2. 21. If we be iuſtified by works, Chriſt died in vaine.

Aduerſaries.

B Aduerſaries hereof. Firſt, the home-aduerſarie is the common ſort of ignorant people and all naturall men, who with the young man ſay, What ſhall I doe to be ſaued? They ſay they will be ſaued by faith in Chriſt, but when it commeth to the point, they will be doing ſomewhat, and ſtand much vpon their good meaning and righteous dealing. Secondly, the forreine enemie is the Popiſh doctrine and Romiſh religion, which teacheth that there be two iuſtifications. Firſt, when a man of an euill man is made a good man; this is by grace of the holy Ghoſt put into the heart: the latter is whereby a man is made of good, better, which is by good workes. But what Church ſoeuer holdeth this, is fallen from grace. This is a peremptorie ſentence (will ſome ſay) and no generall Councell C hath ſo determined. Anſ. The more is the pitie. But Gods word hath peremptorily determined it: Gal. 5. 4. They are aboliſhed from Chriſt, and fallen from grace, whoſoeuer will be iuſtified by the lawe, as the Romaine Church at this day. They ſay our doctrine maintaineth looſeneſſe of life, by excluding all workes from iuſtification. Anſ. Though we exclude the beſt works from iuſtification, yet we debarre them not from Chriſtian cōuerſation, but therein require them as fruits of the ſpirit plentifully. Ob. But it is abſurd (ſay they) that one man may be iuſtified by the righteouſneſſe of another. Anſ. Adams ſinne is made ours, and they maruell not at it; what greater abſurditie is it, that the D ſecond Adams obedience, anſwering to the firſt Adams ſinne, ſhould be ours in like manner.

The Popiſh Church fallen from grace.

16. Ground.

The 16. ground is this: Except a man be borne anewe, of water and of the holy Ghoſt, he cannot enter into the kingdome of God, Ioh. 3. 5. In which obſerue firſt the meaning, ſecondly, the weight, thirdly, the aduerſaries. In the firſt conſider two points: firſt, what it is to be borne againe: ſecondly, of what neceſſitie it is. For the former, we muſt knowe, that there muſt be in him that is borne againe three things: firſt a reall change from one to another. Secondly, there muſt be a roote from whence this change may ariſe. Thirdly, a newe life. Firſt, the change is, when a man of a meere naturall man is made a

A newe man: not in regard of his bodie or ſoule, or powers of them, all which a man retaineth the ſame after regeneration, but in regard of Gods image reſtored and renewed by Chriſt, Epheſ. 4. 24. This is the reſtoring of that newe qualitie of righteouſneſſe and holineſſe loſt in Adam, for ſo the Apoſtle deſcribeth this newe birth in the place alleadged. This change is attributed to water and the holy Ghoſt, wherein [by water] our Sauiour alludeth to ſome ſpeeches of the olde Teſtament; as Ezech. 36. 25. where the Prophet ſpeaketh of the clenſing of the church, by powring cleane water vpon it: that is, infuſing newe graces into the heart, which take place of the olde corruption. And by the holy Ghoſt, he ſheweth that this clenſing of vs is by the inward working of the holy Ghoſt.

B Obiect. Obiect. But it will be ſaide, if a man be a newe man, he muſt haue a newe ſoule. Anſwer. Anſ. This new qualitie of righteouſneſſe is as it were a newe ſoule, for in a regenerate man, there is a bodie ſoule, and beſides the ſpirit, which is the grace of ſanctification oppoſed to fleſh, and corruption of nature, Rom. 8. 10. This is as it were the ſoule of a ſoule renewed.

Secondly, that a man may come to this eſtate, there muſt be ſome root and beginning whence this change may ariſe, and that is no other then Chriſt crucified, the Redeemer and Mediatour, of whoſe bodie beleeuers are members, of his fleſh and of his bones, Epheſ. 5. 30. for looke C as Eue was made of the ſide of Adam, ſo is euerie beleeuer of the blood of Chriſt; and as euery man, ſo farre as he is a ſinnefull man, ſpringeth from the firſt Adam, ſo doth euery man ſo farre as he is renewed, ſpring from the ſecond Adam Chriſt Ieſus. Now that a man may ſpring out of Chriſt, he muſt firſt (beeing taken out of the wilde Oliue the olde Adam, Rom. 6. 5.) be ſet and ingrafted into the ſecond Adam as a newe ſtocke, and that by faith wrought in the heart by the ſpirit of God: by which inciſion he receiueth from Chriſt two things; firſt, in regard of his ſoule, holineſſe: ſecondly, in regard of bodie, incorruption, ſeeing that the whole man is vnited vnto Chriſt, and ſo both ſoule and bodie receiue immortalitie and glorie.

D Thirdly, in this newe birth there muſt be a newe life, by which if any liue not, he is not borne againe: for the diſtinct knowledge of which life, we muſt diſtinguiſh of life: life is vncreated, and created: vncreated life is the life of God, yea God himſelfe, of which kind this is not. Created life, is either naturall or ſpirituall: Naturall, is that which we liue by naturall means, as meate, drinke, ſleepe, phyſicke, &c. of which kind this newe life is not: but this is that ſpirituall life, whereby a man in this life is ruled by the ſpirit of God according to the word; and it ſtandeth in two things: Firſt, when the ſpirit dwelleth in the heart; Secondly, when the ſpirit ruleth the heart: or more plainely, this life hath two degrees: Firſt, when a man beginneth to ſauour, affect, and will ſpirituall things, loueth them, and chiefly affecteth them, Rom. 8. 5. when they haue ſome ſauour and reliſh vnto him. Secondly, when a man in all eſtates liueth by a iuſtifying faith, and ordereth his life thereby. The iuſt man (ſaith Abacuke) liueth by faith, and this is, as it is truely called, life eternall; the beginning and firſt degree of which euery beleeuer hath poſſeſſion of, euen in this life.

The ſecond point in this ground is the weight of it; for which obſerue the neceſſitie of the newe birth, in the former words where it is ſaid, that without it a man ſhall neuer ſee the kingdome of God, much leſſe enter into it. No man is in Chriſt (& ſo conſequently out of the ſtate of ſaluation) who is not a newe creature, 2. Cor. 5. 17. No outward prerogatiue can bring a man in requeſt with God, vnleſſe he be a newe creature, Gal. 6. 15. It is a conſtant truth of Chriſt, Ioh. 13. 8. If I waſh thee not, thou haſt no part in me.

Aduerſaries.

The third point is: The Aduerſaries: who are firſt, euery man by nature, the wiſedome of whom herein is enmitie with God. For euery one naturally is willing to yeeld vnto God ſome externall ſeruice, and ceremoniall worſhip; as in the Church to drawe neere to God with their lipps: but when they ſhould come to their renuing, and the mortifying of their luſts, O then they ſtorme and ſwell, and caſt off this yoke, becauſe they ſay it abridgeth them of their eaſe, libertie, and pleaſure, and they cannot be their owne men for it. Secondly, the Romane religion which for many hundred yeares hath ſtood in ceremonial and bodily actions, rites, geſtures, apparrell, and moſt of all in outwarde penance, borrowed partly of the Iewes, and partly of the Heathens: but all this doctrine of the newe birth, of mortifying hidden luſts and deniall of a mans ſelfe, is dead and buried among them: little hereof is ſpoken or written in the great volumes of their greateſt Clerks. But the doctrine which is from God is ſpirituall, as God himſelfe is and moſt concerneth the inner man. Secondly, they are great aduerſaries hereof in teaching that man (though captiue to ſinne) hath a power in his nature, whereby, if the holy Ghoſt free him, he can of himſelfe will and doe that which is good; which if it were ſo, then he is but in part newe, and ſo is no newe man. Secondly, a regenerate man muſt be a new creature: now creation is a framing of ſomething out of nothing, not of ſomthing into ſomthing. Thirdly, thus a man ſhould be but halfe dead, & ſo could not be borne againe, but onely ſtrengthened, euen as a man in a ſwoune, of whom we cannot ſay properly he is reuiued, becauſe he was not dead, but recouered.

Romane religion leadeth not to the newe birth, and therefore goe not to heauen.

17. Ground.

The 17. ground is out of Gal. 5. 1. Stand faſt in the libertie wherewith Chriſt hath made you free. For the meaning of which we muſt knowe, that Chriſtian libertie which we are exhorted to maintaine, ſtandeth in a double free-dome:

A dome: Firſt, from the Morall lawe: ſecondly, from the Ceremoniall. From the Morall lawe two waies: firſt from the curſe of the lawe, Rom. 8. 1. There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt: Secondly, from the rigour of it, which requireth perſonall and perfect obedience: this rigour is moderated by Chriſt; whence followeth a freedom from iuſtification by works, Rom.5. 1. Gal. 5. 4. The ſecond freedome is, from the Ceremoniall law, which hauing an ende put to it by Chriſt, bindeth no man: but our libertie is procured to vs in meats, drinkes, and all things indifferent with good conſcience, ſeeing to the pure all things are pure, Tit. 1. 25. Where we are commanded to ſtand B faſt, we ſee the weight of it to be ſuch as may not be departed from, nor forſaken, for then we become debters againe to the whole lawe, and ſo are fallen from Chriſt.

Aduerſaries.

Aduerſaries hereof, are firſt the Libertines; as the Family of loue, who beeing (as they ſay) deified, are ſo carried by the holy Ghoſt that they cannot ſinne, no though they ſhould commit fornication: but no man is freed from obedience to the Law by Chriſt, although he be from the curſe and rigour of it. Secondly, all that take liberty to ſinne, becauſe they ſay, God in Chriſt is mercifull: but Chriſt freed from ſinne, not vnto it. Poperie maketh moe ſinnes then euer God made. Thirdly, the Romane Church, holding that the Pope hath power to make lawes binding conſcience properly, preſcribing ſuch C things to be done the oſeruing of which is the worſhip of God, and meritorious; as on the Popiſh faſting dayes, yea and Wedneſdayes and Frydayes, not to eate fleſh, euen this law bindeth the conſcience of a Papiſt, and ſuch abſtinence (they ſay) is a worke of merit, and a worſhip of God. But it will be ſaid, that Princes and Magiſtrates make ſuch Lawes of meats, drinkes, apparell, and muſt be obeyed. Anſwer. Anſ. Theſe lawes bind not conſcience, but the outward man. Secondly, they doe not abrogate our libertie, but moderateth the ouer common vſe for the common good: but Popiſh doctrine accounteth the breach of any of theſe mortall ſinne. Obiect. Ob. Yea but they forbid fleſh for temperance ſake, becauſe it ſtirreth vp luſt. Anſwer. Anſ. But D they forbid not the hoteſt wines, ſpices, Conſerues, and ſuch meats and drinks, which more ſtirre vp luſt then fleſh; and therefore this is but a ſhift.

18. Ground.

The 18. ground is in Matth. 18. 18. Whatſoeuer the Church bindeth in earth, is bound in heauen; and whatſoeuer it looſeth in earth, is loſed in heauen. In which ground obſerue firſt the meaning, ſecondly the moment, thirdly, the aduerſaries. Firſt, to knowe the meaning, two things are to be handled: firſt, what is this power of binding & looſing, which the Church hath. Secondly, what is the ratification and efficacie of this power out of theſe words, is bound and looſed in heauen. Concerning the former: This power of binding and looſing is that authoritie giuen by God to his church on earth, whereby it pardoneth or retaineth vnpardoned the ſinnes of men; for mens ſinnes are cords and bands which bind them, Prou.5.22. and chaines of blacke darkeneſſe, wherein men are reſerued vnto damnation, 2 Pet. 2. 4. and hence fitly when mens ſinnes are pardoned, are they ſaide to be looſed, and bound if they be not. This power is called Matth. 16. the power of the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, for mens ſinnes are as lockes, yea bars and bolts, ſhutting vpon them the doores of Heauen: and hence alſo when the Church pardoneth ſinnes, the doores of heauen are ſaid to be opened, and when it retaineth them, heauen is ſhut againſt the ſinner. Indeed pardon of ſinne is properly granted and giuen by God; but yet men are truely ſaid to pardon and retaine ſinne, when miniſterially they pronounce that God pardoneth or doth not pardon. Obiect. Ob. It will be ſaid, that men vpon earth know not whoſe ſinnes God will pardon, and whoſe he will not. Anſwer. Anſw. It is poſſible for man to know whoſe ſinnes God will pardon, and whoſe he will not: for God hath generally, made known that he will remit the ſinnes of all beleeuers and repentant ſinners, but will retaine their ſinnes, who goe on in the ſame. Now we may knowe particularly who theſe be that doe repent and beleeue; for the tree is knowne by the fruite, according vnto which the Church may pronounce a true ſentēce. Further, to know more diſtinctly what this power is, the parts of it are to be conſidered, and they be two; for it ſtandeth partly in the miniſterie of the word, and partly in the iuriſdiction of the Church vpon earth. The miniſterie of the word is either publike or priuate. Firſt, the publike miniſterie of the word is called the preaching of it; in which is this binding and looſing, opening and ſhutting, it being an ordinance of God, in which miniſters are called of God to pronounce in the name of God pardon of ſinne to the penitent, and condemnation to the obſtinate: and here muſt be noted, that this binding and looſing, in the publike Miniſterie is generall vnto all, but with exception of faith and repentance. Obiect. Ob. But ſeeing it is generall it is of no great force. Anſwer. Anſ. It is: for euery hearer muſt apply this generall doctrine to his owne perſon, and ſay with the Virgin Mary, applying to her ſelfe the Angells ſpeech: Be it vnto me according to thy word; this maketh it forcible in the conſcience. The priuate Miniſterie ſtandeth in two things: firſt, priuate admonition: ſecondly, priuate comfort. Priuate admonition is Gods ordinance whereby the Miniſter in Gods name bindeth a man to iudgement for his ſinne, except he repent: thus Peter dealt with Simon Magus, Act.8.21,22. Priuate comfort is when vpon true repentance the Miniſter pronounceth vpon the beleeuer pardon of ſinne without condition. Thus dealt Nathan with Dauid, 2.Sam. 12.22. Dauid ſaid, I haue ſinned, Nathan hereupon telleth him his ſinnes are forgiuen. Secondly, concerning the Iuriſdiction of the church; It is a power giuen of God to the Church, whereby it vſeth correction vpon open ſinners for their ſaluation, and it ſtandeth in excommunication and abſolution. Excommunication is a ſentence excluding open and obſtinate ſinners out of the kingdome of God, and conſequently from the ſocietie of the Church; for this followes the former, If he wil not heare the church, let him be a heathen. Paul calleth this ſentence a giuing vp of a man vnto Sathan. Ob. But no man can exclude another from the kingdome of God. Anſ. The Church excludeth not properly, but by declaring that God hath excluded ſuch. Obiect. Ob. But the true childe of God may be excommunicated, and yet is not ſhut out of heauen. Anſwer. Anſ. In ſome ſort and for a time he may be ſaid to be ſhut out of heauen, but conditionally and vntil repentance. The contrarie hereof is publike abſolution, when open ſinners repenting, are by the Church openly declared to be members of the kingdome of heauen, and ſo addmitted and receiued againe into the Church. This power of the Church differeth from the power of the Ciuill Magiſtrate in foure things: Firſt, the power of the Church is ordered onely by the word, but Ciuill power by other Ciuill lawes alſo. Secondly, the former correcteth onely by voice, in admonition, ſuſpenſion, and excommunication; the latter by reall and bodily puniſhments. Thirdly, all ſpirituall correction, as excommunication it ſelfe, ſtandeth at the repentance of a ſinner, and proceedeth no further: but the puniſhments of Ciuil power ſtay not at repentance, but proceede on euen to the death of the malefactor (notwithſtãding his repentance) if he be a man of death. Fourthly, in the Ciuill power be three degrees of proceeding: firſt, the knowledge of the cauſe. Secondly, the giuing of the ſentence. Thirdly, the execution of the puniſhment. In Eccleſiaſticall are the two former, but the laſt belongeth to God alone.

The ſecond thing in the meaning is, to know what the ratification of this power is: namely, to be bound and looſed in heauen; that is, when the Churches iudgement following the iudgement of God, doth acquite, or condemne a ſinner, God in heauen hath done it alreadie and ratifieth it. For in abſolutiõ (as alſo in the other) pardon of ſinne is firſt giuen in heauen: ſecondly, the Church pronounceth this according to Gods will: and thirdly, God ratifieth it thereupon in heauen, & confirmeth it as ſure as if on earth he had pronounced the pardon.

The ſecond point. The weight of this ground may appeare, Matth. 16. 18. where the maine promiſe of the Goſpell for the ſtabliſhment of the Church is contained: Vpon this rocke I will build my Church, and the gates of hell ſhall not preuaile againſt it: and the ground of our aſſurance thereof, is added verſ. 19. I will giue thee the keies of the kingdome. This maketh the church preuaile againſt the gates of hel, becauſe it openeth and ſhutteth heauen. Secondly, hereby the word and Sacraments are preſerued from A pollution and prophanation, the ſoules of men pulled out of the ſnares of the Deuill, and Gods kingdome ſet open vnto them: which beeing taken away there will be no difference left betweene the kingdome of God and the kingdom of the Deuill. Which power of the keies in opening and ſhutting heauen by the miniſterie of the word, ſeeing we haue eſtabliſhed by the lawes of the Land, we haue the ſtate of a true Church, and therefore no man can in good conſcience ſeparate from vs as no Church and people of God: indeede if it had not the power to open heauen vnto men, it were time to ſeparate from it.

3. The Aduerſaries of this ground, are firſt B the ignorant people, who Popiſhly thinke that this power is onely giuen to Peter, whoſe office is to open and ſhut heauen. But this power was giuen to all the Apoſtles as well as Peter, and in them to all Miniſters, Churches, and Congregations: yea, and it is not exerciſed in heauen but in earth. Secondly, all Atheiſts and Epicures that contemne and ſkorne the Word, Sacraments, and all holy things, yea euen the power of the Church it ſelfe. Thirdly, all Papiſts and the Romiſh religion, who aboliſh all binding and looſing in the publike Miniſterie, and haue brought all to a priuate ſhrift, and abſolution, which in truth is nothing elſe but a racke and a gibbet to the conſcince: for firſt, men muſt ſeeke for it at the hands of the Prieſt: ſecondly, C they muſt confeſſe all their ſinnes to the Prieſt: thirdly, they muſt make ſatisfaction to the iuſtice of God, euen ſuch as the Prieſt ſhall enioyne them. But all this is directly contrarie to the word: for firſt, Miniſters muſt offer pardon of ſinne before it be ſought for. Secondly, in Chriſt pardon is offered freely, we neede no ſatisfaction of our owne. Thirdly, they impoſe a heauier yoke, than euer Chriſt or his Apoſtles did vpon men, when they enioyne them to an enumeration of all their ſinnes, before they can be pardoned: the depth of which policie hath beene ſounded. Secondly, that Religion hath turned this power Eccleſiaſticall to a ciuill power, whereby they take vpon them to excommunicate Kings and Emperours, not onely out of the Church, but alſo out of their D kingdomes and Empires, whome (they ſay) they may ſet vp and depoſe at their pleaſure, as hauing power to wreſt the Scepter out of the hands of whatſoeuer Monarch ſhall not ſtoope vnder their Popes authority. Theſe be the maine enemies of this ground, againſt whom we muſt for euer contend.

In ſtead of the 2. keies, Poperie hath deuiſed the picklock of ſhrift.

That in nothing the Pope ſhould be vnlike the deuill, he ſaith with him, Al theſe are mine, & I giue them to whome I will.

19. Ground.

The 19. ground of faith is, There is, hath beene, and euer ſhall be a Church out of which is no ſaluation. This is an Article of our faith, and a maine ground of religion: for if there be not euer a Church of God, Chriſt is ſometime no Redeemer, no King, becauſe there ſhould be no people redeemed, nor ſubiects to the rule of his word and ſpirit. Of which conſider two things: firſt, what this Church is: ſecondly,

who be the aduerſaries of this ground. For the firſt: The Church is a company of men, choſen to ſaluation, called, vnited to Chriſt, and admitted into euerlaſting fellowſhip with him. See Heb. 12. 23. and 1. Pet. 2. 9. Compare theſe two places, and this deſcription will eaſily be gathered. The properties of this Church are theſe ſixe which follow. Firſt, being the Spouſe of Chriſt, ſhe is one onely indeede, although diſtinguiſhed in regard of time, as the Church of the olde Teſtament and of the newe. Secondly, of place as of England, Scotland, &c. Thirdly, of condition, as the Militant and Tryumphant: all theſe make but one bodie of Chriſt. Secondly, it is inuiſible, not to be ſeene but beleeued: for election, vocation, redemption, can onely be beleeued; yet ſome parts of it are viſible, as in the right vſe of the Word and Sacraments appeareth. Thirdly, to this aſſemblie and no other belong all the promiſes of this life; and the life come, eſpecially forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting. Fourthly, it conſiſteth onely of liuing members, quickened by the ſpirit of Chriſt, not of any hypocrites or wicked perſons. Fiftly, no member of it can be ſeuered or cut off from Chriſt, but abide in him and with him for euer. Sixrly, it is the ground and pillar of truth; that is, the doctrine of true religion is alwaies ſafely kept and maintained in it. Ob. The Churches in earth are true Churches, and yet in theſe are many hypocrites & Apoſtataes, who fall from their profeſſion. And therefore all are not liuing members. Anſ. In viſible Churches are two ſorts of men: Iuſt men and hypocrites; who although they be within the church, yet the Church is not ſo called of them, but in regard of them onely who are truely ioyned vnto Chriſt, who are the better part, although not the greater: Euen as a heape of wheate and chaffe together is called an heape of wheate, or a Corne heape, of the better part.

Aduerſaries.

Papiſts here take their markes amiſſe.

Aduerſaries herof are Papiſts, who frame not the Church by theſe true properties, but by other deceitfull markes, as ſucceſſion, multitude, antiquitie, and conſent; for when the Church firſt began there could be none of thoſe, at leaſt not the three former, and yet was there a true Church. Secondly, all theſe agree to Heretikes, as among the Iewes what was more challenged then theſe? and yet Chriſt ſaith, they were blind leaders of the blind. But the true marke is the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles truely taught and beleeued. A note of Chriſts ſheepe is the hearing of his voyce, Ioh. 10. 27. And, Ye are in the Father and the Sonne, if ye abide in the word which ye haue heard from the beginning, 1 Ioh. 2. 24. See Epheſ. 2. 20.

20. Ground.

The 20. ground is: That there ſhall be a reſurrection of the dead in the end of the world. This was one of the ſixe grounds of Catechiſme in the dayes of the Apoſtles; Heb. 6. 2. Hymeneus and Philetus deſtroyed the faith of certain, in teaching that the Reſurrection was alreadie paſt.

Aduerſaries.

Aduerſaries hereof, are the Family of loue, who hold that there is no Reſurrection but onely in this life.

21. Ground.

The laſt ground of doctrine is: There ſhall be a generall iudgement of all fleſh. It is one of the grounds. Heb. 6. 2. In which iudgement euerie mans works ſhall be tried, and euery man accordingly ſhall receiue ſentence of life or death eternall.

Aduerſaries.

The aduerſaries hereof, are firſt the Athieſt, who denieth God himſelfe, and conſequently his iudgement: Secondly, the drowſie Proteſtants, who in iudgement denie not the laſt iudgement, but yet plainely ſhewe in their liues that they are not perſwaded of it, for thē would they make more conſcience of ſin, and pleaſing God in all things. Theſe are the maine grounds of beleefe, vnto which al other may be reduced: Now followe the grounds of obedience and practiſe.

1. Ground.

The firſt ground of practiſe is, Luke 13. 3. Except ye repent ye ſhall periſh. In which two things are to be obſerued. Firſt, the duty required, that is, Repentance, the neceſſitie of which appeareth, in that without it men periſh. Secondly, the aduerſaries. Concerning repentance two things muſt be taught: firſt, what it is: ſecondly, what is the vſe of it. For the firſt; Repentance (as Paul deſcribeth it) is a conuerſion whereby a ſinner turneth himſelfe vnto God, and bringeth forth fruites worthie amendement of life. There be two kindes of conuerſion of a ſinner: Firſt, that whereby God turneth man. Secondly that whereby a man beeing turned by God, turneth himſelfe by grace: the former is no repentance properly, but the latter. Iere. 31. 18. Conuert thou me, and I ſhall be conuerted. Surely after that I conuerted I repented. Queſt. In what part is this conuerſion made? Anſ. It beginneth in the minde, but it is of the whole man, the mind laying off all purpoſe of ſinning, the conſcience calling backe from ſinne, the will not ſeeking to fulfill the luſts of it; but the whole man endeauouring to pleaſe God through his whole conuerſation: further repentance is attended with diuers fruites, worthie neweneſſe of life. Theſe are the duties of the Morall law, performed in faith and truth without hypocriſie, which becauſe they proceede from the ſame beginning, are approoued of God as repentance is; The ſecond point in this duty is, the vſe of repentance, & that is not to be a cauſe of ſaluation, but onely a way, wherein men muſt walk to life euerlaſting. We are ſlandered by the Popiſh Church, while they exclaime that our doctrine requireth nothing but faith to be ſaued by, and ſo we become enemies to all good workes. But this is not our doctrine, for we hold the workes of repentance to be the way of ſaluation. Indeede when we ſpeake of the inſtrument whereby we lay hold vpon Chriſt, that we ſay is faith onely, not hope, loue, or any workes; but when we ſpeake of a way to life, then faith is not alone, but repentance is required, hope, the feare of

Act. 26. 20.

God, and euery good worke. So women are ſaid to be ſaued thorough bearing of children, 1. Tim. 2. 15. namely, as a way wherein they practiſe their faith and obedience. Thus Abrahams faith and works went together, Iam. 2. 22.

Secondly: The Aduerſaries of this ground, are profeſſors of Religion, who content themſelues with a fained repentance; for moſt men beeing pricked and ſtung with the ſenſe of their ſinnes, for a while will hold downe their heads like a bulruſh, breake off their companie, come to Church, pray, heare the word, and performe other duties: but when the remorſe is once paſt, they returne to their former courſe of licentiouſneſſe, and this is thought a ſufficient repentance: whereas it is but ceremoniall, and a figge leafe whereby men ſeeke to couer themſelues: for true repentance changeth the minde, will, affections, conſcience, yea all the actions of life.

A patterne of Popiſh penitence.

Secondly, the Romiſh Church, which for many hundred yeares hath ouerturned this doctrine: as firſt in general aboue theſe 500. years, penance and publike confeſſion of perſons excommunicated, hath bin by them taken & deemed to be repentance it ſelfe; any other hath beene ſcarſe taught or knowne in theſe parts of the world. Secondly, repentance is by them turned into a iudiciall proceeding and ſentence of the court, wherein the Miniſter muſt be iudge, the ſinner muſt come vnder confeſſion: the Miniſter muſt paſſe ſentence, and the other muſt make ſatisfaction accordingly; which is an high abuſe of this doctrine. Thirdly, they hold the works of Contrition, Confeſſion, and Satisfaction, to merit, yea and to conferre pardon of ſinne, and ſo aboliſh the merit and ſatisfaction Chriſt. Secondly, the world hath beene by that Church deceiued in diuers particulars concerning this doctrine; as namely, firſt it hath beene taught that repentance, for the originall of it, is partly from nature, partly from grace; partly from God, partly from our ſelues: which is a falſe foundation, ioyning light with darkeneſſe, it beeing wholly from grace. Secondly, remorſe of conſcience (which the very deuills may haue) is made a part of repentance; Saul himſelfe, nay Iudas wanted not this contrition, which is no grace, but a preparation vnto it. Thirdly, they make Auricular Confeſſion, whereby euery man is bound to confeſſe all and euery one of his ſinnes, with their circumſtances in the Prieſts eare, ſo neceſſarie vnto repentance, as without which he cannot haue pardon; which is a very gibbet to the cõſcience. Fourthly, they turne their Canonicall ſatisfaction into ſatisfaction of Gods iuſtice for ſinne, wherein blaſphemouſly they ouerthrow the moſt perfect ſatisfaction of the Sonne of God. We are therefore to praiſe God who hath taken from our neckes this yoke of the Romane Church, which neither we nor our fathers were able to beare.

2. Ground.

The ſecond ground of practiſe is concerning the exerciſe of repentance, Luk. 9. 23. A If any man wil come after me let him deny himſelfe, and take vp his croſſe, and followe me. In which ground we will conſider three things: firſt the meaning, ſecondly the moment, thirdly the aduerſaries againſt whom we muſt contend. For the meaning; If any man will followe me] that is will be my Diſciple, (for Diſciples vſed to followe their Maſters and teachers) he muſt learne three duties: firſt, Let him deny himſelfe: ſecondly, take vp his croſſe: Thirdly, followe me: To the deniall of our ſelues three things are required: Firſt, we muſt for the magnifying of the grace God, abaſe our ſelues euen to nothing. An example whereof we haue in Paul, 1. Cor. 3. 7. I haue planted, Apollo hath watred: but neither B is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth, but God that giueth increaſe: If the planter be nothing, much leſſe the planted. We are not able as of our ſelues to think a good thought. And againe, All our ſufficiencie is of God. Secondly, we muſt renounce our owne reaſon aud will, and bring them vnder ſubiection to the wil of God, we muſt not ſtriue to haue wills of our owne, but let Chriſts will be ſufficient for vs, his wiſedome muſt be our reaſon. Thirdly, we muſt eſteeme all things as dung for Chriſt, and preſerue within vs a readineſſe to leaue and forſake friends, riches, honours, yea, our libertie, and life it ſelfe (if neede be) for his ſake and a good conſcience.

The ſecond duty is, To take vp our croſſe daily: C vnto which two things are required: firſt, euery member of the Church muſt make reckoning of, and looke for daily croſſes, priuate and particular in his calling and in his profeſſion. Secondly, when the Croſſe commeth it muſt be taken vp cheerefully, and borne with reioycing, Matth. 5. 12. Reioyce and be glad, namely, euen when men reuile and perſecute you. Rom. 5. 3. Iuſtified perſons are able to reioyce in tribulations; according to the exhortation, Iam. 1. 2. Count it an exceeding ioy. An example of the Saints, Heb. 10. 34. who ſuffered with ioy the ſpoyling of their goods.

The third duty of a Diſciple is: after the two former to followe Chriſt. For when Chriſt ſaith, D And followe me, it is as though he had ſaid: I goe before bearing my croſſe, let my diſciples follow me ſtep by ſtep in bearing of this croſſe. This containeth in it the maine duties of Chriſtian religion; to the performing of which two things are to be done: firſt, we muſt beare the croſſe in obedience as Chriſt did, who moſt willingly abaſed himſelfe to the death, euen the death of the croſſe, in obedience to his Fathers will. Queſt. But wherein ſtood this obedience of Chriſt? Anſ. In the practiſe of three ſpeciall vertues: firſt, Meekeneſſe, he opened not his mouth, he reuiled not beeing reuiled, reuenged not when he might. Secondly, Patience, he grudged not to ſuffer thoſe bittter torments for his very enemies. Thirdly, Loue, he prayed for thoſe that pierced him, and ſhed his heart blood: in all which it is our part to imitate him.

Secondly, we muſt be conformable vnto Chriſt A beeing our head; which conformitie conſiſteth in crucifying our body of corruption, euen as he was crucified vpon his croſſe. We muſt arme our ſelues with Peters exhortation, 1. Pet. 4.1. to ſuffer in the fleſh as Chriſt ſuffered in the fleſh. Which whoſoeuer doth, he ceaſeth from ſinne: he liueth not henceforth after the luſts of men, but after the will of God, verſ. 2. The learning of this duty helpeth forward our obedience vnder the croſſe, which many cannot attaine vnto (who in time of their peace are in ſome ſort obedient) becauſe they beare not about in their bodies the dyings of Chriſt daily. 2. Cor. 4.

The ſecond point. The moment and weight of this ground, appeareth Luke 9. 24. He that will ſaue his life, ſhall looſe it, B that is, that will not take vp his croſſe to followe Chriſt, ſhall neuer be ſaued. Againe, Baptiſme is a maine ground, Heb. 6.1. namely, as it is ioined with inward baptiſme, for elſe outward baptiſme may be wanting, ſo it be without contempt; but both together are a maine ground, eſpecially in regard of that ſtipulation we make, and that profeſſion which we receiue vpon vs thereby, of forſaking euen our ſelues, and following of Chriſt, without which can be no ſaluation: which beeing the matter and ſubſtance of this ground, ſheweth euidently the importãce of it.

The third point. Aduerſaries of this ground are, firſt among our ſelues, ſuch as are content to make Chriſt a Sauiour and Redeemer, but not a patterne and example of imitation in his vertues: C but Chriſt will not be made a packe-horſe onely to beare ſinnes, ſeeing he hath propounded himſelfe a preſident to be followed of thoſe who looke for ſaluation by his ſufferings: they muſt firſt be his Diſciples before he be their Redeemer. Secondly, a more wicked enemie withſtanding this doctrine is the Church of Rome, in exalting nature, and extenuating the grace of God; as firſt, holding that all ſinnes deſerue not death, but may be done away by a little knocking on the breaſt, or ſuch light ſorrowe. Secondly, that by nature man hath free will in his conuerſion, and beeing helped by the holy Ghoſt, can mooue himſelfe vnto ſaluation. Thirdly, that after iuſtification there is nothing in a man that God can hate. D Fourthly, that a man may merit life, and performe works of ſatisfaction to God; which deuilliſh doctrines what elſe doe they but make the heart ſwell with pride, ſo as it can neuer be brought to the deniall of it ſelfe.

Popiſh doctrine ſuffereth not a man to ſet one foote forward toward Chriſt, becauſe it reſiſteth deniall of a mans ſelfe.

3. Ground.

The third ground is taken from the Morall law: thou ſhalt haue no other God before my face. The ſcope and meaning of which lawe is, to direct vs in chuſing the true God onely to be our God; which is done, firſt, when we knowe and acknowledge him as he hath reuealed himſelfe in his word: ſecondly, when we giue our hearts vnto him, according to that precept; My ſonne giue me thy heart. Now the heart is giuen to God when he is loued and feared aboue all, when he is alone truſted in, relied on in danger, when we aſcribe all power vnto him, beleeue in him, ſubiect our ſelues vnto him in our very conſcience; for whatſoeuer hath theſe is become our God. Secondly, that this is a ground cannot be doubted: for whoſoeuer taketh not the true God for his God, is out of all way to ſaluation, ſeeing there is no couenant between God and him, and beeing out of the couenant, can haue no part nor inheritance in Gods kingdome.

Thirdly, Aduerſaries of this ground are, firſt the Romiſh doctrine, which committeth high treaſon againſt God, in giuing his honour to other things; as to Saints and dead men, whom they make Gods, by teaching inuocation to be due vnto them, and ſo attributing an infinite power, wiſedome, or preſence vnto them, which are Gods properties. Secondly, in teaching that men can merit, they make them Gods. For if Chriſt himſelfe had beene a meere man, he could not haue merited. Thirdly, in aſcribing to dead creatures the vertue of the holy Ghoſt; as to water, the power of ſanctification, driuing away deuils, and waſhing away ſinnes. Fourthly, in ſetting vp the woodden Croſſe for a God, which muſt be worſhipped with the ſame worſhip and affection as God himſelfe is. The Virgine Mary they make a Goddeſſe and Queene of heauen, whom they pray to command her ſonne. And laſtly, the Pope, to whom they giue power to pardon ſinne properly, and to make lawes to binde conſcience, as properly as Gods lawes doe.

No maruell if that religion teach to denie honour and allegeãce due to our earthly Gods.

The ſecond aduerſarie is the common Proteſtant, who carrieth an outward profeſſion of Chriſt, but in his heart ſetteth vp many Gods; as the bellie, wealth, pleaſure, yea the Deuill is the god of many men, as Phil. 3. 19. 2. Cor. 4. 4. others ſet all their hearts and ſtudie for the accompliſhment of their ſinnes; nowe ſinne hauing the hold in their hearts, is become their God. Yea and it is a common practiſe of many Proteſtants in their croſſes to put off their confidence in God, and betake themſelues to cunning men and Southſayers; ſo leauing the liuing God, and truſt for their helpe in the deuill himſelfe.

4. Ground.

The fourth ground of practiſe concerneth the worſhip of God: Exod. 20. 5. Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelfe any grauen Image, &c. The firſt point. The meaning: This Commandement hath two parts: the former forbidding the making of Images: the latter, the worſhipping of them. The former in theſe words: Thou ſhalt not make vnto thy ſelfe, &c. In which is not ſimply forbidden the making of Images, as if they be for politicall or hiſtoricall vſe, but the making of them in way of religion or conſcience, to put vs in remembrance of God, or to worſhip God in, by, or at the ſame. The latter in theſe words: Thou ſhalt not bowe downe, &c. That is, thou ſhalt not ſo much as bowe downe thy bodie before ſuch an Image made by o-

A thers, neither to worſhip it, nor the true God in it: which expoſition becauſe it is oppugned by a great part of the world, I will prooue by ſome reaſons: Firſt, that which was the ſinne of the Iſraelites in making Images, is here forbidden: but their common ſinne in the vſe of Images was to make them repreſentations of the true God, and to worſhip the true God in them, as appeareth, Exod. 32. 4. 5. The Iſraelites hauing made a golden Calfe ſaid: Theſe be thy Gods, O Iſrael, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt: that is, this is a repreſentation of that God who brought thee out of Egypt: for they ſhould haue beene worſe then mad men, if they had called that Calfe which was but one B day old, that God which brought them many daies before out of Egypt: beſides that, Images true or falſe are vſually called by the name of Gods, as being ſo in the reputation of the worſhippers. Further Aaron ſaid, To morrowe ſhall be the holy day of the Lord: ſignifying that the Calfe was made to repreſent the true God, whom in the Calfe they were to worſhip. Againe, Iud. 17. 3. Michaes mother ſheweth that her intent was to worſhip God in the Image, when ſhe ſaith, that ſhe had dedicated eleuen hundred ſhekels of ſiluer to the Lord, to make a grauen and a molten Image; and hauing made the Image, ſhe ſaith, Now will the Lord bleſſe me: though his fact was groſſe idolatrie, yet he ſheweth that he worſhipped the Lord in the Image, whoſe bleſſing he boaſted of. C Eſay 40. 18. To whom will ye liken God? whence it is plaine: they made images of the true God to worſhip him in. Iudg. 2. 21. The Iſraelites were ſore afflicted for ſeruing Baal and Aſhteroth, that is, Idols fetched from the Heathen: but herein their intent was to worſhip the true God in them, as appeareth Hoſe. 2. 16. Thou ſhalt call me no more Baali, but Iſhi. Yea the very Heathen themſelues worſhipped the true God in their Images, Rom. 1. 23. They turned the glorie of the true God, into the ſimilitude of a corruptible creature; much more then the Iſraelites who tooke their Idolatrie from them: and therefore in the ſecond commandement is forbidden the making of Images of the true God, D and not of falſe onely, as the Papiſts would falſely teach vs. The ſecond reaſon is in Deut. 4. 15. 16. where Moſes making a Commentarie vpon this commandement, and forbidding to make any repreſentation of any figure, addeth this reaſon: Ye ſawe no image in the day that the Lord ſpake out of Horeb: and therefore Moſes vnderſtood the Commandement as we doe, namely, not to make any Image of the true God. The third reaſon is in the words, Thou ſhalt not make the Image of any thing that is in heauen aboue, &c. Seeing then that God is in heauen aboue, as alſo the Saints and Angels, we muſt make no Image to repreſent them: for euen Images of the true God are Idols, hated of God, and condemned in the Sriptures: ſo the golden Calfe is called an Idoll, Act. 7. 41.

The ſecond point, is the weight of this ground ſtanding herein, that whoſoeuer ouerthroweth this ground, ouerturneth this religion. For firſt, whoſoeuer reſembleth God in any Image, and worſhippeth him therein, he denieth the true God, Rom. 1. 25. The wiſeſt of the Heathen worſhipping God in their Images, turned the truth of God into a lie: ſo whatſoeuer men may beleeue of worſhipping the true God in an Image, the truth is, it will prooue no better then a lie vnto them. The Apoſtle affirmeth, that whatſoeuer the Gentiles ſacrificed to Idols, they ſacrificed it vnto Deuills, and not vnto God. Some may aske, how can this be, ſeeing their intent was to ſacrifice vnto God? I anſwer, that by offering to an Image, they denied God, and ſo not ſeruing him, they became ſacrificers to the Deuill: for whoſoeuer conceiueth of God, otherwiſe then he will be conceiued of, conceiue an Idol, and not God; and he that will remember him in things wherein he will not be remembred, forgetteth him, as the Iſraelites, Pſal. 106. 21. Secondly, profeſſed Idolatrie maketh a ſeparation betweene God and his people, as adulterie doth betweene man and wife. For as a wife that ſeeketh to ſtrangers, denieth her proper husband; ſo the Church, which is the ſpouſe of God, going a whoring after Images and ſtrange Gods, denieth God her husband, and procureth the Bill of diuorce: ſee Hoſeah 2. and Ier. 3. 8.

1.Cor.10.20.

Thirdly, the Aduerſaries of this ground are, the profeſſed Papiſts: firſt, in allowing making of Images for Religions ſake; as the Image of Chriſt crucified, which they call the Crucifix; and of Chriſt glorified, which they call Agnus Dei: alſo Images of the Virgin Marie, and other Saints; yea curſing and condemning all thoſe that forbidde the making of them, and ſo curſe euen the Lord himſelfe: yea and moſt blaſphemouſly in former times they were wont to make Images of the Trinitie, picturing the Father like an old man, the Sonne like a child, the holy Ghoſt like a Doue, and yet much more blaſphemouſly then that, otherwiſe: but they are now aſhamed of ſuch wicked pictures. Secondly, they maintaine, yea and command the worſhip of Chriſt in an Image, and condemne them who denie the worſhipping of Images, whether they be Images of God, or of Saints, Angels, or dead men. Thirdly, they teach that a man is to worſhip the Crucifix religiouſly, yea with the ſame worſhip and deuotion with which Chriſt himſelfe is worſhipped, wherewith alſo they worſhippe their breaden-God.

If the Pope had bin with Moſes in the Mount, he would haue demurred vpon the admittance of the ſecond Commandement.

In former times their conſciences ſecretly checking them of their Idolatries, cauſed them to leaue out the whol ſecond Commandement, and diuide the laſt into two, to fill vp the number: but of later daies, ſeeing they are conſtrained to retaine the Commandement, they haue found out ſome ſhift, which we will examine. Firſt, they ſay, there is a difference betweene an Idoll and an Image, as the one is a Greeke word, the other a Latin: the former is a repreſentation of the true God, the latter of Anſwer. falſe Gods. Anſ. The difference is but in the word, for indeede they be both one, Acts 7.41.

Obiect.1.

Obiect. 2. The Calfe was an Image and an Idoll too. Ob.
They make difference alſo of worſhip, which λατρεία. they ſay is of two ſorts: the firſt is Latreia, this is a worſhip and reuerence due to God onely:
δουλία. the ſecond is Dulia, and this is a ſeruice due vn-Anſwer. to Saints, to the Crucifixe, &c. Anſ. But be-ſides that the Scripture make theſe both one, they herein bewray their follie, in that if either be greater, it is Dulia, which is a kinde of ſeruice moſt ſubmiſſe, and that properly which vaſſals were wont to yeeld their Lords who had taken them in warre, and yet this muſt be giuen to Saints, and the wooden Croſſe, beeing the Obiect. 3. greateſt ſubiection. Obiect 3. But they intende to worſhip not the image of the Croſſe, but Anſwer. Chriſt in it. Anſ. No intention of man can in-ſtitute a true worſhip of God, without warrant from God himſelfe, who neuer authorized men Obiect. 4. to worſhip him in Images. Obiect. 4. Engliſh-men kneele downe to the Chaire of Eſtate, the King not beeing in preſence, and therefore we Anſwer. may much more to Saints and Angels. Anſ.
Firſt, this is a ciuill and politike worſhip, teſtifying the ſubiects alleageance; but kneeling to Saints is religious. Secondly, the King appointeth his Chaire of Eſtate to be a ſigne of his preſence, and willeth it; but no Papiſts can prooue that euer Chriſt appointed a Crucifixe to be a ſigne of his preſence: or that God willeth their Images to be ſignes of his preſence.
Thirdly, the Chaire of Eſtate is a ſigne only in the Kings abſence; for himſelfe beeing preſent, the ciuill worſhip is performed to himſelfe: but Chriſt is neuer abſent from his Church, & yet in his preſence they ſet vp an Image to remember him by. Thus that Church beeing an open Idolater muſt not be ioyned with; for ſhe is not ioyned to Chriſt any longer, but is a profeſſed harlot; neither is it ſo indifferent (as ſome thinke) to finde ſaluation there as well as by our Religion.

5. Ground. The fifth ground is, Matth. 4. 10. Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerue. That this is a chiefe ground needes no proofe; and therefore we will conſider firſt the meaning: ſecondly the aduerſaries againſt whom we muſt contend. To knowe the meaning, the words going before will affoord vs ſome direction; wherein Satan hauing moo-ued Chriſt to fall downe and worſhippe him with bodily worſhippe onely, and requiring not the maine worſhip due to God, but a little bowing of the bodie; betokening that he was the diſpoſer of the kingdomes of the world:
this Chriſt denieth him with this reaſon ratified by Scripture, that it is a worſhip and ſeruice proper to God, and to be tendred to him onely. Secondly, the words themſelues are to Προσκυνήσεις. be weighed: By [worſhip] is properly ſignified
A bodily worſhippe in a bodily geſture: the meaning then is, thou ſhalt with thy bodie adore the Lord, for ſo it is ſutable to Sa-thans demaund. The word [ſerue] ſignifieth all worſhippe due to God both inward and outward. [Onely] This word appertaineth to both the members, and ſo to the whole ſentence: for els there ſhould be no direct denial of Satans temptation, requiring onely the former and not the latter. But ſome will ſay, we may Obiect.
ſerue men lawfully, how then is ſeruice proper to God onely? There be two kinds of worſhip; Anſwer. religious, and Ciuill. Religious, is an action or actions of reuerence and ſubiection, whereby a man doth acknowledge the Godhead it ſelfe, or B the properties thereof, either in God himſelfe truly, or in the creature falſely. Theſe properties of God are, firſt, to be an abſolute Lord.
Secondly, to be Almightie. Thirdly to be preſent in all places at all times. Fourthly, to heare all men in all places at all times. Fiftly, to know all things paſt, preſent, and to come, yea, and the hearts of men. Sixtly, to be a giuer of all good things, and the preuenter of all euill. Now any action of reuerence in ſignification of any of theſe properties, is a religious worſhip; the very intent of the minde in religious worſhip, beeing to aſcribe either God-head or diuine properties to the thing worſhipped. Ciuill or politike worſhip is, when men performe actions of reuerence and ſubiection vnto others, as ac-C knowledging them to be preferred aboue themſelues in gifts or authoritie. Thus bowing of the bodie is ſometime religious, when it is done to God, in acknowledging his properties; and ſometime ciuil, performed to a man in reſpect of his eminencie in gifts and gouernment. But theſe words of Chriſt are meant onely of the former, and not of the latter which belongs vnto man. This ground thus truely conceiued, af-foardeth vs theſe two maine points of religion:
firſt, that God is to be worſhipped with a religious worſhip. Secondly, that all religious worſhip is proper to God, and due to him alone. Now religious worſhip is two-fold: firſt, inward ſtanding in two things; faith and inward obedience. Secondly, outward, when this inward worſhip is outwardly teſtified, conſiſting of three princi-D pall parts: firſt, in preaching, hearing, and reading the word: ſecondly, in receiuing the two Sacraments: thirdly, in prayer and thankſgiuing publike and priuate.

The Aduerſaries hereof are the Papiſts, who pretend the Catholike Religion, but indeede o- Aduerſaries. Catholiks, the Catho-like deprauers of Gods worſhip.
uerthrowe it, deprauing the outward worſhip of God, wherein the inward is teſtified. The firſt part whereof ſtanding in the preaching, hearing, and reading of the word, they depraue:
firſt, by mingling the pure word of God with mans word and writings: and authoriſing bookes Apochryphall as Canonicall Scripture. Secondly, by making vnwritten Traditions Apoſtolicall and Eccleſiaſticall (as they ſay) of equall authoritie with the Scripture.

Thirdly, in that they teach in their Catechiſms, that the worſhip of God doth ſtand in obeying the Commandements of the Church, as well as the Commandements of God themſelues, and are neceſſarily to be practiſed vnto ſaluation, and ſo they worſhip God in vaine, Mat. 15. 9. Fourthly, in that they allowe no Bible to be authenticall, but onely the Latin tranſlation of Ierome, renouncing both the Hebrew and Greek fountaines: and yet learned Papiſts confeſſe that their Latin text is corrupted, and that therefore the true ſenſe is to be fetched frō the Popes determination and from Councels, and no other ſenſe to be admitted. Fiftly, in that they make Images Lay mens bookes & teachers; & debarre the people of the Scriptures publikely and priuately in the vulgar tongue, and ſuffer it onely to be read by them and vnto them in the Latin tongue vnknowne vnto them.

The ſecond part of outward worſhip ſtanding in adminiſtration of Sacraments, they likewiſe corrupt and aboliſh: for howſoeuer Baptiſme is preſerued for the ſubſtance of it in the Romiſh Church, which (as a lanterne carrieth the light) it retaineth not for it owne, but for the hidden Churches ſake within it; yet haue they aboliſhed the Lords Supper for the ſubſtance of it: firſt, of a Sacrament they haue made it a reall ſacrifice. Secondly, they haue turned the Communion into a priuate Maſſe, where the Prieſt alone receiueth all, and the people nothing. Thirdly although in a Sacrament there muſt be diſtinction betweene the ſigne and the thing ſignified, yet they make none, but ouerthrow all ſuch ſignification of the ſignes by their tranſubſtantiation. Fourthly, they haue turned the body of Chriſt into a breaden God, which they carrie about in boxes and worſhip; which is as vilde an Idolatrie as euer was among the Heathen, not inferiour to the worſhipping of Cats and Bulls as gods among the Egypians. Fiftly, they haue added to Chriſts inſtitutiō fiue Sacraments, viz. Penance, Confirmation, Orders, Matrimonie, and annoynting. But indeede Baptiſme is a Sacrament of Penance: the Lords ſupper of Confirmation: and further they are deceiued in the other.

The third part of outward worſhip concerneth Prayer and thanksgiuing, this they ouerthrowe likewiſe: firſt, they mocke God in praying in an vnknowen tongue, not knowing what they aske, much leſſe ſeriouſly addreſſing themſelues vnto the duty which euen earthly Kings would diſdaine. Secondly, in prayer muſt be brought ſenſe of want and contrition of heart, this they cannot bring who are taught that they merit by prayer. Thirdly, prayer muſt be made in particular faith, but this they make preſumption. Fourthly, they allowe praying to creatures, and the mediation of Saints, and ſo denie the very ſubſtance of prayer, which is to make requeſt to God onely in the alone mediation of Chriſt.

The ſecond maine point of Religion out of this ground is this; That Religious Worſhip is due to God alone: for we may not giue appearance of religious worſhip to creatures. Cornelius is reprooued for giuing to Peter exceſſe euen of ciuill worſhip, Acts 10. 25. for he knew Peter to be a man of God; and ſo ſeemed to mingle a kind of Religious worſhip with ciuill. This is a maine ground alſo, which whoſoeuer denieth he holdeth not the head Chriſt, Col. 2. 18. 19.

Aduerſaries. Popiſh praiers, fitter to be preferred to dead men then the liuing God.

The Aduerſaries of this ground alſo are the profeſſed Papiſts, who worſhip Saints and Angells, not onely by kneeling before them, but praying alſo vnto them; which cannot be denied to be a religious worſhip, ſeeing it attributeth vnto them to heare the prayers of all men, at all times, in all places, yea and to knowe the hearts of men vpon earth. Secondly, they maintaine religious worſhip of Images, they goe on pilgrimage vnto them, offer incenſe, creepe vnto them, and kneel before them. Yea they worſhip the Crucifixe with the ſame worſhip whereby they would adore Chriſt, if he were liuing vpon earth, as alſo the reliques of Saints. Out of all which we ſee what to thinke of that Church which only hath the name of a Church, ſhe holdeth not the head Chriſt, ſeeing for ſo many hundred yeares ſhe hath diſplaied her fornication in worſhipping Saints, Angels, Images, & the Virgin Mary, ſo as her Bill of diuorcement is iuſtly giuen her, 2. Theſſ. 2. 10. Reuel. 13. 8. from whom we muſt ſeparate, if we would not partake with her in her plagues.

6. Ground.

The ſixth ground of practiſe is, Eſai. 8. 13. Sanctifie the Lord of hoſts: which words containe the ſubſtance of the third Commandement: in which conſider firſt the meaning, ſecondly the weight, thirdly the Aduerſaries. For the meaning: A thing is ſaid to be ſanctified two waies; either when it is made holy; or when it is acknowledged to be made holy. Now this latter muſt be here vnderſtood, for Gods name cannot be made holy, which is holineſſe it ſelfe, and the firſt cauſe of all holineſſe; but it is ſanctified of vs, when we acknowledge it holy: and this our ſanctification of God, either reſpecteth God himſelfe, or the gifts of God. Our ſanctification of God himſelfe (the thing intended in this ground) is done two waies: firſt, when in our mind we acknowledge and praiſe him in his attributes, of wiſedome, mercie, louing kindneſſe, power, prouidence, and ſuch like, 1. Pet. 3. 15. Sanctifie the Lord God in your hearts; that is, acknowledge him in his wiſedome, power, and other his attributes: Looke as good ſubiects ſpeaking of, and mentioning their Prince, will put off their hats in reuerent opinion of him; ſo we religiouſly ſhould thinke and ſpeak of theſe. Iob fearing onely and but ſuſpecting, that his ſonnes in their feaſtings had diſhonoured this name of God, ſanctified them. When Ezekias heard the blaſphemies of Rabſheka againſt God, he hūbled himſelfe, rent his cloathes and put on ſackecloath, 2.King 19. 1. Yea wicked Ahab hauing heard (though falſely) that Naboth had blaſphemed God, he rent his cloathes and proclamed a faſt: which ſheweth (whatſoeuer his fact was), the vſe and manner of holy men in his time, when Gods name was diſhonoured and blaſphemed. Secondly we ſanctifie God himſelfe, when we with reuerence acknowledge his titles, as God, Lord, Iehouah, Father, Chriſt, Ieſus, Holy Ghoſt; and not without religious and obedient affection ſpeaking or thinking of them. Our ſanctification of Gods gifts, which are many, as the Word preached, Prayer, Sacraments, Meate, Drinke, and all things ſeruing for the good of bodie or ſoule, is not by giuing or adding any holineſſe vnto them, which in themſelues are all holy; but when we acknowledge them holie by preparing our ſelues to a holy vſe of them, and vſe them accordingly with good conſcience; for euery creature of God hath a double vſe: Firſt, a lawfull vſe when God permits a generall vſe of his creatures, thus all may vſe meate, drinke, apparrell, &c. Secondly, a holy vſe, when a creature in his lawfull vſe is vſed in a holy manner, for this includeth the former, though that may be without this. For example, all the Iewes kept the Paſſeouer lawfully, but onely thoſe celebrated it holily, who prepared thēſelues according to the cōmandement: which holy vſe is obtained by the word and prayer. 1. Tim. 4. The word directeth vs to vſe theſe gifts of God in obedience; and prayer obtaineth grace to vſe them according to the word: vnto which holy vſe of Gods creatures we are to be moued by theſe reaſons: firſt, we muſt diſtinguiſh our ſelues from the bruite beaſts: the ſwine in the forreſt eateth vp the maſte, but looketh not vp to heauen, no not to the tree whence it falleth. Secondly, becauſe we haue loſt our title to all the creatures in Adam, which onely is in this vſe reſtored. Thirdly, becauſe they are the gifts of God, we muſt thus acknowledge them to be his, and in him learne to vſe them. Fourthly, that we may auoide the common abuſe of them, whereby he is prouoked to diſpleaſure.

The ſecond point is the weight of this ground: which may appeare in the contrary: ſeeing the blaſphemer doth what he can to ouerthrowe the Godhead it ſelfe; whence euery ſuch one is called by ſuch a name as ſignifieth a piercer of God, or one that thruſteth God thorough: and therefore the ſanctification of God is a ground of moment. Secondly, the firſt petition of the Lords Prayer is, ſanctified be thy name: wherein we are taught to preferre and pray for the halowing of Gods name before our owne ſaluation. Thridly, the ſcope of the third Commandement is the ſame, which whoſoeuer obſerueth not, reuerſeth both the former. And laſtly, the Lord is ſo iealous of his glorie, that he will be ſanctified of all them that come neere him, elſe he will ſanctifie himſelfe in their confuſion. Leuit. 10. 3.

Leuit. 24. 14. 16.

Aduerſaries.

Thirdly: The Aduerſaries of this ground are firſt, though (by Gods mercie) the religion of the Church of England is no aduerſarie vnto it, yet the liues of the moſt fight againſt it: for although when we mention earthly Princes, we can vſe all reuerence, yet Gods name is moſt fearefully abuſed, and toſſed in wicked mens mouthes by oathes and curſed ſpeakings; beſides that, many abuſe the ſame to Charmes, and Spells in their ſorceries, and men thinke all is well, becauſe herein they vſe good words: but the truth is, the better the words be the greater is the ſinne: yea it is noted to be a ſigne of a low & baſe ſpirit not to ſweare & blaſphem vpon any occaſion: many ſouldiers thinke they cannot be couragious enough vnleſſe they peirce God and rent Chriſt by deteſtable oaths, ſuch as would cauſe wicked Ahab himſelfe to rend his cloathes at the hearing.

Secondly, the great aduerſarie is the Papiſt, and that diuers waies: firſt, in that they teach that the very doing of ſome worke is a ſanctification of God; as the outward worke of Baptiſme, yea in it the very action of the Miniſter is a worſhip of God, and doth conferre grace, ex opere operato; this was there old doctrine, which nowe they colour with this addition: If the partie be well and rightly diſpoſed: but beſides the vſe, yea the lawfull and common vſe, there is by this ground required an holy vſe of any thing to make it acceptable to God, or rightly profitable to the doer himſelfe. Secondly, their hollowing of Water, Bells, Palmes, Aſhes, Spettle, is a mere mockery of God, ſeeing they haue neither word nor promiſe from God, that theſe creatures ſhould be thus hallowed to preſerue from euill, bodie or ſoule. Thirdly, they erre in the foundation of religion diuers waies; euery which ſuch errour is blaſphemie. Fourthly, that Religion oppugneth the ſanctification of Gods name in the vſe of a lawfull oath, teaching firſt that the Pope hath power to diſpenſe with an oath. Secondly, that men may ſweare by the Maſſe, and ſo doing make it a God. Thirdly, euen the learned among them with one conſent hold, that a man may ſweare ambiguouſly, euē whē he knoweth the thing to be otherwiſe.

Popiſh hallowing of the creatures, diſhonoureth the Creator.

7. Ground.

The ſeauenth ground is, Gal. 5. 15 The whole lawe is fulfilled in this one word, Thou ſhall loue thy neighbour as thy ſelfe. The meaning is not that we ſhould loue our neighbour equally with our ſelues, and with no leſſe affection, or degree of loue; but that with the ſame chreefullneſſe, and willingneſſe, and truth of heart that we performe duties of loue to our ſelues, ought we alſo to reach them out vnto others. The weight of this ground appeareth, in that not onely Chriſt ſaith, It is like the great Commandement, but alſo in that it is the ſumme of the whole law: for the firſt Table muſt be practiſed in the ſecond, and the loue of God teſtified in loue to men.

Aduerſaries.

The Aduerſaries of this ground be the Po-

A fit principle for that religion, which wholly ſeeketh it ſelfe.

piſh Church, who thus expound it: Firſt loue thy ſelfe, and then thy neighbour; making the loue of our ſelues the foundation of the loue of others: but ſometime we may loue our neighbour aboue our ſelues; as Ionathan loued Dauid more then his owne ſoule, and Chriſt loued his enemies more then his owne life. Secondly, it teacheth that a man muſt not loue particularly his particular enemie, nor ſalute him in particular, but generally, as if he ſalute a whole companie together, his enemie beeing there.

8. Ground.

The eight ground: Exod. 20. 12. Honour thy father and thy mother, &c. In the words two things are to be conſidered: firſt, an ordinance of God: ſecondly, the meanes to preſerue it. The ordinance is, that all men muſt not be equall in degree, but there muſt be orders of men, of whō ſome are to be in higher degree, as ſuperiours; ſome in lower condition, as inferiours; the former are aboue others in regard of power to commaund and to puniſh: the latter are in ſubiection vnder others, by whoſe diſcretion and will they are to be gouerned. This ordinance is deſcribed, Rom. 13. 1. Let euery ſoule be ſubiect to the ſuperiour power: that is, be content to be vnder others which are aboue him in power: ſo here, ſome muſt be as fathers, and mothers, ſome muſt bee ſubiected vnto them. The meanes to preſerue this ordinance, is the yeelding of honour vnto whom it belōgeth, which ſtandeth in three things: firſt, in reuerence towards the perſons of ſuperiours. Secondly, in obedience to their iuſt commandements. Thirdly in thankefulneſſe for their paines in gouerning: thus is that golden ſentence to be expounded, Matth. 22. Giue vnto Cæſar the things that are Cæſars; that is, giue him reuerence, obedience, thankefulneſſe; according to that, Rom. 13. 7. Giue feare vnto whom feare belongeth, honour to whō honour, tribute to whom tribute.

The weight of this ground is plaine, becauſe without it can be no practiſe of true religion: for firſt, by it ſtand the three things, the Familie, the Church, and Common-wealth; all which are maintained by gouernment, and ſubiection: wherefore the Lord ſet this Cōmandement the firſt of the ſecond Table, as wherupon he would found all humane ſocieties. Secondly, gouernours in any of theſe ſocieties, are the keepers of both Tables, without whoſe helpe and authority Gods kingdom could haue no abiding on the earth.

Aduerſaries. Such is the cariage of the Romane Cleargie, as they had neede keepe the ciuil magiſtrate off them, and be their owne iudges.

Aduerſaries of this Commandement, are the Papiſts, who weaken the authoritie of the Magiſtrate, in exempting their Clergie from all Ciuill power of Magiſtracie in cauſes both iudiciall (that is, matters controuerſall) and criminall, that is, matters of treſpaſſe, although the Apoſtle ſaith, Let euery ſoule be ſubiect. Secondly, that Church hath ſet vp a power to bring into order and ſubiection all the Kings vpon earth, namely, the power of the Pope, who challengeth to himſelfe to ouerrule, yea and to depoſe at his pleaſure Kings and Queenes, who in their dominions are aboue all and only vnder God. Thirdly, that religion leſſeneth the power of parents: for in the Councell of Trent they eſtabliſh, firſt, Mariages, and Contracts made by children without conſent of parents. Secondly, Vowes alſo made by children vnder age, and without conſent of parents, are held lawful, and not to be broken.

9. Ground.

The ninth ground is, Micha. 6. 8. He hath ſhewed thee O man what is good, and what the Lord requireth of thee, ſurely to doe iuſtly, to loue mercie, to humble thy ſelfe, and to walke with thy God. The meaning. Three vertues are here required: firſt Iuſt dealing: ſecondly, mercy: thirdly, Humilitie. Touching the firſt, we are commaunded to doe iuſtly: and this execution of iuſtice betweene man and man hath fiue ſubſtantiall parts: Firſt to giue honour to whome honour is due. Secondly, by thought word and deed to preſerue the bodie and ſoule of our neighbour, that is, his life ſpirituall and temporall. Thirdly, his chaſtitie, which is the honour of bodie and ſoule in ſingle life and Matrimonie. Fourthly, his worldly eſtate. Fiftly, his good name. This is the ſcope of all the cōmandements of the ſecond Table.

Now becauſe the due execution of iuſtice muſt be tempered with mercie, therefore is mercie required of man in the ſecond place, which is a readineſſe to releeue the miſerie of the diſtreſſed. And thirdly, becauſe iuſtice and mercie without godlineſſe are but ciuil vertues, we are in the laſt place commanded to walke in humilitie with our God, which containeth the ſumme of the firſt table, and ſtandeth in three things: firſt, we muſt acknowledge our ſinnes: ſecondly, intreate for pardon: thirdly, purpoſe not to offend God any more, but endeauour to preuent ſinne to come.

Concerning the weight of this ground, it appeareth in Micha. 6. 7. where the Lord teſtifieth himſelfe to be more delighted with the practiſe of loue and mercie, then with oblations of thouſands of Rammes, and tenne thouſand riuers of oyle: and elſewere, I will haue mercie, and not ſacrifice. Yea Titus 2. 12. this is made the end of the appearing of the grace of God, that we ſhould liue ſoberly in regard of our ſelues, iuſtly in regard of others, and godlily in regard of God. Theſe vertues are ſo reſpected of God, that they are ſaid to go immediatly before his face, Pſal. 89. 14. & ſo neceſſarie among men, that without them no ſocietie can be preſerued.

Aduerſaries.

The aduerſaries hereof are, firſt, the liues of moſt men, who ſeeke their owne things, and not to maintaine the liues, goods, name, chaſtitie of others: yea too many preferre their priuate gaine before the common good of men in Church and common-wealth. Secondly, the maine aduerſary is the Romane Religion, which defendeth the greateſt iniuſtice that can be, by eſtabliſhing a Monarchy among themſelues, not onely controlling the ſoueraigne authoritie of Princes in their owne kingdomes, but alſo exempting their ſubiects frõ their allegeance at their pleaſure. Of which vſurped power debarre them once, and that counterfeit Religion will fall with it, becauſe it is onely vnderpropped by it. Secondly, that Religion ouerthroweth iuſtice in chaſtitie: for firſt, it giueth power to the Pope to diſpenſe with mariges within degrees of nature; it licenſeth the brother by that diſpenſation to marrie his brothers wife, and ſo is a patrone of horrible inceſt. Secondly, it defendeth the toleration of Stewes. Thirdly, by ſolemne decree it forbiddeth mariages to ſundrie orders of men, which Paul calleth a doctrine of deuils, 1. Tim. 4. Yea they binde certaine men and women from mariage, and yet call it a Sacrament. Fourthly, the laſt Councell of Trent affirmeth, that all marriges not ſolemnized by a Maſſe-prieſt, and in the faith of the Romiſh Church, are of none effect. Thirdly, that Religion teacheth, that to ſteale a ſmall thing, is a veniall ſinne; whereas the thought of ſtealing deſerueth the curſe of the law. Secondly, it defendeth begging: yea and placeth holineſſe in it; whereas the word teacheth that there ſhould bee no begger in Iſrael. Fourthly, it teacheth that a ſporting lie, or a beneficiall lie are veniall ſinnes, flat againſt the ninth Commandement. Laſtly, againſt the tenth Commandement it teacheth iniuſtice, namely, that hurtfull motions intended againſt our neighbour (if there be no conſent of will) are no ſin. Whence we may ſee what to thinke of that Religion; yea Chriſt himſelfe ſheweth, Matth. 5. 19. Whoſoeuer breaketh the leaſt of theſe Commandments, and teach men ſo to do, he is the leaſt in the kingdome of heauen, that is, he hath no part therein. But the Romane Church breaketh them, yea and teacheth men to doe ſo, and therefore it is not of God, and the peremptorie teachers therof haue no part (without repẽtance) in the kingdome of heauen.

c.Ground.

The 10. ground is, 1. Cor. 7. 20. Let euery man abide in that calling in which he was called. Firſt the meaning. The ſcope of the words ſheweth, that among the Corinths ſome who were ſlaues & ſeruants, but conuerted to the faith (their maſters ſtill remaining Infidels) thought that now they were free frõ their maiſters, & might relinquiſh their ſeruice, and hence tooke occaſion to liue as they liſt; againſt which conceit of licentiouſneſſe, the Apoſtle Paul oppoſeth himſelfe, and wiſheth that this be reformed, and that thoſe who beeing called to the faith vnder vnbeleeuers, abide in that ſame calling wherein they were called. In which verſe two things are contained: Firſt, that euery man that would liue religiouſly, muſt haue a double calling: firſt, the generall calling of a Chriſtian: ſecondly, ſome particular vocation and calling wherein to conuerſe. Secondly, that euery man muſt abide in his particular calling: which that a man may doe, firſt he muſt be contented and well pleaſed with his calling. Secondly, he muſt walke diligently in the duties thereof; for theſe reaſons: firſt, the commandement of God, Gen. 3. 19. In the ſweate of thy face, ſhalt thou eate thy bread: which words though they be a threatning, yet they include a commaundement bounded with a promiſe of bleſſing, Pſal. 128. 2. The man that feareth God, ſhall eate the labour of his owne hands, and bleſſed ſhall he be. Exod. 20. Sixe daies ſhalt thou labour, enforced by Gods owne example, for in ſixe daies the Lord made heauen and earth. Queſt. May we not vſe recreation in the ſixe daies? Anſw. Yea, ſo it be moderate, and helpe to make vs fitter for our callings; for labour it ſelfe beeing commanded, euery thing alſo which vpholdeth it, is commanded. Such commaundements are vſuall in the New Teſtament alſo: Epheſ. 4. 28. Let him that ſtole ſteale no more, but rather let him labour with his hands the thing that good is. So, 2. Theſſ. 3. 12. men are commaunded to eate their owne bread. Secondly, Examples in the Scripture: God enioyned Adam in the ſtate of innocencie this double calling: firſt to ſerue him: ſecondly to dreſſe the garden. The ſecond Adam Chriſt himſelfe while he led a priuate life till his baptiſme, which was the ſpace of thirtie yeares, liued in his father Ioſephs calling. The Angels themſelues are miniſtring ſpirits for the good of the godly, and aſcend and deſcend vpon the ſonne of man, and liue not out of their calling. Thirdly, it is the ordinance of God that men ſhould be his inſtrumẽts for the common good of the ſocieties wherein they liue; euen as euery member in the bodie endeauoureth it ſelfe not onely for it owne good, but for the benefit of the whole. So ſhould euery member of the bodie politique.

This ground is of great weight for the maintaining of three maine ſocieties; for neither familie, Church, or Common-wealth can ſtand without diſtinction of particular callings & labour in the ſame: for which cauſe the Apoſtle would not haue him to eate, that will not labour, 2. Theſ. 3. 3.

Aduerſaries.

The aduerſaries hereof are, firſt, manie amongſt vs, as thoſe who ſpend their liues in gaming, and they who ſpend their wealth in bezeling and drinking: and they alſo who beeing ſtrong to labour ſpend their time in begging: all which are vile courſes of life, and enemies to all good ſocieties. Secondly, the Romane religion; firſt in maintaining a Monkiſh life, whereby a man cutteth himſelfe off from all ſocietie, and liues in prayer and faſting: but we are taught not onely to practiſe duties of the firſt table, but of the ſecond alſo, and without the ſpeciall calling the generall is nothing. Secondly, In maintaining looſenes of life and idlenes, for God hauing appointed 52. Sabbaths in the yeare, wherein men are to lay aſide their ordinarie callings, and no moe, they haue added (as may appeare in their callender) fifty two mo, which they cal holy daies, & ſo ſpend more then a quar-

A a quarter of a yeare in reſt and idlenes, whereby they become aduerſaries of this ground.

11.Ground.

The eleuenth ground is, 1.Tim.1.19. Keepe faith and good conſcience. The meaning. By faith we muſt vnderſtand the wholeſome doctrine and religion, deliuered in the writings of the Prophets and Apoſtles: further, this faith muſt not goe alone, but muſt haue his companion, which is a good conſcience; the propertie of which is to excuſe and iuſtifie a man in all callings before God and man: and it is knowne by a twofold teſtimonie: firſt, of the life paſt: ſecondly, of the life preſent and to come. The teſtimonie of the life paſt is, that a man hath repented him of all his ſinnes paſt, and is turned vnto God. The teſtimonie of the life preſent B and to come is, firſt, that a man hath a purpoſe neuer to offend God, but endeauours to pleaſe him in all things. Secondly, that when he hath ſlipped and ſinned againſt God, it was not wittingly and willingly, but of humane infirmitie. Thirdly, that a man hath his generall teſtimonie which is required to a good conſcience. Pſal. 119.6. I ſhall not be confounded, when I haue reſpect to all thy Commandements. Iam. 2. 5. He that breaketh one Commandement, is guiltie of all: that is, he that wittingly and willingly againſt the knowledge of his conſcience, breaks one of the Commandements of God, will, if occaſion be offered, willingly and of knowledge breake them all: ſo as a good conſcience muſt teſtifie on a mans ſide concerning all ſinnes and all obedience. Examples whereof we haue in C Hezekiah, Eſa. 38.3. Remember, Lord, how I haue walked before thee with a perfect heart. And in Paul, 1.Cor.4.4. I know nothing by my ſelfe. The weight of the ground appeareth in the words following, where the Apoſtle ſaith, that while ſome put away good conſcience, they haue made ſhipwracke concerning the faith: where he compareth our conſcience to a ſhip, our religion and faith to our treaſures laid in it. Now as a hole in the ſhippe looſeth the treaſures by ſinking the ſhippe: ſo cracke the conſcience, and the treaſures of religion ſuffer ſhipwracke: whence it is that Timothie is willed to keepe the myſterie of faith in pure conſcience, 1. Tim.3.9.

Aduerſaries.

The Aduerſarie of this ground is the Romiſh D Religion, who ouerthroweth true teſtimonie of conſcience, which is euer ioyned with true humiliation, and repentance for ſinnes paſt; in teaching, that many ſinnes are in themſelues veniall, or no ſinnes, as thoſe luſts againſt the laſt Commandement, which killed Paul himſelfe; and in extenuating mans corruption, and extolling nature, whereby (they ſay) a man may work his ſaluation, beeing holpen by the holy Ghoſt: whereas indeede no true peace of conſcience is to be found till nature be wholly debaſed, and grace take the whole place. Secondly, they teach that a man cannot be certen of his ſaluation in this life, but may coniecture and hope well; which is the very racke and torment of the conſcience. Thirdly, while they teach that a man muſt merit his ſaluation by his workes, they torture the conſcience, and leaue it deſtitute of this teſtimonie: for how can the conſcience quiet it ſelfe, when it knowes not how many workes will ſerue the turne, nor when it hath ſufficiently ſatisfied the iuſtice of God? and this is to be marked, that the chiefeſt of that religion, whatſoeuer they hold in their life time; yet when they lie on their death-bed, they flie from their owne merits to the merit of Chriſt. Notable is that ſpeech of Stephen Gardiner at his death to conuince it, who hauing beene a great perſecutor, and beeing much perplexed on his death-bed, by a friend of his viſiting him, was put in minde of that iuſtification which is by the meere mercie of God in Chriſt: to whome he anſwered; You may tell me, and thoſe who are in my caſe of this doctrine, but open not this gappe to the people: So as they are glad to entertaine our doctrine for the true peace of their conſcience, which in their owne doctrine they can neuer finde.

And Sir Chr. Blunt at his execution.

Thus haue we ſhewed in part that faith is a moſt pretious treaſure, beſet with many enemies, againſt whom we muſt alwaies contend, which we ſhall yet more cleerely ſee in beholding the vſe of this treaſure, which is two-fold: firſt, to reueale from God vnto man all things needefull vnto ſaluation concerning doctrine or manners: wherein it excelleth all mans learning: for firſt, all the lawes and learning of men reueale the Morall law only in part, and mingle it with ſuperſtitions, and ceremonies; but they reueale no part of the Goſpel: onely this doctrine of faith reuealeth in the full perfection both the Law and Goſpel. Secondly, the Lawes and learning of men know nothing (much leſſe reueale) of mans miſerie, neither the cauſe nor the remedie thereof; but this doctrine of faith knoweth and reuealeth both; namely, the firſt cauſe to be the ſinne of our firſt parents, and the proper and perfect remedie to be the death of Chriſt. Thirdly, mens lawes and learning ſpeake at large of temporall happineſſe; but know nothing of eternall: but this doctrine not onely knoweth the true happineſſe of men, but teacheth and deſcribeth the readie way thereunto. The ſecond vſe of this doctrine of faith is, that it is a moſt perfect inſtrument of the holy Ghoſt for the working of all graces in the hearts of men; I meane not the letters and ſyllables, but the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles taught, and beleeued. Paul calleth it the power of God to ſaluation: and Chriſt himſelfe ſaith, that his word is ſpirit and life, that is, the inſtrument of the ſpirit, whereby life eternall is procured: for which two notable vſes it is a moſt pretious treaſure. Whence we learne, firſt to be ſwift to heare this doctrine, taught in the publike Miniſterie, as Iames counſelleth, chap.1.19. becauſe in it God openeth his treaſure to diſpence the ſame vnto vs. Secondly, it beeing a pretious treaſure, we muſt hide the ſame in the coffers of our hearts: Pſal. 110. 11. I haue hid thy word in my heart. It muſt be an ingrafted word in them, Iam. 1. 21. And this dutie we practiſe firſt, when we haue care to know it: ſecondly, to remember it: thirdly, when we ſet the affections of our hearts vpon it, as men doe vpon their treaſures. Thirdly, if it be the treaſure of the Church, then it bringeth to the poſſeſſors of it, wealth, honour, and pleaſure, as other treaſures doe. For as the houſe of Obededom was bleſſed for the Arke; ſo is that heart which holdeth true wiſedome within it: ſee Prou. 3. 13. 14. &c. We in this land haue good experience of this truth, who by Gods bleſſing haue aboue fourtie yeares enioyed wealth, peace, honour, and aboue all, Gods protection: and whence haue theſe flowed, but from the true faith and religion ſet downe in the Prophets and Apoſtles, maintained and defended amongſt vs? which if we would haue continued, we muſt alſo continue to hold and affect this truth as a treaſure vnto the end.

The true treaſure of the Church committed to the Saints is the true doctrine of ſaluation, & not Reliks or merits of dead men.

The ſecond point or head of the Exhortation is; that the Saints are the keepers of this treaſure of faith, to whom it was once giuen. Whence we may learne, firſt that it is an infallible note of the true Church of God, to keepe, maintaine, and defend the wholeſome doctrine of Religiõ, deliuered by the Prophets and Apoſtles. It was noted to be the cheefe prerogatiue of the Iews, that to them the Oracles of God were committed, Rom. 3. Hence 1. Tim. 3. 15. the Church is called the ground and pillar of truth, becauſe in her publike Miniſtery ſhee maintaineth and preſerueth the ſame, Cant. 3. 7. asketh Chriſt where ſhe ſhall be ſure of him, and not miſſe of finding him in her neceſſitie: he maketh anſwer, ſhe ſhall be ſure of him in the Tents of ſhepheards. Whence may be truely concluded, that neither are the aſſemblies of Turkes nor Heretikes the Churches of God, becauſe they fight againſt the truth; neither is the Church of Rome a true Church of God, becauſe the truth of doctrine is for ſubſtance reuerſed amongſt them. As alſo we may be confirmed that our Churches are the true Churches of Chriſt by this infallible note: A Regiſter is knowne by his Records; ſo our Church is knowne to be Gods Regiſter, becauſe it keepeth faithfully the records of the Prophets and Apoſtles. Secondly, that it ſtands vs in hand to whom this treaſure is now committed, ſo faithfully to keepe it, that it be not taken from vs, and giuen to others who wil keepe it better: which we ſhall doe by making this vſe of it, that we bring forth the fruites of it in amendement of life, elſe our vnthankfulnes ſhall iuſtly bereaue vs of it. Concerning that circumſtance in the text [once giuen] & not often, it may beare a double ſenſe: firſt, it was giuen (as we ſay) once for al, that is, perfectly, ſufficiently as neuer after needing any alteratiõ or addition. Whence we note firſt, that all reuelations in matter of ſaluation and religion giuen ſince, are friuolous A and ſuperſtitious; for there is but one edition of true faith; and no after edition of Reuelation beſides or without the word; ſuch as the Papiſts haue deuiſed, to confirme their Purgatorie, prayer and almes for the dead, Maſſe, &c. ſeeing all neceſſarie doctrine to ſaluation was once giuen perfectly. Secondly, that all Church traditions in matter of religion and doctrine of ſaluation, are meere prophanations of true doctrine, and argue it to be vnperfect; as thoſe of the Maſſe; of receiuing the Communion in one kind; of the Popes ſupremacie; of workes of ſatisfaction, and many moe. Secondly, it may be thus vnderſtood, Once giuen to the Saints, that is, not in writing, but in the hearts of the B Saints, when they are truly enlightned: and therefore if after enlightening it be quite loſt, it is not giuen the ſecond time, and conſequently cannot be recouered. Heb. 6. 4. If a man who hath bin once enlightened and taſted of the good word of God, fall away, it is impoſſible that he ſhould be renewed againe by repentance. From which we muſt learne, to beware of Apoſtaſie, and falling from the faith: yea and of all ſteps and degrees leading thereunto, as of declining from our grounds of religion: for better had it been for vs neuer to haue knowne the way of truth, then after the knowledge of it to forſake the holy Commandement. 2. Pet. 2. 22. Which is the more to be remembred, becauſe religion hath beene more cheriſhed then now it is, and C the declining from it a great deale leſſe. If it be asked, how may we preuent Apoſtaſie? I anſwer, neuer cal any ground into queſtion. Here Cyprians rule is to be learned, that diuine matters admit no deliberation.

The third point of the Exhortation is, the office of the Church of God and euery member of it: and that is to maintaine, yea to * fight for the maintenance of this treaſure; and this is not a bodily fight by ſtrength of arme or bow, but a ſpirituall fight by ſpirituall duties, which euery member of the Church muſt take vp; and namely by foure duties. Firſt, by doctrine; for euery man in his place and calling muſt be a Prophet; as Ioel. 2. 28. and muſt teach all vnder him: the father muſt teach the children, the Maſter D his ſeruants, and thus keepe out Sathan and all Satanicall doctrines. Secondly, by confeſſion; euery man beeing called muſt ſtand againſt the gates of hell, by conſtant witneſſing of the truth. 1. Pet. 3. 15. Sanctifie God in your hearts and be readie alwaies to giue an account of the hope that is in you. Thirdly, by example of a good life and vnblameable, ſutable to the doctrine. Philip. 2. 15. This maketh men ſhine as lights in the world. Fourthly, by prayer, that the Lord would ſende foorth labourers into his harueſt to withſtand all falſe doctrines and hereſies, that ſo the faith and religion wherewith he hath honoured vs theſe many yeares, may be maintained vnto vs, and continued vnto ours for euer.

* The word is not ἀγωνίζεσθαι, but ἐπαγωνίζεσθαι, ſignifying, an inſtant contention. The weapons of our warfare are not carnall. 2. Cor. 10. 4.

v. 4. For there are certaine men crept in, which were of olde before ordained to this condemnation; vngodly men they are which turne the grace of our God into wantonneſſe; and denie God the onely Lord and our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Here the Apoſtle proceedeth to confirme his exhortation, by a reaſon drawne frõ the ſtate of the Church in his time, and it is thus briefly framed. There be certaine men which ſecretly ſeek to vndermine & ouerthrow the faith, therfore you ought the more earneſtly to contend for it. And that theſe aduerſaries lurking amongſt them might the better be deſcried, he deſcribeth them by fiue ſeuerall adiuncts: firſt, by their hypocriſie, in creeping in. Secondly, by their eſtate before God, they are of olde ordained to this condemnation. Thirdly, by their religion; vngodly men they are. Fourthly, by their doctrine; they turne the grace of our God into wantonnes. Fiftly by their liues; they denie the onely Lord. For the firſt, There are certaine men crept in] That is, there be men who ſecretly haue inſinuated themſelues into your ſocietie, profeſſing themſelues to be teachers of the true faith, but are indeede the deſtroyers and diſturbers of it. In which words two ſinnes are laide to their charge: firſt, that they cunningly ioined themſelues vnto the Church, pretending themſelues to be the ſeruants of Chriſt, and of the Church, and yet were enemies to both. Here marke the ſubtiltie of Satan, who cauſeth prophane men to ioyne themſelues to the ſocieties of the Saints, that by this meanes mingling his inſtruments with the members of the Church, he may by degrees corrupt the faith and ouerthrowe the Church. The Parable, Matth. 13. ſheweth, that whereſoeuer the good husbandman ſoweth his good ſeede this malicious man ſcattereth his teares. In Abrahams houſe ſhall be an Iſmael; in Iſaaks, an Eſau; in the Arke, a curſed Cham; in Chriſts familie a Iudas. In the Primitiue Church the deuill raiſed vp of al ſorts of Heretikes great numbers. In our owne Church the Deuill ſtirreth vp daily troopes of Atheiſts and Papiſts, to the corrupting and deprauing of true faith and Religion.

1 Vſe. Firſt, we muſt not take offence when we ſee vngodly men in the Church, much leſſe cut our ſelues from it by ſeparation: but rather conceiue of the policie of Satan, who for the hindrance of the faith thruſteth them in. When the Iſraelites entred into the land of Canaan, they muſt not dwell alone, but be mingled with the Cananites the enemies of the Church, leaſt the land beeing too much diſpeopled, wilde beaſts ſhould preuaile & deuoure the people of God: So the Lord (ordering the malice of Satã to the good of the Church) ſuffereth ſeducers in the Church, both to exerciſe the faith and patience of his, as alſo to preuent greater dangers, which they might in their ſecure condition fall into. 2 Secondly, hence we ſee that ſuch hypocrites as theſe be, though they be in the Church, yet are they not of it; they are no members of that body (as the Romiſh church teacheth) for they onely creepe into it.

The ſecond fault that is laid to their charge is, that they are intruders, thruſting themſelues into the office of teaching, not beeing called thereto, but * creepe into the calling. Whence we note, that it is moſt neceſſarie that thoſe who are to teach publikely in the Church, ſhould be firſt called thereunto. Reaſons. Firſt, beſides the auoiding of this ſinne of creeping into the Church, it is the order that God hath ſet in the ſame; that he that is to teach ſhould firſt be ſent, Rom. 10. 14. And, No man taketh this honour (that is lawfully) to himſelfe, except hee be called as Aaron was. Secondly, the Miniſterie is Gods, and not mans, becauſe the Miniſter ſtandeth in Gods roome, and ſpeaketh in his name; which he can neuer doe truly, vnleſſe God ſend him, and depute him in his ſtead. Thirdly, the Miniſter muſt maintaine that which he teacheth; vnto which he had neede (as in all the parts of his calling) of Gods ſpeciall protection; for the which he muſt bee alwaies inſtant in prayer, which he can neuer be aſſured of, if he be not perſwaded of the truth of his calling. Fourthly, the people cannot heare with comfort and profit, if they be not perſwaded that God hath called the teacher to inſtruct them: Rom. 10. 14. How can they heare, &c. This truth extendeth it ſelfe alſo to all other offices as well Ciuill as Eccleſiaſticall; all which are to bee welded and executed by men lawfully called vnto the ſame. All entrance then into any office in Church or Common-wealth by money, fauour of men, or any vnlawfull meanes, is intruſion; and ſuch are not called of God, but are to be ranged among theſe ſeducers, who creep into places, and come not in by Gods call or approbation.

* παρειςέδυσαν, Quaſi aliud agendo ingreſſi.

The ſecond adiunct whereby the ſeducers are deſcribed, is there eſtate before God; being *men of olde * ordained to this condemnation*] that is, they were before all times, locked, enrolled, or billed vnto condemnation, euen as though their names had beene ſet downe in a booke. By condemnation is meant iudgement, as the particle This doth plainly ſhew: which maketh this the plaine meaning: They were of old ordained to this iudgement in this life, to trie, to exerciſe, and moleſt the Church of God, and ſo conſequently to procure vnto themſelues at length their own iuſt condemnation.

* προγεγραμμένοι.

In which words wee are taught: firſt, that God keepeth his bookes of Regiſtrie and records, in which all things are ſet downe, the perſons, behauiours, and eternall eſtate of all men; which bookes are of three ſorts: firſt, the bookes of his Prouidence, containing all particulars of things paſt, preſent, and to come, in which the Lord ſaw the members of Dauid when he was yet vnformed, Pſal. 139. 16. In the ſame booke, the number of the haires of our heads, and the falling of ſparrowes to the ground, are recorded. The ſecond booke, is of the laſt iudgement; in which the perſons and ſinnes of all men are enrolled. Dan. 7. 9. 10. The thrones were ſet vp, the ancient of daies did ſit: thouſand thouſands miniſtred vnto him, and tenne thouſand thouſands ſtood before him: the iudgement was ſet, and the bookes opened. Reu. 20. 12. I ſaw all great and ſmall ſtand before God; and the bookes were opened, and another booke was opened. The third is the booke of life, in which are written the names of thoſe who are to be ſaued, Phil. 4. 3. Paul ſaith of Clement and other his fellowe-labourers, that their names were written in the booke of life. Now by theſe bookes we may not groſſely conceiue materiall bookes, ſuch as men note what they would remember in: but the counſel, election, prouidence, pleaſure, and knowledge of God, wherein all theſe things are ſo certainly ſet downe, as if any man ſhould write them in a booke.

Out of which we note two things: firſt, that in regard of God there is no chance, neither any euent by it; in regard of men indeed who know not the cauſes of things, many chances may be: but Gods prouidence, and chance are contrary; he hauing all things written before him with their cauſes. Secondly, that nothing comes to paſſe without the decree of God, no not the wicked actions of men. Which God not onely foreſeeth, but decreeth: for this Iude inſinuateth, ſaying, they were ordained to this iudgement; and euen that which is againſt the will of God, commeth not to paſſe without his will, God willing the beeing of that which he willeth not to effect; and though he eſteeme not euill to be good, yet he accounteth it good that euil ſhould be.

Further, where he ſaith [ordained of olde to this condemnation] we learne, that as God hath before all worlds decreed the electing of ſome to ſaluation: ſo he hath decreed the refuſall and reiecting of others to condemnation. 1. Pet. 2. 8. Many were diſobedient: vnto the which they were euen ordained. 1 Theſſ. 5. 6. God hath not ordained you to wrath, but to obtaine ſaluation through Chriſt: ſhewing that ſome are ordained to wrath, who are not to obtaine ſaluation through Chriſt. Rom. 9. 22. God is compared to a potter, framing veſſels of honour and diſhonour, veſſels of mercie, & veſſels of wrath. In the ſame place, I haue loued Iacob, and hated Eſau; that is, I haue decreed ſo to doe. For the whole Ch. ſpeaketh of Gods counſell & vnchangeable decree. Obiect. If this be ſo (will ſome ſay) then God dealeth vniuſtly, that abſolutely ordaineth ſome men to condemnation and perdition.

Prædeſtination then is not onely to be referred to the Elect.

Anſwer.

Anſ. We muſt know, that we are creatures, & may not preſume to preſcribe a law of iuſtice to the Creator; whoſe will is iuſtice it ſelfe (whatſoeuer we may conceiue) and maketh the thing willed good, becauſe it is willed, and not willed becauſe it is good. Secondly, though God refuſe & reiect men, yet he doth it in moſt wiſe order and iuſt proceeding, in theſe two degrees: firſt, hee vouchſafeth to ſome men the riches of his grace tending to life euerlaſting; which ſpeciall abundant grace hee denieth to ſome other paſſing by them, who, left of him vnto themſelues, fall into ſinne. Secondly, for ſinne God decreeth iudgement and condemnation, ſo as he doth not ſimply and abſolutely ordaine his creature to hell, but in regard of ſinne: not that ſinne is a cauſe of the decree mooning him vnto it, but that he decreeth not condemnation without reſpect of ſinne and relation vnto it: which ſpeech we neede not feare to ſpeak, becauſe the holy Ghoſt ſo ſpeaketh.

Vſe. Firſt, if ſome men be paſſed by of God, we muſt humble our ſelues vnder his mightie hand, and with feare and trembling worke our ſaluation. Rom. 11. 20. Some are cut off, thou ſtandeſt by faith, be not high minded, but feare. Secondly, we may not be offended when we ſee the Goſpel not receiued, yea hated of men, and the profeſſors of it perſecuted: for many are of olde ordained to be vnderminers of the truth, euen to this condemnation, which by diſobedience they haſten vpon themſelues. If the Goſpel be hid to any, it is to them that periſh. Thirdly, many Diuines ouerſhoot themſelues, that ſeeke to obſcure or ouerthrow this doctrine of reprobation, teaching that God for his part electeth all, and that man himſelfe is the cauſe of reprobation; ſo as man is either the ſauiour or damner of himſelfe, by receiung or refuſing grace offered; whereas the Scripture ſpeaketh otherwiſe; and heare teacheth vs, that ſome men were enrolled to certen iudgement by God before all worlds. The darkning of this doctrine breedeth ſecuritie of ſpirit, wherein grace is made ſo large, and ſaluation ſo eaſie, that if men will they may be ſaued: whereas our doctrine leadeth to the feare of God, and a care to walke as in his preſence continually.

Laſtly, in that it is added, they were preordained of olde, note firſt the time of the reiection of ſome men: namely, before all worlds. Secondly, the proper cauſe of the decree of God, which muſt needes be in himſelfe, becauſe it was before the creature was. Rom. 9. 11. Before they had done good or euill: that is, before he conſidered of their good or euill in his decree, he decreed to loue the one and hate the other. So Epheſ. 1. 9. whom he chuſeth, he chuſeth in himſelfe. Not informing his iudgement, nor framing his counſels as man doth from outward reſpects, he goeth not out of himſelfe for any motiue to chuſe or refuſe, but as Mat. 11. 25 becauſe his good pleaſure was ſuch. This confuteth the popiſh error, which affirmeth that God did decree according to his foreſight of faith or infidelitie, the ſauing of ſome, and refuſing of other: but this cannot ſtand, ſeeing Gods decree is in order and time before the creature; which beeing the latter, cannot be the cauſe of the former.

The third adiunct or propertie of theſe ſeducers is; their want of religion. [Vngodly men they are] Vngodlines is a ſinne much ſpoken of, but not ſo well knowne, and therefore it is requiſite to ſhew the nature of it, that we may know who an vngodly man is; the rather becauſe it is a grieuous ſinne, much greater then any of the ſeauen deadly ſinnes of the Papiſts, beeing the ground of them all. Secondly, becauſe it is rooted in the bottome of the heart, and cannot be ſo eaſily diſcerned as others, though as dangerous as any. Thirdly, becauſe it is a ſinne more ſpirituall againſt the firſt Commandement of the firſt table, directed againſt God himſelfe, robbing him of his due honour. For the cleere knowledge of which, conſider three main parts or properties of vngodlines: Firſt, that it denieth God the honour due vnto him, and that 3. waies: firſt, by ignorance it cauſeth the vngodly man to robbe him of his honour, in that he acknowledgeth not the Godhead, but in his heart he inwardly denieth the prouidence, the preſence, the iuſtice, mercie, power, and the other attributes of God. Pſal. 14. 1. The thought of the heart of the foole, that is, of euery vngodly man, is, that there is no God: not that in conſcience he is not conuinced of the contrarie, but by reaſon of his wicked heart, vpon occaſion offered he is willing to acknowledge none. Secondly, by not ſubiecting the conſcience and life to the written will and word of God, but reiecting and renouncing ſubiection thereunto. Thus Iob bringeth in the vngodly man, ſaying to the Almightie, Depart from vs; we will haue none of thy waies: which is too outragious to be the ſpeech of the tongue, but of the heart caſting off the Lords yoke. To whom the King ſhall ſay; Thoſe mine enemies that would not haue me to raigne ouer them, bring them hither, and ſlay them before me, Luk. 19. 27. Thirdly, by not lifting vp the heart by inuocation of God for bleſſings needfull, and in thankſgiuing for benefits receiued; the propertie of the vngodly man is, that he calleth not vpon God, Pſalm. 14. 4. This point of Atheiſme maketh a man like a beaſt, which looketh not vp from whence his foode falleth.

The ſecond propertie of vngodlines is, to attribute and giue this honour, which it denieth God, vnto ſome thing elſe then God: as when the vngodly man ſetteth his loue, ioy, feare, or any other affection vpon any thing beſides God. Thus the couetous man becommeth an Idolater. And 2. Tim. 3. in the laſt times men ſhall be louers of pleaſures more then of God.

The third propertie of it is, when it giueth God his due honour, to deny him the true manner; which cauſeth the vngodly man to content himſelfe with a forme and ſhew of godlineſſe, outwardly bearing himſelfe as godly, but inwardly wanteth the power of it; the heart is not ſingle, but full of fraud, of doubling and deceit before God, who looketh into it, and delighteth not with the approaching of the lipps, when the heart is remooued. By which we ſee the practiſe of the vngodly man, ſundry waies robbing God of his due honour, which one ſinne entertained, breedeth and nouriſheth ſinnes of all ſorts: and ſo much we are giuen to vnderſtand in the placing of it here, as the firſt ſinne of the ſeducers producing a great number of ſinnes more, noted in them through the Epiſtle; neither can any other be looked for but that the life ſhould be plentifull in all ſinnes, where the heart is poſſeſſed of this vngodlines. Rom. 1. 26. The Gentiles acknowledged not God, and therefore he gaue them vp to vile affections, and this was the ground of all thoſe ſinnes reckoned there, aboue twentie in number. Abraham thought not amiſſe that he might eaſily be ſlaine for Sarah his wife (whom therefore he durſt not confeſſe) if the feare of God were not in Abimelechs Court, Gen. 20. giuing vs to know, that where the feare of God is not in the heart, there is no bones made of any ſinne in the life, no not of murther it ſelfe.

2.Tim.3 5.

Vſe. 1. We are hence taught to ſpie out in our ſelues this hidden and ſecret ſinne, and heartily to bewaile it aboue all other ſinnes, as the mother ſinne of the reſt. But ſome may ſay: We are not tainted with this ſinne, we abhorre to be counted vngodly. Anſ. It is too common a ſinne among all ſorts: we haue indeede an outward forme of godlineſſe; we come to heare the word, to pray, to receiue the Sacraments, but the moſt want power of it in their hearts: for firſt the lawes binde our outward man to this outward forme: but the hearts of men remaine ſecure, ſeldome thinking of their ſinne and damnable eſtate by it, and ſeldome ſorrowing for the ſame, and ſaying, What haue we done? Secondly, many haue the forme of godlineſſe, whoſe harts are filled with the cares of this life, which choke vp the power of godlineſſe, and will not ſuffer it to ſeate it ſelfe there, ſeeing the loue of the world and the loue of God cannot ſtand together. Thirdly, many hauing this forme cannot abide to ſubiect their hearts & liues vnto the lawes of God; yea they would exempt their ſpeeches and affections from ſuch ſtrictnes and count it too much preciſenes: theſe are all fruits of the vngodly heart, of which the fewer we can ſee in our ſelues, the more they be, and the more to be bewailed.

2. Vſe. Further, hence we are to take out that leſſon which the Apoſtle teacheth, 1. Tim. 4. 7. to exerciſe our ſelues vnto godlineſſe: for if vngodlineſſe be ſuch a mother ſinne, we muſt endeauour our ſelues to the contrary. For which purpoſe, we muſt firſt prepare our ſelues thereunto (elſe we ſhall faile in the whole exerciſe)

A by learning to acknowledge Gods prouidence, preſence, mercie, and iuſtice in euery thing. Gal. 4. 8. When the Galathians knew not God, they worſhipped them which by nature were no gods: no godlines can ſtand with the ignorance of God, neither can it be exerciſed in particular actions, vnleſſe we behold him thus in the particulars. Secondly, to this exerciſe of godlineſſe we muſt firſt inwardly worſhip God in our ſpirits, ſoules, hearts, and affections, not in lips onely, ſpeeches, and outward actions: For the [a] right worſhippers, worſhip him in ſpirit and truth: Paul [b] ſerued God in his ſpirit. Queſt. How ſhall a man doe this? Anſ. True inward worſhip ſtandeth in two things: firſt in faith, ſecondly, in the actions of faith. Faith is that whereby B a man generally beleeueth the whole word of God, containing the Lawe and the Goſpell, to be the truth of God it ſelfe; & particularly concerning himſelfe three things: firſt, Gods mercie in the forgiuing of his owne ſinnes. Secondly, his preſence in all his actions. Thirdly, his prouidence ouer all euents good or bad that befall him. The actions of faith are two: firſt, ſubiection of the heart vnto God, in three reſpects: firſt, to Gods iudgement, that ſeeing he paſſeth ſentence againſt our ſinnes, we alſo ſhould call our ſelues to account for them, confeſſe them, condemne our ſelues for them, and intreate for mercie. Secondly, to his word and lawes of both Tables, by hearty and conſcionable obedience willingly taking vp his yoke, and ſuffering our ſelues to be directed by all his lawes. Thirdly, C to the good pleaſure of God knowne by the euent, whether ſickneſſe or health, want or aboundance, in departing from our owne wills, and patiently yea thankefully ſubmitting them vnto his bleſſed will. The ſecond action of faith is, the eleuation or lifting vp the heart vnto God inceſſantly, both in ſuing for his grace and aide in the ſeaſonable ſupplie of our neceſſities; as alſo in bleſſing him for bleſſings receiued. In theſe ſtand the practiſe of the true worſhip of God in the ſpirit, which is true godlineſſe: vnto which we may be incited by thoſe reaſons: firſt, becauſe this godlineſſe hath the promiſe of this life and the life to come, 1. Tim. 4. that is, the godly man hath title to all bleſſings of all kindes. Secondly, Godlineſſe is D great gaine, 1. Tim. 6. Euery man affecteth gain; but if any man would attaine it, let him be godly. Men are often croſſed in the world, and things ſucceede not with them, they doe not proſper in their callings and duties of it, and ſeeing no reaſon of it, maruell why they ſhould not thriue as well as others: whereas indeede beeing vngodly men they want that which ſhould bring in their gaine. Thirdly, let the conſideration of the laſt iudgement ioyned with the diſſolution of heauen and earth mooue vs hereunto: 1. Pet. 3. 11. Seeing all theſe things ſhall be diſſolued, what manner of perſons ought we to be in holy conuerſation and godlineſſe? As though he had ſaide, ſeeing nothing elſe ſhall ſtand vs in ſtead but godlineſſe, how are we to frame our ſelues to the practiſe of it. Fourthly, the appearing of grace teacheth vs to denie all vngodlineſſe, and to liue godlily in this preſent world, Tit. 2. 12. If this be the ende of the Goſpells appearing, and we haue beene they to whom it hath appeared with peace and proſperitie aboue forty yeares, how can we be but vnexcuſable and ſpeecheleſſe before God, if we remaine vntaught in this duty, and continue ſtil in the waies of vngodlineſſe.

[b] Rom. 1. 9.

We muſt cōdemne our owne ſinnes, leaſt God condemne vs for them.

The fourth adiunct whereby the ſeducers are deſcribed, is their doctrine, in theſe words; They turne the grace of God into wantonneſſe. In which conſider two points: firſt the ſinne or vice here condemned. Secondly, the duty or contrary vertue commanded. Before we can knowe the former, we muſt ſearch out the meaning of the words. And firſt by [grace] is meant the doctrine of the Goſpel, called in the former verſe by the name of faith; ſo it is called, Tit. 2. 11. The grace of God hath appeared, teaching vs, &c. becauſe it teacheth vs that remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting are obtained onely by the meere grace of God in Chriſt. By wantonneſſe ] is properly vnderſtood that ſinne whereby men addict themſelues wholly to intemperancie, incontinencie, and vnlawfull pleaſures; but here it muſt be taken generally for a licentious prophane kinde of liuing and libertie of ſinning. Turne] that is, they diſplace the grace of God, applying it from a right to a wrong ende, and that not onely in practiſe of life, but in propounding of doctrine tending thereunto. As though he had more plainely ſaid that whereas the doctrine of grace in the Goſpell, teacheth men free iuſtification by faith in Chriſt without the workes of the Lawe, theſe men peruert this gracious doctrine, and teach that therefore men may liue as they liſt, and ſo themſelues doe alſo: by which ſame ſinne ſuch ſeducers are elſewhere noted in the Scripture. Rom. 3. 8. Some gathered from Pauls doctrine the ſame liberty, ſaying, Why doe we not then euill that good may come of it? And 2. Pet. 2. 19. ſome ſuch are mentioned, who beguiled diuers with wantonneſſe through the luſts of the fleſh, promiſing vnto them libertie. Eccleſiaſticall hiſtories mention many ſuch who ſprung vp after the Apoſtles daies; as the Libertines, Simon Magus, and his diſciples, who taught that men might lawfully commit fornication. So alſo the diſciples of Baſilides, Eunomius, and the Gnoſticks, Heretiques who taught that men might liue as they liſt, ſeeing now ſuch libertie was procured them, being freed from being vnder the law any longer: which ſinne died not with thoſe curſed heretikes, but the Deuill hath in theſe laſt daies reuiued it, eſpecially in foure ſorts of men: firſt, the Libertines of this age: who holde with the former, that beeing vnder grace we are free from the obedience of the Law. Secondly, the Anabaptiſts, who (vpon the conſideration of abundant grace & peace in the newe Teſtament, and of the liberty obtained by Chriſt) teach, that Ciuill iuriſdiction and Magiſtracie is vnlawfull: as alſo to make warre, and to take an oath before a Magiſtrate; which ſort of men are not ſo well knowen here as in other Churches, but are dangerous enemies whereſoeuer both to the grace of God and good of man: for where the Ciuill ſword doth ceaſe, there can no ſocietie ſtand in ſafetie. Thirdly, another kind of Libertines are the Papiſts, and the Popiſh Church, with the whole Romane Religion, themſelues beeing open enemies vnto the grace of God, and their whole religion turning it into wantonnes, and libertie of ſinning, and that diuers waies. Firſt, God hauing of his grace giuen vnto the Church a power of the keyes to open and ſhut heauen, that religion hath turned it into an inſtrument: firſt of prophaneſſe, in ſetting vp a newe Prieſthood to abſolue and looſe men ſinnes properly, in offering a ſacrifice for the quick and the dead, ſo aboliſhing the ſacrifice of Chriſt. Secondly, of iniuſtice for by it they depoſe Kings and Princes, they free ſubiects from their alleageance, they ſtirre them vp and encourage them to conſpiracies, rebellions; and maintaine in other ſtates, factions, ciuill warres, and ſeditions, and all by vertue of their power. Thirdly, of horrible couetouſneſſe; for by it they ſell pardons for thouſands of yeares, the which ſales haue brought to the Church of Rome the third part of the reuenewes of all Europe: which one practiſe, if there were no moe, prooueth plainely, that that Church turneth the grace of God to the libertie of ſinne.

The Romiſh mart makes ſale of all ſorts of ſins for readie money.

Secondly, their whole Religion is a corrupted Religion, and maketh the receiuers of it the children of Sathan more then before: for firſt it maketh men hypocrites, requiring nothing but an externall, bodily, and Ceremoniall worſhippe, without any inward power of it; as in faſting, it requireth onely a ſhewe of it, as to abſtaine from fleſh and white meates, but they may vſe moſt delicate fiſhes, the ſtrongeſt wines, and ſweeteſt ſpices, and in other parts their religion is no leſſe hypocriticall. Secondly, it maketh men proud and arrogant, teaching the freedome of wil vnto good, if the holy Ghoſt doe but a little helpe it; that a man can merit by his works; that he can ſatisfie Gods iuſtice by ſuffering for ſinne: yea that he can performe ſome works of ſupererogation; who can hold theſe points and be humbled? Thirdly, it maketh men ſecure, teaching that they may haue ful pardon of all their ſins by the power of their keies for monie; and that though they haue no merits of their owne, they may buy the merits of other men: yea although in their death they faile of repentãce, yet for ſome mony he may be eaſed in Purgatory. What ſhal any rich man now care how he liue or die, ſeeing all ſhall be well with him for a litle money? Fourthly, it maketh men in their diſtreſſe deſperate, teaching that no man can be aſſured of his ſaluation without ſome reuelation. Fiftly, it reuiueth the old ſin of theſe ſeducers, teaching that diuers men & women may not marry, that were adulterie; and yet openly tolerating ſtues and vncleanneſſe. Which what is it elſe but to maintaine wantonneſſe? whereby the chiefe teachers of that Church witneſſe themſelues the right ſucceſſors; not of the Apoſtles (as they pretend) but of theſe ſeducers and other wicked heretiks old and new.

The fourth ſort of Libertines are carnall and formall Proteſtants; who firſt turne the counſell of Gods election into wantonneſſe by reaſoning thus: If I be elected to ſaluation, I ſhall bee ſaued let me liue as I will; or if not, I cannot be ſaued doe what I will or can; becauſe Gods counſails are vnchangeable; and thus conclude to ſpend their daies in all wantonnes. Secondly, they turne the mercie of God into wantonneſſe, thus reaſoning in their hearts, Becauſe God is mercifull, therefore I will deferre my repentance as yet; for what time ſoeuer a ſinner repenteth, God will put away all his ſinnes out of his remembrance: what? young Saints, olde Deuils. Thus the timely acceptance of Gods mercie offered, is become a reproch: beſides many moe, who, becauſe the Lord deferreth puniſhment, ſet their hearts to doe euill. Thirdly, others vnder pretence of brotherly loue, miſpend all that they haue in wantonnes, riot, exceſſe, company keeping, gaming, to the beggering of themſelues, and vndoing of their owne families, vnto which they ought to ſhew their loue in the firſt place. Fourtly, others vnder pretext that the Iewiſh Sabbath is abrogated, and that Chriſt hath brought ſuch libertie as hath aboliſhed diſtinctions of times, take libertie to keepe no Sabbath at all; whence many tradeſmen will doe what they liſt on this day, and diſpatch thoſe buſineſſes, which they can finde no time for in the weeke daies. Fiftly, ſome becauſe they would humble themſelues, commit diuers ſinnes, and continue in others; theſe ſay in themſelues, Let vs continue in ſinne that grace may abound: all theſe ſorts of men turne the graces of God into wantonnes, and practiſe the vice here condemned.

The 2. thing to be conſidered is, the contrary vertue; and that is to make a godly and holy vſe of the grace of God, and to applie it to the right end for which god vouchſafeth it vnto vs, to wit, that we might be thankful vnto him, and teſtifie the ſame in obedience to all his lawes. Which appeareth, firſt, by teſtimonie of Scripture, Luk. 1.74.75. We are deliuered out of the hands of our ſpirituall enemies, to ſerue him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe. Rom. 6.16. We are vnder grace, therefore let us giue vp the members of our bodies, weapons of righteouſneſſe. Tit. 2.11. The grace of God hath appeared, teaching vs to denie vngodlineſſe. Secondly, the end of all Gods graces is, that we ſhould be furthered in holineſſe of life; we are elected that we might be holy: the end of our calling is, that we may be

Saints; Iuſtification freeth from puniſhment of ſinne; Sanctification from corruption and ſinne it ſelfe; Faith purifieth the heart ; Loue containeth vs in obedience ; he that hath hope purgeth himſelfe; and ſo of all other graces. Thirdly, Chriſt is a Mediatour two waies : Firſt by merit, to procure life and worke our ſaluation: ſecondly, by efficacie, that is, whereby his death is powerfull to cauſe vs to die to ſinne , and his reſurrection to raiſe vs from the graue of ſinne to a new life, and he is no Mediatour by his merit to thoſe who are deſtitute of this efficacie.

Chriſt hath not merited the life of glorie for any who firſt liueth not the life of grace.

Vſe. We haue in this land been many yeares partakers of this grace of God , our dutie then is to make a holy vſe of it, and walke thankfully before God. Rom. 12. 1. I beſeech you by the mercies of God( which hee had in the former chapter mentioned) that ye giue vp your ſelues a holy ſacrifice to God: no more forcible argument can be vrged to ſtirre vp men to thankefull obedience then this, for if Gods mercie in Chriſt cannot mooue, what will ? Let this then perſwade vs likewiſe; If we beleeue God to be our Father, that is a great grace , let this grace mooue vs to walke as children before him : let the grace of our redemption mooue vs to walke as redeemed ones, reſcued out of ſuch captiuitie wherein we were inthralled to ſinne and Satan, ſeeing it were a madneſſe to returne to ſuch bondage againe. If Chriſt be dead for vs, let that grace mooue vs to die to ſinne; if he beeing riſen againe ſit at Gods right hand , that we might ſit there with him, let that grace mooue vs to walke as thoſe that are riſen with him, and haue our conuerſation in heauen, ſeeking (euen while we are below) the things that are aboue, and ſo of the reſt.

Further, the Apoſtle to make thoſe ſeducers more odious, ſaith not ſimply they turne the grace of God : but [of our God] into wantonneſſe, which noteth the indignitie of their fact, in which conſider three things: firſt, by what meanes God becomes our God: and that is not by any merit of ours, but by means of the gracious couenant propounded in the Goſpel, promiſing pardon and remiſſion of ſinne in and by Chriſt. Ier. 31. 31. This is called the new couenant which the Lord contracteth with his people, where writing his law in their inward parts, he becommeth their God, and they his people. Secondly, what muſt we doe to ſay truly and in aſſurance that God is our God? Anſ. We muſt for our parts make a couenant with him , vnto which is required a conſent on either partie; firſt on Gods part, that he will be our God; which we ſhall finde , not in any reuelation beſides the Scriptures; but generally in the word, and more ſpecially in the miniſterie of the Goſpel and adminiſtration of the Sacraments , annexed as ſeales vnto the Couenant: in which God doth as ſurely couenant with vs , as if he ſhould from heauen ſpeake vnto vs. Secondly , on our part is required conſẽt, of which there be two degrees: firſt, whẽ we make an outward profeſſiõ of faith, heare the word , receiue the Sacraments , Baptiſme, and the Lords ſupper, which ſerue to diſtinguiſh vs from Iewes, Turkes, &c. this is ſomewhat, but not ſufficient to make God our God, ſeeing it is common to the very hypocrits themſelues. Secondly , ſeeing he is not a Iewe which is one outwardly , but which is a Iewe within , there is required in our conſent a further degree, which ſtandeth in an outward conſent of the heart , whereby a man taketh God for his God ; which is then begun, when firſt a man acknowledgeth and bewaileth his ſinnes. Secondly, when he endeauoureth to be reconciled to God. Thirdly , when he purpoſeth neuer to ſinne againe : when this couenant is thus concluded by conſent of both parties , a man may ſafely and truly ſay that God is his God.

Now ſeeing we knowe theſe things, our duty is to labour to be ſetled and aſſured in our conſtience that God is our God: for firſt, in this aſſurance is the foundation of all true comfort; all the promiſes of God are hereupon grounded, and herein acompliſhed , that God is our God : ſee Iſay 41. 10. Be not afraid, I am thy God: yea Chriſt beeing vpon the Croſſe, hauing the pangs of hell vpon him, herein ſtayed himſelfe, My God, my God: ſo Dauid, Pſalm. 22. 1. and beeing readie to be ſtoned to death, comforted himſelfe in the Lord his God, 1. Sam. 30. 6. And not onely is it the foundation of all our comfort in this life , but of our happineſſe after death it ſelfe, beeing the ground of thoſe two maine Articles of our faith, the reſurrection of the bodie, and the immortalitie of the ſoule: for by vertue of this Couenant alone ſhall we riſe againe after death to life, glory, and immortalitie; as Chriſt himſelfe diſputing againſt the Sadduces , from hence prooueth the reſurrection, in that, God is the God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Iaacob, Secondly, it is the ground of all obedience; Pſal. 95. 7. the Prophet exhorting men thereunto, vſeth this as a reaſon : For he is the Lord our God, and we are the people of his hands: the preface of the Morall law enforcing obedience laieth the ſame ground, For I am the the Lord thy God which brought the out of the land of Egypt: ſee alſo Pſal. 50. 71. and whoſoeuer is truely perſwaded that God is his God, cannot but obey him.

The fift propertie of theſe ſeducers is, That they denie God the onely Lord, and our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.] Thus are they deſcribed by their manners. The Tranſlators of this Epiſtle were (as it ſeemeth) of opinion, that theſe words are properly ſpoken of God the Father, and of God the Sonne alſo; but by the tenour of the words in the originall, it ſeemeth that they are all to be vnderſtood of Chriſt, and not of the Father; and are thus to be read; Which denie that onely Ruler who is God and our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Again, the tenour of the words beeing borrowed from the Epiſtle of Peter, may thence be rightly expounded: now Peter ſpeaking of the ſame ſinne of theſe ſeducers, applieth it onely to be a deni-all of Chriſt, 2. Pet. 2. 1. They denie the Lord that bought them. In the words then conſider two things: firſt the ſinne here condemned, namely, to denie Ieſus Chriſt. Secondly, a deſcription of Chriſt. For the firſt, To denie Ieſus Chriſt, is to renounce and forſake Chriſt, and ſo much as in a man lieth to make his death voide and of none effect. Now becauſe this deniall preſuppoſeth a redemption (as Peter mentioneth) they denying the Lord that bought them; this queſtion is to be cleared, how theſe men beeing reprobats, can be ſaid to be redeemed by Chriſt? Anſ. We muſt not thinke that they were in Gods decree euer redeemed, for thē had they beene ſaued: (he doing whatſoeuer he willeth, Pſal. 115. 3.) but it is to be meant in regard of themſelues and other men: for both in their owne conceit and iudgement they were redeemed, as alſo in the iudgement of others, who are to be led by the rule of charitie in paſſing their iudgement vpon men, and to account of thē as redeemed, leauing all ſecret iudgements to God. Secondly, the deſcription of Chriſt, by three things: firſt, that he is a Ruler, yea an onely ruler, a Lord and ruler ouer all things in generall, in heauen, earth, and hell: and more ſpecially a Lord ouer his elect onely: and in that he is ſaid to be an onely ruler, it muſt not be meant as excluding the Father and holy Ghoſt, but all falſe gods, and falſe Chriſts; as Ioh. 17. 3. the Father is called the onely God, for all outward actions of the Trinitie are common to all the perſons. Secondly, that he is God: ]which is a notable place againſt al Arrians to prooue the Godhead of Chriſt. Thirdly, he is ſaid to be our Lord: Ours in two reſpects eſpecially: firſt, of the free donation of his Father, who gaue to him a people to be Lord and King ouer before all worlds. Secondly, in regard of his worke of redemption which he wrought for them, who were of the Father giuen vnto him.

Out of that which hath beene here ſaid, we may note theſe two points: firſt, how theſe ſeducers denie Chriſt: namely, not openly and plainely, for then the Church ſhould haue eſpied them; neither in word nor ſpeech, for in word they profeſſed him: but in their deedes denied him, liuing after their luſts, and encouraging others in the ſame courſe, Titus 1. 16. And this ſinne is reuiued and renewed in this our age, wherein too many outwardly and in word profeſſe Chriſt, come to the Word and Sacraments; but couertly and in their deedes denie him, whoſe liues are very full of Epicuriſme, and earthlineſſe, and mouthes filled with blaſphemies and reproaches againſt true obedience, which of them is counted too much niceneſſe, and preciſenes. Theſe are the diſciples of the olde Heretiques, whom (without repentance) the like fearefull iudgements awaite, which befell them. Secondly, we may obſerue in what regards they denie Chriſt; namely, firſt in regard of his Godhead, by withſtanding the meanes of that power of Chriſt, whereby (hauing redeemed them) he would ſanctifie their hearts to obedience. The merit of his redemption is welcome to them, but they will none of the efficacie of it, which ſanctifieth and reneweth the inner man, ſubdueth ſinne, and quickneth the life of God in them. Secondly, in regard of his Lordſhip, by denying him obedience, which as to a Lord is due vnto him: A Redeemer they would haue him, but not a Lord; ſo euery man would haue portion in Chriſts redemption, but their luſts muſt be their Lords and they ſeruants to ſinne and Satan: but theſe be thoſe enemies that wil not that he ſhould raigne ouer them, who ſhall be brought and ſlaine before him. Our part then is (if euer we would finde comfort in Chriſt) to make him our Lord: his counſell is, that thoſe that are laden ſhould come vnto him for eaſe; but the next words are, take my yoke vpon thee: and if we would haue him our iuſtification, let him become alſo our ſanctification.

We eaſily acknowledg Chriſt Ieſus, but hardly a Lord.

Luk. 19. 27.

Matth. 11. 29.

v. 5. I will therefore put you in remembrance, for as much as ye once knewe this, how that the Lord after hee had deliuered the people out of Egypt, deſtroyed them afterward which beleeued not.

The Apoſtle hauing propounded his principall exhortation to contend and fight for the faith, v. 3. with the reaſon thereof, v. 4. doth here begin to anſwer a ſecret obiection which might be made againſt that reaſon, thus: Theſe ſeducers profeſſe Chriſt, and looke for ſaluation by him, what danger then can redound if we ſhould ioyne our ſelues vnto them? This obiection is anſwered from this fifth verſe vnto the twentieth; in all which verſes he diſputeth at large that there is great danger herein, ſeeing their ende ſhall be deſtruction, the ſumme of which diſputation is contained in this reaſon: All ſuch perſons as giue themſelues libertie to ſinne, ſhall be deſtroyed: But theſe ſeducers giue themſelues libertie to ſinne; and therefore ſhall be deſtroyed. The former part of which reaſon is contained in the 5, 6, 7. verſes; and the latter from the 8. vnto the 20. The former propoſition is not plainely ſet downe in ſo many words, but the proofe of it onely by an induction and enumeration of all examples of ſinners, which haue beene deſtroyed; & they be three in number: firſt, of the Iſraelites, in the 5 verſe: ſecondly, of the Angels in the 6. verſe: thirdly, of Sodome and Gomorrah, in the 7. verſe.

In this 5. ver. are two things to be conſidered: firſt the Preface, in theſe words: I will therefore put you in remembrance, for as much as you once knewe this. Secondly, the firſt example whereby the point in hand is prooued in the words following. The Preface ſerueth to preuent an obiection which might be made by the Church reading theſe examples; that Iude teacheth them nothing but things which they knewe well enough before: to which he anſwereth, that his intent is not to teach them any newe thing, or any vnknowne thing, but to bring knowne things to their remembrance: and in it three things are to be obſerued: Firſt, the Apoſtles practiſe: I will therefore put you in remembrance.] Where note the office of all Paſtors and teachers, which is not onely to teach things vnknowne, but to repeate and to bring into remembrance things knowne before. This was Peters care, 2. Pet. 1. 12. though they had knowledge to put them in remembrance: and cha. 3. 1. to ſtirre vp and warne their pure mindes; giuing vs to vnderſtand, that knowledge in the minde lieth as embers vnder aſhes, and needes daily ſtirring vp. Which admoniſheth al hearers not to be offended if they heare the ſame thing often, ſeeing it is the duty of Miniſters to teach the ſame thing often. Yea hearers which haue vnderſtanding in the Scriptures muſt be content if they heare nothing but that which they haue beene out of the Scriptures acquainted with before, ſeeing the Apoſtle thinketh it meet to teach nothing elſe.

Secondly, in this preface obſerue the propertie of the Church, which is to knowe the hiſtories and examples of Scripture. Chriſt commanded his hearers to ſearch the Scriptures: the Apoſtle wiſheth that the Sciptures dwel plentiouſly in men: which exhortations (no doubt) ſtirred them vp to haue the Scriptures familar vnto them, euen as Timothie knew the Scriptures of a child. The ſtate of our times is farre otherwiſe; for Miniſters cannot ſay as Iude ſpeaketh, for as much as you know theſe things, I will put you in rememberance: but our people plead and profeſſe ignorance, yea that the knowledge of the Scriptures belongeth not vnto them (they being not book learned) but to ſchollers & Miniſters that liue by it. But we ought to account it a propertie of euery Saint of God, who is iuſtified and ſanctified, to know the Scriptures, which onely are able to make them wiſe vnto ſaluation.

The third point in the Preface is a ſecond propertie of the Saints, namely that they once knowe] that is, they knowe certainely, vnchangeably, and once for all, neuer to reuoke or alter this knowledge: which firſt informeth vs what to thinke and iudge of thoſe men, who becauſe of diuerſitie of opinions, will be of no religion, nor beleeue any thing vntil it be determined by ſome generall Councell; theſe want this propertie of the Saints, and are plaine Atheiſts. Secondly, it teacheth vs to hold our religion certainely, receiuing it once for all vnchangeably. In humane things we may often without danger chaunge our mindes and deliberate; but grounds of Religion muſt be out of all queſtion, and admit no deliberation.

Now followeth the firſt example, whereby the firſt part of the former reaſon is prooued, and that is of the Iſraelites, who wittingly and willingly ſinning againſt God were deſtroyed, as appeareth Num. 14. In which example conſider foure things, firſt, who were deſtroyed, [the people]. Secondly, the time when [after that he had deliuered them out of Egypt]. Thirdly, for what cauſe, [which beleeued not]. Fourthly, the manner of the ſpeech. For the firſt, the perſons who were deſtroyed were the people; by which word is meant a ſpeciall people, a peculiar and choſen people, the ſeede of Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob; a people priuiledged aboue all people of the earth; to whom belonged the couenant, ſacrifices, worſhip, of whom Chriſt came according to the fleſh, Rom. 3. 2. and 9. 4. notwithſtanding all which prerogatiues the Lord deſtroyed them. If it had beene a Heathen people againſt whome this deſtruction had preuailed, it had beene worthie obſeruation, but much more when it is againſt Gods owne people.

Here then we learne, that no outward priuiledge can auaile vs; nor any outward meanes of ſaluation be effectuall or fruitfull to our good, out of their right vſe in faith and repentance. Rom. 2. 25. Circumciſion is nothing vnleſſe thou keepe the law. Gal. 6. Neither Circumciſion auaileth, nor vncircumciſion, but a newe creature. Iudas had many great priuiledges, and yet periſhed. This made Paul, though he had many priuiledges, to acount them all as dung, in regard of the knowledge of Chriſt, Phil. 3. 8. We muſt not then content our ſelues with the meanes of ſaluation in the Word and Scraments, but vſe them aright in faith and repentance; otherwiſe they (beeing out of their holy vſe enioyed) ſhal turne to our deſtruction and greater condemnation, as they did to this people who (notwithſtanding them) were deſtroyed.

He is a Iewe that is one within.

The ſecond thing in this example is, the time when the Iſraelites were deſtroyed, that is, after their deliuerance out of Egypt. God had diuerſly teſtified his loue to this people, hauing choſen them out of all the people of the earth, he called himſelfe their God, and he gaue them many pledges of his loue, but eſpecially in that their great deliuerance out of the bondage of Egypt by ſuch an outſtretched arme: yet for all this not long after they ſinning againſt him, he deſtroyed them. Whence learne that after many great bleſſings, men not walking worthie of them, but prouoking the Lord by their ſinnes, commeth a great vengeance. The whole booke of the Iudges is a worthie proofe of this truth, where we ſhall ſee the people ſtil forgetting their deliuerance, and are foorthwith left to Tyrants to be afflicted for tenne, twenty, fourty years together. The ſame appeareth in the commonwealth of Iſrael vnder the Kings: In the dayes of Salomon the ſtate was moſt floriſhing and glorious, enioying a moſt happie peace: but Salomon once forgetting the Lord and his Commandements, and falling to the Idolatry of his outlandiſh wiues, their followed moſt fearefull accidents; as the diuiſion and rent of the tenne Tribes from Iudah, a long diſſention and hot warre between Rehoboam & Ieroboam, whoſe Idolatries brought much euill vpon their ſeuerall lands, and at laſt vtter deſolation; the ten Tribes beeing carried into Syria captiues, and there ended their daies; the other two Tribes into Babylon, and their remained 70. yeares, which iudgements ouertooke them aboue 400. yeares after. Iacob when he went ouer Iordan made a vow to the Lord, that if God would bleſſe him, and giue him but food and raiment, he would in way of thankfulneſſe returne to the Lord the tenth part of his goods, Gen. 28. 22. God bleſſeth him ſo farre as he became a mightie man, hauing the ſubſtance of a Prince: in this aboundance he forgat his vow, or neglected it: but what followed of it? was their no horrible confuſion in his family? Dinah was deflowred; Ruben aſcended to his fathers bed, Hamor was ſlaine, and the Lord is glad to call to minde his vow, Gen. 35. 1.

Englands ſtate.

Vſe. This doctrine concerneth vs neerely in this land, who by Gods mercie haue enioyed many of his beſt bleſſings in this our long peace, hauing beene deliuered from the Egypt of Rome, and haue ſat vnder the Lords protection all the day long: but as our bleſſings haue been and are many and great, ſo haue beene & are our rebellions raging amongſt vs, eſpecially that ſinne of falling from our firſt firſt loue, ſo as leſſe loue of God and religion is to be found amongſt vs then heretofore; beſides that our peace cauſeth mē to make their heauen vpon earth, and to embrace and affect things below: theſe ſinnes vnrepented of, will bring vpon vs daies of affliction, we hauing no more priuiledge then this people had, who after their deliuerance were deſtroyed.

The third point in this deſtruction is the cauſe of it: namely, becauſe they beleeued not: here firſt obſerue what kind of vnbeleefe this was. To the anſwer of which, we muſt know, that firſt God had promiſed to Abraham, that after 430. yeares he would giue to his poſterity the land of Canaan for their inheritance: this promiſe they all knew well inough. Secondly, it was often repeated, and renued, and namely, to Moſes; vnto whom the Lord promiſed that he ſhould be their guide, yea and that himſelfe would protect them in their iournie, and ſafely conduct them thither. Thirdly, God ſealed this promiſe by many and ſundry ſignes and miracles, both in Egypt, at the red ſea; and in the wilderneſſe: yet for all this they beleeued not, that God would accompliſh theſe promiſes vnto them, to bring them to that good Land: and further, ſeeing the Land of Canaan was a type of that heauenly Canaan, they beleeued not that God would bring them to heauen, and giue them inheritance in that eternall reſt by meanes of the Meſſias. This vnbeleefe then of the promiſes of God was the cauſe of their deſtruction.

Secondly, why are they deſtroyed for vnbeleefe, rather then for their murmuring, fornication, and diuerſe other ſinnes which we reade of to haue beene riſe among them? Anſw. Although they murmured, blaſphemed, tempted God, reuiled their guides, &c. yet this ſinne of vnbeleefe was the foundation and ground of them all; the which doth the more diſpleaſe God, in that it was the firſt ſinne that euer was in the world, and the mother of tranſgreſſion. Secondly, this ſinne in a more ſpeciall manner diſhonoureth God in making him a lyer, and ſo toucheth his honour more neerely.

Thirdly, what was this deſtruction? Anſ. It was the deſtruction of their ſoules and bodies, for their carcaſſes were left in the wilderneſſe where they fell; and their ſoules haue their portion in the lake prepared for vnbeleeuers, Reul. 21. For the further hatred of this ſinne, ſee 2. Kings 7. 19. the Prince who would not beleeue the word of the Lord was troden to death: and Moſes not waiting, but falling in his faith, was barred the land of Canaan, and onely ſaw it a farre of.

Vſe. Seeing deſtruction followeth vnbeleefe, we muſt labour to ſee our vnbeleefe, and take out that exhortation, Heb. 3. 12. Take heed leaſt there bee in any of vs an euill heart of vnbeleefe, to depart away from the liuing God: which place well conſidered ſheweth what are the degrees of falling away which are ſtudiouſly to be declined: as firſt, when a man is deceiued by ſinne, and giueth himſelfe liberty thereunto. Secondly, when the heart is hardened and made an euill heart. Thirdly, when infidelitie taketh poſſeſſion of the heart to rule it, and cauſe it to call in queſtion Gods promiſes, and prouidence. Fourthly, then followeth apoſtaſie & departure from God: now we muſt beware of the leaſt and loweſt of theſe degrees of this defection and departure from God. Secondly, if they were deſtroyed for vnbeleef, we muſt on the contrary exerciſe our faith daily, and inure it in the daily apprehenſion of Gods prouidence, power, protection, iuſtice, and mercie: and thus walking vndiſmaid, we which haue thus beleeued ſhall enter into the reſt prepared for the people of God, when as many ſhall not enter for vnbeleefes ſake, Heb. 4. 3. and 6. Euen as Caleb and Ioſua onely entred into that good Land, becauſe they beleeued that God could and would bring his people thither. Thirdly, this muſt teach vs obedience: for vpon this ground that they were deſtroyed for vnbeleefe, Dauid inferreth this conſequent; Pſalm. 95. To daie therefore if ye will heare his voyce, harden not your hearts; which Moſes alſo maketh the ground of his exhortation to the people to feare the Lord, becauſe theſe men were deſtroyed for vnbeleefe, Deut. 1. 32. &c. Fourthly, The wretched heart of vnbeleeuers, is the Witch that afflicteth them.

in that deſtruction of bodie and ſoule followes of vnbeleefe, let ſuch perſons as (when iudgements are vpon themſelues, wiues, or children) runne to Witches, and Wizards for eaſe, as though they were bewitched, and make that the ground of their harmes, be enformed that their owne wretched hearts haue bewitched them; which beeing full of vnbeleefe, bring plagues of all kinds, not only vpon their bodies, but their ſoules alſo. Art thou ſtrangely diſeaſed? the witch that hath brought it vpon thee is thy owne wicked heart, which knoweth not to relie it ſelfe on Gods promiſes and protection. Fiftly, were they deſtroyed becauſe of their vnbeleefe? let not vs iudge of our ſinnes by the crooked rule of our owne reaſon, but by the law of God; we can iudge murther, theft, and adulterie, great ſinnes, but we neuer eſpie the mother ſinne of all, which is our infidelitie, the maine ſinne of the firſt Table, and the nurcerie of other ſinnes, we neuer bewaile it, we account lightly of it, and therefore the Lord taketh the reuenge of this ſinne into his owne hands, and puniſheth it with deſtruction both of ſoule and bodie; ſo odious it is in his eyes, and ought therefore to be as hainous in ours alſo.

The fourth thing in the example is the manner of the ſpeech, which at the firſt ſeemeth to be generall, as though all they had bin deſtroyed which beleeued not; whereas indeede it is ſpeciall, for all that beleeued not were not deſtroyed, ſeeing that all vnder twentie yeares were exempted and ſaued, Num.14.19. who were reſerued that God might ſtill haue his Church among them, and that there might be of them a people left to poſſeſſe the good land, according to the promiſe: where note that to be true which Habacuck aſcribeth to God, that in his iuſtice he remembreth mercie: by which mercie the younger ſort are here ſpared; which warranteth vs to pray in common iudgements, that the Lord powre not out his whole wrath vpon vs; neither in our temptations vtterly forſake vs, and giue vs ouer to Satans malice, ſeeing he hath manifeſted ſuch goodneſſe towards his Church, that in iudgements he hath remembred his mercie. But here it may be asked, how this can ſtand with equitie, that euen theſe men ſhould bee deſtroyed, for it ſeemeth that they repented of this ſinne? Num. 14.40. yea they confeſſed it, and mourned for it, and offered to paſſe into Canaan, yea and were very readie to haſten into the land? Anſ. They repented indeede, but fainedly, it was farre from true and ſincere repentance and ſorrow; for euen in the very ſame place it appeareth that they diſobeyed God; for when he had paſſed ſentence againſt their ſinne, commanding that they ſhould returne into the wilderneſſe of Arabia, verſ.25. and there abide fourtie yeares, and die there; they would not ſubmit themſelues to that ſentence, but in al haſt they would goe forward to Canaan, according to the promiſe; although againſt a particular commandement: yea Moſes himſelfe could not ſtay them: but that brought on their neckes a more ſpeedy deſtruction, as appeareth in the end of the chapter. Whence note the wicked nature of the deceitfull heart of man, which in diſtreſſe when Gods hand is ſtretched out againſt it, can faine a falſe repentance, and counterfeit humiliation: which cauſeth many a man in ſickneſſe to vow amendement of life, if euer God raiſe him againe; and yet as ſoone as the ſcourge is ouerpaſſed, he forgetteth the hand of God, his own vowes and promiſes, and falleth backe into the ſame bad courſes againe: which conſideration may mooue vs to watch ouer our hearts, and ſuſpect them of this deceit, whereby they can frame and faine a falſe repentance, when indeed there is nothing leſſe then ſoundneſſe in it.

The fifth point in this iudgement is the generall vſe of it; namely, that we ſhould frame our ſelues to repentance for this particular ſinne of vnbeleefe, vpon which we behold ſuch a fearefull deſtruction in Gods owne people. To the practiſe and performance of which we muſt doe foure things: firſt, laying aſide the common perſwaſion of the fulneſſe of perfection of our faith, we muſt come to the diſcerning of this ſinne in our ſelues, which is the firſt ſtep to repent of it, and the rather becauſe it is our mother ſinne. Now becauſe this ſinne is ſo inward and ſecret, and ſo hardly to be diſcerned, for our helpe herein ſome directions may be giuen for the eſpiall of it in ſome ſignes and fruits thereof; which euery man ſhall finde in himſelfe leſſe or more. For firſt, we beleeue not as we ought the particular preſence of God in all places and times towards vs: for we are aſhamed to doe and ſpeake many things in the preſence of men, which in the preſence of God (men not being by) we make no bones of, either to ſpeak or doe; ſo as mans preſence keepeth vs in ſome awe, which Gods preſence cannot doe.

Vnbeleefe vnmasked in many particulars.

Secōdly, we beleeue not the particular prouidence of God, watching ouer vs; but either not regard it at all, or not as we ought; which appeareth by theſe three things: firſt, if we haue health, wealth, friends, fauour and meanes, we are well contented, we can thinke our ſelues very well, and can relie our ſelues on God: but if God take theſe away; oh then we are troubled, much diſquieted and diſcontented: the reaſon whereof is, becauſe the heart is not ſetled in the perſwaſion of Gods ſpeciall prouidence: which if it haue a pledge of God, can truſt him: otherwiſe not at all: but as the Vſurer truſteth not the man, but his pawne: ſo men relying themſelues on the pledges, truſt neither God himſelfe, nor for himſelfe. Secondly, in any diſtreſſe let our friend promiſe vs helpe, we are well cheered: but let God in his word promiſe ſupply of all good, and eaſe in our troubles, we reape little or no comfort from thence: this is a manifeſt fruite of inbred vnbeleefe. Thirdly, in ſickeneſſe or any iudgement, any meanes is vſed for eaſe and freedome; yea there is too common A running and riding to Witches, Carmers, Cunning men, and women: for men waite not on God, nor expect the ſame hand in healing them which hath ſmitten them. He that beleeueth maketh not haſt (ſaith the Prophet) which if it be true, then this haſtines to be disburdened of the hand of God, is a token of diſtruſtfulneſſe of God, and want of faith. Nay, this practiſe argueth not onely want of a true faith, but a preſence of a falſe and Satanicall faith: for if there be no faith in the Charme, it will not worke.

for

Thirdly, we beleeue not the Lord to be the Lord of bodie and ſoule, as one hauing ſoueraigne Lordſhip and power, to ſaue and deſtroy: for let any ciuill man be preſſed by temptation vnto ſinne, he will be eaſily brought to make no bones of very dangerous ſinnes: what other is the reaſon hereof, but that he eſteemeth B not the Lord to be his Lord? and accounteth of his commandements but as dreames, not ſerious or giuen in earneſt? whereas if Gods Lordſhip were rightly acknowledged, ſinne would not be ſo ripe and rife as it is.

Fourthly, we beleeue not the mercie of God in the pardon of our ſinne as we ought: for howſoeuer in our peace we thinke our faith ſtrong enough for any encoūter, yet let a temptation aſſaile vs, then we begin to doubt whether we be the children of God or no, and are full of impatiencie. Example hereof we haue euen in Iob himſelfe, who before his triall C thought himſelfe ſafe in his neſt; but when Gods hand was heauie vpon him, then he brake forth in ſpeeches full of impatiencie; as that God was his enemie, & did write bitter things againſt him: wherein he bewraied his want of faith, and his crooked and cankered incredulitie: and the ſame weakneſſe may the deareſt and ſtrongeſt of Gods children one time or other eſpie in themſelues.

Fiftly, we know not as we ſhould the agonie and paſſion of Chriſt; he ſuffered the firſt death, and the paines of the ſecond death for our ſinnes, they were the ſpeares that pierced his heart; but we carrie vp our heads, and can take delight in them, as though there were no daunger in them: whereas the remembrance of them D ſhould make our hearts to bleede, and faith in the heart ſhould cauſe vs die to ſinne, ſeeing thoſe who are Chriſts are crucified with him: but becauſe men will not depart from their ſinnes, which are not killed, but liue and are ſtrong in them, and no man ſaith, what haue I done? it is a plaine euidence that the life of faith is not to be found in the liues of moſt men.

Sixthly, we beleeue not that we did riſe with Chriſt, and aſcended with him into heauen: becauſe in this our long peace, our thoughts are ſet vpon the world, and we mind earthly things ſtill; whereas if we were riſen with Chriſt, we would ſeeke the things that be aboue, Coloſſ. 3. 1.

Seauenthly, we doe not beleeue as we ought the laſt iudgement: becauſe we are not ſmitten with feare and reuerence in ſpeaking and meditating of it. Paul ſpeaking of it, calleth it, the terrors of the Lord, 2. Cor. 5. 11. and this made him ſo forward in all good duties; yea this ſame conſideration of the laſt iudgement, made him endeauour to keepe a good conſcience before God and all men: but men make no conſcience of their waies.

Eightly, we beleeue not aright our owne death and reſurrection in the laſt day: for men commonly deferre their repentance & amendement of life, till the laſt day of their daies, and then they crie and call on the bed of their ſorrowes; which argues a counterfeit faith: for if a man did beleeue his death, it would driue him to the daily amendement of his life. By theſe notes we may eaſily diſcerne this ſecret ſinne of vnbeleefe within our ſelues.

Secondly, when we haue thus found out this ſinne, we muſt bewaile it, and mourne for our vnbeleefe, as being the mother of all our ſinnes, confeſſe it before God, and craue increaſe of faith, as the man in the Goſpel, Lord I beleeue, helpe my vnbeleefe: and with the Diſciples, Lord increaſe our faith.

Thirdly, we muſt ſet before our eyes and acquaint our ſelues with the promiſes of the pardon of ſinne and life euerlaſting by Chriſt: alſo all other dependant promiſes, whereof ſome concerne our proſperous ſucceſſe in our waies, and Gods protection in our labours & callings, and others concerne afflictions, promiſing happie iſſue & deliuerance therefrom, with ſtrength in temptation, to the which all promiſes may be referred; which we muſt alwaies haue in our eye, that our faith may ground it ſelf vpō them.

Fourthly, we muſt truly relie and reſt our ſelues in theſe promiſes, ſetle and content our hearts in them: that looke as the earth hangeth without proppe or pillar in the middeſt of the world, onely by the word of God; ſo muſt our harts be ſtaied in the ſame word and promiſe of God: yea if we ſhould ſee nothing but deſtruction before our eies, our faith muſt then be our ſubſiſtence: and when our vnbeleefe would vnlooſen our hold, and make vs giue backe, let our faith in theſe promiſes make reſiſtance: as Dauid, Pſal. 42. 5. My ſoule why art thou ſo diſquieted within me? truſt ſtill in God: eſpecially ſeeing we haue promiſes which aſſure vs in our troubles, either of their mitigation or remouall: after all theſe followeth the ſubiection of faith, when the heart and life are conformed to the obedience of all the Commandements of God. And thus we purging our hearts of vnbeleefe, ſhall eſcape ſuch fearefull iudgements, as this firſt example hath put vs in minde of.

v. 6. The Angels alſo which kept not their firſt eſtate, but left their owne habitation, he

Theſe words comprehend the ſecond example, whereby the firſt part of the former reaſon is confirmed: namely, that whoſoeuer giue themſelues libertie to ſinne, ſhall be deſtroyed; here prooued by this example of the Angels themſelues. In which conſider three points: firſt, the perſons that ſinned, The Angels.] Secondly, the ſinne or fall of the Angels; which kept not B their firſt eſtate, but left their owne habitation.] Thirdly, their puniſhment; he hath reſerued in euerlaſting chaines.] In the perſons ſinning, we haue ſundrie conſiderations; as firſt, that it pleaſeth the ſpirit of God to chuſe this example of the Angels to prooue his purpoſe, and that moſt fitly: becauſe they are the excellencie of all creatures, for ſo the Scriptures euery where ſpeake of them: as when the higheſt praiſe that belongeth to inferiour creatures is attributed vnto them in Scripture, the ſpeech is drawne from the glorie of Angels. Gen. 33. Iacob commending the fauourable countenance of Eſau, beeing reconciled vnto him, ſaith he ſaw his face as the face of an Angel. So Manna is called Angels foode: that is, a moſt excellent food, Pſal. 78. 25. C that if thoſe excellent creatures ſhould neede foode, they could wiſh for no better. 1. Cor. 13. 1. Though I ſhould ſpeake with the tongue of men and Angels: ſignifying that if Angels had tongues, they muſt needes be moſt admirable, diuine, and excellent. Dauid ſpeaking of the glorie that man once had, and in admiration of it, beeing not able to containe himſelfe, breaketh out into a ſpeech full of paſſion: O Lord, what is man that thou art ſo mindfull of him! thou haſt made him little inferiour to the Angels: Pſal. 8. 5. ſhewing that the chiefe glorie of men in their beſt eſtate, is inferiour to the excellent condition of Angels. Yea further, it is a part of the glorie of God to be attended of them, and a part of our glorie after the reſurrection to be D like them. Whence note the ſcope of the Apoſtle; which is hence to teach vs, that no glorie, beautie, or excellencie of the creature, can exempt it from the puniſhment of ſinne, when it falleth thereinto: nay, the more glorious the ſinnefull creature is, the more grieuous puniſhment may it expect, if ſinne be found therein; as the Angels here: which may inſtruct thoſe who are in theſe ſchooles of the Prophets, in which many men excell in rare gifts, of whome in regard of their wiſdome and knowledge may be ſaide, as the woman of Tekoah ſaide of Dauid, 2. Sam. 14. 17. My Lord is as an Angel of God, to heare good and bad. And they are the Angels of the Lord of hoſts, Malac. 2. 7. Yet for all this let them not be puffed vp hereby, but walke in feare and trembling, not emboldening themſelues to ſinne: for be it they were as the Angels in gifts; yet if they ſinne, they ſhall be as Angels in puniſhment alſo.

Secondly, hence note that Angels are ſubſtances though inuiſible, hauing beeing, life, ſenſe, and vnderſtanding, and are not onely qualities; for pure qualities neither can ſinne, nor be capable of puniſhment, as the Angels are here ſaid to be. Ob. It will be ſaid, ſeeing they are capable of puniſhment, they muſt be bodily ſubſtances. Anſw. No: it is ſufficient they be ſubſtances to be capable of puniſhment, though ſpirituall; for the puniſhment of hell is ſpirituall. Where we ſee the Sadduces and others euen of our daies are deceiued, who thinke Angels to be nothing but Motions and melancholy paſſions; and the Libertines alſo who thinke they are nothing but good and bad ſucceſſe.

Thirdly, the name Angell is not a name of nature, but of office: λειτουργικὰ πνεύματα εἰς διακονίαν &c. Heb. 1. 10. which ſignifieth that their office was to be the meſſengers of God, who were to ſtand round about him as attendants, readie to be ſent forth at his pleaſure, for the execution of his will, in all the parts of the world. In which function of theirs they are propounded as patternes to vs and examples for our imitation; who ought accordingly to ſet our ſelues in the preſence of God, as preſt and readie to performe his will: for ſo we pray daily, Let thy will be done in earth as it is in heauen; that is, Giue vs grace with cheerfulnes and readines to performe thy will here on earth, as the Angels in heauen doe: for whoſoeuer would be like the Angels in heauen, muſt be herein like them firſt in earth. Now in that this name is here giuen to the Deuils and wicked ſpirits, it ſheweth two things: firſt, what their office was in the creation, vnto which they were fitted and deputed. Secondly, the iuſtice of their puniſhment for the neglect of the execution of the ſame.

Fourthly, obſerue the diſtinction of Angells; of which ſome kept their firſt eſtate, others (of which he here ſpeaketh) left their firſt cōdition: ſome ſtood, and ſome fell: the ground of which diſtinction Paul mentioneth 1. Tim. 5. 21. I charge thee before God & his elect Angels. Some therefore are elected, and (becauſe election preſuppoſeth a refuſall), others are reiected; no other cauſe of this diſtinction is known to man, but the will of God, and his good pleaſure. Ob. If any man ſay it was becauſe God foreſaw that ſome would fall, and others would ſtand; I anſwer, that is no cauſe: for God did not onely foreſee the fall of ſome, but decreed alſo before all worlds to confirme ſome in their ſtate, and to paſſe by others in his iuſtice; ſo as the cauſe ſhall euer reſt in his good will, which willing the ſame maketh it moſt iuſt, not giuing vs any leaue otherwiſe to diſpute of this doctrine, or curiouſly to ſearch out the ſecrets of it, but rather to ſtand in admiration, & ſay with Paul, Rom. 11. 33. O the depth of the riches both of the wiſedome and knowledge of God! how vnſearchable are his iudgemens, and his waies paſt finding out!

Now

A Now followeth the ſecond point, namely, the fall of the Angels: in which obſerue three points: firſt the cauſe, ſecondly, the parts, thirdly, the meaſure of the fall. The cauſe of their fall in theſe words; which kept not their firſt eſtate, but left their habitation; themſelues were the cauſe of their owne fall; which is thus prooued: Either God muſt be the cauſe of their ſinne, or man, or themſelues; but neither God, nor man, and therefore themſelues. Firſt, God cannot be the cauſe: for that were iniuſtice to condemne them for that which himſelfe cauſed: how vnrighteous were it, firſt to cauſe them to fall, and then to puniſh them for falling? Obiect. But it will be ſaid, that God did foreſee their fall, and might haue preuented it, and ſo not hindring it, he ſeemeth to be a cauſe of it. Anſ. Whoſoeuer foreſeeth an euill, and hindreth it not when he may, is acceſſarie vnto it, ſo be B he be bound to hinder it: but God was not bound to hinder it, being a moſt abſolute Lord, not bound to any of his creatures further then he bindeth himſelfe. Obiect. But God did not confirme them in that grace which he gaue thē: whereupon they fell: whereas if he had confirmed them they had ſtood; whence carnall reaſon concludeth God to be the cauſe of the fall. Anſw. God gaue them grace in creating them righteous, but confirmed them not therein; he gaue them a power to will to perſeuere, but gaue them not the wil nor perſeuerance it ſelfe, & yet he is not to be blamed, becauſe he would C not doe it. Queſt. Why would he not? Anſw. I anſwer with the Apoſtle, What art thou O man that diſputeſt with God? Rom. 9. 20. Let vs without further reaſoning ſtay our ſelues in theſe two conconcluſions: firſt, that God is an abſolute Lord: neither bound to any action, neither to giue reaſon of any: ſecondly, that hee doth all to the glorie of his name, in the manifeſtation of his mercie and iuſtice. Secondly, as God is no cauſe or author of this fall of Angels, no more is man; for the Angels fell firſt, and were the cauſe of mans fall, and therefore themſelues were the proper cauſe of their owne fall. Queſt. How can this be? Anſ. The Angels had in themſelues the proper cauſe, and beginning of their owne fall; and that was a free and flexible will, wher- D by for the preſent they willed that which was good, and might will to perſeuere in it: but that will beeing mutable, they might alſo will euill, and ſo fall from God, this beeing the ſame will that Adam had in the ſtate of innocencie.

Obiect. Good trees cannot bring forth euill fruite: therefore the Angels being good, could not ſinne of themſelues. Anſ. A good tree remaining good bringeth foorth good fruite; but being changeable may bring forth euil. So much of the cauſe of the fall of Angels.

The ſecond thing in their fall is the parts of it, which here are two: firſt, They kept not their beginning. Secondly, They left their owne habitation. Firſt they fell from their firſt eſtate: which words are expounded Ioh. 8. 44. they ſtood not in the truth. By this truth is meant the Image of God in righteouſneſſe and true holines, Eph. 4. 24. and this image is truely called [truth] becauſe it neuer deceiued men, as vnrighteouſnes doth; which maketh a glorious ſhew of pleaſure, or profit, but indeede it deceiueth men, who finde nothing leſſe therein. Secondly, becauſe herein is no hypocriſie, it maketh no ſhew or appearance of other, then indeede it is, as the manner of falſehood is. The ſenſe then is, that the Angels voluntarily departed from their originall condition, and ſtood not in that image of God wherein they were created. The ſecond part of this one ſinne is, that they left their habitation; which a man might eſteeme but a ſmall matter, but the ſinne is not ſmall; for God in the beginning appointed moſt excellent places for his ſeuerall creatures; wherein they were to performe their ſeruice and homage vnto God; as Heauen was the proper place aſſigned to Angels: to man Paradiſe in his innocencie; as after his fall the families of the Patriarches: before, and in Chriſts time the Temple: ſince that time, the ſocieties and congregations of the faithfull are theſe places appointed for man to ſet out the ſpeciall praiſes of the creator in. Now the Angels leauing their place incurred two grieuous ſinnes: firſt, they left the preſence of God: ſecondly their office and calling, in which they ought for euer to haue beene employed in the glorifying of God. Obiect. But doe not the Deuils keepe in the ayre? Anſ. Some of them doe by God permiſſion, but not as in their proper place, or firſt habitation, for that was in the comfortable preſence of God in heauen. The third point in this ſinne is the meaſure of it; They left: that is, wholly and totally [their condition,] they quite forſooke God, his image, heauen it ſelfe, and that office which therein they were aſſigned vnto. Obiect. Here it may be obiected: If the angels in their innocencie and excellencie fell wholy and vtterly from God, much more may ſinfull men, although beleeuers, wholy fall from God, and vtterly cut thēſelues by ſinne from Chriſt. Anſ. But hereunto I anſwer, that there is not the ſame reaſon of the grace of creation, as is of the grace of regeneration: for that commeth farre ſhort of this, by the former the creature hath a power either to ſtand or fall, to abide with God, or depart from him, and this power is in it ſelfe: but by this latter grace of regeneration, ſuch feare of God is put into the hearts of the regenerate, that they ſhall not depart from God, Iere. 32. 40. and this power of not falling is in them indeede, but not from themſelues: neither is it ſtrange that there ſhould be ſuch difference betweene the ſtate of nature and that which is aboue nature. Againe, as the grace of creation and regeneration is different; ſo there is a difference of the will created, and regenerate. * Created will hath a freedome to will that which is good: ſo hath the will regenerate alſo. Secondly, crea-

* So called, not becauſe the other is not alſo created, but becauſe this is in the ſubiect by creation, as the other is not.

A ted will hath a power to wil to perſeuere in that which is good: ſo alſo hath the will regenerate. The created will hath not the will it ſelfe, neither the act of perſeuerance; wherein it differeth from the wil regenerate, which hath both theſe. Here the Schoolemen deceiued themſelues and others, in that they taught that in the conuerſion of a ſinner the will hath a freedome to receiue grace, or not to receiue it; ſo placing it in the will of man, and putting it in his owne hand and power to beleeue, or not beleeue. But the truth is, that in the firſt conuerſion of a ſinner the will rebelleth and reſiſteth: For none commeth to the Sonne, vnleſſe the Father draw him: it is not the will it ſelfe, but the conuerſion of it that frameth it to willingnes, making it of vnwilling, willing to entertaine that which is B truly good. It is vntrue that the will of man is now as the will of Angels was before their fall, hauing a power to fall, or not fall.

Vſe. Firſt, in that the Angels were condemned for forſaking their firſt beginning, we muſt bewaile this ſame ſinne in our ſelues, for we alſo had the ſame firſt beginning with them: the ſame image of God was ingrauen vpon vs, which we haue willingly departed from, & that remaineth for vs to doe, which belongeth not to them; to vſe all meanes to obtaine our firſt beginnings againe, that this image may be reſtored vnto vs, and renued vpon vs; vnto which three things are required: firſt, that our ſpiritu- C all vnderſtanding be cleered, and enlightened: ſecondly, that a good heart and conſcience be gotten & preſerued: thirdly, a ſubiection in our whole conuerſation vnto all the laws and commandements of God.

Secondly, though we haue the ſame beginning by creation, which is loſt by our fall; yet we haue another beginning, by a new birth and regeneration, which they want; we haue beene borne, baptiſed, and brought vp many yeares in the true faith, and profeſſion of Chriſt; now our dutie is to be more wiſe then before, to be warie leſt we fall from this beginning, as we haue done from the former; but cleaue to our faith, & ſtand to our vow made in our baptiſme: for otherwiſe our eſtate becommeth as remedileſſe as the condition of the Angels themſelues, who are ſhut vp in the chaines of condemnation D for euer.

We ought rather to be ſerious in conſideration of our owne fall, then curious in theirs.

Thirdly, we ſee how farre the Scriptures may be ſaid to be ſufficient to cleere all doubts and determine all controuerſies, ſeeing here it onely propoundeth a generall ſinne of Angels, and nameth no particular, as Peter alſo ſaith, they ſinned; and Iohn, that they ſtood not in the truth. Thus contenting it ſelfe with generall tearmes, without particularizing the proper ſinne deſeruing this iudgement; and determineth not that great queſtion controuerted among Diuines, of whome ſome ſay it was a ſinne in thought: others, that it was actuall: others, that it was enuie: ſome pride, &c. which maketh the Papiſts ſay, that the Scriptures are not ſufficient to determine all hard queſtions. But we muſt not imagine the Scriptures to be ſuch a iudge as decideth all doubts, which the curioſitie of mans braine may caſt within it ſelfe; whereof there are innumerable among the ancient Schoolemen, ſuch as this is by Scripture indeterminable: nay of purpoſe the holy Ghoſt cutteth off all cauſe of ſuch curioſitie by ſilence in ſuch vnneceſſarie matters, that we might the rather attend to more neceſſarie: yet is the Scripture a iudge ſufficiently able to reſolue any ſpirituall minded man concerning conſcience: or in any matter concerning ſaluation; all which it is the ſole and proper determiner of: now as for the particular ſinne of Angels, it is not neceſſary to ſaluation to knowe it; but ſeeing the Scripture concealeth it, it is a ſafe and learned ignorance to be reſted in, without further deſire to knowe that which the Lord hath hid in ſecret with himſelfe.

Fourthly, we are hence taught to ſeeke to enter into our habitation and true reſting place, which is not the earthly Paradiſe, for that was our dwelling place before the fall; but Heauen it ſelfe, which ſince the fall is aſſigned and prepared to be a reſt for the people of God: this was the citie which Abraham looked for, Heb. 11. ſo the Saints departed are ſaid to be at home with the Lord beeing in heauen. Chriſt tells his Diſciples he goeth to prepare them theſe dwellings in heauen, Ioh. 14. which elſewhere he calleth euerlaſting habitations. Make you friends of vnrighteous Mammon, &c. Now for our better practiſe hereof, this muſt be marked, that howſoeuer this our habitation be in heauen, yet the ſuburbs and the gates of it are here in earth; for all the aſſemblies of the people of God are the doores and gates of heauen it ſelfe, yea the very entry into it. Iacob when he ſawe the teſtimonies and tokens of Gods preſence and fauour, built an altar in the place for his worſhip, and called it Bethel, and ſaid it was the very gate of heauen, Gen. 28. 17. and therefore we muſt while we liue here ſeeke to enter, if we would be admitted within that glory hereafter. Queſt. But what meanes may we vſe to helpe vs forward herein? Anſ. Theſe fiue. Firſt we muſt alwaies endeauour to be found readie to enter into that heauenly habitatiō; for which purpoſe our hearts muſt be at this our home, yea our whole conuerſation muſt be in heauen, whileſt our ſelues are vpon earth, our walking muſt be in the path of life euerlaſting, ſtil cōtaining our ſelues in the waies of repentance, obedience and daily mortification, wherby we deny our ſelues, take vp our croſſe and follow Chriſt. Secondly, we muſt loue the aſſemblies of Gods people, & ioyne our ſelues vnto them in the holy vſe of the Word and Sacraments, whereby we drawe neere vnto heauen it ſelfe: yea and keepe at the gates of this Citie, and with Dauid thinke it a ſpecial priuiledge to be a doore-keeper in the houſe of God, Pſal. 84. Moſes chooſe rather to ſuffer with the people of God great affliction, fliction, that to enioy the treaſures and honours of Pharaohs court: yea euen wicked Cain himſelfe thought of this as the greateſt part of his puniſhment, and which he moſt complained of, that he was caſt out from the face of God, that is, out of Adams familie, where Gods face was to be ſeene in his worſhip. Thirdly, we muſt weane our affections from our earthly inheritances, which are but Tents, that they may be fixed vpon this ſure habitation in heauen; without the aſſurance of which, all earthly reuenewes and treaſures can adde but little comfort to the heart. Cain built a Citie, he had beſides great lands and faire poſſeſſions; but yet euen then the holy Ghoſt brands him with the name of a vagabond; becauſe he was cut off from Gods people, and cared not to ioyne himſelfe vnto them againe by repentance. Fourthly, we muſt euery day addreſſe and prepare our ſelues to our death, ſeeing our death is a meanes to bring vs home to this habitation: euery new day muſt occaſion vs to renew this our preparation: and this will cauſe vs neither to feare our owne, nor exceſſiuely to ſorrow at the departure of our faithfull friends, ſeeing they haue paſſed theſe firſt things, and are onely gone before to their longed-for habitation. Fiftly, if God call vs hereunto, we muſt be contented to leaue and forſake goods, friends, natiue countrey, and all for the aſſurance of inheritance in this our countrey; and if we cannot finde the doores hereof in our owne countrey, we muſt ſeeke them elſwhere, where we may enioy them, making light reckoning of all things for this one thing of higheſt account.

The laſt vſe of this doctrine is, to teach vs from this ſinne of the Angels our contrarie dutie; they by their office were to doe homage vnto God, and performe all dutie and reuerence as children to their father: for ſo Iob calleth them the ſonnes of God; but this office they departed from: we now beeing by adoption the ſonnes and daughters of God, beeing called vnto holineſſe, are to take great heede of this ſinne of forſaking our calling; yea on the contrarie to walke worthie thereof, as the ſonnes of God, approouing our faithfulneſſe vnto him. And it ſtandeth vs in hand ſo to doe, ſeeing the contrarie hath ſuch vengeance attending vpon it, as now in this example we are in the next place to behold.

The third point in this example, is the puniſhment of the Angels, which hath two degrees. Firſt, their cuſtodie, in theſe words; He hath reſerued them,] namely in durance. Secondly, their full puniſhment: vnto the iudgement of the great day.] The former is ſet forth in two things: Firſt, in that they are reſerued in chaines. Secondly, vnder darkeneſſe. By theſe chaines are ſignified, firſt that mightie power of God, which bridleth and reſtraineth the might and malice of the Deuills themſelues; as Reu. 20. the old Dragon was bound for a thouſand yeares: the powre of God was the chaine that curbed and ouermaſtred him; and this is one part of his preſent puniſhment. Secondly the chaines ſignifie alſo that guiltines of the angels, which by the tenour of Gods iuſtice bindeth them ouer to deſtruction; theſe bonds be vpon the conſcience of the wicked Angells, they knowe they are adiudged to damnation for their ſinne; ſo as let them be where they will, in the earth or ayre, or whereſoeuer, theſe chaines of guiltie conſciences binde them ouer to iudgement: where we are taught two things, firſt, to beware of guiltie and accuſing conſciences; for theſe are Gods chaines binding bodie and ſoule vnto euerlaſting vengeance: and therefore for time paſt, if thy conſcience accuſe thee, ſeeke in due time to be looſed and freed by Chriſt, that thou maiſt be able to ſay with Saint Paul; I know nothing by my ſelfe: and for time to come, beware of ſinne, euen ſmall ſinnes as well as great: for ſo many ſinnes as thou committeſt, are ſo many chaines binding thee ouer to iuſt damnation. Secondly, hence we alſo learne, that the ſeruice of God is a moſt happie and ſweete libertie, any libertie elſe is ſtraite bondage: men thinke that to be tied to the daily ſeruice of God is a yoke and bondage intolerable, and they muſt needes haue libertie to ſinne: but they deceiue themſelues, for while they ſeeke for libertie, by this meanes they plunge themſelues into captiuitie, and lay chaines vpon themſelues, yea bolts which hold them in eternall bondage. The libertie which is ſweete vnto thoſe who are freed by Chriſt is, that they can walke before God in the compaſſe of their callings, without thoſe accuſing conſciences, which continually vexe and torment the wicked men and Angels themſelues. Further, theſe chaines are called here eternall,] becauſe the wicked Angels ſtand guiltie for euer without hope of recouerie or redemption; ſeeing Chriſt tooke not vpon him the ſeede and nature of Angels to redeeme them, but Abrahams ſeede: where note Gods infinite mercie to mankinde, who beeing fallen, haue found a meane of redemption publiſhed in the miniſterie of the word: whereby Gods people (beeing bound before) are looſed from their chaines; but the Angels thoſe glorious creatures, beeing fallen, found no Sauiour, nor any meanes giuen by God to looſe them, for their chaines are eternall: which infinite mercie towards vs, ſhould ſtirre vp our dead hearts to thankefulneſſe, and continuall praiſe of Gods free mercie, who hath giuen vs the blood of his Sonne to looſe theſe chaines; when we as little deſerued it, as the Angels vnto whom ſuch fauour was denied.

Chriſts yoke is eaſie, and Gods ſeruice is perfect libertie.

The ſecond part of their cuſtodie is, that they are kept vnder darknes: which darkneſſe ſignifieth the wrath and anger of God, and want of the bleſſed fauour which Dauid prayed for: and calleth it by the contrarie name; the light of his countenance, Pſalm. 4. And as theſe theſe Angels are ſaid to be in darknes: ſo the Saints are ſaid to be in light, Col. 1. 12. that is, in Gods fauour. Obiect. But the wicked are not wholy caſt out of Gods fauour, for they haue faith and therefore ſome fauour and grace of God. Anſ. The deuils indeed beleeue, but they haue not their faith by the gift of illumination as men haue, but it riſeth of the remnant of naturall light and vnderſtanding left in them ſince their fall: wherby they can perſwade themſelues of the truth of the word of God: ſo as their faith is not from any grace ſince their fall, neither common, nor ſpeciall. Beſides, this reſerued light lighteneth not nor eaſeth, but increaſeth their torment.

Vſe. Seeing the miſerie of the Angels is, to be kept vnder darknes, which is to be caſt out of Gods fauour; we learne to place all our happineſſe in the fruition and enioying of this fauour of God, and inſtantly to pray that the Lord would ſtill lift vp the light of his countenance vpon vs; in that our whole felicitie muſt be placed in the apprehenſion of Gods mercy, in the pardon of ſinne, and life euerlaſting.

The great works which ſhall be performed on the great day.

The ſecond degree of their puniſhment is, that they are reſerued vnto the iudgement of the great day, wherein the fulneſſe and extremitie of their torment is expreſſed; for by iudgement is meant that fearefull and finall condemnation and torment which they are adiudged vnto, which abideth them, and is reſerued for them. Where we ſee that howſoeuer the deuils are alreadie entred into diuers degrees of their puniſhment; yet their full puniſhment, and the full wrath of God is not powred vpon them till the laſt iudgement; this themſelues know, as Matth. 8. Art thou come to torment vs before the time. That time is called here the [great day] becauſe the greateſt workes of God ſhall be accompliſhed in that day. For firſt, an aſſemblie of all men and Angels ſhall be made by the ſound of a Trumpet, who ſhall be cited before Gods iudgement ſeate, though they were reſolued into duſt many thouſand yeares before. Secondly, all the workes and intentions of men good or bad, ſhall be in that day reuealed, Eccleſ. 12. 14. Thirdly, another great worke is, the giuing of a moſt vpright ſentence vpon all men: of abſolution vnto the godly, and of condemnation vpon the wicked Angels and men. Fourthly, the reward ſhall be giuen to euery man according to his worke: to the godly, free reward of life and glorie: to the wicked, deſerued condemnation. Fiftly, then ſhall Chriſt God and man giue vp his kingdome vnto his Father, and ſhall ceaſe to raigne, not as God, for he ſhall be ſtill equall to his Father; but as Mediatour; for an ende ſhall bee put to all families, ſocieties, Ciuill, and Eccleſiaſticall diſtinctions and gouernments, ſo as in regard of outward gouernment and adminiſtration this his kingdome ſhall ceaſe.

2. Vſe. Let the remembrance of this great day ſtrike vs with feare and reuerence of it. Shall euery worke be brought vnto iudgement? Then let vs feare God, and keepe his commandements; it is the vſe that Salomon maketh, Eccleſ. 12. and conſidering thoſe terrors of the Lord, what manner of men ought we to be in all holy conuerſation? ſaith the Lord. Yea the Deuils themſelues beleeue and tremble in remembrance of this terrible and great day; but how many Atheiſts be there worſe then the Deuils themſelues that make a mocke of theſe great workes, not fearing nor acknowledging the Scriptures, Heauen, Hell, God, Deuill, nor this great iudgement day, but experience ſhal teach ſuch fooles, who in the meane time might learne ſo much of the Deuill himſelfe (but that God hath giuen them into his hand to be led by his will) to tremble at the remembrance of this dreadfull day; and let all that loue the Lord ſhake off ſecuritie, and ſtand in awe, and feare with another feare: let their hearts be ſmitten with a reuerent feare, that this day ouertake them not vnawares.

Atheiſts ſcof at that which maketh the very Deuils to tremble.

v. 7. Euen as Sodome and Gomorrha, and the cities about them, which, in like manner as they did, committed and followed ſtrange fleſh, are ſet forth for an example, and ſuffer the vengeance of eternall fire.

In this verſe is laid downe the third and laſt example, prouing the firſt part of the former reaſon, and it is the firſt part of a ſimilitude. The words [Euen as] ſignifying that the holy Ghoſt here inſtituteth a compariſon, the former part or propoſition whereof is in this verſe, and the reddition or ſecond part in the two next following. In the example conſider three things: firſt, the people who were deſtroyed. Secondly, the ſinne for which they were deſtroyed. Thirdly, the deſtruction or puniſhment it ſelfe. Firſt, the people deſtroyed were Sodome and Gomorrah, and the reſt of the cities about them; which cities are named, Deut. 29. 23. Admah and Zeboim: the reaſon of whoſe deſtruction is noted by the Apoſtle; becauſe they followed the ſinnes of Sodome and Gomorah: They ſinned in like manner; ſo as they beeing found in the ſame ſinnes, they were wrapped vp in the ſame iudgements. Here firſt marke that the holy Ghoſt mentioneth not the perſons who were deſtroyed, but their Cities, to ſignifie an vniuerſall deſtructions, an vtter ruine, and a totall ouerthrow of them; the which heaping vp of ſo many wordes, expreſſing the ſame thing, giueth vs likewiſe to vnderſtand that place in 2.Pet.2.6.he turned their cities into aſhes, condemned them, and ouerthrew them. Whence we may note, that there is a difference betweene the people of God, and thoſe who will not be obedient to his word, theſe meete with vtter deſtruction. Gods people may be deſtroied indeed, but not vtterly: for we muſt alwaies beleeue the Catholike church vpon earth. Elias in his time could not behold it; but yet there were ſeauen thouſand reſerued from that generall Apoſtaſie of thoſe daies. When the Lord viſiteth his owne houſe in iudgement, his manner is to leaue ſome remnants whome he ſaueth, leaſt their deſtruction ſhould be like this of Sodome and Gomorrha. So Iſaiah acknowledgeth: Except the Lord of hoſts had reſerued vnto vs euen a ſmall remnant, we had bin like to Sodome, and the people of Gomorrha.

Isa.1.9.

Vſe. This may teach euery one of vs true humilitie in regard of our owne deſeruings, and true thankfulnes in regard of Gods gratious dealing with vs: both of which muſt be often acknowledged of euery member of the church, and euery man muſt confeſſe and ſay with the Church, Lam.3. It is the Lords mercies that we are not vtterly conſumed. Secondly, in theſe people obſerue the iuſtice of God, and his ſeueritie in ſuch an vniuerſall deſtruction, ſparing none, but deſtroying euen the children with the parents, who ſinned not in following ſtrange fleſh as their fathers did, which maketh this a ſtrange and vnſearchable iudgement: whence the Atheiſts condemne theſe bookes of Moſes (whence this iudgement is fetched) as attributing to God crueltie, and iuſtifying in him iniuſtice. But herein to cleere the iuſt proceeding of the moſt righteous God, we are to know, firſt, that the child is Gods creature, and the life of it is Gods (he beeing the Lord of life) ſo as he may take it away when he pleaſeth, hauing power to doe with his owne as he will. Secondly, children are parts of the parents, and therefore the Lord may iuſtly infold them in the puniſhment of their fathers ſinne, to manifeſt his greater deteſtation of it. Thirdly, children are borne in originall ſinne, and therefore God may iuſtly inroll them with their parents, not onely in temporall puniſhments, but in euerlaſting condemnation alſo.

Thirdly, in this people who are made examples, note that as wicked a people as theſe haue had mercie offered them. Iſa.1.10. The Prophet calls the Iewes Princes, the Princes of Sodome, and their people the people of Gomorrha; that is, ſuch Princes and people as matched Sodome and Gomorrha themſelues in wickedneſſe; and yet he inuiteth them vnto repentance, with proffer of mercie and promiſe of pardon: yea though their ſinnes were as redde as skarlet, he would then make them white as ſnow, verſ.18. Whence we may learne, that the mercie of God euery way matcheth A his iuſtice; in iuſtice he ouerthroweth Sodome and Gomorrha, and in mercie ſaueth thoſe who were euery whit as wicked as they, his free grace bringeth thoſe to heauen, who by their ſinne equalled themſelues to thoſe whome his iuſtice had detruded into hell. Yea it offereth & giueth repentance to them which are holden in the ſnare of the deuill, and ruled at his will, 2.Tim.2.25. Manaſſeh himſelfe who broke of his couenant with God, by making league with the deuill, found mercie with God vpon his repentance.

2.Chron.33.

Vſe. Let not the greatneſſe of our ſinnes diſmay vs from ſeeking the Lord, thy ſinnes are not aboue the ſinnes of Sodome and Gomorrah, B for which mercie hath beene obtained; vſe thou alſo meanes to turne vnto God, and there is mercie in ſtore: but ſee thou abuſe not this mercie vnto ſinne.

Fourthly, note that in the ſame time this people of Sodome and Gomorrah was deſtroyed, Lot eſcaped, though he was in Sodome: for at the time of the execution the Angell led him out from among them, and not before. Which teacheth, that although the Lord ſeeme ſometime to neglect his deare children and ſeruants, and leaue them in tribulation: yet the inſtant time of their neceſſitie ſheweth his gratious and ſeaſonable regard and remembrance of them. The Iſraelites had a promiſe, that after foure hundred and thirtie yeares they ſhould C be deliuered frō bondage in Egypt: which promiſe the Lord was not vnmindfull of, neither for the ſubſtance nor circumſtance of time; for in the very ſame night that the time was expired, their deliuerance was wrought according to the promiſe. Our dutie hence is to learne in the middeſt of our afflictions, with quiet hearts to reſt and relie our ſelues vpon God, waiting his time wherein he will come in mercie vnto vs.

Fifthly, note that with this people of Sodom and Gomorrah, the other Cities Admah and Zeboim, becauſe they followed their ſinnes were likewiſe deſtroyed. Where we learne to auoide the wicked manners and faſhions of the world, not imitating theſe leſſer Cities, which imi-D tated the greater in their wicked manners; but on the contrary, followe the example of Dauid in ſhedding riuers of teares when he beheld men not keeping the lawes of God. We ſhould not with dry eyes behold mens impieties: yea, for this end our hearts ſhould be like vnto Lots when we ſee the ſinnes of our people breake out as the ſinnes of Sodome and Gomorrha, our righteous hearts ſhould be vexed within vs in the daily ſeeing and hearing of ſuch vncleaneneſſe. And thus much of the people puniſhed.

Follow not the multitude to doe euill: neither let the common error preiudice the truth.

Now followeth the ſecond point in the example: namely, the ſinnes for which Sodome and Gomorrah were deſtroyed, in theſe words: They committed fornication, and followed ſtrange fleſh. Firſt, they committed fornication. Secondly, they committed ſinnes againſt nature it ſelfe, following ſtrange fleſh. To vnderſtand the vileneſſe of theſe ſinnes conſider two things: firſt, the cauſe and occaſion of them: and that was abundance of proſperitie, and plentifullneſſe of Gods bleſſings. For Sodome was as a Garden of God, enriched with varietie of profits and pleaſures: this cauſed Lot to chuſe Sodome to dwell in. This ground nouriſhed foure bitter roots, from which theſe ſinnes of fornication and following ſtrange fleſh did ſpring, reckoned vp by Ezechiel, chap. 16. 49. The ſinnes of thy ſiſter Sodome were firſt Pride, by reaſon of proſperitie. Secondly, fulneſſe of bread: that is, they gaue themſelues to eating and drinking exceſſiuely: for ſo ſaith Luk. 17. 28. Thirdly, Idleneſſe, which was the daughter of their ſecuritie. Fourthly, Vnmercifulneſſe, and contempt of the poore, and theſe muſt needs nouriſh all ſinnes of vncleaneneſſe: vnto which adde a fifth ſinne, mentioned Gen. 19. 9. and 14. that is, contempt of heauenly admonition and inſtruction, for they ſcorned Lot while he warned them of their danger.

The ſecond thing in their ſinne is the meaſure of it. They ſinned in like manner, &c. The originall ſignifieth and implieth not only a bare committing of ſinne, but a giuing of themſelues ouer to commit their filthie luſts, and that impudently and ſhameleſly; which the prophet Eſay noted alſo chap. 3. 9. They declare their ſinnes as Sodome, they hide them not: ſhewing that they were paſt all ſhame in theſe moſt ſhamefull ſinnes. Yea they boaſted and gloried in them: both which may be gathered in Geneſ. 19. 5. and 9.

Doctr. 1. By theſe ſinnes we are taught to take a viewe of theſe laſt times, vnto which that of Ezekiel vnto Ieruſalem may be properly applyed: Thou haſt iuſtified thy Siſters (namely Samaria and Sodome) in all their abhominations. So theſe laſt times iuſtifie Sodome in her abhominations which I prooue thus: Firſt, the Church of Rome is that Sodome wherein the two Prophets were ſlaine. Reuel. 11. 8. It is there ſo called, becauſe it matcheth Sodome in her ſinnes, in that it teacheth the ſinnes of Sodome in making lawes to inhibite lawfull mariage in ſundry ſorts of men, to tolerate fornication, and ſuch filthineſſe: yea, not onely by the Scriptures, but in many other ſundrie, auncient, and ſome of their owne records, it is manifeſt, that Rome is a Sodome. Whence we ſee not onely the duty of euery Lot, and righteous perſon, namely, to haſten out of her, but alſo the ende and deſtruction that abideth her to be euerlaſting fire. Secondly, againe in theſe times it muſt be verified, and is alſo, which was applyed by Chriſt vnto thē of his age, Luk. 17. 28. It is in theſe latter times as it was in the dayes of Lot, men eate and drinke, buy and ſel, marrie, and giue in marriage, and thinke of nothing; & ſuch is the wonderfull ſecuritie of many profeſſors, that many Cities in the midſt of the church herein may match, if not exceede euen Sodome and Gomorrah themſelues. Thirdly, whoſoeuer (ſaith Chriſt) ſhall not beleeue and obey the doctrine of the Goſpel, it ſhall be eaſier for Sodome and Gomorrah in the day of iudgement, then for them. Which ſentence might mooue moſt men to tremble, who whileſt they take themſelues freed from Sodomes ſinnes; fornication, and following ſtrange fleſh, they nouriſh a ſinne within them, which maketh them as fare off their ſaluation as Sodome it ſelfe is, and that is the not receiuing of the goſpel as they ought: moſt men content themſelues to liue ciuilly, and out of danger of humane lawes; but as for the doctrine of religion, and yet much more the power and life of it, it lieth horribly neglected. But Sodom it ſelfe ſhall be ſaued before ſuch men.

Matth. 10. 15.

Doct. 2. In that fornication and following ſtrange fleſh are the ſinnes of Sodome; we are taught to auoid this ſinne of fornication and all ſinnes of vncleanenes. For firſt, the heauie curſe of God is paſſed not onely againſt Sodome and Gomorrah for theſe ſinnes; but whereſoeuer they be found they be ſinnes that burne to deſtruction, Iob 31. 21. they ſet families on fire, & deuoure them vtterly, waſt & conſume them. Againe, no fornicators, adulterers, wantons, buggerers, ſhall euer be admitted into the kingdom of heauen: and in verſe 13. the ſame Apoſtle propoundeth ſixe reaſons why wee ſhould flie fornication: firſt, our bodies are the Lords, and muſt be ſeruiceable vnto him. Secondly, we looke they ſhould be raiſed to glorie in the laſt day, and therefore we muſt in the meane time keepe them honourable. Thirdly, they are the members of Chriſt, we may not then make them the members of an harlot. Fourthly, whereas all other ſinnes are without the bodie, this directly is againſt the bodie. Fiftly, the bodie is the temple of the holy Ghoſt, and theſe ſinnes make it the Deuils ſtie and ſtewes. Sixtly, our bodies are bought with a price, and it is ſacriledge not to glorifie God in the bodie as wel as in the ſoule, ſeeing both are alike his. Now if any man be ſolicited by temptation vnto theſe ſinnes, and would know how he might ouermaſter them, he muſt begin with his heart, and obteine and reteine within it the feare of God, which onely is able to ouerrule him. This grace alone preſerued Ioſeph, beeing daily inticed by Potiphars wife: How ſhould I doe this wickedneſſe and ſinne againſt God? Gen. 39. 9.

1. Cor. 6. 9.

The third point in this example is the puniſhment it ſelfe; in which three things may be noted: firſt, the matter of it; they ſuffered the puniſhment of eternall fire: by fire, we muſt not vnderſtand our fire, nor ſuch materiall and bodily fire as ours is, but an eternall fire: that is, the endleſſe and comfortleſſe apprehenſion of Gods wrath for ſinne eternally burning, that is, alwayes terribly tormenting the ſinner, called fire, becauſe as burning of fire is the moſt horrible and ſenſible torment vnto nature, ſo much more terrible is this torment: which elſewhere is called by other names, as the worm that neuer dieth, &c. Where in the fearefulneſſe of the puniſhment marke the grieuouſneſſe of this ſinne: it were therefore to be wiſhed that whoredome might be puniſhed with death. The theefe doth not more, if ſo much harme againſt families and Common-wealths, as ſinners of this kinde and qualitie. The ſecond thing is the time of their puniſhment, namely, when they gaue themſelues wholly to fornication, and were come to the height in their ſinnes. Where note, that though the Lord be very ſlow to wrath, yet he recompenſeth that ſlowneſſe with the heauineſſe of it when he commeth; ſeeing he commeth not till he muſt needes, and that is not till ſinne be at the height, and muſt of neceſſitie be taken downe: as appeareth in thoſe foure hundred yeares allotted for the filling vp of the Amorites ſinnes. Let vs then beware of abuſing Gods patience, by adding to our ſinnes; for then he is adding vnto, and heaping his iudgements, and we ſhall finde that though he come ſlowly, yet he will ſtrike ſurely, if we giue not ſuch a ſtroke to our ſinnes by repentance, as in due time his iudgements may be preuented. The third thing noted here is the vſe of his puniſhment; namely, herein they were made an example to the whole world. Which teacheth vs that Gods iudgements are ſo many reall ſermons againſt the ſinnes of the ſonnes of men: for God teacheth not onely vocally by his word in the miniſterie of it, but really alſo by his workes in the execution of his iudgements. Iob ſaith that God ſpeaketh to men once or twice, therein teaching that corrections are the ſpeeches of God in mens eares: ſo as no perſon or people can go cleere away with that plea, that they wanted all meanes of inſtruction, ſeeing the whole earth is filled with the iudgements of God.

The Lord is ſlow to ang.r, but much in wrath.

Gen.15.16.

To auoide Gods ſtroke ſtrike down thine owne ſinnes.

Gods iudgements are his reall ſermons.

v. 8. Likewiſe notwithſtanding theſe dreamers alſo defile the fleſh, and deſpiſe gouernement, and ſpeake euill of them that are in authoritie.

Now the Apoſtle commeth to the proofe of the ſecond part of the former reaſon: namely, that theſe ſeducers are they which take libertie to ſinne: and therefore they ſhall be deſtroyed. This is prooued in this, and ſome verſes following, by a particular rehearſall of certaine ſinnes apparant in theſe men.

In this verſe three things are offered to be conſidered of vs: firſt, the ſetting downe of two A vices vnto which theſe men were addicted: firſt, they defile the fleſh: ſecondly, they deſpiſe gouernment. Seconuly, the fountaine of theſe and other their ſinnes in this word dreamers.] Thirdly, the manner of their ſinnes, in theſe two words; Likewiſe notwithſtanding; namely in two things: firſt, as Sodome and Gomorrah ſinned, ſo ſinned theſe likewiſe, no otherwiſe then they. Secondly, they did not onely ſinne as they of Sodome did: but notwithſtanding they knew what had befallen Sodome and Gomorrah, they not beeing afraid of thoſe iudgements ruſh into theſe ſinnes: and hereby they are conuinced to be dreamers, ſeeing they ſleepe ſecurely in the midſt of ſuch iudgements. B

In handling the words we will firſt ſpeake of the fountaine, becauſe it is firſt in nature, and then ſecondly, of their ſins flowing from thence. The originall of theſe ſinnes is that they are dreamers; which word leadeth vs to a double cauſe of them: firſt, that they are ſleepers made heauie with ſleepe: and ſecondly, in this ſleepe of theirs they are deluded mith dreames. Wee are then to vnderſtand firſt what this ſleepe is: and in the next place what bee the dreames which in their ſleepe delude them. This ſleepe is not that naturall ſleepe which oppreſſeth the bodie; but a ſpirituall ſleepe, like vnto that in diuers things going ouer the ſoule, binding vp the faculties of the ſame, and bringing a heauines C or deadneſſe rather into all the powers of man; ſo farre forth as they ought to be moouing in ſpirituall actions and affaires. It cauſeth the minde neuer to thinke ſeriouſly of God or a mans owne eſtate: the conſcience neuer or ſeldome to accuſe for ſinne committed: the will neuer or ſeldome to will that which is truly good; the affections neuer or ſeldome to be mooued at Gods word or workes. Thus it goeth ouer the whole ſoule, and caſteth it in a dead ſleepe, ſo as it is altogether vnfit to goe about the actions of an heauenly life. Example hereof we haue in the old world, they ate and dranke, &c. and knew nothing till the flood came: they dreamed continually D of many other things, but neuer of their owne deſtruction. Diues alſo was caſt on ſuch a ſleepe; he fared deliciouſly euery day, he neuer thought of heauen, for he was neuer to come there; nor of hell fire till he felt the flame. This ſpirituall ſleepe is three-fold; firſt, the naturall ſleepe of heart by which euery one is ouertaken; ſo as by nature no man can ſo much as mooue himſelfe to the leaſt good, till God awake him, and ſay to him, Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ſtand vp from the dead. The ſecond ſleepe is a ſlumber, and indeede the remainders of this naturall ſleepe in the children of God, beeing awakened out of their dead ſleepe; for euen they are ouertaken often with a ſpirituall ſlumber, by reaſon of remainders of ſinne in them. So the ſpouſe acknowledgeth, Cant. 5. 2. I ſleepe, but my heart waketh. The

Eph.5.14.

A third ſleepe is the increaſe of that naturall ſleepe and deadneſſe of heart by the cuſtome of ſinne, when as the heart is made paſt feeling, and altogether ſenſeleſſe through continuance in ſinne, Ephe.4.19. This laſt kinde is that which is attributed here to theſe deceiuers, for ſo the word [notwithſtanding] importeth: for although they knewe the iudgements of God againſt ſinne, yet they are ſenſeleſſe and careleſſe in the middeſt of them.

Now in the next place let vs ſee what theſe dreames are here ſpoken of, and they be nothing elſe, but wicked, carnall, and vaine imaginations ariſing from an impure heart, and conceiued in a corrupted mind, which in the ende deceiue, B and delude men no otherwiſe then a dreame, which while a man ſleepeth ſeemeth to haue ſome truth in it, but as ſoone as one awaketh, it vaniſheth away, and indeede hath in it nothing leſſe. An example whereof we haue in the rich man Luk.12.19. who in his fulneſſe and increaſe of riches dreamed of an happineſſe and continuance in it many yeares, when that night his ſoule was taken away. The Angell of the Church of Laodicea dreamed that he was rich, encreaſed with wealth, and ſtood in neede of nothing; whereas he knewe not that he was blinde, poore, miſerable, and naked, Reuel.3.17. So the Phariſie dreamed that he was another manner of man then the poore ſinnefull Publicane; but it was but a meere dreame, for C the other departed away iuſtified.

Dreames of men waking.

Doct. Hence we may note the cauſe why ſo few entertaine the doctrine of the Goſpell, ſo fewe forſake their ſinnes and turne vnto God, and that is becauſe men are dreamers, beeing caſt and lulled a ſleepe in their ſinnes, and therein deluded with many falſe imaginations which drawe them from God. As firſt, ſome pleade that they were neuer book-learned, they could neuer write nor read, therefore they muſt be excuſed in their ignorance, as not beeing bound to knowe the word of God; they neede not frequent ſo many ſermons, or if they doe, they are not greatly to care to carrie them away. Secondly, others dreame that becauſe they haue liued thus long, and yet had neuer any ſuch D croſſe, as they ſee befall others, therefore they are moſt happie men, and God loueth them; they finde the bleſſing of God vpon them in euery thing, and therefore they ſerue God well enough, or ſo much as ſerueth their turne. Thirdly, others haue learning and knowledge, and begin to dreame that therefore they want nothing, they bleſſe themſelues in their naked knowledge, & neuer haue care in their hearts to receiue Chriſt. Fourthly, others are prophane & dream that the Maſter wil not com yet; god wil not yet cal them, they ſhal haue time enough to repent in; for they craue but one houre on their death-beds, and that ſhall they haue; in the meane time they giue themſelues ouer to riot and exceſſe, neuer regarding though all the world cry ſhame vpon them, vntill their Maſter take them vnawares. Laſtly, it is a common dreame amongſt men, that the promiſe of eternall life is but a dreame, and ſo many make but a dreame of the whole word of God, and all religion: that looke as Sarah did not ſo much regard the promiſe as ſhe ought to haue done, becauſe ſhe tooke it for a dreame, and made a matter of laughter of it, Gen. 18. 12. and as thoſe who were reduced from the captiuitie of Babylon, entertained the promiſe of their returne but as a dreame, by their owne confeſſion, Pſal. 126. and Peter when he was deliuered by the Angell out of priſon, could not be perſwaded that it was ſo, but that he had ſeene a viſion, or dreamed a dreame, Act.12.9. Euen ſo, men hold the doctrine of the Goſpell but as a dreame, ſeeing they can holde it in opinion, but neuer endeauour to reforme their liues by it: but ſuch dreames diſappoint men commonly of ſaluation; which while men bring to the hearing of the word, it is no maruaile if we haue ſuch iuſt cauſe of complaint for want of profiting vnder it, as appeareth euery where at this day. The moſt powerfull Miniſterie ſhall little preuaile, ſo long as men come with their hearts full fraught with their carnall imaginations, and with ſuch heauineſſe of ſpirit. Secondly, in that theſe dreames are made the cauſes of all ſinnes, we are taught to learne the leſſon of the Apoſtle, Epheſ. 5.14. Awake thou that ſleepeſt, and ſtand vp from the dead. And 1. Theſſ.5.6. Let vs not ſleepe as others doe: which that we may doe, conſider firſt, the reaſons, and meanes which may be effectuall to awaken vs; and ſecondly, the notes to knowe when we are wakened. For the former, conſider firſt the infinite iuſtice and wrath of God againſt the leaſt ſinne, which made the Apoſtle ſay, It is a fearefull thing to fall into the hands of God. Secondly, the greatneſſe of our ſinnes, and the nūber which is like the ſand vpon the ſea ſhore. Thirdly, the vncertaintie of the day and houre of our death, which as it leaueth vs ſo ſhall the laſt iudgement finde vs. Fourthly, our vowe in Baptiſme; wherein we promiſe to forſake the Deuill, and all our owne luſts. Fiftly, Chriſts paſſion and his bloody ſweate, not for his owne but our ſinnes, which made him crie: My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Sixtly, that the night is paſt, and it is nowe day, the ſunne is vp, euen the ſun of Righteouſneſſe is riſen vpon vs; and therefore we are to be raiſed out of our ſleepe, and walke as children of the light, Rom. 13.12.13.

Moſt men dreame, that the doctrine of the Goſpel is but a dreame.

Heb.10.31.

Secondly, if a man would know whether he begin to be awakned, let him obſerue whether his heart haue begun to mooue in ſpiritual actions or no. For that bodie is wakened out of bodily ſleepe, which can mooue it ſelfe in bodily actions. Queſt. When doth the heart begin thus to mooue it ſelfe, and how ſhall I know it? Anſw. When thou beginneſt to turne thy eyes inwardly into thy ſelfe, and canſt finde, and eſpie the priuie corruptions which lurke within thee.

thee. Secondly, when thou art inwardly and heartily diſpleaſed with thy ſelfe, and grieued for thy ſinnes. Thirdly, when thou canſt humbly and heartily ſue to God for pardon, and canſt hunger and thirſt after Chriſt and his merits aboue all earthly things. Fourthly, when thou beginneſt to endeuour to doe the will of God, and pleaſe him in all things; then aſſure thy ſelfe thou art wakned out of thy ſleepe of ſinne, and not before.

Thirdly, if dreaming be the fountaine of all ſinne, we muſt learne the contrary vertue, namely, that being once awakened, we ſtriue to watch and be ſober, 1. Theſſ. 5. 6. For the practiſe of which dutie theſe rules are to be marked: firſt, we muſt daily and diligently obſerue our ſelues, our hearts, and ſinnes; and ſeeing what ſinnes we are moſt prone vnto, there muſt we double our care and watchfulneſſe: for otherwiſe where we are weakeſt Satan ſooneſt maketh a breach; for there he makes his greateſt aſſaults. Secondly, we muſt daily looke for an euill day, ſo as we forecaſt euery day to endure the worſt that it can bring forth againſt vs and our profeſſion: out of which forecaſt in vain ſhal any man purpoſe to keepe faith and a good conſcience. Wee may not crie peace, peace; for then commonly ſudden deſolation commeth vpon vs. Thirdly, we muſt eſteeme of euery day as our laſt day, that ſo we may be daily prepared to our death: daily liuing as though we were daily dying, carrying our ſeules in the midſt of our affaires, as though we were caſt vpon our death-beds: the good ſeruant expecteth ſtill the comming of his Maſter; whereas the euil ſeruant his propertie is to deferre it.

Die euery day, that thou maiſt die once well on thy dying day.

Laſtly, ſeeing we are all by nature ſuch ſleepers as theſe were, and our hearts as readie to be deluded by ſuch dreames, our care muſt be that the word of god may dwel plentifully in them, which alone can take vp the roome of them, and keepe out theſe dreames and falſe imaginations; without which care our own hearts (being full of guile) can doe nothing but deceiue vs: yea our naturall reaſon is nothing but a dream, vpon which we may not relie our ſelues, for then we deceiue our ſoules; but onely vpon the ſure word of the Prophets and Apoſtles, and the directions thereof.

The ſecond point is, the induction of the two ſinnes, which are laide to the charge of theſe deceiuers: the firſt is, filthines of the fleſh: the ſecond contempt of Magiſtracie. The former is in theſe words, [Theſe alſo defile the fleſh:] that is, they abuſe their bodies by fornication, and ſinnes of that kinde, euen as Sodome did, of which we haue ſpoken in the ſeauenth verſe, and therefore paſſe this ſinne ouer without further handling. Onely, let this one thing be here remembred, that ſeeing it is a ſinne of Sodome to defile the body with the ſinnes of the ſeuenth commandement, our dutie is to reſerue within vs that ſpeciall care whereby our bodies may be preſerued in holineſſe and honour; 1. Theſſ. 43. 4. This is the will of God: The bodie muſt be giuen vp as an holy ſacrifice to God, elſe it ſhall not be acceptable, Rom. 12. 1. Wouldeſt thou haue thy bodie riſe vp vnto glorie and fellowſhippe with God and Chriſt at the laſt day? then let thy care be to lay it downe in the graue in honour, by preſeruing it a pure member of Chriſt: for without holineſſe, no man ſhall euer ſee God, that is, haue fellowſhip with him being a moſt holy and chaſte ſpirit: yea the contrary things ought not to be named in the Church of God, Eph. 5. 3.

The ſecond ſinne followeth, in theſe words; and deſpiſe gouernment, and ſpeake euill of thoſe that are in authoritie.] In which words their contempt of authoritie is ſet downe in two branches. Firſt, in their iudgement and opinion, [they deſpiſe] that is (as the word ſignifieth) they refuſe and put away, yea and ſo farre as they can put downe all Lordſhip, gouernment, ciuill power, and dominion. Secondly, in their practiſe they ſpeake euill, &c. Firſt, in their iudgement they put downe gouernment, by teaching (for otherwiſe they could not) and maintaining that after men were conuerted to the faith, beeing now become Chriſtians and beleeuers, they were no longer to be vnder Magiſtracie or authoritie; but their neckes were to be eaſed from that yoke: and this errour was dangerouſly ſowne by the malitious man in the Primitiue church, & called ſome trouble and labour vpon the Apoſtles themſelues in their times; as appeareth 1. Cor. 7. 11. where the Apoſtle anſwereth this caſe, which ſeruāts themſelues were bold to call in queſtion beeing conuerted. Art thou called a ſeruant? care not for it: So Titus 3. 1. Put them in remembrance that they bee ſubiect to principalities and powers. So as it was a leſſon not well learned in thoſe firſt ages of the Goſpel. This was the iudgement and opinion of the falſe Teachers, which euen the word [deſpiſe] implieth and preſuppoſeth. Now whereas ſome might ſay, that they muſt needs (will they nill they) be vnder authoritie: for Rulers and Princes would and did keepe them vnder: The Apoſtle addeth, [and ſpeake euill, &c.] that is, although they cannot ſhake off gouernment ſo eaſily as they would, yet they can eaſily manifeſt their malice againſt it, in reuiling them that are in authoritie.

Firſt, then we are to ſpeake of their doctrine, and then of their practiſe. In the former conſider three things: firſt, what is this rule or gouernment which they deſpiſe: ſecondly, vpon what ground refuſe they to be vnder authoritie: thirdly, vpon what ground doth Iude condemne them for this refuſall. Firſt, to knowe what this authoritie is, we muſt diſtinguiſh all gouernment into diuine and humane: The Apoſtle Peter acknowledgeth this diſtinction, 1. Pet. 2. 13. Submit your ſelues to euery humane ordinance. Diuine gouernment is the abſolute power of God, whereby he maketh lawes to binde the conſcience, and that vnder paine of

The authoritie of the Magiſtrate and Miniſter farre different.

A life and death eternall. This is the power of all the Trinitie; but the adminiſtration of it is giuen to the Sonne. This power is not here meant; for had they denied this, they could not haue carried a face or ſhewe of Chriſtians. The other (which here is vnderſtood) is humane or ciuill rule and dominion, whereby man is ſet ouer man; which may be thus deſcribed: Ciuill gouernment is a ſtate of ſuperioritie, conſiſting in the power of commanding, and in the power of the ſword for the common good of mankinde. That it is a ſtate of ſuperioritie appeareth, Rom. 13. 1. Let euery ſoule be ſubiect to the higher power. Further, I ſay it conſiſteth in a double power: firſt of commanding, that is, of making edicts and lawes, of calling and conuenting. Secondly, of the Sword, and that B in foure things: firſt, in arreſting, ſecondly, impriſoning: thirdly, putting to death; fourthly, making warre in way of protection or otherwiſe. This ſecond power, namely of the Sword, is added: firſt, to put a difference betweene the authoritie of the Magiſtracie and Miniſterie; which difference ſtandeth in three things: firſt, the Magiſtracie hath a power in it ſelfe, whereby the Ciuill Magiſtrate may command in his owne name. The Miniſterie hath power onely to pronounce what God commandeth, and that in his name. Secondly, the authoritie of the Ciuill Magiſtrate is in himſelfe; the authoritie of the Miniſter not in himſelfe but in Chriſt: C ſo as the Ciuill Magiſtrate may command obedience to himſelfe, but the Miniſter commandeth it to God. Thirdly, the Ciuill gouernment hath an abſolute power to compell, and enforce the outward man; but the miniſterie hath power onely to counſell, perſwade, exhort. Secondly, this power of the Sword is added to diſtinguiſh it from all priuate power, as in Schooles, families, which haue a power of commanding, but not of the Sword. Laſtly, I adde for the common good of mankind, Rom. 13. 4. The Magiſtrate is the miniſter of God, for thy wealth, that is, procuring the welfare of ſoule and body: which ſtandeth in two things: firſt, true Religion: ſecondly, ciuill iuſtice; both which are by Magiſtracie maintained. It may be here demanded; but how farre doth this Ciuill D gouernment extend it ſelfe? Anſ. It extendeth it ſelfe to two things: firſt, ouer all cauſes, things & words of men Ciuil & Eccleſiaſtical; for temporall cauſes there is no queſtion: that it extendeth it ſelfe alſo to the cauſes of the Church appeareth, in that the Kings muſt haue the booke of the Lawe before them, Deut. 17. 18. he muſt reade it, and execute it accordingly: yea he muſt doe all the Lawe, that is, ſee it to be done. Ioſiah kept the Paſſeouer himſelfe, and gaue commandement concerning the preparation and performance of the ſame, 2. Chron. 35. and ſawe it done. But here two differences in this authoritie muſt be marked: Firſt, that ciuill authoritie doth not after the ſame manner order cauſes eccleſiaſticall as ciuill: for in ciuill cauſes it ordereth all, and executeth all likewiſe; but in Eccleſiaſticall it hath power to order all, but not to execute them. The Magiſtrate indeede ordereth and preſcribeth in all, but the Miniſter is he that executeth in Eccleſiaſticall cauſes. Secondly, that ciuill authoritie hath power ouer all the things of men, but not ouer the things of God; as the Word and Sacraments, faith, conſcience, the graces of God in the heart: Ciuill power hath no rule ouer theſe; concerning which Chriſt commanded to giue vnto God the things of God, and vnto Cæſar Cæſars. Secondly, the authoritie extendeth it ſelfe to all perſons, as well Eccleſiaſticall as Ciuill, but ſo, as it ſtretcheth onely vnto the outward man, to the body, life, conuerſation, and outward things, but not to the ſoule and conſcience, of which God is the onely Lord and gouernour. If it be asked what are the kinds of this power? I anſwer, it is of three ſorts: firſt, in one perſon man or woman, which is a Monarchie; ſecondly, in moe, when the gouernment is in a few ſtates and Peeres: thirdly, in the body of the people, which is a popular gouernment: by one of theſe three is euery Common-wealth gouerned. Theſe are the Gouernments deſpiſed by theſe ſeducers.

The ſecond point followeth, namely, vpon what grounds they deſpiſed gouernment? Anſ. Their grounds may be knowne by the Heretickes of this time the Anabaptiſts, who are giuen vp to the ſame errour: and they may be reduced to theſe foure heads: Firſt, ſubiection (ſay they) came in with ſinne; and therefore Chriſt hauing taken away ſinne, hath taken away ſubiection alſo. The former part they prooue out of Gen. 1. 26. Man in innocencie was to rule ouer the fiſh of the ſea, the fowles of heauen, ouer the beaſts, the earth, and all creeping things, but not ouer man: but after the fall Eue is put vnder ſubiection to Adam, Gene. 3. Anſw. There be two kinds of ſubiection: the firſt Seruile: the ſecond Ciuill. The former is the ſubiection of a ſlaue or vaſſall, who is onely to ſeeke the proper good of his Lord and Maſter. The latter whereby one man is ſubiect to another for the common good. The former came in by ſinne: the latter was before ſinne, in innocencie. Eue was ſubiect to Adam in innocencie: thus the Apoſtle reaſoneth 1. Tim. 2. 12. Let the woman be ſubiect to the man: for ſhe was taken out of the man. Againe, in innocencie it was ſaid, Increaſe and multiply; and therefore in the light of nature it is a plaine diſtinction betweene the father and ſonne, and an inequalitie.

The firſt place is miſalleadged Gen. 1. 26. becauſe it was ſpoken not of man alone, but of all mankind, euen women as well as men; who haue alſo dominion giuen ouer the vnreaſonable creatures. As for the ſecond place, Gen. 3. 15. He ſhall rule, and thou ſhalt be ſubiect: It is not ſpoken becauſe the ordinance of

A God ſimply conſidered in it ſelfe was not before the fall: but becauſe now the ſubiection was ioyned with feare, griefe, and ſorow, which it wanted in innocencie: for then it was a pleaſure, and this makes ſubiection a curſe in ſome reſpect; but it is not ſo (no not ſince the fall) in it ſelfe conſidered.

Secondly, they reaſon thus: Euery beleeuer is in the kingdome of heauen, euen in this life: Now in heauen there is no King but God; and therefore no beleeuer is to be ſubiect to any but God and Chriſt. Anſw. There be two kinds of gouernments vpon earth; one is ſpirituall and inward, this is the kingdome of heauen and of Chriſt within man, ſtanding in peace of conſcience, and ioy in the holy Ghoſt: in regard of which regiment of Chriſt, there is no diſtinction of perſons, no difference of bond B or free, Maſter, ſeruant, father, ſonne; but all are one in Chriſt. The other is a ciuill regiment, wherein orders and diſtinctions of men muſt be maintained; as ſome muſt be Princes, ſome ſubiects, ſome fathers, ſome children, ſome maſters, ſome ſeruants. Whence it is that euery man ſuſtaines vpon him two perſons: and is to be conſidered firſt as a beleeuer, and as a member of the kingdome of Chriſt: thus is he equall to any beleeuer, and any beleeuer equall to him. Secondly, as a member of the Common-wealth wherein he liueth; thus he is either a ſuperiour or inferiour. Their reaſon were ſomewhat, if C euery beleeuer were onely in the kingdome of heauen: but euery of them liuing here in earth is alſo a member of ſome Commonwealth.

Obiect. Thirdly, Ciuill gouernment is full of crueltie, which hauing the power of the ſword deſtroyeth the bodies and ſoules of offenders, in not giuing them time of repentance: and therefore is intolerable among Chriſtians. Answer. Exod. 32. 28. Anſw. Moſes and the Leuites by Gods commandement ſlew 3000. of the Iſraelites for worſhipping their golden calfe, and neuer gaue them ſpace to repent. Secondly, the malefactour that is not mooued to repentance at the ſentence of preſent death, there is little hope euer he would repent after if he had longer time. Thirdly, Gods wiſdome and commandement muſt take D place of mans reaſon; he commanded that the malefactour ſhould die, and thereby that the euill be taken away; Pereat vnus potius quam vnitas. better it is that one ſhould be deſtroyed then an vnitie; better that one be remooued, then a multitude by the contagion of his example infected.

Obiect. Fourthly, they plead libertie by ſome places and teſtimonies of Scripture: Gal. 5. 1. Stand faſt in the libertie wherein Chriſt hath ſet you free. Answer. Anſ. The libertie which Chriſt hath procured vs is libertie of conſcience, freedome from the power of ſinne, Satan, death, hell, and condemnation; and therefore ſpirituall: but not from temporall and ciuill ſubiection.

Obiect. Answer. Obiect. Rom. 13. 8. Owe nothing to any man but loue: therefore not obedience. Anſ. There be two kinds of debt: firſt, a ciuill debt, occaſioned by contract and bargaining betweene man and man: the ſecond is a debt to which we are bound by Gods law and couenant; the place is meant of the former, ſo farre as it lies in our power: but we are bound ſtill to obedience and ſubiection by the latter.

Obiect. Matth. 17. 16. The Kings ſonnes are free from tribute; and therefore from ſubiection. Obiect. Answer. Anſ. Chriſt ſpeaketh that of himſelfe, who by his birth was heire to the Crowne and kingdom of the Iewes: and therefore by right was to pay none; neither did but for auoiding of offence: what is this to free other men from obedience to the Magiſtrate?

Obiect. Answer. Obiect. 1. Cor. 7. Ye are bought with a price, be ye not the ſeruants of men. Anſ. The meaning is, that ſeruants ſhould not ſubiect themſelues to men as to abſolute Lords; for we muſt doe ſeruice one to another for Gods ſake; and not onely for God but in God.

Obiect. Obiect. Beleeuers are able to gouerne themſelues euery way, and need not any gouernment of man. Answer. Anſ. One thing it is what we doe, another that we ought to doe, we ought indeede ſo to liue, as not to neede gouernours, but we doe not; yea and if beleeuers could, yet were the reaſon naught, for the Church containes as well bad as good; hypocrites as well as ſincere Chriſtians; and therefore the beſt Churches neede Magiſtracie for the puniſhment of the euill doers, and the praiſe of them that doe well. Yea the Church lying open to the malice of Satan and the wicked, ſtandeth euer in neede of Magiſtracie to protect it by force and warre, or otherwiſe.

The third generall point is; vpon what ground doth the Apoſtle here blame and condemne theſe ſeducers for deſpiſing ciuill gouernment? Anſ. The ground is, becauſe it is a ſolemne ordinance of God; called therefore by Peter a creation or creature, which bindeth euery ſoule vnto ſubiection to the higher power, Rom. 13. 1. and that for conſcience ſake, which reſpecteth not ſo much the rule it ſelfe, as Gods commandement, ſubiecting not onely ciuill but all Eccleſiaſticall perſons thereunto. Chriſt himſelfe taking vpon him mans nature, was ſubiect vnto authoritie, ſubmitting himſelfe vnto Caiphas and Pilate, yea to apprehenſion, arraigement, condemnation, and execution, Matth. 26. Paul himſelfe whoſe Apoſtolicall authoritie and ſpirituall weapons, were able to bring downe euery oppoſition; yet acknowledged that he muſt be iudged by Cæſar, Act. 25. 11.

Obiect. Ob. Ierem. 1. 10. I ſet thee ouer Nations and kingdoms to plant and plucke vp: the Prophets therefore and their ſucceſſors are not to be ſubiect vnto ciuill Magiſtracie. Answer. Anſ. The Prophet is ſet ouer nations and kingdomes not to gouerne by the ciuill ſword, but the ſword of the Spirit in his mouth; and he is to plant and plucke vp kingdomes no otherwiſe, then by declaring that god would plant or pluck them vp.

Ob.

Obiect.

Obiect. Eſay 60. 10. Kings ſhall come and ſerue the Church in the new Teſtament; and therefore the church is not to be ſubiect vnto Princes, but they vnto it. Anſ. In the Church are two things: firſt the perſons of men: ſecondly, the things of God. Now Kings are ſubiect to the Church; but how? not to the perſons of beleeuers, but to the things of God, namely the Word, Sacraments, faith, &c.

Obiect. Kings and Magiſtrates are as ſheepe; Miniſters are Paſtors and ſhepheards; therefore they are vnder the Miniſters, as the flocks vnder the ſhepheards. Anſ. In the Prophets, Paſtors, and Miniſters conſider two things: firſt their perſons; ſecondly, their miniſterie. In regard of their perſons all of them are ſubiect to their owne Princes, & that for conſcience ſake: but in regard of their Miniſterie, Princes, and Magiſtrats are to be ſubiect thereunto, as wherein the Word is taught and Sacraments adminiſtred: euen as a meane man beeing a Sergeant, may arreſt a Baron, Earle, or Duke, who may not reſiſt him, becauſe hee commeth with the Princes authoritie, vnto which he muſt yeeld himſelfe, though not vnto the perſon of the ſergeant: ſo muſt Magiſtrates to the Miniſters comming not in their owne, but in the name of God. For this alſo muſt be marked, that Magiſtrates are not ſimply ſubiects to the Miniſterie, but ſo farre as the word is rightly taught, and Sacraments dulie adminiſtred; for elſe they haue power either to reforme, or depoſe ſuch Miniſters as ſhall faile in their adminiſtration: for euen in this regard thẽſelues are ſhepheards. As Iſay. 44. 1. Cyrus is called a ſhepheard, though otherwiſe he be a ſheepe, ſo farre as he is truly taught and directed by the Miniſter. So much of the ground.

The Pope the arch-rebell of the world.

Vſe. By this doctrine we may diſcouer the wickedneſſe and horrible rebellion of ſundry perſons in this age. Firſt, of the Biſhop of Rome that moſt ancient Rebell, who hath for many hundred yeares taken vpon him an vſurped ſupremacie ouer all ciuil gouernment in the earth; which is the higheſt rebellion which euer the world hath heard of, ſeeing there is not a ſoule which muſt not be ſubiect to the higher power.

Obiect. Ye but that place is meant of thoſe that are to be ſubiect, but the Popes themſelues are exempted. Anſ. But beſides that the text commandeth euery ſoule to be ſubiect, it is made a note of Antichriſt, to exalt himſelfe aboue God, and all that is called God; that is, all Magiſtrates.

Obiect. But they alledge the example of Vzziah the King, 2. Chron. 26. 20. who taking vpon him preſumptuouſly the office of the Prieſt, Azariah the Prieſt reſiſted him, caſt him out of the Temple, and depoſed him from his kingdome. Anſ. Azariah reſiſted the King not by force, or violence, but by word onely and admonition, whereby he cauſed him to depart the Temple: neither did he depoſe him from his gouernement; but beeing by God ſtriken with a leproſie, he was by the lawe ſhut out from the companie and ſocietie of men, and ſo diſabled to gouerne; although the right of it ſtill belonged vnto him.

Ob. They alleadge likewiſe the example of Iehoiadah the high Prieſt, who depoſed Queen Athaliah from her kingdome, and ſet vp yong Ioaſh to be King. 2. Chron. 23. therefore the Pope hath authoritie to depoſe Kings and Emperours. Anſ. Iehoiadah the high Prieſt was next to the king in blood, 2. Chron. 22. 11. and was one of the ſtates of the Land; who depoſed her not alone, but by common conſent of all the ſtates and Peeres of the Land; as cha. 23. 1, 2. He indeede is chiefely named, becauſe he was the chiefe of them in blood; neither did he ſet vp Ioas, but helped to maintaine his right which was vſurped by Athaliah: in a word, he protected the right heire, but could not himſelfe, nor did not diſpoſe the kingdome vnto him. And of this kind are all their allegations: which yeild no patronage at all to that vſurped Papall authoritie, but euen the Pope himſelfe ought to be ſubiect to his Emperour, if he would auoide his moſt iuſt title of a moſt vniuſt vſurper.

Vſe 2. Hence alſo may be obſerued that the exemption or immunitie of the Clergie from the authoritie of the Ciuill Magiſtrate, is wicked, and a kinde of rebellion: and this is the condition of the whole Romane Clergie. Ob. They pleade that Kings and Princes of their bountie haue graunted theſe priuiledges vnto them. Anſw. The lawe of nature acknowledgeth a ciuill ſubiection; the Law of God ſtraitly enioyneth it, and no lawe of any man may offer voilence, or derogate from either of theſe.

Thirdly, the Pope vſurping a power to free ſubiects from their alleageance and their oath of obedience, hath beene for many hundred yeares a moſt wicked inſtrument of rebellion, as the kingdoms of Europe haue had too woefull experience of. If here they ſay, the Pope may diſpenſe with the lawes of kingdomes, I anſwer, were it ſo that he could diſpenſe with humane lawes of Kings and Princes in their Countries and Prouinces, (which is groſſe vſurpation) yet with what face dare he challenge to diſpenſe with the lawes of God and nature?

Popiſh religion vrgeth men to forſweare the honour of the king.

Fourthly, we ſee hence what we are to eſteeme of the Romane Religion: namely as of a Religion to be abhorred, as are theſe ſeducers themſelues, becauſe it is cleane contrary to Chriſtian Religion: which teacheth to feare God and honour the King; but Romane Religion, pretendeth to teach men to feare God, but putteth downe the honour of the King: nay he that profeſſeth that Religion, muſt ſweare the flat contrary to the Kings honour.

Fifthly, we are hence directed what to think of that oath of the ſupremacie vnto the Biſhop of Rome, namely to be ſuch a one as fighteth directly againſt the law of God and nature; ſeeing it giueth all Eccleſiaſtiall gouernment vnto the Pope, which belongeth properly to Kings and Princes in their ſeuerall dominions.

Sixtly, if euery man muſt be ſubiect to the power of the Magiſtrate for conſcience ſake, then all wandring beggars and roagues, that paſſe from place to place, beeing vnder no certaine Magiſtracie or Miniſterie, nor ioyning themſelues to any ſet ſocietie in Church, or Common-wealth, are plagues and banes of both, and are to bee taken as maine enemies of this ordinance of God; and ſeeing a moſt excellent lawe is prouided to reſtraine them, it is the part of euery good ſubiect or Chriſtian to ſet themſelues for the executing, ſtrengthening and vpholding of the ſame.

And ſpeake euill of them which are in authoritie.] In theſe words the Apoſtle ſheweth how theſe falſe teachers pull downe authoritie by their practiſe, as in the former they did by their iudgement: for when they cannot quite put downe all authoritie and Magiſtrates, they ſpeake euill of them, and blaſpheme thoſe that exerciſe the ſame: that is (as the word ſignifieth) thoſe that are in dignities and glories: for that is his meaning, when he calleth Princes by the name of Glories. Here two things are to be conſidered: firſt, their ſinne, [ſpeake euill:] ſecondly, the amplification of their ſinne, partly in this verſe, and partly in the next. The ſinne is mentioned and codemned in Exod. 22. 28. Thou ſhalt not ſpeake euill of the Ruler of thy people. Eccl. 10. Curſe not the king, not in thy heart, for the birds of the ayre ſhall bewray it. Which ſinne we ſhould be ſo farre from, as that we ſhould not receiue any accuſation agaainſt any Elder vnder two or three witneſſes, 1 Timoth. 5. If we may not receiue ſlanders againſt rulers much leſſe may we raiſe them.

Vſe. 1. See here as in a glaſſe the common ſinne of theſe daies, wherein the common practiſe, yea and table talke of men is the cenſure of the doings of the Magiſtrate, and the doctrine of the Miniſter. Paul when he called Ananias a painted wall; beeing reprooued, anſwered, that he knewe him not to be the high Prieſt, for then he would not haue reproched him: that is, he acknowledged him not, but knewe him rather to be an vſurper, which made him vſe that boldneſſe. Secondly, if a man may not ſpeake euill of a Ruler, then much leſſe may any priuate man take a ſword in hand to take away the life of a Prince or Magiſtrate. Dauid knew that he was to ſucceede Saul in the kingdome, and that Saul ſought his life daily, and yet his heart ſmote him when finding Saul at aduantage he cut off but the lap of his garment, whereas he might haue as eaſily taken away his life; the ground of his griefe was, becauſe he was the Lords annoynted. Where take notice of the ſpirit that leadeth and ruleth thoſe Romiſh vaſſalls, who are ſent out into Chriſtian lands with Commiſſion to take away the liues of the Lords annointed ones, who will not ſtoope to that Antichriſtian tyranny. Inſtruments of Satan they are, inflamed by Diabolicall fury; fighting for their Babylon with the weapon of moſt monſtrous and vnnaturall crueltie. Thirdly, we are on the contrary taught hence to bleſſe our Magiſtrates, eſpecially the Lords annoynted ouer vs: as alſo other inferiour magiſtrats; who although their perſons may be meane, yet are vnder the ſupream, as he vnder God is a Steward and Deputie for our wealth. The Apoſtle Paul willeth that prayers be made for all men, but eſpecially for Kings and Princes; and thoſe that are vnder them in authoritie, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life in all godlineſſe and honeſtie. Ieremy wiſheth the people in captiuitie to pray for Nebuchadnezzar an Heathen King, that vnder him they might haue peace. Hence is that good order commended vnto vs, whereby in our publike prayer we make ſolemne mention of our lawfull Magiſtrates, teſtifying both our deſire of their good, and out thankefulneſſe for their gouerment.

Act. 23. 5.

1. Sam. 24.

Romiſh vaſſals authorized to take away the liues of the Lords anointed ones, the lappes of whoſe garments they ought not to touch.

1. Tim. 2. 1.

Secondly, the amplification of their ſinne ſtandeth partly herein, that they ſpeake euill of Dignities, Glories, Maieſties, that is, of thoſe whom God hath adorned with theſe; in detracting and detaining from them their due honour.

It may be here asked, why doth the Holy Ghoſt call Magiſtrates by the names of glorie and dignitie? Anſ. For two cauſes: firſt, becauſe the Lord hath ſet them in his owne roome and place, and accordingly honoureth them with titles befitting the ſame. Pſal. 82. 1. God ſtandeth in the aſſemblie of Gods, that is, of Magiſtrates; called Gods, not onely becauſe he hath ſet them in his place; but alſo becauſe they haue receiued a particular charge and commandement, and therewith a power of executing his own iudgments amongſt men vpon earth as his deputies. 2. Chron. 19. 6. They execute not the iudgements of man, but of the Lord. Secondly, theſe titles are giuen them, becauſe the Lord doth vſually furniſh them with worthy and peculiar gifts (though not alwaies of ſanctificatiõ) yet of regiment and gouernment to be anſwerable to their former deſignement, as of wiſedome, courage, zeale, &c. 1. Sam. 10. 9. when Saul was made king, the Lord gaue him ſuch princely gifts, as it is ſaid, God gaue him another heart, his heart was changed in regard of other gifts, then formerly he had: ſo when Dauid was annoynted King, and when Samuel had powred the horne of oyle vpon his head, it is ſaid, 1. Sam. 16. 13. that the ſpirit of God came vpon him, which furniſhed him with gifts both of regeneration & regiment alſo. In like manner the Lord tooke off the ſpirit of Moſes, and put it on the ſeauentie Elders, Num. 11. 17. whereby they were furniſhed with gifts of gouernement, and enabled to beare rule, and iudge iuſtly as Moſes was: ſuch titles therefore as theſe are not aſcribed vnto them without iuſt cauſe.

Yea, how can they be fitlier called then Glories? ſeeing there is no greater glorie in earth then to ſupplie Gods roome, and to bee enabled with gifts for the ſufficient diſcharge of it.

Hence learne, that it is lawfull for Princes to beare an outward pompe, in diet, buildings, coſtly apparell, and troopes of men; for they are dignities, and their dignitie beeing outward in regard of men, they may maintaine it by outward pompe, to procure more reuerence and awe of men thereunto. Act. 25. 23. So Agrippa & Bernice came with great pompe and entred into the common hall, which pompe is not there diſcommended, but rather approued, as by the circumſtances of the text appeareth.

B Secondly, Magiſtrates ought eſpecialy to honour God, becauſe he eſpecially honoureth them; this muſt they doe by diſcountenancing and puniſhing vice, and by ſetting vp and maintaining true religion and vertue.

Thirdly, being in Gods place they are to execute iuſtice, without corruption or partialitie in the face and feare of God. 2. Chro. 9. 7. Seeing the iudgement is the Lords, let the feare of God be vpon you, take heed and doe it. Deut. 1. 17. Ye ſhall haue no reſpect of perſons in iudgement, but ſhall heare the ſmal as well as the great: ye ſhall not feare the face of man, for the iudgement is Gods: and herein ſtands a great part of their glorie.

C Fourthly, we are in all lawful things to yeeld free ſubiection and obedience vnto our Magiſtrates and gouernours, euen as vnto God himſelfe, whoſe roome they are in; which dutie the child oweth alſo to his father, the ſeruant to his Maſter, becauſe they alſo are ſet ouer them in Gods ſtead.

Fiftly, hence alſo is it lawfull for vs to giue to Princes the titles of Maieſtie and Grace, becauſe it hath pleaſed the holy Ghoſt to aſcribe them vnto them, & by their titles to commend their perſons and places vnto vs; yea and to furniſh them with ſuch gifts of Magiſtracie, as that they become not onely naked titles, but iuſt ſignifications of the true honour which God hath graced them withall.

V. 9. Yet Michael the Archangel, when he ſtroue againſt the Deuill, and diſputed about the bodie of Moſes, durſt not blame him with curſed ſpeaking, but ſaid, The Lord rebuke thee.

In this verſe is laid downe another reaſon, amplifying the ſinne of theſe ſeducers, by a compariſon from the greater to the leſſe: and thus it ſtandeth: Michael the Archangell durſt not ſo much as raile on the Deuill himſelfe, A much leſſe may theſe vpon Magiſtrates who are Gods; and conſequently their ſinne is hanous, who dare open their mouthes to reuile Princes and Magiſtrates. Here one queſtion is mooued, namely: whence the Apoſtle had this hiſtorie of the diſputation betweene Michael and the Deuil, concerning the body of Moſes, ſeeing it is not to be found in the Scriptures? I anſwer, the ſubſtance of it is in the Scripture, although not the circumſtances. For in Deut. 34. 6. is ſaid, that the Lord buried Moſes, but no man knoweth of his ſepulchre till this day. There is the ground of the hiſtorie; the other particular concerning the contention of the Archangell and the Deuill, with this manner of B rebuking, is not found in the olde Teſtament. Queſt. Where then had he this? Anſ. Either from ſome booke then extant among the Iewes which is not now to be found: or elſe from ſome tradition which paſſed among the Iewes from hand to hand, as many things did; as that 2. Timoth. 3. 8. where the Apoſtle ſaith, that Iannes and Iambres withſtood Moſes; the hiſtorie of which is not found in the olde Teſtament.

Hence the Papiſts conclude, that the word written is not ſufficient and perfect in and of it ſelfe, vnleſſe the vnwritten word be added vnto it, that is, that word which is giuen by tradition, both which (ſay they) make a perfect word, but neither is perfect or ſufficient alone; C grounding their opinion hence, that Iude alleadgeth, an example out of a tradition which is not found in Scripture. But that is an hereticall doctrine and vntrue, ſeeing the perfection of a thing is not to be meaſured by euery thing that is wanting vnto it, but by the perfect ende of it: for perfection is taken from the end. Whence I reaſon thus; If the written word be perfect and ſufficient to the ende to which it is ordained, it is euery way perfect. But it is perfect and ſufficient to that ende: namely to the glory of God, in working out perfectly the faith and ſauation of man: and is in nothing wanting for the atchieuing of this ende, but ſufficiently teacheth all things to be bleeued and done, and giueth D perfect direction concerning faith and manners. Ioh. 20, 31: Theſe things are written that ye might beleeue, and beleeuing might haue life through his name. Rom. 15. 4. Whatſoeuer things are written, are written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might haue hope: and therefore the word written is euery way moſt ſufficient and abſolutely perfect, and neede no addition or tradition to helpe forward this ende.

Ob. This place is a tradition and not written, and many other true traditions were neuer written: beſides that the Church may make traditions. Anſ. We grant many true traditions are not in Scripture, but ſuch they are as a man may be ignorant of, and not preiudice his ſaluation. Againe, the Church hath a power, and hath had priuiledge to make conſtitutions and lawes, which were to be knowne and receiued: but theſe are ſuch as onely concerne the orderly gouernment of the Church, and are not neceſſarie to ſaluation.

Ob. But ſome traditions are neceſſarie to ſaluation, which are not contained in the written word, and they alleadge two: firſt, in Rom. 12. 6. that Gods word muſt be tried by the rule of faith, and ſo alſo by the ſame rule expounded. This rule of faith is nothing elſe (by their expoſition) but a generall conſent in the hearts of all true Catholikes; together with the Pope aſſenting with them, which of neceſſitie we muſt beleeue; and yet (ſay they) it is not in the Scripture: and therefore ſome things muſt of neceſſitie be beleeued which are not in the Scripture. Anſ. The rule of faith is not ſuch a crooked rule as they would thruſt vpon the world by their wicked expoſition; but the right rule of faith is the plaine word of God, euery way abſolutely directing in all points of faith and loue. 2. Tim. 1. 5. Paul wiſheth Timothie to keepe the true patterne of wholeſome words in faith and loue: which is nothing elſe but the teſtimonie of Scripture, in points of faith and loue, compriſed in the Decalogue and Apoſtles Creede. The rule of faith therefore in expounding Scripture is Scripture it ſelfe. The ſecond thing neceſſarie by their doctrine to be beleeued, not contained in Scripture, is, that the Canonicall Scripture is Gods word: which truth is abſolutely neceſſarie to ſaluation to be beleeued, but cannot otherwiſe be knowne or beleeued but onely by the tradition of the Church. Anſ. As euery other Art and Science hath certaine principles of truth to prooue all other precepts by: but themſelues are to be proued by none; ſo alſo hath Diuinitie the cheiſe of all other Sciences: of which kind this is one principle; that Canonicall Scripture is Gods word, which not granted, inferreth a deſtruction of all other diuine rules: this is a truth therefore confirmed, not a thing teſtified from ſome other, but as a ground of it ſelfe. Secondly, in diuine matters faith goeth before knowledge, which in humane things is cleane contrary: for if a man would knowe whether fire be hot, let him put his hand vnto it, he ſhall haue experience of it, and then he ſhall beleeue it: but in diuine things firſt a man giueth credit, and yeeldeth conſent to the word, & then hath experimentall knowledge: for although faith hath his knowledge, yet experimentall knowledge followeth faith. Abraham beleeued aboue hope, here faith went before knowledge. Ioh. 7. 27. If ye doe the will of my Father, yee ſhall know whether the doctrine be of God, or no. Thus then we may conceiue it, the tenour of the word of God is this: Thus ſaith the Lord. If the queſtion now be whether the Lord ſaid thus or no: I anſwer, to beleeue the Church herein before God is ſacriledge: but herein we are firſt to yeeld aſſent vnto God, and then after this experimentall knowledge will followe, that Canonicall Scripture is the word of God. Thirdly, we knowe that Scripture is Gods word, by Scripture, and not by the Church: out of which beeing in humilitie taught and acquainted with the excellent matter of it and manner of writing, the ende the glorie of God, and our owne ſaluation; we cannot but haue ſufficient perſwaſion of the author of it, and that it can proceede from no other but God himſelfe. Thus notwithſtanding the allegations of the aduerſaries, the written word retaineth that perfection, which needeth no traditions to ſtrengthen or further it in that ende to which it is appointed. Now to the reaſon it ſelf, amplifying this ſinne in this verſe, which containeth three points to be conſidered. Firſt, the perſon that durſt not raile. Secondly, the goodneſſe of his cauſe, which was very iuſt, and yet he durſt not raile vpon the Deuill himſelfe. Thirdly, the manner of his ſpeech: The Lord rebuke thee.

The perſon that durſt not raile was Michael the Archangel, whom ſome affirme to be Chriſt himſelfe: others, that he is ſome chiefe, arch and principall Angel; which opinion is more probable. For firſt, the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of him as in ſubiection, and ſtanding in awe, not daring to breake the lawe of God, for he durſt not reuile the Deuill. Secondly, in 1. Theſſ. 4. 16. The Lord Chriſt ſhall come to iudgement with the ſound of a Trumpet, and the voice of an Archangell; where is a plaine diſtinction betweene Chriſt who ſhould come in the clowdes and the Archangell. Thirdly, Peter explaineth it ſpeaking the ſame thing, and ſaith, The Angels giue not rayling iudgement againſt them, 2. Pet. 2. 11. It is more probable then that by Michael was meant a principall Angell, rather then Chriſt.

Doctr. Firſt, from the perſon we learne that there be diſtinctions and degrees of Angels; there be Angels and an Archangell. Queſt. Is there but one Archangell? Anſ. The Scripture ſpeaking of Archangels vſeth alwaies the ſingular number, neuer mentioning more then one: and where the Scripture reſolueth not, wee are not to determine: yet I condemne not thoſe who haue probably helde that there are more then one. Secondly, we haue here an example of Angelicall meekeneſſe and modeſtie. Tit. 3. 1. Put them in remembrance that they be ſubiect to principalities, and ſpeake euill of no man, but ſhewe all meekeneſſe vnto all men: the contrarie practiſe of railing, ſlandering, and obtrecting is a propertie of the Deuill, whence he hath his name, Reuel. 12. 10. the Accuſer of the brethren: and the Aduerſarie, 2. Pet 5. 8. who is euer readie with one accuſation or other to ſtand vp againſt euery man: the malitious man, whoſe malice cauſed him to ſtand vp againſt Iob, and falſely accuſe him of hypocriſie vnto Gods owne face. Let ſlanderers and backebiters of their brethren ſee hence whom they imitate, and moſt liuely reſemble.

Secondly, conſider the goodneſſe of Michaels cauſe, which was this: It was the will of God that Moſes bodie ſhould be buried in a ſecret place vnknowne to any man, to preuent and auoid all occaſion of ſuperſtition and Idolatrie among the Iewes. The deuill on the contrarie would diſcouer it, that ſo the Iſraelites might fall to Idolatrie before it; herein the Archangell reſiſted him, and ſtroue with him for the performance of the will of God, and the maintenance of his true worſhip; and yet in this good cauſe Michael durſt not reuile the Deuill himſelfe. In this cauſe conſider two things. Firſt, the fight and contention betweene Michael and the Deuill: Secondly, the cauſe and occaſion of it about Moſes bodie. In the former we may obſerue that there is a ſharp and ſerious contention betweene good and bad Angels; in which the good Angels labour to defend all that are in Chriſt, againſt the rage and furie of the Deuill and his angels. As Pſal. 34. 8. The Angels of the Lord pitch their tents round about thoſe that feare him. And on the contrarie, the Deuill and wicked ſpirits caſt about how to deſtroy the bodies and ſoules of men. 1. Pet. 5. Our aduerſarie the Deuill goeth about continually ſeeking whom he can deuoure. This combat concerneth and is conuerſant about either firſt the perſons, or ſecondly the ſocieties of men. The fight about the perſons concerneth either infants, or men of yeares. Firſt, for infants the deuill ſeeketh how to ſpoyle and deſtroy them (eſpecially thoſe of elect and faithfull parents) in regard of their weaknes and tendernes both of minde and bodie: but the Angels of the Lord haue charge giuen them to defend them againſt this malice of Satan. As Pſal. 91. 12. They ſhall beare thee vp in their armes, that is, they ſhal be as nurces to beare them in their armes, preſeruing them from danger. Matth. 18. 10. Deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones*: for their Angels alwaies behold the face* of my father which is in heauen. Secondly, concerning men of yeares, the Deuill and his Angels ſtriue to driue them out of their waies and callings, and to lead them into crooked paths; as he would haue had Chriſt to haue leapt from off the top of the pinacle, although he had an ordinarie way to goe downe: and haue made ſtones bread: but the good Angels on the other ſide are giuen vs to keepe vs in all our waies, Pſal. 91. and ſo vnder the protection of the Almightie. The ſecond ſtrife, namely, about ſocieties, concerneth either firſt families, ſecondly, Churches, or thirdly Commonwealths: all which the Deuill ſtriueth to ouerturne: as the good Angels to preſerue and maintaine them. Firſt, the Deuils endeauour is vtterly to ouerthrow all families, of Chriſtian men eſpecially; he robbed Iob of al his ſubſtāce, ſlew his ſeruants, and children: but the good Angels guard and defend them. Iacob had the Angels of God defending him and his familie from the furie of Eſau, Gen. 31. 1. Pſal. 91. 10. when the plague and peſtilence preuaileth againſt the vngodly, the good Angels keep it off from comming neere the tabernacles of the righteous. Secondly, in Churches and congregations, the wicked Angels ſtriue to corrupt the word, Sacraments, and all the Miniſterie; or to make it fruitleſſe, euery way to their power hindring the good ſucceſſe thereof. The Deuill offereth himſelfe to be a lying ſpirit in the mouth of all Ahabs Prophets. Zach. 3. 1. He ſtandeth at Iehoſhuah his right hand, to withſtand him in his office. He ſoweth teares in the field where the good ſeed of the word is ſowne, Matth. 13. Hence are thoſe falſe doctrines of forbidding meats, and mariages, called the doctrin of deuils, 1. Tim. 4. 1. He hindered Paul once or twice frō his iourney to the Theſſalonians to confirme them. 1. Theſſ. 2. 18. Hee raiſeth perſecution againſt the Church: for he is ſaid to caſt ſome of the Church at Smirna into priſon, Reuel. 2. 10. The good Angels on the contrarie fight againſt them, for the good of the Church, the furtherance of the Goſpell, and preſeruation of the true worſhip of God. The law was giuen by their miniſterie, Gal. 3. The tidings of ſaluation and the doctrine of the Goſpel was firſt preached by Angels, Luk. 2. 9. The Angell brought Philip to inſtruct the Eunuch, Act. 8. 26. as alſo to baptiſe him, verſ. 38. deliuered Peter out of priſon, Act. 12. 11. Thirdly, the wicked Angels ſeeke to ſupplant Common-wealths and kingdomes. Satan mooued Dauid to number the people, by which ſinne he waſted 70000. of his people. The good Angels fight in their defence. The Angel told Daniel that he fought againſt the Prince of the kingdome of Perſia for the Iewes, Dan. 10. 13. The Angel ſmote of Zenacheribes armie in one night, an hundred fourescore and fiue thouſand, who were enemies to the Church, 2. King. 19. Obiect. How can the Deuil thus furiouſly fight againſt perſons and ſocieties, ſeeing he was neuer ſeene, neither can this fight be perceiued of vs? Anſ. As he is a ſpirit, ſo his fight is ſpirituall, not eaſily diſcerned by the eye of the fleſh: for we fight not againſt fleſh and blood, but againſt principalities, and ſpirituall wickedneſſes. Againe, he fighteth not only in his owne perſon, but by his inſtruments and complices, whome he daily raiſeth vp againſt the perſons of men, and all humane ſocieties: and this fight we may in part perceiue.

In theſe conflicting daies of ours not onely but the Angels haue their combats.

Eph. 6. 12.

Vſe. Firſt, note hence the dignitie of euery beleeuer, who haue the Angels, yea and as here the Archangels, to put themſelues in gariſon for their defence: for from Chriſt it is. Secondly, we are with all thankefulneſſe to acknowledge Gods prouidence and protection eſpecially in this land, whoſe peace & proſperitie hath beene ſo long eſtabliſhed vnto our perſons and ſocieties, our families, Church and Commonwealth: whereas if Sathan had might to his malice, not one of theſe ſhould ſtande a moment. Thirdly, in all daungers our comfort muſt hence bee raiſed, that though Satans crueltie be neuer ſo great, yet we haue the guard and defence of the good Angels to keepe vs in all our wayes; and theſe are too many and too ſtrong for him, and all the power he can raiſe againſt vs. Thus was Eliſhaes ſeruant comforted: There be more with vs then againſt vs: the good Angels are more powerfull for our good, then the wicked are to harm and hurt vs. Fourthly, hence learne to make conſcience of euery ſinne in thought, word, and deede: for admitting and committing any ſinne, we trecherouſly turne againſt thoſe that fight for our defence, and doe what we can to griue and driue them away from vs, and ſo put our ſelues in the power of Sathan to be led at his pleaſure into ſinne, as alſo into the dangers of it.

The ſecond point in this cauſe of contention is, the occaſion of it, namely, it was about Moſes his bodie. Michael would not ſuffer the Deuill to reueale where Moſes body was laid, ſo to ſowe the ſeedes of Idolatry, whereby Gods true worſhip might be ouertuned: for he cared not for the bodie of Moſes, but to bring Idolatry by the meanes of it. Hence note that the wicked Angels fight not ſo much againſt the bodies of men, as againſt their ſoules; nor contend ſo much to ouerthrowe them in their outward eſtate, or to depriue them of their goods, meat, drinke, &c. as in their inward, to wreſt from them their ſpirituall things, namely, Gods true worſhip, and the things and meanes which tend to the maintaining and preſeruing of the ſame. We haue to fight againſt principalites, and powers, and ſpirituall wickedneſſe in high places, Eph. 6. 12. But it may as well be read in ſpirituall things: for therein bend they their principall forces. The drift of the Deuill is to blinde the mindes of infidels, that the light of the glorious Goſpell of Chriſt ſhould not ſhine vnto them. 2. Cor. 4. 4. This ſame Serpent that beguiled Eue through his ſubtiltie, ſeeketh how to corrupt mens mindes from that ſimplicitie which is in Chriſt, 2. Cor. 11. 3.

Vſe. Firſt, we muſt keepe that which is committed vs. 1. Tim. 6. 20. The treaſure which god hath put into our hands is his true worſhip, ſound doctrine, right vſe of the Sacraments; all which ſeeing Sathan moſt deſireth to breake off or corrupt, we ought accordingly to ſtriue how we may preſerue them to our ſelues, and haue them continued in their purity to our poſteritie. Secondly, in that Sathan ſeeketh to depriue the ſoule of ſpirituall things, we muſt watch our graces, and become more vigilant in maintaining, and adding alſo vnto our knowledge, faith, loue, hope, and other our graces; ſeeing Sathan will ſift vs to make vs as chaffe, we muſt watch and pray continually that our faith faile not.

Thirdly, marke who is the author of Idolatrie, namely the Deuill himſelfe, and of that eſpeciall part of it, which then he could not effect; but hath now obtained in that Idolatrous Church of Rome, namely, in worſhipping of Images, ſtockes and ſtones, relikes of Saints, and of the woodden Croſſe; yea armes, legges, hands, feete, and fingers of Martyrs; whence is all this but from the deuill himſelfe, who for the ſame purpoſe would haue reuealed where Moſes bodie was buried by God? Yea ſo farre haue they gone on in this delution, that they are become ſpectacles of follie to the whole world: for if Iohn Baptiſt had had ſo many heads as the Papiſts brag of, he had beene a monſter of men, beſides, though the Croſſe whereon Chriſt was crucified was no greater then an ordinarie man might beare; yet ſo many ſeuerall peeces thereof they pretend themſelues to haue in ſeuerall places, as would load a ſhippe. Obiect. They ſay they had all theſe relikes by reuelation from heauen. Anſ. Theſe reuelations are but diabolicall illuſions to maintaine Idolatrie: beſides that now (the word beeing a moſt perfect rule in all matters to be beleeued or done) vnwritten reuelations are no proofes of doctrine, but are iuſtly to be ſuſpected.

The deuill hath preuailed with thē Papiſts and drawne thē to that idolatrie which he could not bring among the Iewes.

The third thing in the verſe is the manner of his ſpeech, in which obſerue three things: firſt, what ſpeech the Archangell would not vſe: He would not ſpeake euill. Secondly, what ſpeech he vſed; The Lord rebuke thee. Thirdly, the reaſon or cauſe of both; becauſe hee durſt not ſpeake euill.

Firſt of this cauſe, as beeing firſt in nature, which is ſaid to be feare. Now to knowe what kinde of feare it was, conſider that there is a threefold feare: firſt, from entire nature: ſecondly, from the corruption of nature: thirdly, from grace. The firſt is a naturall propertie, whereby the creature ſeekes to preſerue it ſelfe, and to ſhunne danger; which feare is no ſin in it ſelfe; for it was in Chriſt when he ſaid his ſoule was heauie euen vnto the death: and if it be poſſible, let this cup paſſe from me: but this is not here meant. The ſecond feare proceeding from corruption of nature in men and Angels, is that ſeruile feare whē the creature feareth nothing but due and deſerued puniſhment, the conſcience being guiltie vnto it ſelfe, and accuſing for ſinne, and the heart deſtitute of faith and loue of God which if it were preſent would caſt out this ſlauiſh feare; which is no other then the feare euen of the Deuils themſelues: who beleeue and tremble, Iam. 2. 19. but neither was this the feare of the angel. The third feare is from grace, and it is a gift of the ſpirit of God (who therefore is called the ſpirit of feare) working in men and Angells a care to pleaſe, and a feare of diſpleaſing God in all things; this is the feare here meant which was in the Angell. In which conſider three things further, firſt, the beginning of it, which is faith euen in the Angells themſelues; whereby they beleeue the power, iuſtice, ſoueraigntie, and Lordſhippe of God ouer them; and that they muſt bee ſubiect and obedient thereunto: but in man it is a faith, apprehending the mercie and fauour of God recon-

A ciled by Chriſt: this feare in Angels and men therefore is the fruit of their faith. Secondly, the propertie of it; which is to make the ſubiect of it to feare the offence of God as the greateſt euill in the world, to feare ſinne properly, and firſt of all; becauſe by it God is diſpleaſed: and in the next place it breedeth a feare of iudgement conſequently, but not in the firſt place. Pſal. 119. 12. My fleſh trembleth for feare of thee, and I am afraid of thy iudgements. This was the religious feare of Dauid: firſt, a fearing of Gods offence, and then a ſtanding in awe of his iudgements: thirdly, the vſe of it: which is to make man and Angel make conſcience of ſinne. Exod. 2. it made the Midwiues ſpare the Hebrew children; it will not ſuffer the Angel here to reuile the Deuill. The feare of God (ſaith Salomon) cauſeth to ſhunne euery euill way: Pſal.19.9. yea it frameth to obedience, and is pure, becauſe it keepeth the heart from defiling it ſelfe. Our dutie hence is, to pray that the Lord would put into our hearts this religious feare, which may containe vs in awe of his Maieſtie, and ſo keepe vs from offences, wherein we may reſemble this Angel: Prou.14.27. as alſo to be a welſpring of life vnto vs, not onely to eſcape the ſnares of death, but to quicken and prouoke vs in the waies of life euerlaſting. Secondly, we muſt auoid the ſinne which the Angel was afraid of, namely, the boldneſſe of ſinning, eſpecially in theſe daies wherein men aduenture and ruſh vpon ſinne without feare or ſhame.

The ſecond point herein is, what ſpeech the Archangel would not vſe, that is, curſed ſpeaking, or railing iudgement. Which to know what it is, obſerue the differences of iudgement; which is two-fold, either publike or priuate. Publike iudgement is, when a man is called by God to iudge the creature; and this is two-fold: firſt, of the Magiſtrate; ſecondly, of the Miniſter. The Magiſtrate is called by God to ſeeke out the miſdemeanours of men, and according to the offence is to pronounce a righteous ſentence, euen to the taking away (if the cauſe ſo require) of the temporall life it ſelfe. The Miniſter is alſo in the name of God to pronounce the curſe of the Law vpon vnrepentant ſinners; and the promiſe of the Goſpel vnto the penitent. Secondly, priuate iudgement is, when one creature paſſeth iudgement againſt another, without calling from God, but vpon priuate grudge, anger, ſtomacke, and reuenge; this is here called rayling iudgement; and it is practiſed three waies: Firſt, in ſpeaking falſehoods and vntruths againſt others. Secondly, in ſpeaking truth, but with intent of ſlandering and detracting from the good name of others. Thirdly, in miſconſtruing mens ſayings and doings to the worſt part, when they may be taken in the better: this railing ſpeech the Angel durſt not vſe.

Hence we learne to make conſcience of this ſinne of ſlandering, reproching, and reuiling others, from which the Archangel abſtained dealing euen with the Deuill himſelfe: but many of vs who can vtter the prouerb, That it is a ſhame to belie the Deuill; are contented, yea and readie to belie, and detract from the children of God our brethren by this rayling iudgement. Some will ſay, what may we neuer vſe this kinde of iudgement? Anſ. Neuer, no not againſt the Deuill: but if we would take vp iudgment againſt any creature, let it be againſt our owne ſelues for our ſinnes; here we may paſſe ſentence freely, and ſo eſcape the iudgement of God: as for others we are to iudge by the iudgment of loue, which hopeth, ſpeaketh, thinketh, and ſuſpecteth the beſt, and couereth the worſt euen a multitude of ſinnes.

The third point is the ſpeech which the B Archangell vſed in theſe words; The Lord rebuke thee. Which words are a forme of prayer, in which he commendeth and remitteth reuenge vnto God, deſiring the Lord, to whom iudgement belongeth, would reſtraine, correct, and repay the Deuill for his malice. Here it may be asked: what what ſhall we doe when we are wronged. Anſ. Learne of the Angell not to requite & repay euill for euill, neither in action, ſpeech, or affection; but leaue all reuenge vnto the Lord. Zachariah being ſtoned to death vniuſtly, deſired no reuenge, but ſaid: The Lord ſee and require it: Chriſt himſelfe beeing accuſed before Pilate, anſwered nothing, and when he died he prayed for thoſe that crucified him, Matth. 17. Againe, when a man will needes reuenge himſelfe of a wrong done againſt him, C he takes vpon him the perſon of the accuſer, witnes, Iudge, and executioner; which is againſt all iuſtice and equitie: beſides that the Lord challengeth this as his owne prerogatiue; Vengeance is mine, and I will repay.

Obiect. But did not Elias pray for fire from heauen in way of reuenge whereby he deſtroyed his enemies? Anſ. He did: but by inſtinct from God, which is as much as a commandement.

Obiect. But Chriſt when he was ſmitten, ſaid If I haue well ſaid, why ſmiteſt thou me. Anſ. We muſt put a difference betweene lawfull defence of our ſelues in our good cauſe, and the offence of our aduerſaries. Farre was Chriſt herein from reuenge, and ſo muſt we.

D Obiect. But this is hard and impoſſible vnto fleſh and blood. Anſ. Yea but we profeſſe our ſelues to be children of our Father in heauen, and therefore we are to haue more then fleſh and blood in vs; euen that grace of God which carrieth beleeuers further in Chriſts ſchoole, then fleſh & blood can leade them. Vſe. Schollers and learned men that are to defend Gods cauſe and the truth of religion, yea euen againſt very heretikes, muſt abſtaine from reuiling ſpeeches; if we be reuiled by the pen of the aduerſarie, we muſt commit the iniurie to God. Secondly, people that goe to law with others, for moſt part herein offend, that they doe it in waie of reuenge, and to wrecke their malice lice vpon their aduerſarie : whereas the right vſe of ſuite in law, is only to defend a mans right, all reuenge laid aſide, Thirdly, hence men of valour are taught not to take a challenge into the field, it is an honour not to acept of it, ſeeing reuenge is to be left vnto God, let the wrong be neuer ſo great. Fourthly, when men be at oddes and difference, it is not lawfull to chide, braule, contend, crie, and lift vp the voyce in threatnings, ſeeing all theſe are degrees and kindes of reuenge, which we muſt leaue vnto God. Queſt. What muſt a man doe that is to incounter with the Deuill, either by temptation, poſſeſſion, or otherwiſe? Anſ. Hee muſt follow the practiſe of the Archangel, euen flie to God by prayer, and intreate him to rebuke him. The like practiſe muſt be taken vp by thoſe who are to deale with heretikes, who ſeeke the ouerthrow of religion: The Lord muſt be intreated to reſtraine the malice of the Deuill, that hee may not in himſelfe or inſtruments preuaile to corrupt or repreſſe, much leſſe ſuppreſſe or ſupplant the truth.

v. 10. But theſe ſpeake euill of thoſe things which they know not, and whatſoeuer things they know naturally, as beaſts which are without reaſon, in thoſe things they corrupt themſelues.

In the former part of this verſe is laid downe a third argument, which amplifieth the ſinne of theſe deceiuers; thus framed: For a man to giue ſentence, and condemne that which he knoweth not, is a point of great iniuſtice and raſhnes: But theſe men condemning Magiſtracie, condemne a thing they know not: and therefore are iuſtly accuſed of raſhneſſe and iniuſtice. The like ſinne of theſe ſeducers hath beene too vſual in all ages. In the daies of the Apoſtles themſelues, the Gentiles accounted the doctrine of the Goſpel but fooliſhnes; the Iewes, an offence; and yet neither of them knew what it was. The ſame raſhnes is at this day to be deſcried in the Church of Rome, who haue denounced the ſentence of excommunication againſt our Churches, and condemne the Proteſtants for heretikes, when the moſt of them neuer knew our doctrine, nor euer heard what we could ſay for our ſelues; yea moſt iniuriouſly they miſtake vs in ſundry maine points of doctrine; as when we teach that workes doe not iuſtifie a man before God, they crie out and ſay we condeme all good workes. The ſame fault is exceeding rife amongſt vs in theſe daies: for let a man make conſcience of his waies and endeuour to pleaſe God, he is preſently brãded with names of reproch, by thoſe whoſe tongues are nimble to ſpeake euill of things they neuer knew; who are to know that a man cannot be too preciſe in keeping the commandements of God, and that themſelues haue made a promiſe in Baptiſme to walke in no other waies, and ought to renew the ſame ſo often as they come to the Lords table.

And whatſoeuer things they know naturally.] In the reſt of this verſe is ſet downe the third ſinne of theſe deceiuers, which is the ſinne of intemperance, ſtanding in the immoderate vſe of meate and drinke, apparell, &c. Touching this ſinne two things are propounded: firſt, the proper cauſe of it, that is naturall knowledge, in theſe words: Whatſoeuer they know naturally.] Secondly, the ſinne it ſelfe, or the propertie of it: In thoſe things they corrupt themſelues. The cauſe is, becauſe they are guided with a naturall knowledge, like the bruite beaſts which are without reaſon. There be three kindes of knowledge incident vnto the creature; firſt, naturall knowledge, ariſing from the inſtinct of nature common to man and beaſt, and conſiſting in the ſenſes of ſight, taſte, touching, &c. by the benefit whereof the beaſt it ſelfe can diſcerne what is foode fitte for it ſelfe, and what is not: what is profitable, and what is hurtfull and vnprofitable for it: vnto which is ioyned a naturall appetite, by the benefite of which the creature can chuſe or refuſe his foode and meate in ſeaſon. The ſecond is reaſonable knowledge, proper to man, and is nothing elſe, but the light of vnderſtanding, whereby he reacheth farre higher, and diſcerneth meate, drinke, apparell, and reſt, to be Gods good gifts, and knoweth the ciuill vſe of them; with the which is ioyned election of will, whereby he can chuſe or refuſe the ciuill or vnciuill, honeſt, or diſhoneſt vſe of them. This knowledge is in all men, for euen the Gentiles themſelues doe by nature the things contained in the law, Rom. 2. 14. that is, ciuilly and outwardly: thus many of the Heathen haue excelled in ciuill carriage, and practiſe of iuſtice, temperance, and other ciuill vertues. The third is ſpirituall knowledge, not proceeding either from naturall inſtinct, or reaſon it ſelfe; but from the enlightening of the ſpirit of God; and it hath ſundry fruits. Firſt, it enableth men to know theſe things in their right cauſes, as that theſe giftes of meates, drinks, and ſuch like proceed from God, not as he is the God of nature onely; but as by grace in Chriſt he is our God, yea our Father, and ſo they become pledges of his ſpeciall mercie; ſeeing they are now reſtored againe to the beleeuer, hauing beene formerly loſt in Adams fall. Secondly, this knowledge cauſeth men to know them in the due meaſure of their goodneſſe and excellencie, rightly diſcerning them from ſpirituall bleſſings: ſo as the heart ſhall not be ſet vpon them in the firſt place, but vpon the other as of farre higher eſteeme; yea, they ſhall be counted as dung in regard of theſe. Thirdly, it inſtructeth men in the right vſe of them, namely, when it worketh this perſwaſion in their hearts, that till their perſons pleaſe God, they can neuer vſe them well; and then onely he is pleaſed in their vſe of theſe, when as their perſons firſt pleaſe him. Queſt. What is the thing then condemned in theſe ſeducers? Anſ. The very ſinne condemned is, that in the vſe of the creatures of God they are not guided by reaſonable, much leſſe this ſpirituall knowledge; but onely by nature, ſenſe, and appetite, as the beaſt is, and no otherwiſe, which is the cauſe of all intemperance.

Hence note the proper cauſe of the abuſe of all Gods bleſſings vnto couetouſnes, pride, ſurfetting, drunkennes, and other ſinnes of that kinde: namely, becauſe though men haue by nature the vſe of reaſon; yet in the vſe of theſe things they lay it aſide, and follow their owne ſenſe and appetite: ſo farre are they from being guided by that higher knowledge which is wrought by the ſpirit of God.

Secondly, from the reprehenſion we are taught to labour for ſpirituall knowledge, wherby we may be led into the right vſe of theſe temporall things; for then and not before ſhall we vſe them as pledges of Gods mercie in Chriſt vnto vs (as the beaſts cannot) and ſhall hardly be drawne to their abuſe in riot and intemperance, as theſe ſeducers were.

Thirdly, in that they are ſaid to be guided onely, as the beaſt which is without reaſon, that is by nature, ſenſe, and appetite: note the practiſe of the Deuill which is to keep men (if he can) in their naturall knowledge, and will not ſuffer them to attaine to that which is ſpirituall: yea and which is more, he corrupteth alſo that naturall knowledge which men haue. A notable experience hereof we haue in the Church of Rome; which of a famous Church is become hereticall, and ſchiſmaticall; the reaſon of it is, becauſe the Deuill hath turned all their religion and doctrine into a naturall doctrine and religion: the maine points whereof are grounded vpon naturall reaſon, and the learning and Philoſophie of the Heathen and Gentiles. As iuſtification by workes, merits, Purgatorie, with the reſt. Others, not a few amongſt our ſelues alſo are deluded by this ſubtilty of Satan; who ſuffereth many men to liue ciuilly and honeſtly among their neighbours, but will not brooke that they riſe higher; they muſt content themſelues to liue by naturall knowledge: Hence many men plead they know enough, namely, to loue God aboue all, and their neighbour as thēſelues: and that God is mercifull, &c. which is nothing but a ſlight of the Deuill ſtill to hold them in their naturall knowledge, and ſo within his owne power.

The ſecond point is the ſinne it ſelfe, and propertie of it, In thoſe things they corrupt themſelues.] This ſinne of intemperance cauſeth men in the abuſe of meate, drinke, and apparell, to corrupt themſelues: here then are two things to be ſpoken of, wherein the whole nature of intemperancie is ſufficiently compriſed. Firſt, of the abuſe of the creatures: ſecondly, of his corruption that thus abuſeth them. Concerning the former; the abuſe of the creatures is foure waies: firſt in exceſſe, when men vſe them beyond their calling, hablitie, or that which nature requireth; this maketh the heart heauie: forbidden by Chriſt Luk. 21. 34. Secondly, in curioſitie, when men are not content with ordinarie meate, drinke, apparell, but deuiſe new faſhions of apparell, and new kinds of waies of ſtirring vp and whetting of appetite. Thirdly, in affection, when men ſo addict themſelues to meates and drinkes, as they cannot be without them. The Miniſter muſt not be one that loueth to ſit at the wine, nor giuen to wine. The affection is here condemned, when he cannot ſit without the pot at his elbow; for elſe it is indifferent, and for his health ſake he may drinke a little wine. Paul willeth that the ioy in the creature be as no ioy. Thoſe alſo are reprooued that drinke not for ſtrength, but for drink ſake: for although they neither are drunke nor ſurfet, yet this very affection is a ſinne. Fourthly, in time, when theſe good creatures are vſed vnſeaſonably. Eccleſ. 10. 16. Woe be to the land whoſe Princes riſe early to eate. A woe is alſo denounced againſt thoſe, that riſe early to drink wine. Iſai. 5. 11. that is, out of ſeaſon. The rich man for that he was clad in purple, and fared deliciouſly euery day, is branded with a note of intemperance, in not obſeruing this diſtinction of times. Theſe bee the wayes whereby the creatures are abuſed.

1.Cor.7.30.

Eccleſ.10.17.

The ſecond point is, how intemperate perſons in theſe things corrupt themſelues: namely, foure waies: firſt in regard of their bodies, vpon which by their ſinne of intemperance they call ſundrie ſickneſſes, diſeaſes, yea and haſten their death. Secondly, they deface Gods image, making themſelues worſe then the beaſts themſelues. Thirdly, they deſtroy their ſoules; for no drunkard, or riotous perſon ſhall inherit heauen, 1. Cor. 3. Fourthly, they ouerthrow their families in waſting their ſubſtance to the maintaining of their intemperance, & ſo bring ruine to the places where they liue.

Vſe. In theſe ſeduceers we haue a glaſſe, wherinto behold the ſtate of our daies and times; in which intemperance hath taken place not onely in prophane houſes, but euē in religious places, and where reformation is profeſſed. A common practiſe it is to drink with glaſſes, without feete, which muſt neuer reſt; alſo by the bell, the die, the douzen, the yard, & other meaſures, and then vſe Tabacco or other means to ſharpen appetite ſtill: an horrible ſin exceeding this ſinne of theſe ſeducers themſelues. Secondly, ſeeing intemperance bringeth iuſt corruption, and in the ende deſtruction vpon the offenders, we muſt make conſcience of ſobrietie and temperance; this is the end of Gods grace which hath appeared, to teach vs to liue ſoberly, Tit. 2.12. And whoſoeuer cannot obtaine thus much of himſelfe to deny the abuſe of creatures, wil neuer attaine to to the deniall of himſelfe for Chriſt his ſake, and is as yet a man of no religion.

But for the defending of this murthering ſinne, ſome things are alleadged.

1. Ob. Gen: 43. vlt. Ioſeph and his brethren did eate and drinke, and were drunke together. Hagge 1.6. The people are threatned to drinke but not to drunkenneſſe: wherefore drunkennes is not vnlawfull; yea it is a curſe to drinke and not to be drunke. Anſ. Theſe places may indeede be thus tranſlated; but then drunkennes is taken two waies: firſt, for exceſſe in drinking: of which the places alleadged ſpeake not. Secondly, for liberall or plentifull drinking, and this may be done in a holie manner. So Ioſeph with his brethren ate and dranke liberally and plentifully: but not exceſſiuely: ſo the people were threatened in Hagge to drinke, but not to ſatietie and plentifullneſſe.

or.7.30.

2. Ob. Ioh. 2. It is ſaid the gueſts had well drunke; yet Chriſt turned water into wine ſtill, and commanded the Miniſters to drawe forth. Anſ. This onely ſheweth what we may doe, namely, vſe the creatures of God in plentifull and liberall manner, vpon ſuch occaſions as this; but iuſtifieth not intemperance, or exceſſe in the vſe of them.

Eccl.10.17.

3. Ob. It is an auncient rule, that in ſome old & lingering diſeaſes it is good to be drunk; therefore it is lawfull vpon ſome occaſion to be drunke. Anſ. This cannot be done in good conſcience beeing an vnlawfull meanes to cure any diſeaſe, though old and vſed.

Iſa.5.22.

4. Ob. But ſome ſay they can drinke and neuer be drunke, they can beare more away then two or three. Anſ. Woe vnto them that are ſtrong to drinke wine and ſtrong drinke; there is a curſe of God againſt them who vſe needeleſſe drinking, though they neuer ſurfet nor be drunke. Queſt. For what ends may we vſe the creatures, and in what manner? Anſ. The lawfull ende of their vſe is twofold; firſt, for neceſſitie to preſerue life and health: ſecondly, for our lawfull and honeſt delight. Pſal. 104. 14. God giueth bread to ſtrengthen the heart, and oyle alſo to make his countenance glad. Chriſt ſuffered a woman to powre a boxe of precious oyntment vpon his head: himſelfe was at a feaſt in Galely and forbad not the vſe of wine. Secondly, for the manner and meaſure we muſt knowe that one man cannot herein be a rule to another, one mans ſtomack and health craueth more, another mans leſſe. But euery man muſt obſerue this rule of ſobrietie: that he haue alwaies an eye to ſpirituall exerciſes; as prayer, hearing of the word, meditation, as alſo to the workes and duties of his ſpeciall calling; and ſo much as fitteth a man vnto theſe is his meaſure: and when a man by the creatures maketh himſelfe heauie and vnfit for theſe, he hath exceeded his meaſure.

V. 11. Woe vnto them, for they haue followed the waie of Caine, and are caſt away by the deceit of Balaams wages, and periſh in the gaineſaying of Core.

In the former words of the verſe, [Woe vnto them] is laid downe the concluſion of the principall argument of the Epiſtle, namely, that theſe ſeducers ſhall be deſtroyed: hauing taken vnto themſelues libertie of ſinning; which he hath alreadie prooued by a particular enumeration of the ſinnes, vnto which they were addicted: and further amplifieth that ſecond part of the reaſon, by the reckoning vp of diuers other ſinnes, both in this verſe, and in the reſt vnto the twentith. Firſt of the concluſion; Woe vnto them.] Here firſt it may be demanded, why or how the Apoſtle dare pronounce ſuch a peremptorie ſentence againſt them, and that of euerlaſting condemnation, ſeeing the Archangell durſt not paſſe iudgement againſt the Deuil himſelfe? Anſw. There be two grounds of this practiſe: firſt, God giueth to all Prophets, Apoſtles, and Miniſters, the power of the keies; whereby they retaine and bind vp ſome mens ſinnes to deſtruction, as alſo to remit and looſe the ſinnes of ſome others: in both which they pronounce iudgement generally. Secondly God gaue yet a further power vnto Prophets and Apoſtles (which is denied now to ordinarie Miniſters) whereby reuealing vnto them his ſpeciall iudgements againſt particular perſons, he made them his inſtruments to pronounce theſe his iudgements againſt men, euen in particular. Thus Dauid Pſal. 109. curſed particular perſons. Paul curſeth Alexander the Copperſmith, 2. Tim. 4. and Gal. 5. 12. Would to God they were euen cut off that trouble you: and by the ſame ſpirit of reuelation the Apoſtle diſcerned this woe moſt certainly to befall theſe ſeducers. Vſe. Hence the Papiſts conclude, that Prophets, and Apoſtles, and conſequently the Popes, may make lawes to binde the conſcience, becauſe they haue power ouer it; it being lawfull for them to curſe bodie and ſoule. Anſw. A creature may be curſed two waies: firſt, by impoſing a curſe and inflicting it vpon the body, ſoule, or conſcience: this is the peculiar curſe of God, reſting in his power alone, and is not committed to Prophets, Apoſtles, or Miniſters; for it argueth ſuch a power ouer the ſoule as may ſaue or deſtroy it. Secondly, by foreteling and pronouncing a curſe to come, which God will inflict; and this is that which belongeth to Prophets, Apoſtles, and Miniſters: but this argueth no power at all ouer the conſcience. Secondly ſome hence conceiue that they haue warrant hence to curſe other creatures, man or beaſt, ſeeing the Apoſtle vſeth it. Anſw. This practiſe of the Apoſtle (hauing an extraordinarie ſpirit of reuelation) is no rule for any man, no not for the Miniſter ordinarily called. Our rule left vs by Chriſt is to bleſſe and not curſe, Matth. 5. 44. Rom. 12.14. which muſt be vnderſtood of particular perſons, for otherwiſe the Miniſter hath authoritie to accurſe impenitent ſinners in generall; but not this or that particular perſon; no not in Gods cauſe: for he knowes not what ſhall be the future eſtate of this or that man in particular: much leſſe may priuate men in priuate cauſes vſe curſings or imprecations againſt others: which condemneth their wicked practiſe, who in their anger and impatience breake out into curſing of their children, ſeruants, friends, yea or enemies; our contrary duty muſt be to bleſſe, as we are called vnto bleſſing. Thirdly, marke the Apoſtles diſpoſitions; they were thẽſelues moſt meeke in dealing with men, who called others vnto meekeneſſe; their owne patient mindes were knowne vnto all men in all the matters of men: but when Gods glory was called into queſtion, and the ſaluation of men likely to be hindred, they lay aſide their meekeneſſe, and put on ſeueritie and roughneſſe, their zeale in Gods matters would not admit ſuch lenitie and patience, as towards men in mens matters they were willing to exerciſe. They had an Apoſtolicall rod, which in ſuch caſes they vſed againſt offenders. Moſes the meekeſt man vpon the earth, when he ſawe the Iſraelites worſhip the golden Calfe, was ſo incenſed with wrath, that he brake the Tables which were in his hands, and tooke his ſword, and together with the Leuites ſlewe three thouſand of them the ſame day, Exod. 32. 27. Chriſt himſelfe though he would not breake a bruſed reede; yet dealing with the Scribes and Phariſies who had corrupted the whole lawe, laded them with woes and curſes, Matth. 23. Paul, who otherwiſe was all things to all men; yet when Gods glory was impared by Elymas his withſtanding of him, he ſtrooke him blind: and curſed Alexander out of a rightly ordered and holy zeale: all which examples teach vs the like religious affection, that when Gods honour is in hazard, our zeale ſhould be inflamed; when mans ſaluation is likely to be hindred, our meekeneſſe muſt be for the time ſet aſide, that the zeale of Gods houſe may euen conſume vs, Pſal. 69. 9. as it did Chriſt himſelfe when he ſawe his Fathers houſe diſhonoured, and of a houſe of prayer made a denne of theeues, vnto whom we are daily to be conformed.

Chriſtian meeknes muſt be tẽpered with Chriſtian zeale.

They haue followed the way of Caine.] In theſe words the Apoſtle returneth to the former part of the reaſon, whereby he hath alreadie by three forenamed ſinnes prooued that theſe ſeducers are they which take libertie to ſinne; and vnto them addeth this fourth: That they haue followed the way of Caine. In which, firſt we will ſhewe the meaning of the words; and then obſerue the doctrines. In the former A conſider 2. things: firſt, what is the way of Cain: ſecondly, why they are ſaid to walke in this way of Caine. The way of Caine is that courſe of life which Caine tooke vp to himſelfe, in following the luſts of his owne heart againſt the will of God. It is deſcribed in Gen. 4. of which way there be ſeauen ſteps or degrees, but euery one out of the right way. The firſt ſtep was his hypocriſie: he worſhipped God by offering ſacrifice as Abel did, but his heart was not a beleeuing heart as Abels was; his worſhip was outward and ceremonious, but not in ſpirit and truth, for his heart was an euill heart of vnbeleefe. The ſecond his hatred of his owne, onely, and naturall brother, proſecuting him with wrath and indignation, teſtified by the caſting downe of his countenance vpon him; the reaſon B of all which was becauſe his owne works were euill, and his brothers good, 1. Ioh. 3. 12. ſo as (his brothers offering beeing accepted and his reiected) he feared that Abel might get the birthright, and become the Prieſt, Prophet, and King in the family, and euery way (as he deſerued) be preferred before him: for thus much is ſignified in theſe words, Gen. 4.7. that if he did well, Abels affection ſhould be ſubiect vnto him, and he ſhould hold his rule ouer him. The third, his murther whereby he ſlewe his righteous brother. The fourth, his lying vnto god, ſaying, he knew not where his brother was, hauing ſlaine him; and extenuating his ſinne C denied himſelf to be his brothers keeper. The fifth, his deſperation, after that God had conuicted him and pronounced ſentence againſt him: for beeing curſed for his ſinne he cutteth himſelfe off from the mercie of God, in ſaying, My puniſhment is greater then I am able to beare. The ſixth, his ſecuritie, and careleſneſſe; he regardeth not his ſinne, nor the conſcience of it, but buſieth himſelfe in building a Citie, and calleth it after the name of his childe: that ſeeing his name was not written in heauen, he might yet preſerue his name and memorie in the earth. The ſeauenth and laſt, which was the higheſt ſtep of his way, was his profaneneſſe: for from thenceforth he caſt off and contemned all the care and practiſe of Gods worſhip: which appeareth, Gen. 4.26. Then men began to call D vpon the name of the Lord. Which words haue relation to the whole Chapter concerning Caine and his poſteritie, who had vtterly reiected the ſeruice of God, and betaken themſelues to other affaires: Caine himſelfe to his building; Lamech to his luſt, beeing the firſt founder of Polygamie; for he tooke vnto him two wiues: Iabal to the framing and pitching of Tents: Iubal to Muſicke: Tubal-Cain to other curious workes. But when Enoch was borne, then men began to affect better things, to call vpon the name of the Lord; then the true worſhip of God (formerly neglected) began to be reſtored. This is the path wherein Caine walked.

The ſecond point is in what regard theſe

ſeducers are ſaid to follow Cains way, and that is in regard of all theſe ſeuen ſinnes: but eſpecially in the hatred and cruelty which he practiſed againſt his brother; for as he was bloodily, and malitiouſly minded towards his brother, though he gaue him good words, till he ſaw his time conuenient to execute his conceiued malice; ſo is it with theſe ſeducers, they may ſeeme for the ſeaſon otherwiſe affected, yet indeed, they carrie a hatefull affection to the Church of God, & againſt thoſe alſo that endeuour in the building vp of the ſame.

Doct. Hence firſt note that the way of Caine is the high and broad way of the world. The Turkes and Iewes follow Cains footeſteps in the profeſſion and practiſe of all prophanenes, in that they denie and deſpiſe the Meſſias the Sonne of God, yea and perſecute with a deadly hatred all Chriſtians, and are neuer ſatisfied with the ſpilling of their blood. The way of the Papiſts alſo is the way of Caine, carrying within them the ſame heart towards Proteſtants, which Caine did towards Abel; without any conuiction of them either of hereſie, or of wickedneſſe; and (no otherwiſe then Caine) they now carie themſelues quietly and ſilently till opportunitie may ſerue them: which if it were offered, we ſhould feele and haue fearefull experience of the fruits of a Cainiſh heart in them, as Abel did. Beſides, the doctrine of the Romiſh Church teacheth the way of Caine, for it ſtandeth wholy in outward Ceremonies, borrowed partly from the Iewes, partly frow the Heathen; yea it traineth vp men to be hypocrites, becauſe it is onely a dumbe and dead ſhew, without any power or life of godlineſſe. Againe, it teacheth deſperation, in that by it no man ought to be aſſured of his ſaluation, (for that were preſumption) as alſo that a man muſt ſatisfie the iuſtice of God for his ſinnes, and can neuer obtaine pardon without confeſſion of all his ſinnes in the eare of the Prieſt. And to come nearer home euen among our ſelues, this way of Caine is not vnbeaten; our hypocriſie, lying, malice, but aboue all, our prophanenes will conuince vs hereof. Do not men goe backward in religion, as thoſe that ſhake off the waies of God? Is not the Goſpel of farre leſſe reckoning among vs, then it hath beene heretofore? Is that wholſome doctrine not leſſe reſpected now, then it was twentie yeares agoe? and much leſſe therefore obeyed? which is a maniſeſt argument that Caines way is generally the beaten way of this age.

The way of Cain beaten in Poperie, as is ſeene in infinit cauſeleſſe maſſacres & cruel murthers of Proteſtants.

2. Doct. Secondly, wee muſt be warned to turne out of the way of Caine, into the wayes of God. Queſt. Which is the way of God that we may walke in it? Anſ. It is altogether contrarie to the way of Caine: for firſt in Gods way is ſinceritie. God is worſhipped in the ſpirit, & not in hypocriſie. Secondly, loue of God and men, teſtified in word, & deed, oppoſed to Cains hatred. Thirdly, in Gods way is faith, which reſteth vpon Gods mercie and prouidence, euen againſt feeling, both in life and death; oppoſed to Caines deſperation. Fourthly, wiſedome, whereby the heart is ſtirred vp to ſeeke Gods kingdome, peace of conſcience, inward ioy, and in the ſecond place for the things of this life. Fifthly, in Gods way is faithfulneſſe and conſtancie; men that begin in the ſpirit ende not in the fleſh, but are faithful to the death: whereas the way of Caine is to begin with ſacrifice, but ende in profanenes. This is the way of God in which we muſt walke: vſing all good means whereby we may be both ſet and contained therein; eſpecially the word preached and the Sacraments; which meanes the very Phariſee himſelfe could acknowledge when he ſaid to Chriſt, Maſter, thou teacheſt the way of God truely. So the Prophet Eſay ſaith: Ye ſhall heare a voyce behind you, ſaying, This is the way, walk in it: this voice is nothing but the voyce of the ſpirit in the miniſterie of the word.

3. Doct. Thirdly, note what theſe ſeducers are blamed for, namely, for two things: firſt, for making choiſe of Caines way: for walking and going on forward in it; which is a propertie of the wicked. It is true that the child of God by the frailty of the fleſh may ſlip into Caines way, as Dauid did in ſlaying Vriah; but he doth not ſtand, goe on, and keepe a courſe in that way, as the wicked doe, beeing branded to be ſuch, as ſtand in the way of ſinners, Pſal. 1. We on the contrary muſt preſerue a care to recouer our ſelues out of the way of Caine, if at any time we ſhall be miſled into it; that if we cannot keepe from all ſinne, yet we may be kept from a courſe and trade in ſinning. Let this Chriſtian care preſerue our paths in the wayes of God, and returne vs vnto the obedience of his will, when through many weakeneſſes and ſlips we are often turned aſide: and the rather becauſe Caines ende attendeth Caines whole courſe; who was haunted with an euill and accuſing conſcience, whoſe ſinne lay at the dore as a wilde beaſt readie to teare him, and pull out the throat of his ſoule: beſides that he was accurſedly caſt out from the preſence and face of God; that howſoeuer he was a Prince, and mightie amongſt men, yet he was a vagabond and runnagate on the face of the earth: which curſes let them not looke to auoide whoſoeuer will follow his way, no more then Caine himſelfe could.

And are caſt away by the deceit of Balaams wages.] In theſe words is ſet downe the fifth ſinne of theſe ſeducers: the meaning of which is firſt to be knowne. Caſt away. The word ſignifieth they are powred out, or powred away, which forme of ſpeech is taken from water, the which diſtilleth not out of a veſſell drop by drop; but is powred out in abundance, till ſo all is quickely ſpent. Whereby the Apoſtle would giue vs to vnderſtand, that in the affection of their hearts they were violent, and euen carried headlong to commit their wickedneſſe. By the deceit of Balaams wages: that is, they are thus forcibly carried to doe euill vpon hope of wages; of which hope notwithſtanding they are diſappointed and defeated, as Balaam was. So as this fifth ſinne is couetouſnes, propounded in a ſimilitude or compariſon, of which there are two branches: firſt, as Balaam was carried headlong to curſe the people of God in hope of wages; ſo theſe wicked men vpon hope of reward are ſet to falſifie and corrupt the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles. Secondly, as Balaam was deceiued and fruſtrated of the reward hoped for, as Numb. 31. 8. he loſt his reward, yea and after his life (for returning home he was ſlain with the Midianits) ſo ſhall theſe loſe their reward which they expect, for falſifying that doctrine which they teach: And ſo much for the meaning.

2.Pet.2.3.

That which was the ſinne of theſe ſeducers, is the ſinne of theſe times of ours, wherein that propheſie of Peter is accompliſhed; where is foretold that falſe teachers ſhould come in the latter times, who through couetouſnes, with fained words ſhould make merchandiſe of mens ſoules. Queſt. But where ſhall we finde theſe couetous teachers? Anſ. They are too eaſily found euery where, but eſpecially within the precincts of the Church of Rome. The Biſhop of Rome and the guides of that Church are the Arch-ſeducers, who through couetouſnes make merchandiſe of mens ſoules, teaching firſt that a man muſt confeſſe all his ſinnes, or elſe he cannot be forgiuen; and when he hath reckoned vp all, he muſt ſatisfie for them in that manner as they will preſcribe: who commonly enioyne men to beſtow ſo much land, or ſuch a ſumme or penſion of money vpon this or that Church, or Abbey, that ſo they may buie out a pardon. By which wicked doctrine through couetouſneſſe they haue (by encroching vpon Countries and kingdomes) enriched themſelues, or rather craftily conueyed to themſelues the greateſt part of the reuenewes of all Europe. Secondly, they through couetouſneſſe maintaine the diſtinction betweene mortall and veniall ſinnes; betweene the fact and the puniſhment, and hold that the ſinne may be remitted, but not the puniſhment: for which purpoſe the fire of hell is changed by them into a milder fire of Purgatorie, to be ſuffered after this life; of which the Pope is Lord and King, indulgent to whome he pleaſe: eſpecially to thoſe that can pay well for the merits of others, or maſſes of their owne. This painted fire hath a long time kept the fire of the Popes kitchin ſo bright burning, which if it ſhould goe out, his ſtate were ſhaken. Thirdly, through couetouſneſſe they forbid many degrees of men from mariage, which God forbiddeth not, that ſo they may the oftner diſpenſe with thoſe degrees which themſelues haue forbiddẽ: for the more diſpenſations, the more wealth haue they comming in. And thus is their whole religion contriued and plotted for gaine, compacted of falſhood and couetouſnes. So as Peters prediction is moſt fully A accõpliſhed in theſe Balaamites of Rome: but eſpecially herein the Pope is become a ſecond Balaam, in that as Balaam curſed Gods people for gaine; ſo to maintaine his owne pompe and ſtate, by his Buls and thunderbolts hath he aſſaied to curſe euen Kings and Princes, and ſome whole kingdomes, yea all ſuch as haue ſhaken off his intollerable Antichriſtian yoke. The ſame accuſation may be iuſtly intended againſt very many that profeſſe godlineſſe and true Religion; for theſe be the laſt daies and perilous times, wherein men ſhall be louers of themſelues, couetous, &c. 2. Tim. 3. 2. Such as Ieremie complained of, Iere. 6. 13. From the leaſt to the greateſt euery one is giuen to couetouſneſſe; B from the Prophet vnto the Prieſt they deale all falſely. The vſuries, oppreſſions, iniuſtice, the common and cuſtomable deceit in all trades, crie out of this ſinne of couetouſneſſe in all eſtates. But ſome will perhaps here ſay; Yea but you wrong Chriſtians to charge them thus deepely with Balaams ſinne, for they haue better things in them. Anſ. But it is no iniuſtice, for Balaam had ſome as good things in him as many Chriſtians: for when he was firſt ſolicited of Balaak to curſe the people of God, he would not till he asked leaue of God; and when God had denied him leaue, he anſwered him that he would not goe with him, if he would giue him his houſe full of gold and ſiluer. Further he deſired earneſtly to die the death of the righteous, C and that his ende might be like his. Iudas alſo had many good things in him, he left all to followe Chriſt; he became a preacher of the truth, none of the Diſciples could accuſe him, or could eſpie any thing in him, and yet was caried away with couetouſneſſe: ſo let no man obiect the good things in many Chriſtians, which I graunt they may haue, and yet too eagerly hunt after the world, yea and be powred out alſo after filthy lucre no otherwiſe then Balaam was.

The craftie conueiance of Poperie detected.

The Pope a ſecond Balaam.

Now for the auoiding of this ſinne, let vs obſerue three things, which the Apoſtle admoniſheth in the words. Firſt, in that he ſaith they are powred out, we are giuen to vnderſtand that the affection of couetouſneſſe is a moſt violent headſtrong affection, carrying a man headlong D to ſinne euen againſt conſcience, as it did Balaam: and cauſing him to powre out his heart vnto wickedneſſe. Achans couetouſneſſe could not be curbed, no not by Gods ſpeciall commandement, the wedge of gold and the Babyloniſh garment did ſo ſway with him. Ahab was ſicke of couetouſneſſe, no phyſicke could recouer him, but Naboths vineyard and life. Iudas for thirtie peeces of ſiluer was carried againſt all ſenſe to the betraying of his Maſter, & that after diuers admonitions. Ananias and Saphira to ſaue but a little money, make no bones of lying vnto the holy Ghoſt. What is the cauſe of all treacheries, and thoſe moſt cruell murthers, of fathers, of mothers, of ſeruants, & ſtrangers, but the couetous heart ſet vpon the bootie, ſaying to it ſelfe; by this fact, this houſe, that land, ſuch a ſumme of money ſhall be mine? which obiect in the eye putteth out all the light of religion, reaſon, and ſometime of nature it ſelfe. Thus the heart is eaſily powred out vnto euill, when as firſt it is poſſeſſed with couetouſneſſe, which Paul calleth the roote of all euill.

Couetouſnes a violent and headie ſin.

Secondly, the Apoſtle would haue vs conſider how hard a thing it is to be recouered from this ſinne, ſeeing ſuch a ſinner is powred out and caſt away by the deceit of it: and indeede little hope is there of the repentance of a couetous man, of whom Chriſt was bold to ſay, that as eaſie it is for a Camell to goe through the eie of a needle, as a rich man to enter into heauen: the reaſon is becauſe his couetous cares choke and hinder the word from taking place in his heart, and ſo he fruſtrateth all meanes of his ſaluation. Againe, he hath renounced the true God, and ſet vp another God in his heart. The Idols in our Church are defaced and deſtroyed by the Magiſtrate; but the Deuill ſetteth vp Idols ſtill in the hearts of men, which ought to be Gods temples, euen Riches the god of greedie men.

Gods iuſtice againſt mans iniuſtice.

Thirdly, obſerue that in Gods iuſt iudgement the couetous man is diſappointed of his hope, his wages are the wages of deceitfulneſſe: for either he atchieueth not, or retaineth not the things expected, as in the former examples: of Achan, who for the wedge loſt his life with it: ſo neither Ahab himſelfe, nor his poſteritie euer enioyed Naboths vineyard. Iudas brought backe the thirtie peeces of ſiluer, and hanged himſelfe. Ananias and Saphira deſirous to keepe a part of their poſſeſſion, loſt with the poſſeſſion both their liues; or els if he retaine the bootie, and get and keepe alſo wealth fraudulenrly gotten and heaped vp by oppreſſion; yet hauing the thing, he hath not the vſe of it; his couetous heart keepeth the key of it, and locketh it from his comfortable vſe: yea, and be it that he haue ſome vſe of it, yet his gaine is ſmall for which he looſeth his ſoule: Thou foole this night ſhall they fetch away thy ſoule.

We are all hence admoniſhed, eſpecially aged and rich perſons, to beware of this dangerous ſinne. It becommeth Saints not to haue couetouſneſſe once named among them, Ephe. 6. Our practiſe is to varniſh it with tearmes of thriftineſſe and good husbandrie, and the worſt it heareth of vs is ſcarſe a ſmall diſlike: ſo as when we ſpeake of a wretched worldling, we ſay he is an honeſt man, but ſomewhat hard or worldly: ſo as this ſinne is in no diſgrace amongſt the moſt, as it deſerueth beeing both ſo odious vnto God, and hurtfull vnto the ſinner himſelfe. But let vs conſider firſt that it eaſily draweth a man vnto perdition, and enwrappeth him in the Deuills ſnare. 1. Tim. 6. 9. Thoſe that will be rich fall into many temptations and ſnares. Whereſoeuer it ruleth, that man reſpecteth not commandement, reaſon, conſcience, no nor common honeſtie it ſelfe. Secondly, we profeſſe our ſelues to be members of Chriſt, the ſonnes and daughters of God; now ſuch a baſe ſinne beſeemeth not ſuch an high profeſſion: for a Noble man or a Prince apparent to ſpend and trifle away his time in buying & ſelling pins & points were a madneſſe; what a baſe follie were it for vs that hope to be heires of the kingdome of glorie, to be ſtill poring on earth and earthly things? whoſe hearts and affections ſhould be raiſed vp higher, and taken vp with heauenly meditations, vſing weanedly this world as though we vſed it not. Thirdly, Nature is contented with a little, and is ſurfetted with abundance: and yet grace is pleaſed with leſſe: and therefore if we haue foode and raiment for vs and ours, let vs be therewith contented, 1. Tim. 6. 8. Queſt. But what ſhall we doe then? doe not all men thus, and may not we ſeeke wealth as others doe? Anſ. The rule of the word muſt be our direction herein, and not the mannner of the world: and that aduiſeth vs to make God our portion: which leſſon God himſelfe taught Abraham, Gen. 15. 1. I am thy buckler, and thy exceeding great reward. Dauid had learned this leſſon, Pſal. 16. The Lord is my portion. This is done by ſetting our loue, our ioy, our principall care, yea our hearts and affections vpon the Lord, as men doe vpon their treaſures. By which meanes if riches increaſe, our hearts muſt not be ſet vpon them, for they are not our portion; & if we be pinched & preſſed with aduerſitie, want, or loſſes, yet ſhall we not be oppreſſed: for we want nothing but that we may well be without, and haue not as yet loſt any part of our portion.

Further, in the phraſe which the Apoſtle vſeth; They are powred away,] note a difference betweene the child of God, and a wicked man; when both of them are found in the ſame ſinne; but the one powreth out himſelfe to wickedneſſe, giueth himſelfe leaue to ſinne with full conſent, without reſtraint, yea with greedines; the other ſinneth with conſent, but not full conſent: for beeing regenerate he is not all fleſh as the wicked man, but partly fleſh, and partly ſpirit: and therefore partly willeth and conſenteth to ſinne, partly nilleth and conſenteth not, he is not powred out without reſtraint, as the other is, but at length recouereth himſelfe by repentance, and obtaineth reconciliation with God. Secondly, we muſt beware of powring out our ſelues to wickedneſſe, but rather with Anna powre out our ſoules before the Lord in humble confeſſion of ſinne, and petition for pardon; that ſo the Lord may powre forth his mercie vpon vs, and ſhed his loue abroad in our hearts. Thirdly, we may not content our ſelues with a fewe or ſome good things: for the heart may notwithſtanding be powred forth to ſinne, as Balaam and Iudas: but ſeeke carefully to haue our hearts truely ſeaſoned with grace, with the loue and feare of God, which for the preſent will cauſe vs to decline euery euill way: yea to deteſt and hate euery ſinne, and for time to come with a reſolute and conſtant purpoſe,and endeauour neuer to offend God againe: for otherwiſe a ſhew of ſome good things may often deceiue and delude vs, and we may periſh for all them, as Balaam did. Laſtly, we are hence taught neuer to giue reines to our affections, and deſires,but curbe,crucifie and mortifie them carefully: for if once they get head,and be yeelded vnto, they will not eaſily be ſubdued, nor ſuffer a man quiet till hee haue powred foorth himſelfe vnto all wickedneſſe, and ſo brought him into the high way of perdition.

And are periſhed in the gaineſaying of Core. In theſe words the Apoſtle laieth downe the ſixth ſinne of theſe ſeducers; to vnderſtand the meaning whereof, conſider two things? firſt,the hiſtorie it ſelfe: ſecondly, the application of it. The hiſtorie is recorded in Numb. 16. wherein Moſes mentioneth three things concerning Corah: firſt the cauſe of his ſinne; which was ambition and pride; for Core (being a Leuite) affected the Prieſthood of Aaron: and Dathan and Abiram (beeing heads of the tribe of Ruben) ſtroue to take the gouernment of the people out of Moſes his hand, who was appointed by God as King ouer the Iſraelites, Deut. 33. 5. Secondly, the ſinne it ſelfe, namely in this their diſcontentment, they enterpriſed an inſurrection againſt Moſes and Aaron: they ſtood vp againſt them, contradicted and gainſaid them in their offices;and charged them firſt that they vſurped authoritie,and tooke too much vpon them, and lifted vp themſelues aboue the congregation without the Lord, verſ. 3. and therefore they would not obey Moſes commanudement, verſ. 12. and ſecondly, that Moſes had dealt deceitfully with the people;and (onely in policie to make himſelfe a King) had promiſed them a land flowing with milke and honey, whereas they ſaw no ſuch matter; nay rather he had brought them out of Egypt to deſtroy them in the wildernes, verſ. 13. 14. Thirdly,their puniſhment for their ſinne,which was an horrible deſtruction vpon them,& their company,beeing all of them partly ſwallowed vp of the earth; partly deuoured by fire from heauen,ver.32. 35.

Secondly, the hiſtorie of Corah, Dathan, and Abiram, is applied to theſe falſe teachers by way of compariſon, and they are compared in two things. Firſt, as Core and his companie moſt ambitiouſly and proudly gaineſaid Moſes and Aaron; ſo doe theſe falſe teachers the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles. Secondly, as they were deſtroyed for their ſuch reſiſtance; euen ſo ſhal theſe periſh in theirgainſaying of the truth. Thus the meaning of the words is made plaine. This Epiſtle was written for a warning vnto the laſt times, euen vnto vs vpon whom the ends of the world are come:& therfore that which is affirmed of theſe men, is verified in ſundrie in this age. For example; firſt, the Biſhop of Rome is the next follower of Core: for looke as Core gaineſaid Moſes and Aaron, in regard of their A lawfull authoritie: ſo doth the Pope gaineſay Chriſtian Kings and Princes, in ſtriuing to take out of their hands all their power and authoritie in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall within their own dominions: nay, herein he goeth beyond Core, in that he vſurpeth that power ouer them which the Lord hath put in their owne hands, and ſo (beeing inueſted in their owne perſons) moſt rightfully belongeth vnto themſelues. Secondly his ſhauelings,and Maſſe-prieſts, not only gainſay and contradict Chriſt in his doctrine;but alſo attempt to vſurpe his office, in offring a reall and proper ſacrifice of attonement for the ſinnes of the quicke and dead: yea, and( wherein they ſtrip Core)they take vpon them to become B mediatours betweene Chriſt and the Father, in praying the Father that he would accept the ſacrifice of his Sonne, as he did the ſacrifice of Abel. Thirdly, of this ſort are all Traytors and Rebels, either Prieſts or Ieſuits, or other traiterouſly minded men at home or abroad, who(no otherwiſe then Core) gaineſay the ordinance of God, and ſtand out in deniall or reſiſtance of their lawfull and naturall Prince, whome the ſame puniſhment ſhal aſſuredly find out, which conſumed Corah and his companie in the ende of their conſpiracie. Fourthly, many amongſt vs who profeſſe the Goſpel, yet walke in the gaineſaying of Core, of whom ſome will openly ſay they care not what the Miniſters ſpeake, whatſoeuer it is they will withſtand it: yea many C wretched creatures who come to the Lords Table, will not ſticke to ſay, that they hope to ſee the day when they ſhall be hanged; which argueth them to be abetters in the wicked conſpiracie of Core. Laſtly, it were to be wiſhed that ſome of our ſtudents euen of Diuinity, had not a ſpice of this ſinne of Core: for within this ſixe or ſeuen yeares,diuers haue addicted themſelues to ſtudie Popiſh writers, and Monkiſh diſcourſes, deſpiſing in the meane time the writings of thoſe famous inſtruments and cleare lights, whom the Lord raiſed vp for the raiſing and reſtoring of true religion; ſuch as Luther, Caluin, Bucer, Beza, Martyr, &c. which argueth that their mindes are alienated from the ſinceritie of the truth; becauſe the writings of D theſe( the ſoundeſt expoſitors of the Scriptures raiſed ſince the Apoſtles) are not ſauourie vnto them: yea ſome can reuile theſe worthie lights themſelues, which is a ſpice of Core his ſinne.

The Pope the foreman of Cores companie.

2. Doct. Secondly, hence we are taught to beware of ambition, and ſtudie to bee contented with that condition of life wherein God hath placed vs, not ſeeking things beyond our eſtate. Dauid would not meddle with things beyond his reach, Pſal. 131. 1. Paul had learned in euery eſtate to be content, to bee abaſed as well as to be exalted. Our firſt parents in the ambitious conceit of further highnes, fell from a moſt happie condition,and brought ruine vpon themſelues, and vs their poſteritie. The vertue of contentation is indeede neceſſarie for all men, but eſpecially let ſtudents ſeeke it at the hands of God; and the rather, becauſe that within theſe few yeares diuers of them (not poſſeſſing the benefit of this vertue) beeing fruſtrated here of their expected preferments, which they thought were due to their gifts, haue departed away diſcontented, and haue growne to reſolution in hereſie, Papiſtrie, treaſons, and moſt deſperate attempts. Now that euery man may learne to be contented with his condition, be it better or worſe, let him thinke well vpon theſe two conſiderations: firſt, that the preſent eſtate and condition of life, wherein euery man is ſet by God, is the beſt eſtate for him: health is beſt in time of health, and ſicknes in time of ſicknes: riches when they are inioyed, pouertie and want when the Lord changeth his hand: life whileſt he liueth, yea and death it ſelfe is the beſt when as that change befalleth: and all this is becauſe the Lord ſo ordereth and diſpoſeth vnto euery man out of his wiſe prouidence, which we for our parts muſt in all our thoughts be ſubmitted vnto. Secondly, that in regard of our ſinnes we are leſſe then the leaſt of Gods mercies; vnworthie to draw breath in the common ayre, or to tread vpon the earth: and therefore (beeing ſo vnworthie) if we haue but ſmall and few bleſſings, we may well content our ſelues: for by our deſerts we cannot chalenge ſo much as we haue. Iacob herein ſtaied himſelfe in his want that he was vnworthie of the leaſt mercie of God: the baſeſt calling is too good for the beſt man, if he looke at his deſert. Obiect. But euery man is preferred before me, and yet I deſerue as well as they, or ſome of them. Anſ. Herein content thy ſelfe, God hath called them to ſuch condition; ſtay till he call thee: diſtract not thy thoughts herewith, but reſt in his reuealed will.

3. Doct. Thirdly, it may ſeeme ſtrange that Core and his companie ſhould gaineſay Moſes and Aaron, and their authoritie, eſpecially beholding all the miracles whereby their calling was confirmed, the one to be Prince, the other the high Prieſt; and yet we ſee it to be ſo: for his affection had blinded his conſcience: he knew very well that they were called by God: he ſaw their whole religious courſe, the great miracles in their hands: but yet the diſordered affections of his heart were they which blinded the vnderſtanding of his minde. In like manner, men may meruaile that ſo many learned Papiſts, otherwiſe ſo wiſe & prudent, ſhould maintaine ſo many groſſe errors, and hereſies, and thoſe againſt the foundation of religion: but the caſe is with them as it was with Core; for let them be neuer ſo learned, graue, and wiſe, yet their wicked hearts and ambitious affections ouercaſt their iudgement and knowledge, and ouercarie them againſt conſcience: yea and often reaſon it ſelfe: they read the Bible the word of truth, but ſee not the truth therin contained, becauſe the clowd of corrupt affections hath ouerſpread and darkned their vnderſtandings.

Vnrectified affections ouercaſt rectified iudgement and vnderſtanding.

Whence we may learne, that if at any time we would with fruit heare, read, ſtudie, or learne the word of God, we muſt bring with vs not onely quicke vnderſtandings, ſharpe conceits, and firme memories, but honeſt hearts, calme and tempered affections: without which it ſhall be with vs as with the Iewes, who ſaw indeede, and yet perceiued not.

Fourthly, here Magiſtrates and Miniſters muſt learne, not to be diſcouraged if they be gainſaid and contradicted by ſuch as Core, Dathan, and Abiram, who were great men in their Tribes; it was Moſes and Aarons lot. Chriſt himſelfe was a rocke of offence, and many ſtumbled at him; he was made a wonder of men, and few of the great beleeued his doctrine: yea few there were that did not gainſay it: it is not well with men, when all men ſpeake well of them; meeke Moſes ſhall haue his patience tried by very many ſuch in the world.

Fiftly, Students eſpecially of Diuinitie, muſt take heede of this ſpirit of contradiction and gainſaying, whereby no wholſome doctrine can eaſily pleaſe them: which was Cores ſinne: and content themſelues with that truth of doctrine, and thoſe ſound grounds of Diuinitie, which are propounded in the writings of thoſe famous and excellent inſtrumenrs aforenamed, who were the reſtorers of pure religion? preferring them before all Popiſh writers and corrupt poſtillers (in whome a man ſhall meete with nothing ſooner then error and vnſoundneſſe) and reading ſeriouſly their workes and writings, as the ſoundeſt and beſt grounds of Diuinitie, and expoſitions of the Scriptures, which haue beene ſet out ſince the dayes of the Apoſtles.

The worſt kind of diſcontentmēt is in things concerning mans ſaluation.

Sixtly, let inferiours hence learne obedience, and ſilent ſubiection vnto ſuperiours; the ſeruant or ſubiect muſt not be a gainſaier, nay not an anſwerer againe. Tit. 3. This cutteth off all diſputation betweene the Maſter and ſeruant, father and childe, prince and ſubiect: for the very appearance of Cores ſinne muſt be auoided.

Seuenthly, Core gainſaieth both Moſes and Aaron; the one in regard of his Magiſtracie, the other of his Prieſthood. Theſe two ſinnes goe hand in hand: he that oppoſeth himſelfe to Moſes, deſpiſeth Aaron alſo; he that honoureth not the King, feareth not God; he that careth not for the word, is not loyall to his Prince: a rebel to God, is a rebell to his Prince. Seeing then loyaltie towards God and the King are ſo linkt together in themſelues, let vs not ſunder them, but rather conioyne them in our practiſe, as the Apoſtle hath coupled them in one precept, commanding vs to feare God and honour the King.

Whoſoeuer reſiſteth Moſes deſpiſeth Aaron alſo.

Eightly it may here be demanded, whether haue we done well in gainſaying and contradicting the Church of Rome, ſeeing our Church before the time of King Henrie the 8. was a member of that Church? Anſ. When two are at

We haue departed frō the Papiſts as the Iſraelites from the tents of Core by God's commandement.

ſtrife, both are not to be blamed, but the party in whom the cauſe is conuinced to be: we haue indeed departed frō them; but the cauſe of our departure was not in vs, but in thēſelues: we haue departed from them, as the Iſraelites by Gods commaundement from the Tents of Core: they haue firſt a long time gainſaid Chriſt, and therefore we haue well done to gainſay them: we are not therefore the ſchiſmatikes, neither blame worthie; but they in whom the cauſe of ſchiſme is: no more then Moſes was here to be blamed, the cauſe reſting in Core.

Numb.16.22.

Laſtly, it will be asked, what did Moſes all this while that he was gainſaid? Anſ. Hee fell on his face, and prayed vnto the Lord. Wherein he became a fit preſident for vs in this land, who haue beene aboue fourtie yeares aſſaulted by Popiſh Cores, enemies and rebels, without and within vs, from whom we haue been defended, not ſo much by the ſword, as by Gods protection, obtained by the prayers of his ſeruants: which teacheth vs for time to come to turne vs to this moſt ready courſe, of ſubduing all gainſaiers & enemies of our peace: for the direct way to diſcouer conſpiracies, to ſubdue treaſons, & rebels, and to purchaſe tranquillitie to a Church and land, is to commend the ſafety thereof vnto the Lords fauourable protection, whoſe eies are euer watchfull ouer his people. And thus much of Core his ſinne.

The laſt point is their puniſhment; in which it may be asked how they periſhed? Anſ. It is commonly thought that Core, Dathan, and Abiram were ſwallowed vp of the earth: but I take it, that all the men of Core, all his ſubſtance and his Tents; Dathan alſo and Abiram were ſwallowed vp of the earth: but that Core himſelfe was burned with fire from heauen, with the 250. men that offered incenſe, verſ. 35. for in the hiſtorie, Numb. 16. 27. 32. it is ſaid that Dathan, and Abiram, & the men of Core were ſwallowed vp; but Core himſelfe is not mentioned: ſo Deut. 11. 6. and Pſal. 106. 17. In both which places Dathan and Abiram are ſaid to be ſwallowed vp with their houſeholds; but in neither place is Core mentioned. Secondly, Dathan and Abiram were in their Tents, and ſo were the men of Core alſo, when the earth opened and ſwallowed them, verſe. 17. But Corah and the two hundred and fiftie men were at the doore of the Tabernacle with their Cenſors, fire and incenſe, and were deuoured with fire from heauen, v. 19. Ob. Num. 26. 10. The earth opened her mouth and ſwallowed them (that is, Dathan and Abiram) with Core. Anſ. The learned expound that place not of Cores perſon, but his ſubſtance and retinue.

Note.

Marke here the iuſt iudgement of God: Corah had abuſed himſelfe (beeing a Leuite) his office, and thoſe ſacrifices which he offered by fire; and the Lord deſtroyed him by fire. The ſame was the dealing of God with Nadab and Abihu, Leuit. 10. 2. Looke in what things men ſin & diſhonour god, by thoſe for the moſt part the Lord reuengeth himſelfe vpon them: ſo men glorie in abuſing the creatures of God, as meates, wine, and ſtrong drinke, the Lord in the meane time ſecretly turneth the ſame to their owne deſtruction; that thoſe which are his good gifts, and ordained for the preſeruation of nature, beeing by men abuſed, through Gods iuſt iudgement are turned to the choking and ouerturning of nature.

Priuate men may not attempt to controll publike conſtitutions.

Secondly, hence learne the wiſe counſell of Salomon, Prou. 24. 22. Feare God, honour the King, and meddle not with the ſeditious; or with them that make alterations. For although it be lawfull for a ſubiect (beeing called) to ſhew his minde, what he thinketh meete for the Church or Common-wealth; yet for a priuate man to attempt vpon his owne head to alter any thing, ſtanding by Gods & the Princes law, is no better then ſedition, and is a branch of Corah his ſinne.

Thirdly although Corah, Dathan, and Abiram are deſtroyed for this ſinne, yet Cores children are not deſtroyed, but ſpared, Numb. 26. 11. God in iuſtice remembring his mercie, his care for the Miniſterie was ſuch as could not ſuffer the Leuites race to be rooted out, but preſerued for the vſe of the Tabernacle. Let Gods care teach vs our dutie in this behalfe, namely to applie our beſt endeuours for the maintaining and preſeruing the Schooles of learning, for the vſe and ſeruice of the Church. Commendable hath beene the care of many Kings and Princes in this behalfe, whom we ſhould imitate in preſeruing theſe ſeed-plots of the Miniſterie: for herein they imitate the great King euen God himſelfe.

V. 12. Theſe are ſpots in your feaſts of loue, when they feaſt with you, without all feare feeding themſelues.

In theſe words the Apoſtle ſetteth downe the ſeuenth ſinne of theſe ſeducers: to know the meaning whereof the better, conſider foure things; firſt, what is meant by feaſts of loue and charitie. Anſ. In the Primitiue Church it was a cuſtome and manner to haue a feaſt before the Lords Supper, made by the Communicants; vnto which ſome brought hony, ſome bread, ſome wine, ſome milke, and euery one according to their abilitie contributing ſomething thereunto. Theſe were here meant and called Loue-feaſts, becauſe they were herein to teſtifie their mutuall loue among themſelues; as alſo to the poore, who hereby were releeued; and to the Miniſterie it ſelfe, which was by theſe feaſts partly ſuſtained. Secondly, what is meant where theſe ſeducers are called ſpots in theſe feaſts, or rocks; for the word ſignifieth either, and more properly the latter; they are rockes, becauſe as rocks are perceiued a farre off by the ſeafaring men; euen ſo the infection of theſe wicked

A men ſpreads it ſelfe verie farre: and againe, as rockes are dangerous and troubleſome to them; ſo are theſe as rockes and ſtumbling blockes to the weake, hindring them from the profitable progreſſe in godlines: they are alſo rightly called ſpots, becauſe as a ſpot defaceth the coũtenance; ſo their preſence is an eye ſore and a diſgrace vnto theſe Loue-feaſts. The third thing is the cauſe why they are thus called: that is, becauſe in theſe Loue-feaſts they ſeede themſelues: for laying aſide all care of the poore, and of the Miniſterie for whoſe ſake this contribution was made, they pampered and fed themſelues, riotouſly waſting the goods of the Church. The fourth is the cauſe of this their riot [without B feare] that is, becauſe they haue caſt off the feare of God and man. In theſe words therefore the Apoſtle chargeth theſe falſe teachers not onely with intemperance in generall, but alſo with a ſpeciall kind of riot in miſpending and waſting the contribution pertaining to the pores maintenance, and the ſuſtaining of the Miniſterie.

The Romiſh Cleargie hath better facultie in feeding thẽſelues then others.

Vſe. That which is ſpoken of theſe men, may be applied to theſe laſt times, wherein diuers men riotouſly abuſe the goods ſpecially prouided for the maintenance of the miniſterie and poore: as firſt the Romiſh Clergie, thoſe Locuſts that come forth of the mouth of the beaſt; idle bellies, and ſlow backes, the moſt of which want learning, and are vnable to teach people; yet feede themſelues without feare, ſo C as their eyes are ſwollen with fatnes: wealth they want not, hauing craftily conueyed vnto themſelues the third part of the reuenues of Europe; but with it do nothing but pamper themſelues. Secondly, ſuch Patrons are here included as feede themſelues with Church-liuings, appointed for the releeuing of the poore, and maintenance of the Miniſterie: in ſuch ſort as Gods people cannot be faithfully and ſufficiently taught: they can be cõtent to depart from ſome ten pounds a yeare to ſome vnable man, ſo as they may of the reſt feede themſelues without feare, or elſe (as ſome doe) ſerue their luſts, in miſpending the Churches reuenewes vpon Hawkes, Hounds, and other improfitable rauenous creatures. Thirdly, ſuch Students whether D Fellowes or Schollers of or in Colledges as miſpend their time in idleneſſe, gaming, or other improfitable exerciſes, come alſo within the compaſſe of the Apoſtles reprehenſion, as feeders of themſelues with that ſalarie or liuing which was giuen for the maintenance of the Miniſterie.

Exod.30.6,7.

Here a queſtion may be demanded; namely, whether thoſe whome we call lay men, hauing Church lands and liuings impropriate vnto them, may be ſaid with theſe ſeducers to feede themſelues without feare; or whether can any man impropriate any Church goods or liuings, without ſacriledge? Anſ. The anſwer hereof is two-fold: firſt, though no good member of the Church can in good conſcience ſeeke the harme and preiudice of the ſame; yet the plaine truth is, that the Church goods and lands may be ſometimes vpon ſome occaſions alienated: the ground of which anſwer is this rule; namely, that the gouernours of the Church are to content themſelues with things neceſſarie. For when the people had brought ſufficient for the building of the Tabernacle, Moſes biddeth them bring no more, ſeeing (ſaith he) there is enough: ſo as when the Church hath too much and exceſſe (as the Romiſh Church and theſe Churches of Europe gotten by Maſſes, Purgatorie, Dirges, Sacrament of Penance, &c.) there may be admitted alienation and impropriation of Church goods and lands; but ſo as two conditions muſt be neceſſarily obſerued: firſt, there muſt be iuſt cauſe: and that which is ſo alienated muſt be employed to ſome good vſe in the Church or Commonwealth; and this is foure waies: firſt, in caſe of preſent neceſſitie; for tenths haue bin in ſome caſes of neceſſitie lawfully paied in way of tribute, and otherwiſe neither Church nor Commonwealth could haue been preſerued. Secondly, in way of exchange when the alienation of ſome lands ſhall be rather more conuenient both to the Church it ſelfe, and to whome ſuch lands are alienated. Thirdly, when as ſome great profit ſhall enſue vnto the Church and Common-wealth: vpon which ground King Henrie the 8. of famous memorie moſt iuſtly alienated moſt of the Church lands called Abbey lands; that Monks, Friers, Abbots, and ſuch like idle Drones ſhould neuer haue more footing in this our land. Fourthly, in way of reward: for Kings and Princes that are the Patrons and protectors of the Church, may alienate Church lands (where there are exceſſe) vnto ſuch as haue bin faithfull in the defence of Church or Commonwealth, and that in way of requitall and reward of their ſeruice. The ſecond condition is, that there muſt be reſerued a ſufficient reliefe for the poore, and maintenance for an able Miniſterie. Some there are which teach otherwiſe, and they reaſon thus: Tenths (ſay they) ſtanding by Gods lawe are not to be alienated: but the goods and lands of the Church ſtand chiefly in tenths, and therefore admit no alienation. Anſ. In England tenths ſtand not by God. lawes, but by the poſitiue lawes of the Land; ſo as if it pleaſe the King he may appoint eights, or more or leſſe as well as they: which if it were not ſo, no Miniſter were to meddle with the tenth of his Pariſh: for by Gods lawe tenths were brought to the ſtorehouſe of the ouerſeers, and diſtributed by them to the Leuites, according as euery man had neede; but the Leuites themſelues neuer medled with them. Againe, if tenths ſtood now by the lawe of God, then the poore ſhould earth: euery third yeare all the tenths of the haue for ſo it was among the Iewes while they ſtoode in force by Gods Law. Secondly, they obiect that in the Prouerbs, chap.20.25. It is a ſnare to deuoure tenths. Anſ. The place is to be vnderſtood of tenths then ſtanding in force by Gods law, not of ours which ſtand by mans. Thirdly, they alledge that ſome decrees were made in the Primitiue Church, that the alienation of Church lands ſhould become ſacriledge. Anſ. But thoſe decrees concerned priuate perſons who might not, nor may not on their own heads impropriate the church goods; as alſo they debarred the taking away of neceſſaries from the Church, for then the Church was farre from that ſuperfluitie which ſithence it hath obtained: ſo that for a lay man to holde lands impropriate, the former conditions obſerued, is no ſacriledge. Now if the queſtion be concerning the impropriations of Colledges, whether they lawfully hold them or no: then I anſwer ſecondly, that I take it, they hold them by a more ſpeciall right; for they beeing giuen at the firſt vnto the Church, they are not (being impropriate to Colledges) generally and wholy alienated from the Church; but remaine in this ſpeciall vſe of the Church for the maintaining of the Seminaries of it, without which the Church muſt needs decay: and this ſeemeth a ſufficient cauſe of reſeruing vnto them this maintenance, ſo as care bee had of the people and poore for their releefe and inſtruction. Secondly, whereas the Primitiue Church firſt feaſted, and then receiued the Lords Supper, we note firſt the lawfulneſſe of feaſts, ſo as the poore be regarded, ſuperfluity and riot auoided, and the right end intended, which is the praiſe and glorie of God expreſſed in thankefulnes for the abundance of his good bleſſings. So after the ſacrifices and offerings, Aaron and the Elders of Iſrael came to feaſt with Iethro before God, Exod. 18. 12. So Ezra, 8. Goe your waies, eate the fat, and drinke the ſweete, and ſend part to them for whom none is prepared; for this is the day of the Lord. Secondly, the Papiſts are deceiued, who teach it neceſſarie to come to the Sacrament of the Supper faſting, for theſe feaſted before it. Thirdly, in the Primitie Church, and in the Apoſtles dayes, there was no priuate Maſſe in which one Prieſt ſhould eate vp all alone, but there were feaſtings, which cannot be performed by one man alone, but the whole congregation. Fourthly, hence we may note the ende of the Lords Supper to be the increaſe of our fellowſhip and communion with Chriſtian men, as well as our vnion with God; and that we are to come together in loue and Chriſtian vnitie: for the teſtifying of which charitable affection, the ancient beleeuers in the Apoſtles daies had theſe feaſts of loue before they came to the Lords table.

Further, in that theſe ſeducers are called [Spots in theſe feaſts] I note firſt that open offenders ſhould be hindred and repelled from the Sacraments, beeing as ſpots in the face; which becauſe they are are blemiſhes, muſt bee waſhed away: ſo ought theſe by the cenſure of excommunication to be (vntil their repentance) cut off from the face of the congregation. Secondly, that euery one that profeſſeth the faith is not a true member of the Catholike Church, as the Papiſts erroniouſly hold: that let a man bee what he will, if he profeſſe the faith, it is ſufficient to make him a member of the Catholique Church. Whereas open offenders are to bee accounted as ſpots, which no man will ſay are true parts of the bodie, but blemiſhes to be pared away, that their body may bee the more perfect and entire.

Doctr. Feeding themſelues without feare.] In feaſting we are to preſerue feare within our hearts, which is two-fold: firſt of God, ſecondly of man. The former is ſeene Exod. 18. 12. The men of Iſrael, feaſted before the Lord. Iobs feare was, leſt his ſonnes ſhould caſt this feare of God out of their hearts in their feaſting, and ſo offend God. The latter is preſcribed, Prou. 23. 1. 2. When thou ſitteſt to eate before a Ruler, put the knife to thy throte; that is, bridle thine appetite: haue reſpect not to paſſe the limits of ſobrietie, temperance, and moderation. And as we are to eate and drinke, ſo alſo to ſeaſon all other our actions with the feare of God and men: which one grace would cut off many graceleſſe practiſes euery where raigning amongſt men. But a ſpeciall thing here aimed at is, that we ſhould neuer come to eate the Lords Supper without feare and reuerence: which becauſe the Corinths wanted, Paul complaineth that one came hungrie, another drunke, and ſo prophaned that holy inſtitution, 1. Cor. 11. 21. Obiect. But in that place it ſeemeth Paul condemneth theſe Loue-feaſts, which Iude here diſpraiſeth not, where he ſaith, euery man eateth his ſupper before, v. 21. 22. Anſ. Theſe Loue-feaſts were indifferent, and might bee vſed or not; Paul condemneth the great abuſe of them in Corinth, becauſe ſome were made by them drunke, and vnfit for the Lords Supper; and the riche deceiued the poore: but Iude commendeth them, becauſe they were in other Churches rightly and religiouſly vſed.

Clowdes they are without water, carried about of winds.] Theſe words containe the eight and ninth ſinnes of theſe wicked men: which the better to know what they are, let vs a little conſider the meaning of them. [Clowdes they are without water.] It pleaſeth the Spirit of God in many places of the olde Teſtament, to compare Prophets and Teachers vnto clowdes; and their doctrine vnto the dropping and diſtilling of the raine and ſweet ſhowers falling from theſe clowdes. So the Prophet Ezechiel is Ezech. 20. 46. commanded to ſet his face towards the way of Teman, and drop his word toword the South, and his propheſie towards the forreſt. Deut. 32. 2. My doctrine ſhall drop as the raine, and my ſpeech ſhall diſtill as the dew, as the ſhower vpon the herbs, and as the great raine vpon the graſſe. Mich. 2. 7. and 11. The word tranſlated prophecie, ſignifieth properly to drop or diſtill. The reaſon of which compariſon is rendred, Iſai. 55. 10. 11. Becauſe as the rain falleth vpō the earth, and returned not in vaine, but moiſteneth it, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may giue ſeede to the ſower, and bread to him that eateth: ſo the word in the mouth of the Miniſters returneth not voide, but accompliſheth the Lords will, and proſpereth in the thing whereto it is ſent; in becomming the ſauour of life to the ſaluation of ſome, and of death vnto the death of them that periſh. The words then ſtanding vpō this ſimilitude beare this ſenſe; Though the propertie and vſe of clowdes is to carrie water and raine for the vſe of the earth, yet ſome clowdes are without water: euen ſo, though all Teachers ought to be filled and fitted with ſtore of wholſome doctrine, to powre it out for the vſe of the Church; yet theſe ſeducers are vtterly deſtitute thereof. And againe, as thoſe clowdes without water are light, and fitter for nothing then to be carried about with winde: ſo theſe are altogether variable, & vnconſtant, carried about with euery blaſt of ſtrange doctrine. The former of theſe ſimilitudes condemneth their ſinne of barrenneſſe and vnfruitfulneſſe: the latter their ninth ſinne of inconſtancie and variableneſſe.

Concerning the former, ſeeing that the Apoſtle taketh it for granted that the clowdes are naturally ordained to containe water; it may be demanded how it can bee conceiued that the clowdes aboue beeing heauy with water ſhould not fall to the earth; ſeeing euery heauie thing naturally deſcendeth and tendeth downeward? Anſ. The clowdes are heauie indeed; for euen winds themſelues (being by many degrees lighter then they) haue their waight, Iob. 28.25. No man therefore by wit or reaſon can reſolue this doubt, but onely from the word of God; which teacheth that it is by vertue of Gods commandement giuen in the creation, that the clowdes fall not, Gen. 1.6. Let the firmament ſeparate the waters from the waters: by force of which commanding word, the water hangeth in the clowdes, and the clowdes in the ayre, and need no other ſupporters. Iob ſetting out the Maieſtie and greatneſſe of God in his workes, here beginneth; That he hangeth the earth vpon nothing, he bindeth the waters in the clowdes, and the clowde is not broken vnder them. Phyloſophie is too defectiue to yeeld the true reaſon of this great work of God, which commonly attributeth too much to nature, and too little to the God of nature; whoſe prouidence and power is herein to be acknowledged, in that by his word he ordereth all his creatures, vnto which he ſpeaketh the word and they obey.

Secondly, hence we learne to conceiue the right meaning of that place. Gen. 1.7. Let the firmament ſeparate the waters that be beneath, from the waters that be aboue. By the firmament is meant the ayre, or the diſtance betweene the earth and the ſtarrie skie: by the waters vnder this firmament are meant the ſeas and floods; and the waters aboue, are the watrie clowdes, which are diuided by the firmament or ayre in which we breath, called the firmament of heauen: for it is the loweſt of the three heauens, which the Scripture maketh mention of, reaching to the ſtarres; the ſecond beeing the ſtarrie heauen, the third beeing the heauen of heauens, the ſeate of God, where he reuealeth his glorie to his Saints and Angels. Thoſe then are deceiued who out of this place dreame of a waterie heauen aboue the ſtarres.

Now further in that theſe ſeducers are called Clowds without water, becauſe they are deſtitute of wholeſome doctrine; we learne firſt that Miniſters ought to be ſuch as are able to teach wholeſome and ſound doctrine, 1. Tim. 3. Mal. 2.7. The Prieſts lips ſhould preſerue knowledge: otherwiſe they are as clowdes without water, keeping the field of God barren and fruitleſſe; which abilitie ſuppoſeth, yea and impoſeth the performance of diligence herein; or elſe whether they haue knowledge or not, they come vnder the ranke of them whom Eſay 56.10. calleth dumb dogs; which cānot, or do not bark. In former ages I grant indeede there were readers appointed in the Church, who could not otherwiſe teach: but yet none were called for Teachers into the Church, but ſuch as had this abilitie of watring Gods Church by doctrine more or leſſe, vntill hereſie and ſchiſme came in. Secondly, Miniſters ought ſo to teach as they drop and inſtill the graces of faith, repentance, and obedience into the hearts of the hearers: euen as the clowdes drop water vpon the drie earth, which ſinketh into the ſame. This was Pauls deſire to ſee the Romanes that he might beſtowe ſome ſpirituall grace vpon them, Rom. 1.11. This is the right handling and deuiding of the word, when men ſhewe not words but power, 1. Cor. 4.14. That Teacher ſheweth learning that ſheweth men Chriſt, and can be a meanes to diſtill Gods graces into their ſoules: let this be the ſcope of thoſe who are ſet apart vnto this holy Miniſterie; elſe they ſhall be as vnprofitable as clowdes which containe no water in them at all. Thirdly, if the Miniſters muſt be as clowds hauing water in them; then muſt the people be as drie ground, not in regard of barrenneſſe, but of thirſt and deſire after theſe drops and dewes of grace diſtilling from the Miniſterie. Pſal. 143.6. My ſoule deſireth after thee, euen as a thirſtie land: vnto which diſpoſition we are to preſerue two things within vs: firſt, looke as in drie land parcht with the heate of the Sunne, there is a great want of moyſture; ſo in our ſoules muſt be retained a ſenſe of the want of the graces of God, with an heartie ſorrowe of our want. Our hearts muſt bee perſwaded that in vs, and of our ſelues there is no good thing that God can take delight in: yea and the griefe conceiued muſt not bee ſmall, but we muſt feele our ſelues euen dried and parched with the heate of his wrath due vnto our ſinnes, vntill theſe ſweete waters flowing from vnder the threſhold of the Sanctuarie haue graciouſly refreſhed

Clowdes without water keepe Gods field fruitleſſe & barren.

Men muſt be as drie ground, not in barrennes, but in regard of their thirſt after the drops of grace.

Luk.1.13.

ed vs. Mary ſaith, that God filleth the hungrie with good things: by the hungrie are meant thoſe who feele themſelues voide of grace, yea as it were pined & ſtarued for want of it. Chriſt telleth the woman of Canaan that he came to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael: that is, he that knoweth himſelfe not a wandring ſheepe, but quite loſt, euen in the lyons paw ready to be deuoured: ſuch doth Chriſt take vpon his necke, and like a good ſhepheard bring backe to his fold. For he was ſent to preach the acceptable yeare; not to the mightie & ſtates of the world, but to priſoners and captiues, that is, ſuch as could grieue and mourn for their captiuitie. Secondly, as drie land parched with drought gapeth and openeth it ſelfe wide, as if it would ſwallow vp the clowdes for raine: ſo muſt our hearts preſerue within them an earneſt appetite, and inſatiable deſire after Chriſt and his merits, aboue all the things in the world: more hũgring after him, then after wealth, gold, ſiluer, honours, health, or whatſoeuer is delightfull and higheſt prized among the ſonnes of men. And this will follow of the former: for if we be once at the point, that we are out of all conceit of our owne goodnes, we will ſeeke earneſtly for it at the hands of him who is the fountaine of all goodnes: if we feele our ſpiritual pouertie once, we cannot but couetouſly hunt after thoſe true treaſures which onely inrich our ſoules to all eternitie. The woman of Samaria did but prattle with Chriſt till he had told her of her ſinne, and of her husbands: and that he which was now her husband was none of hers: then could ſhee humble her ſelfe, and confeſſe him to be a Prophet, and quickly after came to acknowledge him the Meſſiah, and all her cauelling was laid aſide: ſo till we be humbled we doe but cauell at the word, and receiue it not as drie land doth the ſhowers which fall; but let the heart once be touched, it is turned preſently vpſide downe, and we are become other manner of men then before.

Matth.15.24.

The ninth ſinne blamed in theſe ſeducers is, that they are inconſtant & vnſtable, carried like light clowds with the windes of ſtrange doctrine; whence Teachers muſt learne to hold conſtantly the doctrine of ſaluation, Titus 1. 9. holding faſt the faithfull word: people alſo muſt not reuolt or depart from it, nay not be vnſtable, or ſoone remooued to another Goſpel. Eph. 4. 14. Be no more children wauering and carried about with euery wind of doctrine: but both Teachers and hearers muſt beware leaſt we (being by Gods bleſſing freed from the ſpirituall Egypt, where we were many hundred yeres detained) now after fourtie yeres and moe, looke backe againe, and fal from that faith into which we haue beene baptiſed.

Beware of looking behinde thee toward Sodom, out of which thou art eſcaped.

Corrupt trees and without fruit, twice dead, & plucked vp by the roots. ] In theſe words is the tenth ſinne of theſe ſeducers ſet down, and that is their incurable hypocriſie; illuſtrated and amplified by a compariſon or ſimilitude, from bad and barren trees: containing foure ſteps or degrees of naughtineſſe, euery one worſe then other. The firſt ſtep, they are corrupt trees; which muſt be vnderſtood not in regard of their ſubſtance, but in regard of their corrupt fruites: for the word tranſlated * corrupt, properly is applyed to trees that beare no fruit, but in the fall of the leafe, which with the leaues fall off, beeing neglected and wither away, neuer comming to any good or gathering. The ſecond degree, they are without fruit: which words are a correction of the former; for they are not onely without good fruite, but vtterly deſtitute of any fruite at all. Thirdly, they are twice dead: that is, certainly dead, hopeleſſe of any fruite. Fourthly, they are plucked vp by the rootes, that is, vtterly without hope, not of fruite, but of life it ſelfe; they are paſt liuing, and much more paſt fruite. This ſimilitude then chargeth theſe ſeducers (to whom it is fitly applyed) firſt that all their workes are but hypocriticall. Secondly, that they are vtterly deſtitute of all good works which truely are good. Thirdly, that they haue no heauenly and ſpirituall life or ſappe in them. And fourthly, that they are out of Chriſt, not rooted in him, but plucked vp: and therefore they are moſt hopeleſſe of euer bearing fruite vnto life, beeing proceeded ſo farre in the high way vnto perdition. So much of the meaning.

Doct. In that theſe falſe teachers are iuſtly condemned for this ſinne of beeing corrupt trees without fruite: we on the contrary muſt ſtriue to become good trees of Gods delight; Iſai. 5. 7. Iudah is the plant of my delight; trees of righteouſneſſe; Iſai. 60. 21. The planting of the Lord, laden with the fruites of righteouſneſſe: which that we may be, foure things are required of vs: firſt, that we may be well rooted: ſecondly, that we liue in the roote: thirdly, that we beare fruite; fourthly, that we beare good fruite.

Firſt, we muſt be rooted. In this rooting two things are required: firſt, there muſt be a roote: this roote is Chriſt. Ioh. 15. 1. He is the vine, wee the branches. Rom. 5. 6. If we be planted into him. Col. 2. 7. rooted in him. Heere we muſt conſider Chriſt not as God alone, or man alone, or the Sonne of God alone, but as God-man; as God made man; as an Immanuel, God with vs, euen our Mediatour and redeemer. Thus he is our roote, in whom are hid the treaſures of graces, Col. 2. 3. and of whoſe fulneſſe we all receiue grace for grace, Ioh. 1.16. The ſecond thing in this rooting is ingrafting: for trees of righteouſneſſe grow not by nature. Pſalm. 1. A good man is as a tree planted: for by nature the beſt men are but wilde oliues, and muſt be tranſplanted from the firſt Adam into the ſecond. The author of this ingrafting is God himſelfe, who doth it by two actions: firſt he giueth Chriſt truly and really in the word and Sacraments, not out of the word, but in and by it. So 1. Cor. 3. Paul planteth, Apollo watereth;

19049a

A that is, God by their miniſtrie ingrafted the Corinthians into Chriſt. Secondly, when on his part he giueth Chriſt, he giueth alſo a power to the beleeuer to apprehend him, and receiue him with his merits vnto ſaluation, and that by the onely hand of faith. Ob. But this can be no ingrafting, ſeeing Chriſt is in heauen, we are on earth. Anſ. It is not indeede a naturall ingrafting, which cannot be but by the fit applying of two bodies one to the other, but ſpirituall, yet as ſure and as ſtraight as that is. We ſee in nature, the minde is preſent and ioyned with the thing it thinketh of, although it be diſtant many thouſand miles: if this can be true in nature, then much more in faith, which is a worke ſupernaturall, and farre aboue the reach of nature. Againe, a man hath land giuen him in Spaine, B Turkie, or America, many thouſand miles off him, he was neuer at it, he neuer ſaw it, and yet is truly the Lord of it, and may ſay of it, it is his owne, by vertue of the donation. Euen ſo God in his word giueth Chriſt and his merits to the beleeuer, who as he hath receiued him by faith, ſo he retaineth him by grace: by vertue of which donation, and acceptation, a man may as truly ſay, Chriſt is his, as though he were now in heauen alreadie with him; yea ſo firme and certen is this ingrafting, that it once beeing made, can neuer be diſſolued, but is euerlaſting: for the roote liuing and abiding for euer, ſo alſo doe the branches, beeing ſet into the ſame, and that by the hand of the good husbandman C God himſelfe.

Ioh.15.1.

The ſecond thing required in a tree of righteouſneſſe is life, which is not the naturall life of other plants, but ſpirituall and eternall; for eternall life beginneth in this life. Gal. 2. 20. Now I liue, yet not I now, but Chriſt liueth in me, and this life is by the faith in the Sonne of God, and then wrought in vs, when the ſame minde which was in Chriſt whileſt he was vpon earth is alſo in vs, Phil. 2. 5. for he conueyeth his owne diſpoſition into his members in part, who are daily made conformable vnto him: of which conformitie the Apoſtle maketh two parts, Rom. 5. 6. Firſt, a conformitie vnto him in his death; that looke as he died for ſinne, ſo ought his members vnto ſinne: and as he by his death D ſubdued ſinne, and obtained victorie ouer it; ſo ought they daily to be nibling in the aboliſhing, and mortifying of that ſinne which preſſeth them downe, and hangeth ſo faſt vpon them, vntill the day of their full conqueſt and finall deliuerance. Secondly, a conformitie vnto him in his Reſurrection; that as he roſe againe from the graue, ſo ſhould they from the graue of their ſinnes; and as he roſe to liue for euer, ſo ought they by vertue of his reſurrection to liue to God in newnes of life, as thoſe that looke to liue for euer with him. Thirdly, the tree of righteouſneſſe muſt bring forth fruits, to teſtifie the life of it, called Gal. 5. 22. fruits of the ſpirit, and there reckoned vp; Loue, peace, ioy, long ſuffering, gentleneſſe, goodneſſe, faith, meekeneſſe, temperance. Phil. 1. 11. Paul prayeth that the Philippians might be filled with the fruits of righteouſneſſe, that is, the duties of the Moral law cōtained in the firſt & ſecond Table. Fourthly, a tree of righteouſnes muſt bring forth good fruits, ſuch as are pleaſing vnto God. Queſt. How ſhall a Chriſtian bring forth good fruits? Anſ. Firſt, good fruit muſt come from a good heart, an heart penitent, and truly turned to God. Matth. 3. Bring forth fruits worthy amendment of life. 1. Tim. 1. 5. Loue out of a pure heart. Secondly, it muſt be brought forth with intention, will, purpoſe, and endeauour to obey God in his commandements, which the heart muſt reſpect. Thirdly, the ende of this fruit muſt be the glorie of God, not ſeeking our ſelues but Gods honour. In Leuit. 19. 23. God requireth that the trees ſhould be circumciſed, which was thus performed: The three firſt yeares the fruit was to be caſt, or fall away; the fourth it was to be dedicated to the Lord, and the fifth yeare the Iſraelites might eate of the fruit: euen ſo we muſt firſt caſt away in reſpect of our ſelues our fruits, and dedicate them vnto the Lord, ſo he ſhall taſte of them with delight, and not before. Fourthly, it muſt be brought forth to the good of others; as trees beare fruits not for themſelues, but for men: ſo our fruits muſt be intended not ſo much for our priuate good, as the common good of the Church and Commonwealth.

Trees of righteouſnes muſt circumciſe their hearts, ſeeing trees were to be circumciſed by the law.

Doct. 2. Seeing the faithfull are not ſuch corrupt trees, but of Gods owne planting, they haue here firſt a ground of comfort in the middeſt of ſorrow, ſicknes, yea and death it ſelfe; for beeing ingrafted into Chriſt, the whole man is preſerued ſafe and ſound in him: yea the dying bodie, nay the dead bodie, and that which is rotting in the graue is plāted into him, and is to liue againe in him, who alwaies liueth, and will raiſe it to life eternall at the laſt day. Trees in winter are dead to mans ſenſe; yet becauſe the rootes of them liue, and haue in them ſappe and moiſture, in the ſpring they ſhal bud, bloſſome, and beare fruite againe: euen ſo the rotten bodie at the time of refreſhing ſhall reuiue againe and become a glorious plant, putting off mortalitie and corruption, no more to be ſubiected thereunto againe, then the roote into which they are ſet; who hath for his members chaſed them away. Secondly, ſeeing we muſt be planted, and cannot attaine this growth by nature: we muſt deteſt, and abhorre our ſelues in duſt and aſhes; renounce, and bewaile our naturall condition, and be at no reſt till we feele our ſelues ſet into Chriſt, by liuing the life of the ſonne of God: For knowe we not that Chriſt liueth in vs, except we be reprobats? Thirdly, our Church hath herein reſembled Iudah; hauing beene for many yeares a plant of Gods delight, who hath hedged and fenced it by his fauourable protection: but many, yea the moſt branches are barren, bearing no fruit; others beare leſſe fruit then they haue done, beeing whithered and fallen backe: what will be (thinke we) the end hereof? Surely the axe being alreadie laid to the roote of the tree, ſhall cut downe whatſoeuer branches beare not foorth good fruit, and they ſhall be caſt into the fire. It ſtandeth vs then in hand to become more fruitfull before we be cut downe. Fourthly, hence let euery man learne ſubiection vnto God in all his croſſes and afflictions; we are trees or branches at leaſt, of the Vine, the Father is the husbandman, and looke as the husbandman loppeth, cutteth and pruneth, yea and almoſt cutteth downe his trees to make them more fruitfull: ſo dealeth the Lord with his children, who therein are to reſt well contented; for he chaſteneth them for their good; and although no chaſtiſement ſeemeth ioyous for the preſent, yet it bringeth afterward the pleaſant frute of righteouſnes to thoſe that are exerciſed thereby.

Twice dead and plucked vp.] Some hence gather this, that we are once dead in Adam by originall ſinne; and ſecondly after regeneration or ingrafting into Chriſt by ſome grieuous ſinne wounding the conſcience to death: and hence conclude that a man regenerate may die againe, and fall from grace: vrging for their purpoſe that in Rom. 11. 20. Through vnbeleefe they were broken off, and thou ſtandeſt by faith; be not high minded, but feare. But this cannot be ſo vnderſtood: for by twice dead, is meant dead certenly; or dead twice, once in Adam by originall ſinne, and the ſecond time dead by their owne actuall ſinne. As for that place in Rom. 11. I anſwer, there are two kinds of planting: firſt, outward: ſecondly, inward. The outward is, when God giueth the word vnto a people without other his ordinances, and they publikely profeſſe it. The inward is, when God giueth true faith, whereby men are ſet into Chriſt. Now the Iewes whome the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of, were implanted by the former onely, and therefore might be broken off: the other is euerlaſting. 1. Ioh. 2. 19. They went out from vs, but were not of vs: for if they had beene of vs, they ſhould haue continued with vs. Further, where it is ſaid, Plucked vp:] hence is gathered by ſome that they were once in the roote, and therefore a man rooted and ſet in Chriſt may periſh finally. Anſ. But we muſt know that this phraſe in the Scripture ſignifieth a manifeſtation of the things to be done, rather then the doing of them: they are therefore ſaid to be plucked vp, whome God manifeſteth neuer to haue beene rooted: as alſo men are ſaide to be blotted out of the booke of life; not that they were euer written therein, but in that God manifeſteth and maketh knowne to men that they were neuer written in it.

v. 13. They are raging waues of the ſea, foaming out their owne ſhame: they are wandring ſtarres, for whome is reſerued the blacke darknes for euer.

The Apoſtle in this verſe proceedeth on in the further diſcouerie of theſe wicked men by ſundrie other ſinnes; ſet downe after the ſame manner as the former by way of ſimilitude and compariſon. And firſt he compareth them to the raging waues of the ſea; and ſecondly to wandring ſtarres. And in the end of the verſe: For whome &c. the concluſion is againe repeated, of which we haue ſpoken in the 11. verſe. The former compariſon hath three expoſitions; for ſome will haue their groſſe hypocriſie hereby ſignified; and then the compariſon ſtandeth thus: Looke as the waues of the ſea rage and ſwell, riſing vp towards the heauens, as though they would ſwallow and ouerthrow the earth, which they ſeeme to threaten; but drawing to the ſhore, they are broken to a little foame: ſo theſe ſeducers make a great ſhew of godlineſſe, and pietie, as though they onely would goe to heauen; yet is the matter nothing ſo, all is but froth, ſeeing they want the power and practiſe of religion, and godlines in the middeſt of ſuch pretenſes. Secondly, others hereby expreſſe their vnprofitableneſſe and deceitfulneſſe in their doctrine, thus: As the waues of the ſea riſe very huge and high, eſpecially beeing ſtirred by the windes, and yet their effect is nothing but a little foame and mire, which they caſt vp: ſo theſe lewd men beeing puffed vp in themſelues, promiſe great matters to their followers: as much libertie, many bleſſings and great good things; and yet the effect of all their ſhowes is but to make men much more the ſeruants of ſinne then before. And thus Peter ſpeaketh of them: In ſpeaking ſwelling words of vanitie they beguile with wantonneſſe, through the luſts of the fleſh, them which were cleane eſcaped from them. This was truely ſpoken of them, and may as truely be applied vnto diuers of our times, as firſt the Libertines and Familiſts, fondly aſſuring their diſciples that they ſhall be illuminate and deified, ſuch great matters they promiſe; whereas they make them the children of the deuill ſeuen fold more then they were before. Secondly, the Romiſh Clergie haue beene as large in their promiſes vnto their hearers: teaching them that they ſhal be able to ſatisfie the iuſtice of God for their ſinnes, yea and merit life euerlaſting, and that many of them can performe works of ſupererrogation, which the Lawe of God bindeth them not vnto: but what is this but to foame out dirt and mire, and to teach men that for a little money they may breake all Gods commandements? The third expoſition is this; As the Sea ſtirred by the windes and weather rageth, & from the foundation caſteth vp nothing but froth: ſo theſe men ſtirred and mooued by the hand of God correcting them, amend not, nor profit thereby: but rather vnder the ſame, diſcouer the wickedneſſe and vnbeleefe of their hearts; which is the moſt agreeable and fitteſt expoſition; explaned in Iſa. 57. 20. The wicked are like the raging ſea that cannot reſt, whoſe waters caſt vp mire and dirt. From this ſenſe conſider theſe two things; firſt, a worke of God: ſecondly, a practiſe of man. Firſt the will, work, and appointment of God is, that men ſhall be troubled, ſtirred, mooued, and ſet out of quiet, and haue within them ſuch diſquietneſſe, as if the raging waues of the ſea were within their ſouſes. The mindes of men both godly and wicked, their wills and affections are often ſo diſtempered, as is the ſea when it is troubled with boiſterous windes and tempeſts. Iere. 46. 23. The Lord ſhall trouble Damaſcus, ſo ſhe ſhall become as a fearefull ſea that cannot reſt. Ioſ. 7. Ioſhua ſaid to Achan; Thou haſt troubled Iſrael, and the Lord ſhall trouble thee. Iob ſaith, The Almightie troubled him, chap. 23. 16. Yea Chriſt himſelf, although he was without ſinne, had his ſoule troubled in his agonie, in which his minde, will, and affections were diſturbed; and this trouble God bringeth on men diuers waies; ſometimes by thoſe of a mans owne houſe, as Iacobs ſonnes troubled him, Geneſ. 34. Sometimes they of his company, as Achan, Ioſh. 7. Sometimes by the Lords withdrawing of himſelfe, Pſal. 30. 7. Thou diddeſt hide thy face, and I was troubled. Sometimes a mans owne heart and conſcience will rage againſt him, as Baltazer ſeeing the hand writing vpon the wall, was troubled and there was no life in him, Dan. 5. What then will ſome ſay, is there no difference betweene the godly and the wicked herein? Anſ. Yes: for euery little croſſe vnto the wicked is a tempeſt breaking the rocks which maketh them to ſtorme and rage, and ſend forth foame and mire: but the croſſes of the godly are as calme winds, a little ſhaking them indeede, and for a little time: but are blowne ouer when they haue a little exerciſed their faith and graces, ſo as they are bettered, yea and furthered by them. 1. King. 19. Elias ſtanding on Mount Horeb, there paſſed by him a mightie tempeſt which rent the rocks; and then an earthquake, then fire, but God was not in any of theſe: afterward there came a ſtill and ſoft voyce, and God was in the voyce. Afflictions are like that tempeſt, earthquake, and fire, namely, to the wicked, againſt whom the Lord commeth to ſhake and conſume them; but to the godly are as a ſtil voice to teach and inſtruct them: vnder which they quietly content themſelues, becauſe God is in that ſtill voyce, namely by his grace and preſence ſupporting and ſuſtaining them euen in the middeſt of their troubles.

Secondly, the practiſe of a wicked man is, when he is troubled and ſtirred by God to foame our his owne ſhame; euen as the ſea his froth. Experience teacheth, that if a wicked man haue any wrong or diſgrace offered him, preſently he diſcouereth the corruption of his heart, and breaketh out into rayling, curſing, reuiling, and all manner of reuenge: ſo if Gods hand be vpon him by ſickeneſſe, or vpon his family, he cannot couer his want of loue of God, he cannot hide the infidelitie of his heart: for he betakes himſelfe the next way to the Sorcerer, Figure-caſter, or the next Wizzard, ſo flieth from God as faſt as his feete will carrie him: and euery way the ſame violent affections bewray themſelues, which theſe ſeducers are charged withall.

As Adam fled from God vpon his ſinne: ſo many a one flieth to the deuill vpon the puniſhment of it.

Vſe. Seeing this is the propertie of a wicked man beeing troubled, to foame out his own ſhame, let the childe of God in his trouble quiet himſelfe, reſtraine and bridle his corruptions; yea let him ſhewe forth his faith, obedience, meekeneſſe, and ſubiection vnto God by prayer: as Iehoſaphat beeing in a great ſtreight on euery ſide turned his eyes vnto the Lord, ſaying, I know not what to doe, but our eyes are towards thee. And Dauid flying from Abſalom his ſonne, reuiled him not, nor ſtormed againſt him, but turned to the Lord, ſaying: If I pleaſe thee not, Lord here am I, doe with me euen as thou pleaſeſt.

2. Chr. 20. 12.

The ſecond compariſon followeth in theſe words: They are wandring ſtarres. By which words we may not vnderſtand, the planets in the heauens: neither the fixed ſtarres; which keepe a direct and conſtant courſe: but ſuch as we call ſhooting, falling, or gliding ſtarres; which haue ſome light, but it is ſoone obſcured. The ſinne then is, that which was before mentioned, namely, their falſe and inſtable doctrine, which can neuer direct men to heauen, no more then thoſe ſhooting ſtarres can direct either ſailers by ſea, or trauellers by land. Hence learne two things: firſt, that all true teachers muſt be ſtarres. Secondly, they muſt be fixed, and not wandring ſtarres: firſt, they muſt be ſtarres. Ob. This cannot be, ſeeing they haue no light of their owne. Anſw. Chriſt is the light which enlighteneth euery man that commeth into the world; called therefore the Sun of righteouſnes, & the day ſtarre, frō whom all Miniſters receiue their light. Againe, they may be fit inſtruments to carrie light vnto others (which is their office) although they haue none of their owne, ſaue that onely which is conueied from Chriſt vnto them: as a Lanthrone hath no light in it ſelfe but what men put into it.

Doct. Firſt, all true Teachers muſt firſt haue the Sunne of righteouſneſſe to ſhine in their owne hearts, before they can enlighten others with his light: for as Paul was himſelfe cōforted that he might be able to comfort others, 2. Cor. 1. ſo no man can teach others, till himſeſe firſt be taught. Secondly, if they be ſtarres, they muſt ſhine to ſomewhat, and that is to the hearts of men: ſo as the principall care of Miniſters ought to be herein placed, that they may inlighten the minds, conſciences, wills, & affections of men, ſo becomming the meanes of the riſing of the Sunne of righteouſneſſe in mens hearts, not that they may fill the eare with words, but the heart with light, comfort, and refreſhing. This was the ſcope of Pauls preaching, 2. Cor. 4. 2. in the declaration of the truth to approoue himſelfe to euery mans conſcience in the ſight of God: ſo as if his Goſpell were yet hid, it was not his fault; but of thoſe men whoſe eyes the God of the world had blinded, that the light of the glorious Goſpell of Chriſt ſhould not ſhine vnto their hearts.

Vſe. This teacheth that all men by nature are the children of darkeneſſe, without the knowledge of God; as vnto whom God hath appointed Teachers to be as ſhining ſtarres to enlighten them. We need not goe farre to prooue this truth, for euen our own country witneſſeth that in the dayes of former Princes, our forefathers wanting this light and theſe ſtars, ſowed and reaped their fields, brought home their corne, baked their bread: which ſerued them partly for foode, and partly to make a breaden god of; a more palpable darkeneſſe then that of Egypt which might haue beene felt. Secondly, ſeeing that darkeneſſe is chaſed away, and we haue the light and many bright ſtarres to direct vs, take the exhortation, Epheſ. 5. 8. Ye are nowe light, walke as children of the light, namely, by accepting, entertaining, and embracing of the light. That we may doe this, firſt we muſt knowe the light and behold it with the loue and affection of our hearts vnto it; that as when the ſunne ſhineth, euery man openeth his doores and windowes to receiue the comfort of it: ſo we ſhould open the doores of our hearts to entertaine, and retaine the light of Chriſt, to haue them filled therewith: for then Gods fauourable countenance is ſhining vpon vs. Secondly, hauing the light, we muſt doe the works of the light, that is, of obedience: when the Sunne is vp and ſhineth, euery man walketh in his calling, and whileſt our Sunne of grace is ouer our heads, we are to walke as becommeth the calling of Chriſtianitie, to make conſcience of all ſinne; a ſhame is it at noone day to ſtumble and fall, and ruſh into a pit: ſo nowe is it for Chriſtian men in ſuch a ſunne-ſhine of the Goſpell, to betake them to euery worke of darkeneſſe, and be betaken with euery ſnare of ſinne, as though they had no light to dierct them, but were left in darkeneſſe.

Open the doore of thy heart, that the Sun of righteouſnes may ſhine into the houſe of thy ſoule.

Secondly, true Teachers muſt not onely be ſtarres, but fixed ſtarres, that is, conſtant and ſtable in the doctrine which they teach, and deliuer out of the Prophets and Apoſtles: for if the ſtarres and Sea markes ſhould change their places, and remooue to and fro, the poore paſſengers that looke for conſtant direction by them, are likely to be carried and caſt vpon the quicke ſands and rockes, and ſo to be ouerthrowne and drowned: in like manner if Teachers be variable, and changelings in their doctrines, the ſoules of all their hearers (not knowing where to haue ſure direction) are as likely to ſuffer ſhipwracke and ſinke into the pit of hell.

Vſe. People ought to haue their hearts ſtabliſhed, and ſetled vpon the doctrine of religion taught, and prooued vnto them out of the word: by the direction whereof they are to be paſſed vnto the hauen of happines. If this be learned of the bodie of this land, our peace and proſperitie ſhall be ſtable within our walles and palaces; yea Gods protection ſhall bee a walle of fire round about vs. So much of that verſe.

V. 14. And Enoch alſo the ſeauenth from Adam prophecied of ſuch, ſaying: Behold the Lord commeth with thouſands of his Saints.

The Apoſtle hauing in the latter part of the former verſe repeated the concluſion of the reaſon, which is, that theſe ſeducers ſhall be deſtroyed, (the blacknes of darknes beeing reſerued for them) he confirmeth that concluſion by a worthie teſtimonie of Enoch; who prophecied that the Lord would giue iudgement againſt all vngodly men: and therefore theſe vngodly men verſ. 4. muſt needes be deſtroyed. In this teſtimonie conſider two things: firſt, the preface before it: ſecondly, the teſtimonie it ſelfe. In the preface he nameth the author; who was Enoch: and commendeth him in that he was the ſeuenth from Adam. Here two queſtions are to be anſwered: firſt, whence had Iude this hiſtorie, ſeeing it is no where recorded in the Scriptures? and how knew he it to be Enochs? I anſwer two wayes: firſt, he either had it and learned it to be his by ſome tradition which went from hand to hand: (or elſe written by ſome Iew) or ſecondly, he learned it out of ſome booke which went vnder Enochs name: then extant in the dayes of the Apoſtles, though now loſt: it is certaine that one of theſe wayes hee had it.

Hence the Papiſts gather, that the Iewes had vnwritten traditions, and conſequently all their traditions are to be obſerued. Anſ. We denie not all vnwritten traditions, of which ſome are true and profitable: but we renounce and denie all thoſe traditions which are made articles of faith, and rules of Gods worſhip, neceſſarie to ſaluation, (for all ſuch doctrines are written in the bookes of the Prophets and Apoſtles, which conteine perfect direction and rules concerning faith and manners) of which kind the Romane Church holdeth their traditions to be: this is of another kinde, it beeing no article of faith, nor neceſſarie to ſaluation to know, whether Enoch writ this prophecie or no. Againe, from the ſecond anſwer, others who are no Papiſts, conclude, that ſome bookes of Canonicall Scripture are periſhed and loſt. But this is vntrue; for then firſt the fidelitie of the Church, which is the keeper of theſe Oracles, ſhould be called

A in queſtion: and ſecondly, in the bookes Canonicall extant, not one ſentence, or title, no not the ſenſe of any ſentence is loſt: how then ſhould whole bookes come to be loſt?

It is alleadged that the bookes of Salomon are moſt of them loſt. Anſ. The bookes of Salomon which were loſt, were bookes of humanitie and Philoſophie: for he writ of all beaſts, birds, trees, euen from the Cedar in Libanus to the hyſſop vpon the wall: the bookes of humane truth might faile, but no part of Canonical Scripture.

Ob. Mention is made in the Scripture of the bookes of the Chronicles of the Iewes or Kings of Iudah; but theſe are periſhed. Anſ. They were politique hiſtories, as are the Chronicles of England, or other Countries.

B Ob. The bookes of Nathan, Gad, Iddo, Shemaiah, and other Prophets are periſhed. Anſ. All theſe (as is thought by the learned) are contained in the books of the Kings, Chronicles, and Samuel.

Ob. This booke of Enoch is loſt. Anſ. Firſt, it is doubted whether it was a booke or no, or went by tradition. Secondly, if it was a booke, it was no part of Scripture: for Moſes was the firſt penman of Scripture, who liued long after Enoch.

C The ſecond queſtion: why doth the Apoſtle make choiſe of this teſtimonie of Enoch, rather then ſome other Prophet? Anſw. Himſelfe giueth two reaſons. Firſt, he was the ſeauenth from Adam: it is therefore an auncient teſtimonie, to be receiued and reuerenced for the antiquitie; but withall it ſheweth what is true antiquitie; namely, when a doctrine of religion can be prooued from ſome Prophet or Apoſtle: (for this teſtimonie was a propheſie) and therefore that antiquitie which the Church of Rome challengeth to her religion and doctrine is but counterfeit; becauſe they are not able to iuſtifie the maine points thereof from any Prophet or Apoſtle: yea in theſe wherein they diſſent from vs, they cannot bring their proofe and deſcent from within the firſt hundred yeares after Chriſt. It is then a vaine plea and falſe pretence of them to boaſt of the antiquitie of their religion. D The ſecond reaſon is in the word prophecied: for Enoch ſpoke not this of his owne head or motion, but from God; for no creature, Angell, or man, can foretell things to come; beeing a prerogatiue properly belonging vnto God. Ob. Yes, but the learned Phiſition can truely foretell the death of the patient to come. Anſ. He doth not properly herein foretell a thing to come: for the death of the partie is preſent in the ſignes and cauſes of it. Ob. But the Deuill could foretell Sauls death, 1. Sam. 28. 19. To morrowe ſhalt thou be with me and thy ſonnes. Anſ. The Deuill could not properly foretell it, but might ſee it in the cauſes and ſignes. Againe, he might ſpeake ſo to Saul, becauſe God had made him an inſtrument for the execution of that iudgement and deſtruction: ſo as God onely properly foretelleth that which is ſimply to come, and no man or Angell.

He was not the fourth from Adam Cains ſon, Gen.4.17. but the ſeuenth of the poſteritie of Seth, Gen.7.18.

The ſecond point is the teſtimony it ſelfe. Behold the Lord commeth, &c] In which obſerue three points: firſt, the comming of the Lord: ſecondly, the iudgement of the Lord: thirdly, the cauſe of it in the 15. verſe: To giue iudgement againſt all men, &c. Firſt of the partie comming: Behold the Lord commeth.] Where the Apoſtle ſpeaketh in the time preſent, which is put for the time to come: which forme of ſpeech ſheweth the certaintie of Chriſts comming to iudgement; who ſhall as certainly come, as if he were nowe alreadie comming. Concerning which certaintie, it may be demaunded firſt, whence commeth this comming of Chriſt to be certaine? Anſ. From the vnchangeable will of God, which hath certainely decreed the ſame. For he hath appointed a day in the which he will iudge the world in righteouſneſſe. And thus are all other the articles of our faith moſt certaine, in that they are grounded on the vnchangeable will and word of God.

Secondly, how or from whence may we knowe this will of God to be ſo certaine? Anſ. From the manner of propounding the doctrine of it; wherein the euidence of the ſpirit plainly appeareth, ſaying peremptorily; the Lord commeth: euidently expreſſing the certainetie as if it were nowe preſent. And the ſame may be ſpoken of the whole ſcripture, which in it ſelfe is moſt ſure and certaine, becauſe it is the moſt vnchangeable will of God: But how doe we knowe it ſo to be will ſome ſay? I anſwer, by the euidence of the ſpirit, the authoritie, puritie, maieſtie, effect, and ends of the doctrine: it need not ſeeke euidence elſewhere then from it ſelfe, not from man or the Church it ſelfe. The Romiſh Church confeſſeth it is of it ſelfe, and in it ſelfe ſufficiently certaine, but not to me or thee, except the Church ſay ſo: but this is a falſe poſition. The Scripture is certaine both in it ſelfe and vnto vs, and we knowe it ſo to be, though neuer a man would acknowledge it; the heart ſeaſoned with grace will make the mouth confeſſe it.

Secondly, the Apoſtle ſpeaking in this forme, he commeth, for he will come: we learne to ſet before our eyes the comming of our Lord Ieſus to iudgement, and to make account of euerie preſent day as the day of his comming: the Scriptures euery where commend watchfulnes vnto vs, which is to doe nothing elſe but to make reckoning continually of this day. But ſome will ſay we cannot make account daily of it for we ſee it commeth not: neither may we enquire into the time of it. Anſw. Although we cannot exactly make account of that day of generall iudgement, yet we may reckon vpon the day of our particular iudgement, and the day of our owne death, that ſo we may be fitted thereto: For as this ſhall leaue vs, ſo that ſhall find vs. A neceſſary doctrine and duty to be enforced in theſe drowſie daies, wherin euery man almoſt putteth off the euill day, and maketh league and couenants with death and hell: the young man preſumeth of length of dayes: the old man dreameth he may liue one yere longer: both of them defer hereupon their repentance, in that they both are of one minde, namely, that their maſter will yet defer his comming. Thirdly, we muſt not onely carrie within vs a conceit and opinion of this day; but alſo muſt be inwardly affected with it, that we may walke in awe and reuerence before God in regard of it. 2.Cor.5. 11. Knowing therefore the terrours of the Lord, we perſwade men,&c.

Now in the latter part of this verſe, the attendants of the Lord in his comming are mentioned in theſe word; With thouſands of his Saints: which muſt be vnderſtood not onely of Angels, but men alſo, 1. Theſſ. 3. 13. at the comming of the Lord Ieſus Chriſt with all his Saints. Queſt. How can this be, and how ſhall the Saints come with him? Anſ. All men ſhall riſe with their owne bodies, good and bad, at the ſound of the Trumpet: then ſhall the Saints be taken vp into the clowdes to meete Chriſt, and ſhall be made a part of his attendance: but the wicked ſhall ſtand vpon the earth, wiſhing the mountaines and hils to fall vpon them, and hide them from the preſence of the Iudge. Which affordeth a moſt ſpeciall comfort vnto all them who know themſelues to be the members of Chriſt, they ſhall not neede to be diſmaied at that day, nor feare the face of the wicked, ſeeing they ſhal be receiued in the clowdes, into fellowſhip with Chriſt before the iudgement begin; which manner of proceeding the Apoſtle hauing deſcribed, concludeth with the ſame: Wherefore comfort your ſelues one another with theſe wordes, verſ. 18. Here alſo may be noted the power, maieſtie, and omnipotencie of Chriſt in his ſecond comming, although his firſt comming was baſe and in the forme of a ſeruant; now he ſhall come with many millions of Angels and Saints; whom all creatures cannot reſiſt: let no wicked man thinke then either to abſent himſelfe, or eſcape his fearefull wrath: the only way to auoide it is in thy life time to meete him by repentance.

1.Theſſ.4. 16,17.

V. 15. To giue iudgement againſt all men, and to rebuke all the vngodly among them, of all their wicked deeds, which they haue vngodlily committed: and of all their cruell ſpeakings, which wicked ſinners haue ſpoken againſt him.

The ſecond point in the teſtimonie, is the iudgement of the Lord, which together with the cauſe is in this verſe deſcribed. Concerning the iudgement we muſt knowe, that it is either generall or ſpeciall: both of them here mentioned: the former in theſe words: To giue iudgement againſt all men; the latter in theſe words following: And to rebuke all the vngodly among them.] In the generall iudgement it may be asked, how Chriſt can bee ſaide to giue iudgement againſt all men; ſeeing the Saints ſhall come with him, and he will paſſe no ſentence againſt them. Anſ. The meaning is, he will giue iudgement vpon all men: for the godly ſhal receiue and heare a ſentence, but of abſolution: and amongſt all men he will rebuke the vngodly: all perſons ſhall come vnto iudgement without exception, of what age, ſexe, or ſtate ſoeuer they be. This vniuerſall iudgement teacheth vs, firſt; to redreſſe before this day come whatſoeuer within vs would when it commeth confound vs, for euery man muſt appeare in his owne perſon: no Proctor ſhall be allowed to ſpeake or ſolicite for any man; the ſecrets of all hearts muſt be diſcloſed, and euery man ſhall receiue accordingly to that he hath done. It ſtandeth men therefore in hand to reforme things amiſſe before hand, for they ſhall appeare nakedly euen as they are. Queſt. How ſhall this be done? Anſ. 1. Cor. 11. 21. Iudge thy ſelfe before hand, and thou ſhalt not be iudged of the Lord; arraigne, examine, caſt and condemne thy ſelfe, ſue for pardon as for life and death, and thou ſhalt eſcape that fearefull iudgment: For he that confeſſeth his ſinnes, and forſaketh them, ſhall finde mercie, Prou. 28. 13. Thus doe and mercie belongeth vnto thee. Vpon the ſame ground Paul raiſeth the ſame duty, admoniſhing all men euery where to repent, becauſe he hath appointed a day in which he will iudge the world in righteouſneſſe, Act. 17. 30. 31. Secondly, ſeeing there is a day of vniuerſall iudgement, ſeeke in the meane time to ſtop the mouth of thy conſcience, that it may then ſtand with thee to excuſe and acquit thee, and neuer dare to offend againe and wound it, for it is a deputy Iudge vnder God: which if it condemne thee, much more ſhall God the great Iudge, beeing greater then thy conſcience. Thirdly, hence in all actions our care ſhould be to approoue our hearts vnto God, eſpecially in hearing and ſpeaking the word, prayer, vſe of the Sacraments, yea and all other endeauours ſhould be to pleaſe and obey him; who one day will giue an vpright ſentence vpon them all. Thus the conſideration of the iudgement to come, made the Apoſtle Paul endeauour to approoue all the actions of his life vnto God, 2. Cor. 5. 11. So Peter 2. Epiſt. 3. 11. ſeeing all theſe things ſhall be diſſolued, what manner of men ought we to be in holy conuerſation and godlineſſe, looking for the haſting vnto the comming of the day of the Lord?

We muſt be condemned by ourſelues or by the Lord.

The ſpeciall iudgement is laid downe in the next words, and they containe two things: firſt, A the perſons who ſhall be iudged; All the vngodly among them. Secondly, the manner of their iudgement in the world, rebuke or conuince. The perſons are ſet out by their propertie of vngodlineſſe, which is a ſinne directly againſt God; and the vngodly man is he who denieth God the honour due vnto him: of whome (that we might the better know him) the Scripture hath giuen fiue notes or properties: as firſt, that he knoweth not, or acknowledgeth not the true God aright according to his word. Pſal. 10. 4. All their thoughts be that, there is no God; that is, they acknowledge him not, in his preſence, prouidence, iuſtice, or mercie. Secondly, he ſubiecteth not his bodie, ſoule, and conſcience to the laws of God in all things: but taketh libertie B to liue as he liſt. Iob 21. 14. They ſay to the Almightie, Depart from us, we will none of thy waies. Pſal. 50. 16. They hate to be reformed. Thirdly, in heart and life he dependeth not himſelfe vpon the wil, power, prouidence, and good pleaſure of God; but on ſomething out of God in himſelfe, or ſome other creature: Abac. 2. 4. whereas the iuſt man liueth by faith, the wicked man exalteth himſelfe, and is puffed vp as bearing himſelfe vpon ſomething beſides the Creator. Fourthly, he worſhippeth not from his heart the true God, he lifteth not vp his ſoule in prayer, or thankſgiuing: but as a beaſt receiueth bleſſings contenting himſelfe within himſelfe, neuer looking higher to the hand reaching C them out vnto him. Iob 21. 15. Who is the Almightie that we ſhould ſerue him, and what profit is it to call vpon him? Pſal. 14. He neuer calleth vpon God. Fifthly, he hateth the Church and people of God, and when occaſion ſhall ſerue, he will teſtifie it by perſecuting the ſame. For he that loueth not God, loueth not his adherents. Pſal. 44. 5. Thy ſmite downe thy people, O Lord, and trouble thine heritage. Theſe be the notes of them againſt whome ſentence ſhall paſſe when they ſhall be iudged: from whence two duties are to be learned. Firſt, to denie all vngodlines, and to put farre from vs all the properties thereof. Secondly, to exerciſe our ſelues vnto godlines and all the duties thereof: as firſt to learne to know God aright, both in his owne attributes, and alſo in his affection to vs ward, neuer quieting our ſelues till we know him to D be our Father, our Redeemer, our Sanctifier: and this knowledge of him is life eternall. Secondly, to ſubiect our ſelues, our liues, wills, affections, ſpeeches, and actions, to all his lawes: for to ſhake off the yoke of obedience to any part of his word is rebellion. Thirdly, to goe out of our ſelues, as beeing nothing in our ſelues; and in our hearts depend vpon the will & good pleaſure of God, liuing by faith, making him our rocke, our tower, our fortreſſe, and ſtrong defence in all eſtates, yea in life and in death our aduantage. Fourthly, to worſhip him not onely outwardly (as hypocrites may doe) but to ſerue him in our ſpirits, giuing him our whole hearts. Fifthly, to loue all men, but eſpecially Gods Saints, and the houſhold of faith; affecting the particular congregations; & chiefly delighting in the Saints vpon earth that excell in vertue. Thus walking with God, as Enoch did, we ſhall eſcape this moſt wofull ſentence which ſhal be pronounced againſt the vngodly ones of the earth.

The ſecond thing in this ſpeciall iudgement is the manner of it, in the word rebuke.] God rebuketh two waies: firſt in mercie, when as in iuſtice he remembreth mercie, Hab. 3. Secondly in iuſtice, yea in anger and wrath: Pſal. 6. 1. O Lord rebuke me not in thy wrath: and this latter is here meant. So as thus much is here ſignified, that the Lord will powre out his fury, and his wrathfull indignation vpon all the vngodly of the earth. This wrathfull rebuke hath two parts: firſt, the conuicting of the vngodly in their own conſciences, of all their wicked thoughts, words and workes, and this the word alſo ſignifieth, Reu. 20. The bookes ſhall be opened, and all mens ſinnes ſhall be laid open: that is, they ſhall be ſo diſcouered, as they (beeing conuinced) ſhall not be able to denie them. Secondly, the puniſhment that ſhal follow that conuiction. So Dauid prayeth, Pſal. 6. Neither chaſtice me in thy heauie diſpleaſure.

Doct. Hence we learne that all things are fully and perfectly knowne vnto God; and all things are open before him: Heb. 4. 13. yea they are naked, and as it were vnquartered before his eyes: for the Apoſtle alludeth to the cutting vp of a beaſt, or the anatomizing of the creature, wherein men are curious to finde out euery little veine or muskle, though they lie neuer ſo cloſe: euen ſo the Lord ſhall finde out euery tranſgreſſion, although neuer ſo ſecretly conceiued and concealed, and that in ſuch ſort as he ſhall conuince the vngodly man, whoſe mouth ſhall be ſhut ſo ſoone as euer his booke is open: which ſhould teach vs, firſt, in matter of religion to auoide all diſſembling and hypocriſie. Be that in deede what thou ſeemeſt to be: for though thou mayeſt delude men, thou canſt not deceiue the Almightie, but he ſhall conuince thee. Secondly, let thy dealing before men be plaine, ſimple, without fraud, couin or deceit; for though thou maiſt gloſe with men, who cannot conuince thee, yet the righteous Lord ſhall rebuke thee for want of righteouſneſſe in thy dealings. Thirdly, humble thy ſelfe before God alwaies for all thy knowne ſinnes; yea and for vnknowne ſinnes alſo: for though they be vnknowne to thy ſelfe, yet they are knowne vnto him, who will one day conuince thee of them all, except thou preuent him by thy repentance.

Be as thou ſeemeſt, or ſeeme as thou art.

The third thing propounded in the teſtimony, is the cauſe of the iudgement in theſe words: Of all their wicked deeds which they haue vngodlily committed, and of all their cruell ſpeakings, which wicked ſinners haue ſpoken againſt him.] The cauſe is two-fold, the deedes and wordes of men: the deedes are diſtributed, firſt, by the propertie of them, beeing works of vngodlineſſe. Secondly, by the manner of performing them, they are vngodlily committed. By vngodly workes are meant all ſinnes againſt any part of the law of god, whether in the firſt, or ſecond Table: for euery ſinne (though it be directly againſt man) hath in it a defect, and a withdrawing of ſome duty due to God. Secondly, for the manner, theſe works beeing vngodly and failing againſt the law are done after an vngodly manner: and that worke is done vngodlily which proceedeth from an vnrepentant heart, and a minde addicted and deuoted to vngodlineſſe, which is knowne and diſcerned to be ſuch a one by three notes: firſt, becauſe it purpoſeth to commit ſinne before hand. Secondly, in the committing of ſinne it is delighted and taketh pleaſure in it. Thirdly, after ſinne it walketh in the ſame courſe, yea runneth on in the ſame waies without remorſe or repentance: and this clauſe ſeemeth to be added to put a difference betweene the godly and wicked, who both of them may commit vngodlineſſe, and be found in vngodly actions; but not both committing them in an vngodly manner: for the childe of God before he ſinne he purpoſeth it not, yea he hath a purpoſe not to ſinne; ſo as he may ſay it is not onely beſides but againſt his purpoſe. Secondly, in his ſinne he hath a reſiſting, and ſtrife againſt it, and is not wholly ſwallowed vp in the pleaſure of it. Thirdly, he lieth not in it, but reneweth and recouereth himſelfe againe by faith and repentance: ſo as though he doe wickedneſſe, yet he doth it not wickedly, but weakly, beeing ouercome and foyled by corruption. And hence is it that this wicked worke beeing found in the hands of Gods children, though it deſerue death: yet through grace it ſhall be no cauſe of his condemnation.

Notes of an vngodly & vnrepentant heart.

Doct. The principall cauſe of condemnation is not this or that ſinne, but the lying and trading therein, which argueth an vngodly heart: to commit vngodlineſſe indeede, maketh men ſubiect to condemnation; but to commit it vngodlily this bringeth ſwift iudgement. Secondly, a wicked man ſinneth not of infirmitie, for he committeth vngodlines in an vngodly manner, and tradeth in wickedneſſe, wickedly: the ſinnes of infirmitie befall not the graceleſſe ſinner, but the regenerate onely, in whom frailtie faileth grace for a time: the drunkard may excuſe himſelfe and ſay his ſinne is his infirmitie; yet is it not, but a wickedneſſe, wickedly committed: ſo of the couetous perſon and other ſinners. Thirdly, marke Gods great mercie with much thankfulnes: in that the regenerate doing wicked actions aſwell as the wicked, are not condemned for them as the wicked are: For there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Ieſus, Rom. 8. 1.

The godly commit vngodlines, but not vngodlily as the wicked.

. The ſecond cauſe of the iudgement is the ſpeeches of the wicked, ſet out by two properties: firſt, they are cruell: ſecondly, they are vttered againſt God. An example of ſuch ſpeech we haue in Lamech, Gen. 4. Whoſoeuer killeth Caine ſhall be reuenged ſeuen fold: but whoſoeuer offendeth me, I will reuenge my ſelfe ſeuentie times ſeauen fold; a cruell and bloodie ſpeech vanting it ſelfe euen againſt God himſelfe.

Vſe. Firſt, hence it followeth that wicked words and works are cauſes of iuſt condemnation. Ob. Then good words and works are cauſes of ſaluation. Anſ. The reaſon is not good: for wicked mens ſinnes be perfectly wicked, but the actions of the regenerate are not perfectly good. Secondly, we are hence to bewaile the vngodly words and workes that haue paſſed vs, which binde vs ouer to condemnation, and aboue all things in the world to ſue to God by prayer for pardon: yea to giue our ſelues no reſt till we haue within vs the witneſſe of Gods ſpirit, witneſſing to our ſpirits that we are graciouſly accepted, and that our vngodly workes are remooued out of his ſight. Thirdly, we are to marke thoſe perſons whoſe liues and mouths abound with vngodlineſſe, and communicate not with ſuch; but mourne for them as Lot did, whoſe righteous ſoule was vexed, not onely in ſeeing the wicked works, but alſo in hearing the filthy ſpeeches of the vncleane Sodomites. My teares (ſaith Dauid) haue beene my meate day and night, while they daily ſay vnto me, where is thy God? Fourthly, our duty is to auoid euery wicked way and word, and endeauour to haue our ſpeech ſeaſoned with ſalt, and miniſtring grace to the hearers. Fifthly, conſider hence what we in this land may iuſtly be afraid of, ſeeing vngodlineſſe ſo exceedingly aboundeth, godlineſſe decreaſeth: the godly are taken away, the wicked reproach thoſe that are left euen for religions ſake, & for ſuch religious practiſes as ſtand both by Gods law & the laws of the land, by ſuch ſpeeches as theſe: Thou art one that runnes to ſermons; doeſt thou learne this or that there? thou art ful of the holy Ghoſt, the Deuill is within thee: and ſuch like moſt wretched and vngodly ſpeeches, iuſtly deſeruing fearefull iudgements: The wickedneſſe of inhabitants ouerturne whole kingdomes, Prou. 28. 2. It behooues vs then to betake our ſelues to ſpeedie repentance; leaſt ſpeedie vengeance ouertake vs vnawares.

V. 16. Theſe are murmurers, complainers, walking after their owne luſtes, whoſe mouthes ſpeake proud things: hauing mens perſons in admiration becauſe of aduantage.

In this verſe the Apoſtle returneth againe to his former purpoſe, and ſtill continueth the rehearſal of the ſinnes and vices of theſe falſe teachers, againſt whom he writeth; and againſt whom he hath alreadie alledged twelue ſeuerall ſinnes; and in this verſe addeth ſixe more, of which ſome notwithſtanding haue beene touched in the ſinnes formerly condemned.Herein we firſt ſhew the nature of the vices themſelues, and ſecondly lay down the contrary duties ſo far as they ſhall concerne vs.

Theſe are murmurers] By murmuring we are to vnderſtand a certaine fruite of impatience, whereby men ſhew themſelues diſpleaſed with the worke of Gods prouidence,eſpecially when his hand is vpon them, and they are vnder the croſſe. Example whereof we haue in the Iſraelites, who when Moſes had brought them out of Egypt,they murmured and repined that they where fed with Manna only, and wanted their fleſh-pots which they had in Egypt: ſee Deut. 1. 26,27. where this ſinne is called rebellion againſt God; and therefore is no ſmall ſinne. For auoyding and preuenting of which ſinne, wee muſt learne two duties: firſt in ſilence and ſubiection to calme and quiet our hearts in the reuelled will of God vpon vs, though therein our owne wills be croſſed. Pſal. 4.4. Examine your ſelues, and be ſtill. Pſal. 37.7. Be ſilent vnto God, and waite on the Lord. Which is all one as if he had plainly ſaid: Let Gods will be your will alſo. Iſa.30.15. In quietneſſe and confidence ſhall be your ſtrength. Herein our ſtrength muſt be exerciſed, not in reſiſting, but enduring the hand of God. Secondly, we muſt ſhew our ſelues truly thankfull to God in all things befalling vs: yea euen in euill things, which otherwiſe may be occaſionings of murmuring. Iob 1. The Lord hath giuen, and the Lord hath taken, bleſſed be his name. Obiect. But this may ſeeme harſh and contrarie to reaſon, to bleſſe God for croſſes. Anſ. Not a whit, if we conceiue that according to our deſerts, he might plunge vs into the pit of hell: and therefore if he mitigate of that iuſtice, and remember his mercie more eaſily correcting vs, herein all the praiſe of mercie is due vnto him.

Complainers] So called for two cauſes: firſt, becauſe they are diſcontented with their preſent outward eſtate wherein God hath placed them; the portion that God hath allotted them liketh them not; they are diſpleaſed that they are not as others be, and that they haue not as others haue. Secondly, becauſe vpon the frowardnes of their diſpoſition they are eaſily diſpleaſed,and hard to pleaſe againe, ſoone incenſed, and not ſo ſoone ſatisfied; and thereupon are commonly cõplaining of the hard meaſure they ſeeme to receiue at mens hands. But eſpecially they are ſo called in reſpect of the former reaſon. This is not the ſinne of that age onely, neither onely of thoſe perſons, but is euen a cõmon ſinne of our times, and that of the richer ſort: for theſe are the pooreſt amongſt men, euer whining, and complaining that their ſtate is not ſo good as others, nor as they would haue it: and although they know (as we ſay) no ende of their wealth, yet know they no ende of their wiſhings and deſires. We on the contrary are hence to learne, firſt, to thinke well and ſpeake well of that eſtate in which God in his prouidence hath ſetled vs,be it better or worſe. Phil.4.11. In what eſtate ſoeuer, I haue learned therewith to be contented. Heb. 13. 5. Be content with that you haue. Firſt, carrie not couetous, aſpiring,and malicious mindes and affections: but if thou muſt needs be deſiring,ſatisfie thy ſelfe with Iacobs deſire: Onely the Lord be with me, and if he giue me foode and raiment in this my iourney, it is ſufficient. Secondly, our hearts muſt be ſet to obey God euen in pouertie and affliction, and beare aduerſitie with an equall and moderate mind,our obedience muſt not onely be actiue in doing; but paſſiue alſo in ſuffering his will. Phil. 4. 12. I can want and abound; I can doe all things through Chriſt that ſtrengtheneth me. Heb. 10. 34. The faithfull could with ioy ſuffer the ſpoyling of their goods. Thirdly, we muſt endeauour to ſhewe all meeknes to all men vpon all occaſions,putting off all moroſitie,waiwardneſſe,and difficultie to be ſatisfied and appeaſed. Chriſts voice was not lift vp in the ſtreets, he indured all wrongs, forgaue all iniuries; and all the members of his bodie put off likewiſe their woluiſh diſpoſitiõs: they ceaſe to be Tigers, Lions, Cockatriſes, and become Kids, Lambes, little children, eaſie to be handled, hardly offended, and quickly pleaſed: which diſpoſition we muſt put vpon vs.

Gods will muſt be obeyed, in beeing both done and ſuffered of vs.

Iſa.11.16.

The third ſinne; [walking after their owne luſts] is fitly expounded in Eccleſ. 11. 9. where the young man is ironically willed to walke in the waies of his owne heart, and in the ſight of his owne eyes, &c. euen ſo theſe men liue in their ſinnes, according to the leading and luſting of their owne corrupted hearts: which ſinne is before in the fourth verſe touched; and ſomewhat alſo is futher to be ſpoken of it in the reſt of the Epiſtle. Our contrary dutie is twofolde: firſt, if at any time by frailtie we fall into any ſinne, neuer to goe on in the ſame, but breake it off, and returne vnto God: for to walke after his owne hearts luſts, is a note of a wicked perſon and an enemie of God. Pſal.68. 21. Surely, God will wound the head of his enemies, and the hairie pate of him that walketh on in ſinne. Secondly, we are to frame our liues cleane againſt the luſts and inclinations of our own hearts; waging battell continually againſt them,euer croſſing and thawrting them: Ro. 13. 14. Take no thought to fulfil the luſts of the fleſh. Gal. 3. They that are Chriſts haue crucified the fleſh, with the luſts threreof: for whoſoeuer beleeueth truly the pardon of his ſinnes by Chriſts death, cãnot but mortifie the luſts of his wicked heart; beſides that the whole courſe of Chriſtianitie is nothing elſe but a continual conuerſien and turning vnto God.

The fourth ſinne. Whoſe mouthes ſpeake proud or ſwelling things,] that is, they boaſt themſelues of knowledge, holines, and things not to be found in them. The ſame with the deuils ſinne, Luk. 4. All this will I giue thee, for they are mine, and I giue them to whom I will: wherein he ſheweth himſelfe the father of lying and boaſting. It is noted alſo to be the propertie of Antichriſt, as to whome was giuen a mouth which ſpake great things and blaſphemies, Reuel. 13. 5. which was ment of the Emperour indeede, but ſo as the ſecond beaſt, which is that Antichriſt, ſhould doe all things which the firſt beaſt could doe before him, ver. 12. It is alſo the noted vice of all heretikes and ſeducers, 2. Cor. 10. 12. to exalt and praiſe themſelues. The contrary duties are firſt, In common ſpeech neither to praiſe, nor diſpraiſe our ſelues, for vanitie lurketh in both: beſides that modeſtie will not ſuffer the former; and the latter is to occaſion others to praiſe vs, which is but vanitie. Secondly when in ſpeech we compare our ſelues with others our equalls, we muſt euer thinke and ſpeake better of them then our ſelues. Phil. 2. 3. Let euery man eſteeme other better then himſelfe. Paul comparing himſelfe with the Apoſtles, ſaid he was the leaſt of them all; becauſe he had beene a perſecutor, 1. Cor. 15. 9. Thirdly, if any ſpeake of his owne want, when iuſt occaſion is offered, he muſt ſpeake euen the moſt againſt himſelfe. As Paul that he was the head and chiefe of all ſinners. Fourthly, if a man vpon iuſt occaſion be mooued to commend himſelfe, firſt he muſt doe it in all humilitie and modeſtie: ſo Paul ſpeaketh of himſelfe in another perſon: 1. Cor. 12. 1. I knewe a man in Chriſt which was taken vp into Paradiſe, &c. And in nothing was I inferiour vnto the very chiefe Apoſtles, though I be nothing, verſ. 11.

The fifth ſinne. Hauing mens perſons in admiration.] The word perſon in Scripture ſignifieth the face and outward appearance of a man, and conſequently the things belonging vnto the perſon, as riches, honours, dignities, for the which theſe falſe teachers haue men in admiration. Queſt. Is it not lawfull to admire a Prince, or other Potentates at all? Anſw. Yes: but when men admire them onely for their perſon, riches, honours, nobilitie, without reſpect of the feare of God, or true vertue, this is vnlawfull, and the ſinne of theſe men: wherein is alſo included the contempt of the religious poore, yea and alſo of the rich themſelues, if they truely feare God. Iam. 2. 1. My brethren, haue not the faith of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt in reſpect of perſons: teaching vs that it will not ſtand with true Religion, nor with the faith of Chriſt to honour men onely becauſe they are rich or noble.

A great miſerie of great men to be moſt amired, but leaſt admoniſhed.

Firſt, note here that no man carrieth ſo baſe a minde, and ſuch ſlauiſh affections, as the proud ambitious perſon; he magnifieth the great man, and is ſeruilly addicted vnto him euen for outward reſpects, not eſteeming him for that which is indeede worthie to be reſpected. Secondly, the condition of great men (for the moſt part) is miſerable, who haue many to admire them, but fewe to admoniſh them: rich men are admired for wiſedome, whereas the ſame men, if they were poore, would carrie away no praiſe thereof. Ahab had foure hundred falſe prophets who thus admired his perſon, but onely one Micha who faithfully admoniſhed him. Thirdly, our dutie is to honour them that feare God, rich or poore, high or low: it beeing a note of a child of God to contemne a vile perſon, that is a wretched ſinner, but to honour them that feare the Lord, bee they neuer ſo baſe: and yet the honourable much more, if they be found in the waies of religion.

Pſal. 15. 4.

The ſixth ſinne. Becauſe of aduantage.] That is, for profits ſake: where their couetouſneſſe, which before was touched, is here againe taxed: the effect of which affection is to blind the minde that it cannot iudge aright of perſons or things: it maketh a man account an enemie of God rightly honourable, and to deeme the things below of higheſt regard. Let vs weede out of our hearts this bitter roote of couetouſneſſe, which otherwiſe will ſo blind vs, as wee cannot truly diſcerne the people and things of God, but take Egyptians for Iſraelites, and accept of the red pottage in ſtead of the bleſſing.

V. 27. But, ye beloued, remember the words which were ſpoken before of the Apoſtles of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

In theſe words the Apoſtle goeth about to anſwer an obiection that might be made by the Church after this manner: We cannot bee reſolued that theſe men againſt whom ye write, are ſo vngodly as you would make them: The anſwer whereto is framed in the 17. 18. and 19. verſes. The effect of which is, that in the laſt times there ſhall be mockers, and theſe be no other then the men of whom he writeth: & leaſt they ſhould yet doubt of the truth of that hee ſpake, hee bringeth in the teſtimonie of the Apoſtles in the confirmation of the ſame: ſo as his doctrine was no other then that which was before by them deliuered. Where three things are to be conſidered; firſt, a preface to the teſtimonie, verſ. 17. Secondly, the teſtimonie it ſelfe, v. 18. Thirdly, the amplifying of it, v. 19.

For the Preface. But, yee beloued, remember &c.] Firſt, the Apoſtle Iude ſetteth out his own dutie and practiſe, in that whatſoeuer he ſpeaketh it proceedeth of loue: & he is not caried away in ſpeaking or writing with ſiniſter affections; and therefore hee calleth them Beloued. This ought to be the practiſe of all Teachers, who out of their inward loue to Gods people committed vnto them, are to vtter whatſoeuer they teach: yea and no man in any other calling may lay aſide this affection in the diſcharge of the duties thereof, ſeeing it is the ende of all the Commandements.

In the ſecond word remember] is laid downe the dutie of the Church and faithfull people of God, which is to remember the words ſpoken by the Apoſtles of the Lord Ieſus Chriſt. A

Which we alſo in this age are to be exhorted vnto for very weighty reaſons: firſt, it is a notable remedie againſt all ſinne, and eſpecially the forenamed ſinnes: Pſal. 116. 11. In my haſte I ſaid all men are liars; that is, when I rememberd not the word of God: but forgat my own duty, and was caried away with the ſtreame of my owne affections againſt faith, then I failed and was foiled. Pſal. 119. I haue hid thy teſtimonies in my heart, that I ſhould not offend againſt thee. Secondly, this remembrance is a notable remedie againſt hereſies, and ſchiſmes, and all falſe doctrines, and is of much vſe in theſe our daies, wherein we are in danger to be ſeduced, partly B by Athieſts, partly by Papiſts, and partly by carnall Goſpellers; againſt all whom we had need to be well fenced, and armed by the reading, knowing, beleeuing, and remembring the words of the Prophets and Apoſtles, which only are as Dauids ſling to ouerthrow the great Goliahs. Thirdly, it is an excellent meanes to ſettle the conſcience in the truth by perſwading the ſame: and the rather to be enforced, becauſe many alleadge that there are ſo many Religions and opinions, that they will be of none, for they know not which to betake themſelues vnto. But if theſe were diligent in the words of the Prophets and Apoſtles, in reading, ſearching and ſifting out the truth in humilitie, they ſhould find wherein to ſettle themſelues. C

Secondly, by his ſecond word all teachers are to take notice of their dutie, which is to whet the word of the Apoſtles vpon the harts, minds, and memories of their hearers, ſo as they may learne and remember them: and the rather becauſe in former ages religion was deſtroyed, and ſuperſtition preuailed, becauſe that men laid away the Scriptures out of their hands, and betooke themſelues to the expoſition of other mens writings; and to gloſſe vpon the ſayings of their anceſtors: whereby they brought a black darknes ouer theſe parts of the world. The Prophets and Apoſtles giue another direction. Malachy the laſt of the Prophets referreth vs vnto Moſes and the former Prophets; and Iude the laſt of the Apoſtles vnto former Apoſtles, D ſhewing what ought to be the ſcope of all teachers that would follow their ſteps.

Thirdly, hence all Students of Diuinitie are taught what they muſt moſt remember, namely the words and writings of the Apoſtles: for theſe are the key of the olde Teſtament and of the whole Scripture; which dutie if it were well obſerued, Poperie, ſuperſtition, and Atheiſme could not ſo farre preuaile, but fall downe to the ground, as Dagon before the Arke.

Thirdly, he nameth the authors of the teſtimonie, who were the Apoſtles of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, implying their authoritie; and taking it for granted, that whatſoeuer they ſpake or writ muſt be receiued as an infallible truth, and may not be contradicted. Now the better to know both what the Apoſtles were, and what this Authoritie is, conſider three points; firſt, their caling, and the greatnes thereof; They were called by Chriſts owne mouth, Ioh. 20. 21. As the father ſent me, ſo I ſend you: by which compariſon he deſigneth them to a particular and weighty calling, ſtanding in theſe points: firſt, as Chriſt was immediately called by the Father, ſo were the Apoſtles immediately called by himſelfe. Secondly, as Chriſt was ſent from the Father to preach to the whole world, beeing the great Prophet and Doctor of his Church; ſo Chriſt ſendeth them into the whole world, for the whole world was their charge. Thirdly, as Chriſt was ſent to reueile his Fathers will, which before was hid to the greateſt part of the world; ſo they were ſent by Chriſt to reueile the Fathers will, partly in making things more fully knowne, which were before but darly ſhadowed: and partly in foretelling things to come, they all being Euangelicall Prophets. In theſe three ſtandeth that compariſon: in regard of which manner of their ſending they are aboue euen the Angels themſelues, nay the Angels were as it were but their ſchollers. Eph. 3. 10. Now vnto principalities and powers in heauenly places is made knowne by the Church the manifold wiſdome of God, that is, by the miniſtrie of the Apoſtles, the myſteries of God, concerning mans redemption, haue bin reuiciled to the Angels themſelues.

Secondly, conſider their Authoritie; which was moſt authenticall, ſeeing that neither in teaching or writing they could erre, beeing ſpecially priuiledged therefrom: Matth. 10. 19. It ſhall be giuen you in that howre what ye ſhall ſay. The peculiar promiſe of direction belonging to the Apoſtles is recorded in Ioh. 16. 13. The ſpirit of truth ſhall leade you into all truth; in which regard they were bold to ioyne themſelues with the holy Ghoſt. Act.15.28. It ſeemeth good to the holy Ghoſt and vs, namely, in ordering the Church affaires: yet here that diſtinction which is falſely applied to the Pope, is true in the Apoſtles, by reaſon of this aſſiſtance; that as they were priuate men, and in other cauſes they might, and did erre, but not as Apoſtles in performing their office Apoſtolicall.

Thirdly, their worke or office, they were Maſter builders of the Church of the new Teſtament: yea founders thereof, both by teaching doctrines, and informing the manners of men: farre paſſing all Euangeliſts, Paſtors, Teachers, or ordinarie Miniſters ſince their daies. 1. Cor. 3. 10. As a skilfull Maſter builder, I haue laid the foundation, and another buildeth thereon. For the furthering of which great work in their hands, they had giuen them firſt a power to worke miracles for the confirming of their doctrine. Secondly, of giuing the holy Ghoſt by impoſition of hands. Thirdly, an Apoſtolicall rod to ſtrike, and correct obſtinate offenders; by the which Peter ſmote Ananias and Saphira with preſent death: and Paul Elymas with blindnes.

Vſe. Marke that now the Pope claiming authoritie Apoſtolicall from Peter; it is but a falſe challenge: for that authoritie ceaſed with that office, and ſerued onely to lay the foundations of the Church withall, beeing both extraordinarie as the calling was: and perſonall, ceaſing with the perſons of the Apoſtles. So as if the Pope ſucceeded Peter in any thing, it is in the denying of Chriſt: it cannot be in founding the Church, which was done to his hand ſo many hundred yeares before him.

v. 18. How that they tolde you that there ſhould bee mockers in the laſt time, which ſhould walke after their owne vngodly luſts.

This verſe containeth the teſtimonie it ſelfe, the preface of which was laid downe in the former: wherein two things are to be noted: firſt, the time when wicked men ſhall abound in the Church: in the laſt time.] Secondly, what manner of perſons they are; namly, deſcribed by two properties: firſt, they are mockers: ſecondly, fleſhly.

For the time: It is called the laſt time: which is the time from the Aſcenſion of Chriſt vnto the ende of the world. It may be asked, how could this be called the laſt time, ſeeing it is ſixteene hundred yeares ago? Anſ. It is ſo called for two cauſes: firſt, becauſe it goeth next before the end of the world, and ſhall be cloſed vp of the laſt day; 1. Cor. 10. 11. To admoniſh vs vpon whome the ends of the world are come. Secondly, in regard of former times, according to the ſeuerall ages of it, in which God altered the condition of his Church, and renewed his couenant from time to time vnto the ſame: as firſt plighting it with Adam, and afterward renewing it to Noah: thirdly to Abraham often repeating it: fourthly, to Dauid: fifthly, at the returne out of the Babyloniſh captiuitie: ſixthly, at the comming of Chriſt. But now Chriſt beeing come, and that fulneſſe of time wherein the former prophecies are fulfilled and accompliſhed, the ſhadowes and ceremonies are aboliſhed, and the new couenant of grace eſtabliſhed; there remaines no renuing thereof, neither any other alteration of it, but as Chriſt hath already appeared in his humilitie by his firſt comming; ſo nothing is to bee expected now but his ſecond comming in glorie: and this is the proper and principall cauſe why this is called the laſt time.

Secondly, concerning the perſons of the vngodly men they are deſcribed, firſt to be mockers. Theſe are deſcribed by Peter, 2. Epiſtle. 3. 3. In the laſt times ſhall come mockers, which A will walke after their luſts, and ſay, Where is the promiſe of his comming: that is, thoſe that ſhall ſcorne all religion, and make a mocke of God, godlines, and godly men: then which there is not a greater height of wickedneſſe: of whom Salomon ſpeaketh as beeing ſo farre gone, that they are paſt all admonition, and therefore would not haue them admoniſhed; and Dauid maketh this the higheſt degree of a wicked mans proceeding in his ſinne, to ſit him downe in the chaire of ſcorners. Pſal. 1. 1.

Prov. 9. 8.

Vſe. This part of the teſtimonie is moſt truly verified in our age. Firſt, in the Romiſh Church, whoſe religion ſetteth vp a plaine mockerie of God, and of Chriſt, of Scripture and B of true religion. Firſt, for Chriſt they make but a mocke of him; the true Chriſt is a King, and ſo they ſay, but the Pope muſt controule him both in making lawes of his owne to binde the conſcience, as alſo in adding and detracting from Chriſts laws what he will: the true Chriſt is a Sauiour; but they make euery man a ſauiour of himſelfe, by meriting ſaluation: for they teach that Chriſt merited, that we might merit our owne ſaluation: yea the true Chriſt is a mediatour, but yet Saints muſt be interceſſors: and his Mother, whome they intitle the Queene of Heauen, muſt command her ſonne by the right of a Mother, to heare their prayers, and forgiue their ſinnes; what is this but to make his Mother Mediatour in his ſtead? Secondly, as C for the Scriptures, they renounce the originall Bible, and the Greeke and Hebrew text as corrupt, and will admit of none as authenticall, but the Latin tranſlation; yea and of that allow no ſenſe, but that which the Pope authoriſeth, and ſetteth downe: what is this elſe but to make a mockerie of the Scriptures? no Bible, no ſenſe will ſerue, nor muſt ſtand, but the Popiſh ſenſe, which is indeede to reduce all ſcripture to the Popes will and determination.

Popiſh doctrine a mockerie of Chriſtian religion.

Secondly, if we come home to our ſelues, we ſhall finde this Scripture verified among the ſwarmes of Atheiſts, which make but a ſcorne of the word and Religion: tell any man almoſt of his dutie, he will be readie to ſay; How know you theſe to be Moſes writings? and D theſe to be the Apoſtles writings which goe vnder their names, and may not falſehood bee written as well as truth? Theſe are moſt prophane and blaſphemous ſcorners: but ſuch as were prophecied of before by the Apoſtles themſelues.

Againe, among thoſe that profeſſe religion are many ſcorners; that let a man make but a ſhew of goodneſſe, and begin to make conſcience of his way, if he will not blaſpheme and ſweare as he was wont: if he will not drinke with the drunkards: if he refuſe ſuch companie as he conuerſed with before, or will not doe as others doe, he is preſently condemned for a preciſe foole, or with ſuch reprochfull tearmes; how then is not this prediction of the Apoſtle accompliſhed, when euen the performing of morall duties, yea and ſuch as ſtand by the laws of God and the land is ſcoffed at, as a blemiſh? When ſcorners are ſo rife and bolde euen in the face of the Church? when where God hath his little flocke, the Deuill hath a large kingdome? let vs not be offended too much, when we heare and ſee theſe ſcorners: but then acknowledge the accompliſhment of this prophecie, and contrarily loue and reuerence the word of God as a moſt pretious treaſure.

The ſecond ſinne whereby theſe vngodly men are deſcribed, is, that they walke after the luſts of their own hearts, wherein two things are included: firſt, that theſe vngodly men ſhall haue their harts filled with vngodly luſts. Secōdly, that they ſhall walk after theſe luſts. Concerning the former ſundry things are to be known. Firſt, what this luſt or concupiſcence is. Anſ. In the Scripture it is of two ſorts, either originall, or actuall: or it may be conſidered two wayes: firſt, as it is the fountaine or oſpring of all other ſinnes; or ſecondly, as it is a fruite of the corruption of our hearts. The former is an impotencie of the heart, whereby it is inordinatelie diſpoſed to the deſire of this or that euill: of which Iames ſpeaketh, Chap. 2. 14. Euery man when he is tempted, is drawne away by his owne concupiſcence: hence is the whole corruption of the heart, or originall ſinne called luſt, becauſe it principally ſheweth it ſelfe in theſe luſts. The latter is actuall luſt, that is, euery inordinate and euill motion of the inner man againſt the lawe of God, which proceedeth as a branch or fruit from the former roote. Rom.6.12. Let not ſinne raigne in your mortall bodies, that ye ſhould obey it in the luſts of it: where, by luſts, are meant the flames and motions of luſts ſpringing from the former fountaine. This luſt I call firſt an inordinate motion, to diſtinguiſh it firſt from a holy luſting in the regenerate. Dauid luſted after and deſired the commandements of God, yea aboue gold and ſiluer; and there is a luſt of the ſpirit againſt the fleſh, as well as of the fleſh againſt the ſpirit. Secondly, from a naturall luſting, which is an appetite after meate, drinke, &c. which in it ſelfe is no ſinne. Lazarus deſired without ſinne the crummes vnder Diues his table. Theſe luſts then are not to be condemned, but onely luſts inordinate. Secondly, I ſay euery euill motion; becauſe luſt in the Scripture comprehendeth all thoughts and motions againſt Gods law, ſo is the cōmandement to be vnderſtood: Thou ſhalt not luſt. Eph.2.3. Among whom alſo we had our conuerſation in times paſt in the luſts of the fleſh, in fulfilling the will of the fleſh, and of the minde. Where the Apoſtle inlargeth it vnto al motions, inclinations, paſſions, and perturbations of the heart, minde, will, or affections: ſo farre as they are not directed by the lawe of God. This text muſt be vnderſtood of actuall luſt: of which there be two degrees: for ſometime it is ſudden, and ſometimes voluntary; the former is the firſt motion of the minde conceiued, but without conſent. The latter is the motion conceiued, but with conſent, purpoſe, and deliberation; which may be made plaine in this ſimilitude. The eye is ſometimes caſt vpon an obiect on a ſudden, without any purpoſe or intention of the mind: but ſometimes purpoſely and ſteadily vpon the ſame: and as in the twinkling of the eye it is often ſhut without thought or purpoſe; but ſometimes againe of purpoſe and deliberation to preuent ſome hurt: ſo is it in the minde; the heart is a furnace of luſt, the flames whereof ariſe ſometimes vpon the ſudden, and ſometimes vpon leiſure and deliberation; both theſe degrees muſt here be vnderſtood. Concerning which luſts there be three things further here to be conſidered: Firſt, the qualitie and nature of theſe luſts; in that they are ſaid to be vngodly luſts: ſuch as their roote is, ſuch are the branches; and therefore are in their nature properly ſinnes, yea principall and maſter ſinnes, yea and ſinning ſinnes, cauſing men to goe on in ſinne. Queſt. If they be ſinnes, what Commandement of the tenne condemneth them? Anſ. Sudden luſt before conſent of will is condemned in the tenth: but voluntarie with conſent is condemned in all the nine former. If this diſtinction be not held, we cannot make tenne Commandements. For in all the Commandements luſt is forbidden; neceſſarie then it is that luſt ſhould be thus diſtinguiſhed, and alſo referred, as we haue ſaide. Queſt. Some may aske: In what Commandement is originall ſinne condemned? Anſ. Some ſay it is forbidden in the whole law which is not vntrue; but yet it ſeemeth to be directly condemned in the firſt and laſt Commandements: for theſe two concerne properly, the heart of man: the firſt reſpecting the heart directly ſo farre as it concerneth God: the laſt ſo farre as it concerneth man, whether himſelfe, or others.

Gal.5.17.

Vſe. This teacheth vs to deteſt the Popiſh error, which teacheth vs that inordinat luſts be no ſinnes, if conſent of will be not added; but that is falſe; for if they be cōceiued in the mind, they are the ſinnes of the minde, condemned in the tenth Commandement. Ob. But they ſay, there can be no ſinne properly produced without conſent of will. Anſ. In ciuill matters the reaſon is good, that none can be acceſſarie vnto ſinne, vnleſſe conſent of will be added: but in diuine matters, and in the Court of Conſcience it is farre otherwiſe.

Secondly, in the luſts note the propertie of them, in theſe words; Which walk after; their propertie is to raigne in men, and to cauſe men to giue attendance vpon them; yea and to walk after them. Where they are not reſiſted and repreſſed, they make that man a vaſſall and ſlaue vnto them. Rom. 6. Let not ſinne raigne in your mortall bodie, to obey the luſts of it. Where the Apoſtle inſinuateth ſo much that they force and compell men to the obedience of them, the whole order and courſe of which regiment is liuely deſcribed, Iam.1.14.15. by fiue degrees:

A firſt, luſt tempteth, and that two wayes: firſt, by withdrawing the heart from God: ſecondly, by inticing and intangling the mind with ſome delight of ſinne. Secondly, luſt conceiueth, when it cauſeth the will to conſent, and reſolue vpon the wickedneſſe thought vpon. Thirdly, it bringeth forth, when it forceth a man to put in execution the things conſented vnto and reſolued vpon. Fourthly, it perfecteth the birth of ſinne, vrging a man to adde ſinne vnto ſinne, vntill he come to a cuſtome, which is a ripeneſſe and perfection in ſinning. Fiftly, it bringeth forth death, that is, euerlaſting vengeance and deſtruction: in all which he alludeth vnto the beginnings, proceedings, and ende of a man; who after he is paſt his ful ſtrength, decaieth againe, and dieth: by theſe degrees the luſts B of the heart riſe vnto this raigne and regiment in the heart of euery wicked and naturall man, where grace ouercommeth not nature.

Thirdly, obſerue the number of theſe luſts. After vngodly luſts.] Where he ſpeaketh in the plurall number as of many: for originall concupiſcence is the ſeede of all ſinne in euery man: & look how many ſinnes there be in the world, ſo many luſts there are in the harts of men: ſo as ſeeing there is no number of the euills in the world, euen ſo are the luſts of the heart innumerable. Therefore truely may we conclude, that vngodly men haue their hearts filled with vngodly luſts.

The ſecond point in the words is, that theſe C vngodly men ſhall walke after their luſts; which is then done, when men firſt ſuffer thir hearts to be withdrawne from God by euill luſts and motions: ſecondly, giue aſſent thereunto: thirdly, practiſe them: fourthly, keepe a courſe and trade in ſinning, which is the perfection of it. Thus a man denieth the true God, and excludeth him out of his heart, and ſetteth vp the deuill, yea his owne luſts for his God, vnto which he becommeth a ſlaue; ſo as this is no ſmall ſinne.

Doct. Hence note a difference betweene the regenerate and the reprobate: for if the childe of God be enticed and drawne away from God he grieueth for it, and giueth not readie conſent vnto the temptation. Secondly, if through frailD tie he be ouercarried to giue conſent, yet it is not full conſent; but he doth it againſt his will and purpoſe, for his purpoſe is not to ſinne, Thirdly, if he put luſts in execution, he lieth not in them, he will not walke after them; but recouereth himſelfe, becauſe he is incorporated into Chriſt: he hath the roote of grace, which ſhall not vtterly die in him, the ſeede abideth in him which at laſt ſhall ſproute vp to repentance and amendement of life: and hereby may a man knowe whether he be the childe of God or no.

Vſe. Firſt, whereas all men good and bad haue innumerable luſts in them, we are to take notice of the vileneſſe and vncleaneſſe of our nature, which is common to the good and bad, betweene whom there is no difference but by grace: our endeauour muſt be to ſee more and more theſe luſts ſtirring and mooning thẽſelues againſt God and man. Secondly, to mourne and bewaile them. Thirdly, to pray that God would burie them all in the death and graue of his Sonne, that they ſtand not vp in iudgement againſt vs; beeing euery of them ſufficient to procure our eternall deſtruction.

Sinne will dwell in vs while we dwel in the fleſh, but it may not raigne as a commander in vs.

Secondly, we muſt not ſuffer ſinne to raigne in vs, for this is the part of an vngodly perſon: true it is that luſts will be in the heart whilſt a man is in the fleſh: but they muſt be reſiſted, that they may not raigne & rule in the heart. Queſt. How ſhall we keepe vnder the luſts of the heart from raigning ouer vs. Anſw. Seeing ſinne raigneth in the minde by euill thoughts, our thoughts on the contrary muſt be framed according to the word, and ordered by the counſell thereof: according to the Apoſtles aduice, Phil. 4. 8. If any thing be honeſt, vertuous, of good report, we muſt thinke of theſe things. Coloſſ. 3. 16. Let the word of God dwell plentiouſly in you. Againe, luſt raigneth in the memorie, by remembring vanities, wrongs, and wicked ſpeeches and actions: we muſt therefore remember our ſinnes, the number and greatneſſe of them, the curſe of the lawe againſt them, the day of our owne death, and the generall iudgement; the remembrance of which ſhall be able to keep out, or at leaſt to keepe vnder theſe vngodly luſts. Further, ſeeing it raigneth in the affections of pride, reuenge, hatred, &c. we muſt learne the exhortation, Phil. 2. 5. Let the ſame minde be in you that was in Ieſus Chriſt: that looke as Chriſt was moſt milde, meeke, humble, patient, full of loue towards God and man, ſo ought our vnruly affections to be conformed vnto his. And laſtly, ſeeing it raigneth in the bodie by idleneſſe, eaſe, ſleepe in exceſſe, which make the bodie an inſtrument of ſinne, we muſt alwaies diligently inure our ſelues to the duties of our callings; vſing faſting, watching, and prayer: by which meanes well obſerued, the luſts in the heart may ſtill trouble and moleſt vs; but they ſhall not rule and raigne ouer vs.

Vſe. If it be the propertie of a wicked man to followe after vngodly luſts, we ought to purge our ſelues from all the luſts of the fleſh and ſpirit, 2. Cor. 7. 1. leaſt theſe defile the bodies and ſoules in the powers and parts of them: to doe which the better, remember that bleſſed are the pure in heart: ſecondly, to inure our ſelues vnto the feare of God, ſeeing the feare of God is cleane, Pſal. 19. that is, it clenſeth the heart, and breaketh the necke of all noyſome luſts.

v. 19. Theſe are makers of ſects, fleſhly, not hauing the ſpirit.

This verſe containeth the application of the former teſtimonie vnto the particular perſons whome it concerneth: ſetting downe who they be that are ſcorners and followers of their luſts: namely, ſcorners are they that make ſects, ſeparating themſelues from the people of God: and followers of their luſts be thoſe who are fleſhly, and without the ſpirit: which words beeing applied to theſe ſeducers, faſten two ſinnes more vpon them. The firſt whereof is, that they are makers of ſects. The ſecond, that they haue not the ſpirit. For the former, the word ſignifieth a ſingling and ſeparating of thēſelues from the church and people of God, and conſequently the making of ſects to themſelues: neither may this ſeeme ſtraunge that there ſhould be ſuch perſons that make ſuch ſeparation; ſeeing it is the nature of euery ſinner to flie from the preſence of God, as Adam did: and Peter when he had ſeene a part of the glorie of Chriſt, bad him depart from him for he was a ſinner. The prodigall ſonne muſt haue his portion apart, and will not be perſwaded to liue with his father; and euery vngodly man withdraweth himſelfe vnto perdition, Heb.10.38.

Doct. Firſt, it is a great ſinne for a man to ſeparate himſelfe from the aſſemblies of Gods people: becauſe firſt it is a flying from God and his preſence, whoſe face euery one is commanded to ſeeke; ſeeing he preſenteth himſelf in the Word and Sacraments, and whereſoeuer two or three are aſſembled in his name, &c. Secondly, it is a contempt of Gods ordinance, which whoſoeuer deſpiſeth, deſpiſeth God himſelfe. Thirdly, out of the Catholike Church is no ſaluation: the ſaying is true, Whoſoeuer will not haue the Church for his Mother, ſhall not haue God for his Father. Fourthly, the congregations of Gods people on earth are the ſuburbes and gates of the kingdome of heauen; whoſoeuer therefore ſhutteth the gates of this kingdome of grace againſt himſelfe here, ſhall neuer enter into the gates of the kingdome of glorie hereafter.

Vſe. Our dutie hence is, to ioyne our ſelues to the aſſemblies of the faithfull, not forſaking the fellowſhip that we haue among our ſelues, Heb. 10. 25. but keeping the vnitie of the ſpirit in the bond of peace, Eph.4.3. beeing like minded one towards another, Rom.15.5. ſpeaking one thing as thoſe that are knit together in one minde and one iudgement, 1. Cor.1.10. And if we would ſeparate our ſelues, then let vs depart from the Atheiſts and Papiſts in their corrupt doctrines and wicked conuerſation. Secondly, ſuch are iuſtly reprehended who ſeldome come to heare the word, receiue the Sacraments, and to call vpon God in the congregation: for ſo much as they can, they cut themſelues from the kingdome of God, in reiecting the meanes of their ſaluation. Obiect. They alleadge for themſelues, that if they ſhould come, they ſhould heare but a weake man like themſelues ſpeake vnto them; and if Chriſt himſelfe or ſome Angel ſhould preach vnto them, they would heare willingly. Anſw. Lay aſide all diſputing, and yeeld vnto the wiſdome of God, whoſe ordinance it is that men ſhould be taught by men, and not otherwiſe. Obiect. They ſay further, that they haue the Bible, and the Sermons of the Prophets and Apoſtles at home, and none can make better Sermons then they: and againe, that they can get knowledge enough to ſaluation by themſelues: and ſome ſay they haue knowledge ſufficient and neede no more. Anſ. Firſt, Gods ordinance muſt be acknowledged, and reuerenced in the publike Miniſterie, and in the midſt of the aſſemblies: and priuate duties muſt giue place to publike. Secondly, the word is not onely to be known, but affected: nowe although knowledge may be gained priuately, yet the affections muſt be wrought and mooued in the publike Miniſterie. Thirdly, thoſe that knowe the moſt, knowe but in part; and the Miniſtery is inſtituted not onely to initiate and begin men, but to confirme them in grace, and leade them to perfection: for which ende the Lord hath giuen Paſtors and Doctors of the Church to teach men, vntill they come vnto a ripe age in Chriſt, which is not till death.

Now for the further clearing of this point, two queſtions are to be reſolued. 1. Queſt. Seeing it is a ſinne for a man to ſeuer himſelfe from the Church of God; where and what Church is that to which a man may for euer ioyne himſelfe with a good conſcience? Anſ. That people which heare, beleeue, and obey the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles, are the true people and Church of God, vnto which a man may ſafely ioyne himſelf. Diuers notes there be, but the infallible notes of the true Church are, knowledge, faith, and obedience vnto that doctrine; theſe were the notes of the primitiue Church next after Chriſt: Act. 2. 42. Firſt, they continued in the Apoſtles doctrine. Secondly in fellowſhip, wherein the duties of loue are comprehended. Thirdly, in breaking of bread, that is, the adminiſtration of Sacraments; for the celebration of the Supper is put for both. Fourthly, in prayer, that is, inuocation of God, with thankeſgiuing. In that Commiſſion of the Apoſtles giuen for the gathering together of the Church of God, they are enioyned firſt to teach all Nations: that is, to make them Diſciples, namely, by the doctrine Propheticall and Apoſtolicall. Secondly, to baptiſe them, that is to bring & admit them into the houſe of God. Thirdly, to teach them to performe all things which they were commanded. In which Commiſſion two of theſe notes are expreſſed. Epheſ. 2. 19. The Church is founded vpon the doctrine of the prophets and Apoſtles. Ioh. 8. 31. If yee abide in my word, ye are truly my diſciples. Ioh. 10. 27. My ſheepe heare my voyce and followe mee. Pſal. 147. 19. He ſheweth his lawes to Iaacob, and his ſtatutes to Iſrael, he dealeth not ſo with euery nation. Hence we note, that we may not ioyne our ſelues with the Iewes or Turkes, who renounce the words of the Prophets and Apoſtles: neither yet with the Papiſts; for though in word and ſpeech they holde this word, yet indeed and in the ſenſe they corrupt it, euen in the foundation.

Whome we may not ſeparate from in publike aſſemblies, we need not priuately conuerſe with.

The ſecond queſtion. But what if there be errors in the church, or things amiſſe; may we not then ſeparate our ſelues? Anſ. Things that may be amiſſe in the Church muſt be diſtinguiſhed: for ſome faults concerne the matter of religion: ſome the manner: the former reſpecteth doctrine principally: the latter the maners of men. Firſt, for things amiſſe in the manners of men, we may not ſeparate; but with Lot haue our righteous hearts vexed, and grieued with the wicked conuerſation of thoſe among whom we liue. The Scribes and Phariſes ſitting in Moſes chaire, teaching Moſes doctrine, muſt be heard, howſoeuer the corruptions of their manners be ſuch as they may not be imitated, Matth. 23. 1. Yet here obſerue further, that although we may not ſeperate our ſelues from ſuch corrupt perſons in the publike aſſemblies, yet in priuate conuerſation wee may abſtaine from them. 1. Cor. 5. 11. If any that is called a brother be a fornicator, or couetous, or an idolater, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner, with ſuch a one eate not: that is, eate not priuately. Secondly, if the Church erre in matter of religon, then muſt we conſider whether the error be in a more weightie and ſubſtantiall point, or in matter of leſſe importance. If it be in ſmaller points (the foundation beeing kept) we may not ſeparate our ſelues. 1. Cor. 3. 15. If any mans worke burne, he ſhall loſe, but himſelfe ſhall be ſafe, yet as if it were by fire. Now if the error of the Church be in ſubſtance of doctrine, or in the foundation, then we muſt conſider whether it erre of human frailtie, or of obſtinacie: if of frailtie, we may not ſeparate. The Church of Galatia was through frailtie quickly turned to another Goſpel, and erred in the foundation, holding iuſtification by workes: yet Paul writeth vnto it as vnto a Church of God. So likewiſe the church of Corinth erred grieuouſly, and ouerthrew the Article of the Reſurrection: and yet Paul behaued himſelfe accordingly vnto it. But if the Church erre in the ſubſtance of religion obſtinately, then with good conſcience ſeparation may be made. 1. Tim. 4. 5. If any man teach otherwiſe, & conſent not to the wholſome doctrine, from ſuch ſeparate thy ſelfe. An example hereof we haue in Act. 19. 9. when Paul had preached in the Synagogue of the Iewes, and could not preuaile with them, but they began to blaſpheme and ſpeake euill of the waies of God, then he withdrew himſelfe and ſeparated from them. 1. Chron. 11. 14. 16. when Ieroboam had ſet vp the two Calues to be worſhipped, many of the beſt diſpoſed Iewes departed from him and came to Rehoboam, and ioyned themſelues with Iudah and Ieruſalem in the true worſhip of the God of their Fathers. Whence we ſee, that no man may with good conſcience ſeparate himſelfe from the Church of England; ſeeing it teacheth, beleeueth, and obeyeth the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles.

Further, conſider the manner of the ſeparation of theſe wicked men; there be three ſorts of ſeparation: Firſt, by apoſtaſie, when a man falleth wholly from his religion, from the Church, and from common grace. Heb. 6. 4. It is impoſſible that they which were once enlightened, if they fall away, &c. Secondly, by hereſie, when men erre in the ſubſtance of doctrine and religion, and that of obſtinacie. Thirdly, by Schiſme; and that is when men hold the ſame faith and foundation, and yet diſagree and ſeparate in regard of order and ceremonie. Theſe seducers ſeparated themſelues by hereſies: their hereſies were theſe: firſt, that men beeing in Chriſt might liue as they liſt, and ſo they were Libertines. Secondly, that among the people of God there ought to be no ciuill Magiſtracie, and ſo they became alſo Anabaptiſts. Here obſerue that euē in the Apoſtles time and daies were many Heretikes; among whom was Hymeneus and Philetus: 2. Tim. 2. 17. and many woulues entred euen in their dayes who ſpared not the flocke. Which may ſerue to ſtabliſh our minds againſt the Papiſts, who obiect that our religion is the foundation of all hereſies: as at the riſing of which many hereſies were reuiued: in ſo much as they call all our religion hereſie; and the profeſſors of it heretikes: by which reaſon they might as ſtrongly prooue, that the doctrine of the Apoſtles themſelues was hereſie, and that the Primitiue Church in the Apoſtles time was hereticall and no Church: for in the firſt hundred yeares after Chriſt, the Church ſwarmed with hereſies, ſowen by Sathans inſtruments, to the choaking of that holy doctrine which was ſowen by the Apoſtles and their ſucceſſours in the field of the Church: may rather we conclude our religion to be Apoſtolicall, becauſe the ſame hereſies which aroſe vp in the Apoſtles times againſt their doctrine, now reuiued againe vpon the reuiuing of our religion.

The ſecond ſinne of theſe ſeducers in this verſe is, that they are fleſhly, or naturall men. For ſo it is explaned in the laſt words [not hauing the ſpirit] wherein conſider two things: firſt, who is a naturall man: ſecondly, that it is a ſinne to be a naturall man, for it is noted as a maine ſinne in theſe ſeducers. Touching the former, a naturall man is he, who liuing a naturall life is, endued with a reaſonable ſoule, and is gouerned by nature, reaſon, and ſenſe onely; without grace or the ſpirit of God: which may appeare firſt by the word naturall; which ſignifieth ſuch a man, as in whom the beſt thing is nature, and in whom there is nothing more excellent then his reaſonable ſoule, though corrupted. Secondly, by the expoſition, or rather oppoſition in the words, wherein it is oppoſed vnto the ſpirit, who is wanting vnto ſuch a one to leade him in the way of a heauenly life. Further, that yet we may know this matter the better, there be three things to be found in a naturall man: 1. He hath a bodie and ſoule vnited together in one perſon. 2. In his ſoule he hath excellent powers and faculties, as will, vnderſtanding, affections. 3. He hath all the ornaments of man, yet ſo as without grace: ſuch as are, ſtrength of bodie and minde, memorie, knowledge of Arts and Sciences, ciuill policie and vertues, as Iuſtice, Prudence, Temperance, diſcretion to diſcerne what is meete to be done, what not: theſe are ornaments incident to corrupt nature, ſeruing not to aboliſh, but to reſtraine and bridle corruption, and containe men in order, for the preſeruation of humane ſocietie. Now he that hath theſe three and nothing elſe, is but a meere naturall man.

The ſecond point is: Here it may be asked, how it commeth to paſſe that a naturall man offendeth God? Anſ. There be two things in euery naturall man to be diſtinguiſhed: firſt, there is nature: ſecondly, the corruption of nature: the former is from God: the latter from mans fall: which two may be indeede diſtinguiſhed, but cannot now be ſeparated: the one is not the other; but the one is not without the other; this corruption is that ſin which preſſeth vs downe, and hangeth ſo faſt on, Heb. 12. 1. which corrupted the whole man; ſo as the whole frame of man, that is, his whole diſpoſition and inclination is corrupted and euill from his youth, Gen. 8. 21. his wiſedome is enmitie to God, that is, euen the beſt thing that is, or can be in the fleſh, is hatefull to God, Rom. 8. 5. himſelfe is dead in ſinnes and treſpaſſes, Epheſ. 2. 1. hauing no more abilitie to mooue to any thing truly good, then hath a dead man to beſtirre himſelfe in and about the actions of life.

For the cleerer beholding of this corruption of mans nature, marke that there be two degrees of it: the former whereof is a want of that goodnes and righteouſneſſe which at the firſt was, and now ought to be found in our nature. The latter is a proneneſſe and diſpoſition vnto all euill, which carrieth the heart on euery occaſion thereunto: this corruption muſt be conceiued as an ocean ſea, ſending out into euery chãnell and veine of the ſoule, and whole man, ſtreames and floods of wickedneſſe: for looke into the principall powers of the ſoule, ye ſhall neede to goe no further for the finding of this truth. For firſt, in the minde is ſuch an impotencie, as whereby it is vnable to thinke or approoue of any thing that is truly good. 2. Cor. 3.5. We are not ſufficient of our ſelues to thinke of any good, but all our ſufficiencie is of God. 1. Cor. 2. 15. The naturall man perceiueth not the things of God; which is moſt manifeſt thus: firſt, he knoweth not God himſelfe aright; for although hee may know God as an infinite and eternall beeing, or in ſome other attribute, yet he cannot knowe him as a father to himſelfe. Secondly, he knoweth not, neither conceiueth the corruption of his owne nature, nor his ſins originall and actuall in the ſtaine and danger of them. Thirdly, he conceiueth not of the remedie of ſinne, the death of Chriſt: but accounteth it fooliſhnes that life ſhould be brought out of death. Secondly, as his minde is blind, ſo a naturall mans will is rebellious, and is not ſubiect vnto the will of God, neither indeed can be. Ioh. 6. 44. No man can come to Chriſt, vnleſſe the Father draw him: inſinuating our withdrawing of our ſelues, and reſiſtance of his call, vntil he turne vs, and make our wills of vnwilling, willing wils, to will that which is truly good: whence the Apoſtle ſaith, that to will, namely, that which is truly good, is not of our ſelues, it is the gift of God. Now hence we may reſolue that queſtion: why it is a ſinne to be a naturall man? not becauſe a man hath nature in him: but becauſe his whole nature is tainted with originall ſinne.

Ob. The naturall man may pleade that he cannot helpe it: he was borne ſinfull: why then ſhould he be blamed? Anſ. Rom. 5. 12. In Adam we all ſinned; for when he eate the forbidden fruit, we euen eat it in him, and are no leſſe blameworthie then he was. Obiect. But it will be ſaid; it is no reaſon that we ſhould be ſaid to ſinne in him, ſeeing then we were not? Anſ. Adam was a publike perſon repreſenting all mankind, and euery particular perſon deſcending from him; and therefore what he did, all and euery man did in him: Euen as a Burgeſſe in the Parliament giuing his voyce and aſſent, all the countrie or ſhire is ſaid to giue their voices, though they be abſent, and not preſent otherwiſe then in his perſon. God then giuing a prohibition vnto Adam, he gaue it vnto all vs in him; and threatning him hee threatned vs and all mankind; this onely is the difference, that he being the roote or ſtocke, and wee the branches ariſing from him, he ſinned actually, and we by relation and imputation. If then the naturall man ſtill plead he was no cauſe, but was borne ſo, the anſwer is cleere, that himſelfe is a cauſe, although not in himſelfe, yet in Adam before he was borne he procured that he ſhould bee borne a naturall man.

The naturall man procured that ſo he ſhould be borne in Adam, and is therfore excuſeleſſe.

Secondly, it may be pleaded againe: If I bee a naturall man, I am Gods creature as I am; why then ſhould I be blamed? Anſw. The former diſtinction betweene nature and corruption of nature muſt be here retained: for by the former the naturall man is Gods creature, and not in reſpect of the corruption of nature: for this he created not, as the other: but ſuffred it to paſſe by generation from man to man, for the execution of the puniſhment of the firſt ſinne.

Queſt. Why did not God ſtay this corruption in Adams perſon? Anſw. God could haue done it; why he did it not, the reaſon is neither knowne, nor to be enquired; a ſecret it is, but yet a iuſt iudgement of God ſilently to be with reuerence reſted in, and not with curioſitie to be ſearched out.

Vſe. Firſt, ſome may hence gather, if a man be iuſtly blamed for being onely a naturall man, and not hauing the ſpirit of God; then euery one hath power to receiue the ſpirit of God.

Anſ. This is no good reaſon, but is all one, as if becauſe a bankerout is blamed for not diſcharging his debts to his creditors; another man ſhould conclude, that ſurely he is therefore able to pay them. But theſe wicked men were blamed here, firſt, becauſe they profeſſed Chriſt; but yet had not his ſpirit: ſecondly, becauſe that in Adam they were the cauſes that they were borne without the ſpirit of God, and ſo made themſelues vnfit to receiue him.

Secondly, if naturall men be iuſtly condemned, much more thoſe that are worſe then they, as Atheiſts, prophane perſons, thoſe which contemne the aſſemblies, and neglect the meanes of their ſaluation, and yet looke for ſaluation as well as others. The Gentiles who were without the lawe, doe the things of the lawe by nature, Rom. 2. 24. and yet many that profeſſe the name of Chriſt, and liue vnder the Goſpel, goe not ſo farre as thoſe naturall men in doing the things of the lawe: ſo as euen thoſe Heathens and naturall men ſhall riſe vp in iudgement, and condemne many a profeſſor of Chriſt; of whom euen many come ſhort of the Deuill himſelfe, who beleeueth and trembleth; and yet not a fewe profeſſors neither knowe what the Deuill beleeues; neither through hardneſſe of heart can tremble at the iudgements of God as he can doe.

Thirdly, thoſe come farre ſhort that thinke themſelues in ſtate good enough, becauſe they liue ciuilly and deale iuſtly and neighbourly, as they ſay: for the naturall man can doe this, and yet ſhall be condemned: no plea ſhall ſtand at the great day of the Lord, but that which aſſureth of the pardon of ſinne, ſealed vp with the blood of Chriſt. Let a mans outward and ciuill righteouſneſſe be neuer ſo great, yea if it could be equall to the righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſies, which for outward appearance was without all exception; yet if he bring not a righteouſneſſe exceeding that, he can neuer be ſaued.

Fourthly, in that the naturall man is blamed for beeing a naturall man, this ouerthroweth all merits of congruity, which the Papiſts boaſt of; becauſe a mans perſon not beeing accepted before God, all his workes are ſinnes: the worke neuer pleaſeth God till the worker firſt pleaſe him.

Fifthly, euery profeſſor of Chriſt muſt ſtrip the naturall man, and become a ſpirituall perſon, that is, ſuch as the ſpirit of God dwelleth in: for firſt, as the Father worketh our ſaluation, by giuing Chriſt and his merits; ſo muſt the holy Ghoſt by applying the ſame vnto vs, elſe can we looke for no ſaluation. Secondly, as the ſoule giueth life to the bodie, which elſe were dead; ſo the ſpirit of God is the ſoule of our ſoules, and quickeneth them with new life beeing dead in ſinne. Thirdly, we can neuer knowe that we are in Chriſt, or belong vnto him, but by the preſence of the ſpirit in our hearts; 1. Ioh. 3. 24. Hereby we knowe that he abideth in vs, euen by A the ſpirit that he hath giuen vs.

Queſt. But how ſhall a man know whether he hath the ſpirit or no? Anſ. Let him examine himſelfe, firſt, whether he inwardly loue and feare God in his word of promiſe & threatning: ſecondly, whether he ſubiect his heart and life vnto him: thirdly, whether his heart be continually lift vp in inuocation and thankſgiuing. All theſe are the workes of the ſpirit of God, and they which bee of the ſpirit doe ſauour and affect the things of the ſpirit, Rom. 8. Queſt. But I feare I haue not the ſpirit, how ſhall I obtaine it? Anſw. By vſing the meanes of reading the Word, meditation, and prayer eſpecially. Luk. 11. 13. Your heauenly Father giueth the holy B Ghoſt to them that deſire him. Pſal. 143. 5. 6. I meditate in all thy workes; and ſtretch foorth my hands vnto thee.

V. 20. But ye beloued, edifie your ſelues in your moſt holy faith: praying in the holy Ghoſt.

In this verſe vnto the end of the 23. are ſet downe ſome meanes whereby all beleeuers may be fitted to the maintenance of the faith and true religion, vnto the which the Apoſtle hath in the former part of the Epiſtle perſwaded. Theſe meanes are contained in fiue rules here C preſcribed: firſt, concerning Faith: ſecondly, Loue: thirdly, Hope: fourthly, Meekenes: fifthly, Chriſtian ſeueritie: the firſt of which is contained in this twentith verſe, which is, that they ſhould build themſelues vpon their faith; which is not barely propounded, but inforced and vrged: firſt, by a motiue in this word, moſt holy faith:] ſecondly, by the meanes of it, which is prayer; praying in the holy Ghoſt.] In the rule note two things: firſt, that faith is a foundation, ſecondly, that the dutie of beleeuers is to build vp themſelues vpon this foundation. Concerning the former: firſt it may be demanded what is here meant by faith? Anſ. Here by faith is not ſo much meant the gift of faith, as the matter of it, namely, the doctrine of faith and religion comprifed in the writings of the Prophets and D Apoſtles; in which ſenſe it is ſaid, that the Epheſians were built vpon the foundation of the Prophets and Apoſtles, that is, vpon their doctrine, Epheſ. 2. The ſame was the rocke confeſſed by Peter, vpon which Chriſt promiſed to build his Church; and yet in the ſecond place we muſt not exclude the gift it ſelfe: for although the doctrine be a foundation in it ſelfe, yet it is not ſo to vs, vnleſſe we beleeue it, and applie it to our ſelues by this gift. If any man aske what doctrine is this? I anſwer, the ſumme of it may be reduced to three heads: the firſt whereof concerneth mans miſerie by his ſinne, originall and actuall: as alſo the dangerous fruits thereof. The ſecond, the redemption of man from this miſerie, and his freedome by Chriſt. The third the thankefulnes which man oweth for this deliuerance, and ought to teſtifie and expreſſe in newenes of life.

Hence learne firſt what is the infallible marke of the true Church, whereby it may be diſcerned from the falſe and Apoſtaticall Church, and that is the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles; for this beeing the very foundation of the Church, where it is, there the Church muſt neeedes be: and this note of it ſelfe is ſufficient to point out the true Church whereſoeuer. Secondly, ſeeing faith is the foundation of the Church, and not the Church the foundation of faith, beware hence of a damnable doctrine of the Popiſh Church, which teacheth that there can be no certaintie of the points of religion, no nor of the Scriptures themſelues, but onely by the iudgement of the preſent Church of Rome, and that Church muſt giue what ſenſe ſoeuer ſhe pleaſeth to the Scriptures, elſe hath it none: wherein they play the part of prepoſterous builders, laying the foundation in the top of the building. Thirdly, it may demaunded, how any doctrine becommeth a foundation vnto the ſaluation of men? Anſ. Properly to ſpeak, God and Chriſt is our foundation and rocke, Pſal. 18. 1. but becauſe God reuealeth himſelfe and the meanes of our ſaluation in the word, it becommeth hence a foundation: as alſo ſecondly, becauſe Chriſt, who is the proper foundation, is the ſumme of the doctrine therein contained.

Papiſts fooliſh builders, laying the foundation on the top of the houſe.

Vſe. Firſt, let no creature drawe vs from Chriſt, for then we are drawne from our foundation. Secondly, the affections of our heart towards Chriſt muſt exceede all affections of any thing beſides: our loue, feare, hope, confidence and truſt, muſt ſettle themſelues vpon him as vpon a foundation.

The ſecond thing in this firſt rule is the dutie of euery beleeuer, which is to build himſelfe vpon his faith; which that a man may doe ſixe things are required: firſt, he muſt haue in his heart a deepe ſenſe and feeling of his miſerie in ſuch ſort, as not finding in himſelfe whereon to be founded, he may feele himſelf to be founded vpon God and Chriſt: euen as in laying ſtrong and ſure foundations, men digge deepe; and if they find ſure ground proceede on in their purpoſe. So this wiſe builder laieth his foundation on a rocke, Luk. 6. 48. Secondly, he muſt haue knowledge of this doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles; for vnleſſe it be knowne it can be no foundation. Thirdly, a holy memorie to lay vp the word of God in their heart as in a ſtore-houſe: for he that remembreth not the doctrine of ſaluation, can neuer build vpon it. Fourthly, faith, whereby not onely we beleeue the truth of it, but apply it vnto our ſelues; this knitteth vs vnto the foundation, without which the word ſhall be no more profitable vnto vs then the Iewes, who mingled it not with faith, Heb. 4. 2. for this onely applyeth it vnto our hearts, Iam 1. 21. Fifthly, the doctrine beleeued and applyed muſt take a deepe rooting in the heart, it muſt deſcend into the affections, and there be imbraced vntill it hath wrought out an experience of the ſweete comfort of it. Sixtly, there muſt be an vnfained obedience vnto the whole word of God: Not euery one that ſaith Lord, Lord: but he that doth the will of my Father, Matth. 7. 21. This man buildeth wiſely vpon the rocke. Queſt. But what is that which muſt be done of vs? Anſ. Whatſoeuer is to be done of vs may be reduced to three heads: firſt, faith, whereby the beleeuer truely reſteth himſelfe vpon God; cleaueth vnto Chriſt for the pardon of ſinne, and renounceth all other meanes in heauen and earth. Secondly, repentance, whereby he truely turneth from all ſinne vnto God. Thirdly, newe obedience, whereby he endeauoureth to obey God in all his Commandements.

Vſe. Firſt, here is reprooued the carnall Proteſtant, who holdeth his religion but for forme and faſhion, or for feare of lawes, he is altogether without foundation, and in a pitifull condition: ſeeing when the great day of the Lord ſhall approach, whoſoeuer ſhall want Chriſt their foundation ſhall fall before him. Secondly, we muſt neuer ſuffer our ſelues to be drawne from our faith and religion; nor looſe our holde of the doctrine of godlineſſe, though we ſhould ſuffer loſſe of lands, liuings, liberties, yea our life it ſelfe: if this be once wreſted from vs, we are fallen from the foundation, and haue loſt our holde of happineſſe and life it ſelfe. Thirdly, we may not take any reſt till we be builded vpon this foundation, it beeing the foundation and ground-worke of all our ſafetie and ſecuritie: for Chriſtian men are as houſes built vpon the ſea ſhore, who muſt looke for the waues and billowes of afflictions one in the necke of another: euen as one ſurge in the Sea ouertaketh another; how ſhould they holde out when this raine falleth, theſe floods come, theſe windes blowe and beate vpon their houſe, vnleſſe they be founded vpon this rocke? how elſe ſhould not their fall be great? but this ſure foundation eſtabliſheth the heart againſt all calamities of this preſent life, yea in the houre of death alſo, which otherwiſe is the downefall to hell, yea and in the day of iudgement the ſentence ſhall paſſe on their ſides, who are laid on this foundation: they ſhall be found worthy to ſtand before the Lambe, when the deuill and his angels, with all ſinners and ſinne it ſelfe ſhall be caſt into the bottomleſſe lake. Now as euery particular Chriſtian man is to be a practiſer of this duty in his owne perſon, ſo alſo may it be fitly applied to the ſtate of the whole land, which by Gods bleſſing hath had for many yeares this foundation laid within it, through the which it hath beene able to withſtand, yea and ſubdue many rebellions, treaſons, forces, and powers, intended againſt it; and beſides hath had ſecuritie and ſafetie vnder Gods protection, with much peace and proſperitie. Would we now know the way how this peace and ſecuritie continued to vs and ours? the way is to continue and abide vpon this foundation, not looking backe to Poperie or ſuperſtition, but taking out the wholſome counſell of good King Iehoſhaphat : Put your truſt in the 2.Chr.20.20. Lord, and ye ſhall be aſſured: beleeue his Prophets and ye ſhall proſper.

In this dutie of beleeuers marke further, firſt how the Apoſtle aſcribeth power to the beleeuer to build himſelfe: for although by nature men want this power (for the naturall man cannot of himſelfe ſo much as thinke one good thought) yet the regenerate whom the Lord by his ſpirit hath mooued, haue a power giuen them to mooue themſelues, and build themſelues, that which was before to nature impoſſible, is made poſſible by grace.

Secondly, note further the force of the word, ἐποικοδομοῦντες. build vp] which requireth not onely a building, but a going on, and encreaſing in building: as if he had ſaid, Build vp your ſelues more and more. A dutie which neerely concernes men in theſe daies, wherein men decline to Atheiſme, and Poperie, (which alſo is but a painted Atheiſme) when men can content themſelues to goe backe, and fall from their former loue, and are afraid to be found either hot or cold. This diſeaſe of our daies hath this Apoſtle forwarned vs of in this Epiſtle, beeing one of the laſt farwels of the Apoſtles to the Church. Let vs then take notice of our declinings, and doe our firſt workes, and goe on forward to perfection, building vp our ſelues daily, leſt it come to paſſe that the Lord come againſt vs, ſpue vs out of his mouth, remoue our Candleſticke with his other bleſſings, and leaue vs vnto our too late and vntimely repentance.

The motiue whereby this rule is inforced vpon the Church, is drawne from a propertie of faith, which is that it is moſt holy. Wherein (to vnderſtand it) we will ſhew firſt what holineſſe is properly: ſecondly, that faith is moſt holy. For the former, in this holines there be two things: firſt, a freedome from all fault and blame: ſecondly, an excellencie or perfection conſiſting of many diuine vertues. Holineſſe thus vnderſtood is two-fold: vncreated, or created. Vncreated is the holines of God, which is nothing elſe but the perfection of his properties and attributes; this holines is incomprehenſible, and infinit, yea the fountain of all other holines. Created holineſſe is a certaine gift of God, which by ſome proportion reſembleth this vncreated holineſſe of God; the ſubiect whereof are Angels, man, & Gods ordinances, eſpecially the written word: ſo as this holineſſe of faith is this deriued holines, and not the former.

Secondly, how is the doctrine of religion moſt holy? Anſ. Firſt, in it ſelfe, being without all fault and errour, and hauing ſundrie excellencies, beeing full of diuine wiſedome and truth, and the onely inſtrument whereby Gods infinite wiſdome and goodnes is made knowne vnto vs. Secondly in regard of the effect and A operation, which is to make the creature, but eſpecially man holy: Ioh. 17. 17. Sanctiſie them in thy truth, thy word is truth. It ſanctifieth men inſtrumentally, in that it maketh them reſemble God in many graces: by this Dauid became wiſer then his Teachers, Pſal. 129. and ſo reſembled God in wiſdome. Iam. 3.17. This wiſedome which is from aboue (of which the word is the inſtrument) is pure, peaceable, eaſie to bee intreated, full of mercie and good fruits, without iudging, and without hypocriſie. Thus we ſee how it maketh men reſemble God in all theſe, yea and in all other vertues. Thirdly, it is moſt holy, becauſe it ſanctifieth all inferiour creatures to the vſe of man, ſo as he may vſe them with good conſcience: 1. Tim. 4. 4. Euery creature B of God is good, ſanctified by the word and praier. Where (by the way) may be noted the ſuperſtition of the Romiſh Church, which haloweth Bread, Salt, Water, Palmes, &c. for the curing of diſeaſes, caſting out of deuils, and working wonders; which practiſe of theirs is nothing but the defiling and prophaning of the creatures, by ſuperſtitious prayer ſeeming to hallow them, yet without any word or warrant, either of promiſe or commandement: which is the principal inſtrument of ſanctifying the creatures vnto their lawfull ends and vſes.

Papiſts account the word ſuperfluous in ſanctifying the creatures.

Hence learne firſt, that the doctrine of the Prophets and Apoſtles is from God; becauſe it is full of wiſedome, without any follie, full of truth, voide of all falſehood; as alſo moſt holy both in it ſelfe, and in operation and effect, and C in the author, as proceeding from him who is the fountaine of all holineſſe: it is not of men, neither needeth the euidence of men; by this propertie onely (if he had no more) it carrieth with it, and containeth within it ſufficient euidence againſt the gates of hell, that it is from God, and holy as himſelfe is. Secondly, the word beeing moſt holy, it muſt dwell in our hearts plentifully, and our care muſt be that it may be written in the tables thereof, that it may be an ingrafted word, bearing rule ouer our wils and affections, yea ouer our whole liues: for where it ruleth it ſanctifieth the whole man. Thirdly, the doctrine of true faith ſanctifieth vs; but as it is receiued, beleeued, and applied by faith, and no otherwiſe, when it taketh place D in vs then it ſanctifieth vs: it is not the rehearſing of the articles of it, nor the knowledge of it, nor carrying about with vs the wordes of it, that can worke grace, but the hiding of it, and mingling it with faith in the heart: from which we gather that it is a foule errour of the Papiſts, to teach that the Sacraments conferre grace, by the worke wrought, and that as the penne writeth by the hand of the writer, and that of it ſelfe, the hand mooving it; ſo the Sacraments of themſelues ſanctifie, being adminiſtred by the Miniſter: but this is erroneous, for the Word and the Sacraments are both of one nature, the ſacraments being none other but the word made viſible: but the word read or vttered

ſanctifieth

fieth not by the worke done, but by beeing beleeued and applied by faith: therefore no more doe the Sacraments by beeing adminiſtred, but by apprehending Chriſt in them: grace muſt be conferred by the ſpirit of grace, and not by the vertues of any action in the Sacraments.

The laſt point in this firſt rule, is the meanes whereby beleeuers are to build vp themſelues in their moſt holy faith, and that is prayer [praying in the holy Ghoſt.] Wherein euery member of the Church is put in minde of a princiall dutie, namely, that whenſoeuer we feare, or foreſee a falling, and defection from the faith, by reaſon either of weakneſſe within, or perſecution without, then time it is to repaire vnto God by the prayer of faith, crauing at his hands ſtrength, and power not onely to be preſerued from reuolt, but alſo to be confirmed in the faith and doctrine wherein we ſtand. The Apoſtle hauing exhorted the Epheſians to ſtand faſt and be ſtrong in the Lord, and hauing preſcribed ſome meanes tending to that purpoſe; in the 18. verſe he concludeth the principall of the reſt to be prayer: praying alwaies with all prayer and ſuppplication in the ſpirit: and that it is ſo, appeareth by two reaſons: firſt, by prayer faith is exerciſed, yea and increaſed, according to the increaſe whereof, the other graces of zeale, hope, patience, and conſtancie are likewiſe confirmed and animated. Secondly, faithfull praier hath a faithfull promiſe made vnto it, Aske and ye ſhall haue, ſeeke and ye ſhall finde, knocke and it ſhall be opened vnto you: theſe promiſes we muſt lay hold vpon, and applie vnto our ſelues, for the ſtirring vp of continuall prayer, and ſtrengthening of grace, eſpecially in time of temptation, and in ſenſe of frailtie, and then God will be good in hearing and helping, as his promiſe is.

Now in the meanes obſerue the manner of making prayer in theſe words, In the holy Ghoſt, which are added for foure cauſes: firſt, to giue vs to vnderſtand that although a man bee regenerate, yet he cannot pray as he ought, vnleſſe he be ſtill mooued, helped, and ſtirred by the holy Ghoſt. God giueth ſundrie graces in the conuerſion of a ſinner: firſt, a preuenting grace, which yet is not at all effectuall, vnleſſe it be ſeconded and helped with a ſupplie of a ſecond grace: for that is true euen of the regenerate, without me ye can doe nothing, Ioh. 15. God giueth firſt the will, and then the deed, Phil. 2. 13. yea and the continuance of the doing of that which is truly God: He that hath begun the good worke, will performe or finiſh it, chap. 1. 6. Here let grace bee euery way grace, leſt it be no grace at all; let God who is all in all haue the glorie of all; as for the doctrine of mans merit and humane ſatisfaction, which robbeth God, to enrich man, it here falleth to the ground. The ſecond is, becauſe prayer is a ſingular and eſpeciall worke of the holy Ghoſt in vs; who ſtirreth vp in vs theſe grones and ſighes which we cannot expreſſe, Rom. 8. & maketh vs cry Abba Father: Zach. 12. 10. this ſpirit of grace and compaſſion is promiſed to be powred out vpon the houſe of Dauid and inhabitans of Ieruſalem: and from hence a man may examine and finde whether he be the child of God or no; for if he haue the ſpirit of God he is his, and if he haue theſe holy motions and deſires to pray, and can ſend out theſe cries vnto God vnfainedly, he hath the preſence of the Spirit; and he that hath not this ſpirit in theſe bleſſed fruites of it, is none of his. Thirdly, theſe words are added, to teach vs that when we pray, we muſt do it frō our hearts; for where the ſpirit of God dwelleth, thence muſt prayer proceede, but his abode is in the heart, and therefore prayer (that God may acknowledge it to proceede from the ſpirit) muſt be heartie: and ſo of all other ſpirituall duties: Coloſſ. 3. ſinging with grace in your hearts: Rom. 1. whom I ſerue in my ſpirit: where the Apoſtle expreſſeth a reaſon why prayer ſhould proceede from the heart, becauſe prayer is of the ſame nature with faith and the ſpirituall worſhip of God, yea indeede is a part of it anſwerable vnto God himſelfe who is a ſpirit; but all theſe are ſeated in the heart, and ſpirit, and conſequently prayer it ſelfe ought ſo to be: neither is it the outward action or words which is ſimply the worſhip of God, but ſo farre as they conſent and proceede from the heart. Which teacheth vs that whatſoeuer religious duty we are to turne our ſelues vnto, we are firſt of all therin to approoue our hearts vnto God. Fourthly, that there may be a diſtinction made between the true beleeuer and the hypocrite and carnall man. The hypocrite he prayeth outwardly for forme and faſhion; the naturall man in affliction prayeth of compulſion, as a man that is racked and tormented, without any loue of God at all; both of them without any inward ſenſe, or rectifyed diſpoſition of the heart: but the beleeuer he prayeth in the heart and in faith, the ſpirit of God diſpoſing his heart aright vnto prayer.

Queſt. How doth the holy Ghoſt direct the heart. Anſ. By fiue waies or meanes: firſt, by illumination, whereby he reueileth God to man, as alſo his owne eſtate; both of them in part. Secondly, by conuerſion, whereby he turneth the heart vnto God once made knowne. Thirdly, by direction, whereby he directeth the heart to deale as with God himſelfe, taking it from outward meanes. Fourthly, by feruent and conſtant deſires for things ſpirituall or temporall. Fifthly, by faith, whereby we can reſt on God for the accompliſhment of the things we haue heartily deſired.

Queſt. Whether may we not pray to the holy Ghoſt, ſeeing here it is ſaid, praying in or by the holy Ghoſt? Anſ. We may not onely pray in or by him, but vnto him: for although we haue no particular example hereof in the Scripture, yet we haue ſufficient warrant: for the three perſons beeing vndiuided in nature muſt be alſo vndiuided in worſhip, and one beeing worſhipped all muſt be worſhipped. Secondly, we are baptiſed into the name of the holy Ghoſt, as well as of the Father and Sonne, and therefore he is to be prayed vnto, euen as they are. Obiect. But we are not commanded to pray any where by the Father or Sonne, as here by the holy Ghoſt, which argueth that the holy Ghoſt is not the author of our prayers, as they are. Anſ. The Apoſtle here would haue vs obſerue an order in the working of the Trinitie, for all the three perſons are authors of our prayers; the Father and Sonne make vs to pray, but by the holy Ghoſt; the holy Ghoſt maketh vs pray, but more immediately, for he is the immediate author of our prayers: which teacheth that when we pray, it is not of our ſelues, but from the ſpirit which ſtirreth and ſendeth vp heauenly requeſts for vs: herein then we muſt renounce our ſelues, magnifie the grace of God within vs, and ſhew our ſelues thankfull by entertaining carefully ſuch holy motions of this moſt holy Spirit of God.

V. 21. And keepe your ſelues in the loue of God, looking for the mercie of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt vnto eternall life.

Theſe words containe the ſecond rule of the Apoſtle tending to the preſeruation of faith, and true religion concerning loue, and it is indeede of ſpeciall vſe, and direction for the framing of our liues: Chriſt calleth the loue of god and men the ſumme of the whole law: Paul calleth it the end of the Commandements. This cauſed Paul to keep faith and good conſcience: 2. Cor. 5. 14. The loue of Chriſt conſtraineth vs. Now for the better informing of our vnderſtandings, and our furtherance in obſeruing this rule fiue things are to be conſidered: firſt, what is meant by the loue of God? Anſ. We are to vnderſtād by the loue of god a diuine vertue in the hearts of the beleeuers, whereby they loue God and Chriſt, properly and ſimply for himſelfe, reſt in him, and cleaue vnto him as the moſt abſolute good: for by Gods loue in this place is not meant that loue whereby God loueth man, but whereby man loueth God. Qu. Why doth the Apoſtle here omit the loue of man? Anſ. Becauſe the loue of man to man is included and to be vnderſtood in the other as a fruite neceſſarily flowing from it: for firſt, when a man loueth his neighbour, herein after a ſort he loueth God for then God is loued not onely when our affection of loue is directed vnto himſelfe, but alſo when his ordinances, his creatures, image, and other things pertaining vnto him are loued. Secondly, the Apoſtle Paul calleth the loue of the neighbour the fulſilling of the law; which cannot be vnleſſe we include alſo therein the loue of God, or rather it within Gods loue, and ioyne them together. Now if the loue of man be the fulfilling of the lawe, how much more is the loue of God, which by the ſame reaſon muſt include the other? Thirdly, it is a true rule in Diuinitie, that the firſt Commandement muſt be included and practiſed in all the nine following, as beeing the foundation of them all. Now the maine dutie of the firſt Commandement is the loue of God, which muſt goe with the practiſe of all the other, ſo as all the duties of the other cōmandements are included in the ſame.

Gal.5.14.

The loue of God groweth not naturally in our owne grounds.

The ſecond point is, whether this loue of God be in man by nature, or giuen by grace? Anſ. It is not from nature, but a gift of grace following faith and iuſtification. Ioh. 14. 14. If ye loue me, yee will keepe my commandements; both which proceede from one beginning: as no man then can by nature keepe the Commandements, ſo no man can by nature loue God aright. Rom. 8. 5. The wiſedome of the fleſh (that is mans beſt things, his beſt thoughts and affections) is enmitie to God, therefore can there be no true loue of God in nature. 1. Tim. 1. 5. The ende of the commandement is loue out of a pure heart, and of a good conſcience and faith vnfained. Againe, we muſt firſt beleeue that we are loued of God, before we can loue him, 1. Epiſt. Ioh. 4. We loue him, becauſe he loued vs firſt. It will be obiected here, Luk. 7. 47. Many ſinnes are forgiuen her, for ſhe loued much: where it ſeemeth that loue is the cauſe of forgiueneſſe of ſinnes. Anſ. I anſwer, this word (for) doth not ſignifie here a cauſe, but a reaſon drawne from the ſigne, as it is alſo elſewhere vſed; this then is the ſenſe, many ſinnes are forgiuen her, and hereby ye ſhall knowe it, becauſe or in that ſhee loued much.

Note hence firſt that doctrine of the Church of Rome to be falſe, whereby they teach that before iuſtification there muſt be a diſpoſition and aptitude in a man thereunto, ſtanding in a feare of hell, loue of God, &c. for by this doctrine the loue of God in man ſhould goe before iuſtification, which is a fruite and follower thereof. Secondly, that is as falſe, that loue is the ſoule and life of faith, for though in time they be both together, yet in order of nature loue followeth after faith, and therefore cannot be the forme and ſoule thereof. Thirdly, it hath beene the opinion of ſome that faith apprehendeth Chriſt by loue, and not by it ſelfe; but this is alſo erroneous: for loue in order followes apprehenſion of Chriſt, and therefore Chriſt is not apprehended by loue. Firſt, we beleeue, and beeing knit vnto Chriſt by faith, then our hearts are knit vnto God by loue.

The third point is, what is the meaſure of loue whereby we muſt loue God and man. An. According to the two diſtinct parts of the word of God, are preſcribed two diſtinct meaſures of loue. The meaſure of the Lawe is to loue God without meaſure, for it requireth that we loue God with all the powers of our bodies and ſoules, and with all the ſtrength of all theſe powers, Luk. 10. 27. This meaſure is not now our power to performe, no not although we be borne anew: for beeing ſtill fleſh in part, ſome of the powers of our ſtrength are withdrawne from the loue of God. The Goſpel is a qualification of the lawe, and moderateth the rigour thereof; it freeth a man not from louing God, but exacteth not this loue in the higheſt meaſure and degree, but accepteth ſuch a meaſure as ſtandeth in 3. things: firſt, in beginning truly to loue God: ſecondly, in the daily increaſe in this loue: thirdly, in being conſtant in the ſame vnto the end: this meaſure the Lord accepteth for perfect loue, in thoſe that be in Chriſt, in whom the imperfection is couered, Deut. 30.6. The Lord thy God will circumciſe thine heart, that thou maiſt loue the Lord thy God, with all thine heart, and all thy ſoule, that is, as if the Lord had ſaid, I will ingraft the true loue of my ſelfe in your hearts which you ſhall increaſe in, and conſtantly proceed in the ſame, and then I will account and accept of it, for the full meaſure of loue that my lawe requireth: which diſtinction is the rather to be conſidered, becauſe the Papiſts teach, that the loue which the Lord requireth of Chriſtians, is the ſame for ſubſtance and meaſure which the law preſcribeth: and for the perfection of our loue, they ſay a man may doe more then the lawe bindeth him vnto; as if hee giue all his goods to the poore, it is more then euer God in his law hath commaunded: and if we loue God aboue all creatures (which they ſay a man may do though imperfectly) it is the loue which the law preſcribeth. But all this is moſt falſe, and ſo the Apoſtle Gal. 3. 10. concludeth it, as many as are vnder the workes of the Law are accurſed. If all men be condemned by the law, then is no man able to performe the loue and duties which it requireth: but he taketh the former for granted: for elſe his argument could not hold; and therefore that none can performe the loue which the law enioyneth is true. Secondly, the common opinion of men is, that they euer loued God with all their heart, and it is pitie hee ſhould liue that doth not ſo: but it is a meere deluſion, for if it were ſo, what needed any qualification or moderation of the law by the Goſpell.

Papiſts are none of thẽ that can cõfeſſe that they are vnprofitable when they haue done all they can.

The fourth point is, wherein ſtandeth the loue of God? Anſ. 1. Epiſt. Ioh. 5.3. This is the loue of God, that yee keepe his Commandements. Ioh. 14. 13. He that keepeth my Commandements is he that loueth me: the reaſon whereof is this, he that loueth God, loueth his word, and he that loueth his word will bewray his loue in yeelding anſwerable obedience thereunto; and in one word this keeping of the commandements ſtandeth in theſe three things: firſt, in faith, for it muſt be the worke of a true beleeuer: ſecondly, in conuerſion vnto God: thirdly, in new obedience: which ſheweth many a man how miſerably he hath beene heretofore deluded by Sathan: for euery man profeſſeth and pretendeth the keeping of the Commaundements, and yet the moſt are ſo farre from doing them, that they know them not, neither care to know them.

The fifth point is, how a man ſhould preſerue in him the loue of God and of man? Anſ. Firſt the meanes whereby man may preſerue himſelf in the loue of God is two-fold: firſt, euery one muſt labour daily to haue his heart ſetled in the ſenſe of Gods loue towards himſelfe: for the more he ſhall feele Gods loue confirmed vnto him, the more ſhall his loue be inflamed and increaſed towards God againe; euen as the more we feele the heate of the Sunne, the warmer we are. Secondly, we muſt keepe a daily obſeruation of Gods bleſſings ſpirituall and temporall, which is a ſpeciall meanes not onely to confirme and augment our loue, but preſerue it conſtant to the end. Pſal. 18. 1. I will loue thee dearly, O Lord. Why, what made Dauid thus reſolue himſelfe? the reaſon is rendred in the next words; The Lord is my rocke, my fortreſſe, my ſtrength, and he that deliuereth mee. Secondly, men muſt vſe the meanes whereby they may preſerue their loue to man; and theſe are of two ſorts, for ſome ſtãd in meditation, others in practiſe. The meditations are foure. The firſt is the conſideration of the ſpirituall and neere coniunction of all thoſe that are true beleeuers, of which number we profeſſe our ſelues all to bee, who haue all one Father, God: one Mother, the heauenly Ieruſalem the Catholike Church; all begotten of the immortall ſeede, the word of God: all liue by one faith in Chriſt, and all are heires of eternall life and glorie. This was Pauls motiue perſwading him herto: Epheſ. 4. 3. 4. There is one Lord, one faith, one baptiſme, one God and Father of all: ſee Phil. 2. 1. 2. The ſecond meditation is, that the duties of loue which man ſheweth to man, eſpecially the faithful, God accepteth as done to himſelfe: ſo ſaith the Wiſeman: Hee that giueth to the poore, lendeth vnto the Lord. And Matth. 25. When I was hungrie, ye fed me, &c. namely in my members vpon earth. The third meditation is the conſideration of that curſe, which is due to them that neglect duties of loue to man when occaſion is offered; Matth. 25. Depart yee curſed, I was hungrie, ye fed me not: to auoide this curſe, we muſt embrace the Apoſtles counſell, to walke in loue. The fourth is, to conſider that the loue of man to man is a grace of God, which leadeth a man by the hand to the firſt degree of happineſſe: 1. Ioh. 4. 16. He that dwelleth in loue, dwelleth in God, and God in him; that is, hee hath entred the firſt degree of happineſſe, for hee hath fellowſhippe with God: and verſe 12. If we loue one another, Gods loue is perfect in vs. Now as nature it ſelfe can tell vs a happines is to be ſought for; ſo let this grace leade vs to the degrees and beginnings of it.

The ſecond ſort of meanes ſtand in practiſe; and the rules of practiſe bee ſixe. The firſt is

A the practiſe of the Law of nature, beeing the ſumme of the Law and the Prophets, by Chriſts owne teſtimonie: What ſoeuer ye would that men ſhould doe vnto you, doe you the ſame vnto them. The meaning of which golden rule is this: Looke what we would haue other men to thinke, ſpeake, and doe to vs, that muſt we thinke, ſpeake, and do vnto them, and no worſe: and on the contrarie, conſider what we would not that men ſhould thinke, ſpeake, or doe vnto vs, that we muſt abſtaine to ſpeak, or thinke, or do vnto them. The practiſe whereof would cut off many wrongs, contentions, frauds, & iniuries both in word and deede.

The ſecond, rule of practiſe is in Gal. 5. 13. B Doe ſeruice one to another by loue: that is, let euery man in his place and calling become ſeruant to another, and ſo preſerue loue by the duties of loue. The reaſon hereof is, becauſe God (although he might if he had pleaſed preſerued man without man) would haue man preſerued by man, and that euery man ſhould be his inſtrument for euery mans good in regard both of body & ſoule. For which end he hath furniſhed men with ſeuerall artes, ſciences, trades, and callings, that one man might ſtand in neede of the help of another. Secondly, we are placed in the world that here we might ſerue god in deed, not in ſpeculation onely, but alſo in our whole practiſe in our ſtandings and callings, he will be C ſerued of vs in our ſeruing of man, for theſe two muſt goe together, and as it were hand in hand, the ſeruice of God, and the ſeruice of man. Whoſoeuer therefore imploy their callings principally for the purchaſing of their profits, pleaſures, honours, and not for the good of men, they abuſe their callings, prophane their liues, and miſtake the proper ende of them, as though they were borne onely to liue vnto themſelues, and ſerue themſelues, and neither God nor man beſides: from which too common a practiſe hath that diuelliſh ſpeech ſprung, and by Sathan put into the mouthes of many men: Euery man for himſelfe, and God for vs all. A ſpeech well beſeeming thoſe who are at open enmitie with the duties of true loue.

God will be ſerued of vs in our ſeruing of man.

The third rule is in Phil. 4.5. Let your moderate minde be knowne vnto all men. D Wherein is commended that meeknes of minde, whereby we can with moderation and equitie beare with men for the preſeruation of loue: ſee Phil. 2.5. This moderation ſtandeth in foure actions: firſt, in bearing with defects & infirmities of nature, as haſtines, frowardnes, deſire of praiſe, ſlownes, and ſuch weakneſſes: it is the part and propertie of an equall minde, not to be ſeuere, or haſtie againſt theſe, but rather to paſſe by them, as Salomon ſaith: It is the glorie of a man to paſſe by an infirmitie. Secondly, in couering many, yea a multitude of ſinnes: yea and if a man be called to reueale and diſcouer them by way of teſtimonie, it cauſeth a man not to aggrauate the crime, but equally to ſpeake euen as the thing is. Thirdly, in conſtruing mens meanings, words, and actions (if it be poſſible) in the better part, euen ſo farre as the word of God giueth vs libertie: for it is a fruite of malice to miſconſtrue men, to make an offence where it is not giuen, or not to be taken, and that is, ſo long as the wickednes is not apparent. Fourthly, in reſtoring him that is fallen into a fault, by the ſpirit of meekeneſſe, courteſie, and humanitie: euen as a Surgeon dealeth with a broken arme or legge, not with roughneſſe, or anger, but with mildnes, yea and pitie towards the offender, ſo ſetting him as it were in ioynt againe.

The fourth rule is in Rom. 12.10. Be affectioned one towards another with brotherly loue. How may that bee done? Anſ. In the next words, in giuing honour goe one before another, not in taking honour as our nature is; but in preferring others before our ſelues: and here we muſt not conceiue of this honour as a meere ceremonie, ſtanding in ſome outward geſture; but it is a reuerent opinion conceiued inwardly in the heart, whereby euery man thinketh better of another then of himſelfe, and accordingly yeelds him more honour. But ſome wil ſay here, this is hard to do, to eſteeme of euery man better then our ſelues, and how may we attaine vnto it? Anſ. Whoſoeuer iudgeth this ſo hard a leſſon, let him enter into the ſerious examination of his owne heart, without partialitie, let him looke narrowly into himſelfe, and he ſhall eſpie ſuch a bodie of ſinne for meaſure and manner, as he cannot finde in any man beſides; ſo as in the true ſenſe of his eſtate he can neuer abaſe any man ſo farre as hee can himſelfe, whereby he ſhall come to iudge euery man worthie to be preferred and honoured before himſelfe.

The fifth rlue is in Epheſ. 4. 26. Let not the ſunne ſet vpon your wrath. A very neceſſarie rule; for ſeeing we be but men, we cannot be without many ſinnefull motions, and eſpecially of reuenge vpon occaſion; but here we are counſelled forthwith to ſtay and repreſſe them, yea and to breake them vtterly off: that although anger, wrath, and reuengeful thoughts will ariſe vp in our hearts, yet we muſt extinguiſh them, and not ſuffer them to continue with vs, no not for the ſpace of a day. The ſame Chriſt himſelfe hath taught, Mar. 11. 25. When ye ſtand to pray, forgiue, if ye haue any thing againſt any man. So often then as we are to praie (which is at the leaſt daily) ſo often are we to forgiue iniuries offered to vs, for we pray to be forgiuen as our ſelues doe forgiue others: men content themſelues to carry their wrath a whole yere together, and if they forgiue once a yere at Eaſter, or at the receiuing of the Sacrament once a quatrer, it is as much (they thinke) as they need to do: but they forget that the Sunne muſt not goe downe vpon their wrath.

The ſixth rule, Rom. 15. 2. Let euery man pleaſe his neighbour. Some will ſay, how can this be, for ſome will neuer be pleaſed, if we condiſcend not to their corrupt and wicked deſires? Anſ. The next wordes expound the Apoſtles ſtles meaning; for good: What is that? Anſ. For his edification: ſo as the generall commandement admitteth this limitation; that men muſt be pleaſed, but onely ſo farre as it tendeth to Gods glorie, their owne good, and edification. So, Rom. 12. 18. Haue peace with all men; but yet with a double limitation: firſt, if it be poſſible: ſecondly, if it be in you; or ſo much as lieth in you we muſt not carrie croſſe and thwarte mindes, as beeing enemies vnto peace, but apply our ſelues to the preſeruation of it in our ſelues and others: thus ſhall we teſtifie our ſelues to be admitted into Gods kingdome, wherein the Lyon and lambe play together, and the young childe with the Cockatrice. Iſa. 11. Whereby thus much is ſignified, that men once conuerted ſhall be ſo changed and altred; that if they were neuer ſo fierce and cruell againſt the Church, and one againſt another before, yet now they ſhall be framed to a peaceable and meeke diſpoſition towards all men.

Now to perſwade vs to the practiſe of theſe rules, conſider firſt that theſe are the laſt times, wherein moſt men are louers of themſelues, and louers of men for their owne aduantage, euen ſo farre as by them they may attaine and retaine their wealth, pleaſures, and pompe; but few are they that loue men for God, or his graces in them: now ſeeing the times more call for theſe duties, let vs be the more carefull in them. Secondly, loue amongſt men is the bond of ſocieties; for what linketh man to man but loue? which therefore the Apoſtle calleth the bond of perfection, and truely, for it maketh men ſpeake and think one thing, and perfecteth their ſocietie. Seeing then Chriſtian ſocieties are Gods ordinances and preſerued by loue, we are to labour the more in the preſeruation of it. Thirdly, the office and action of loue is moſt excellent, for the manifold gifts and graces which God beſtoweth on men for the vſe of the Church and Common-wealth, are all hereby made profitable thereunto, all ordered hereunto aright, and all hereby applyed to their right ends and vſes: the gifts of knowledge, tongues, arts, wiſdome, and ſuch like, without loue they puffe vp, but it is loue that edifieth, 1. Cor. 13. and which cauſeth man to applie and vſe theſe gifts to the good of man.

The third rule for the maintenance of faith concerneth Hope, in the next words, looking for the mercie of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt vnto eternall life.] Wherein is contained a deſcription of hope, which is this: Hope is a gift of God, whereby we wait for the mercie of Ieſus Chriſt, to eternall life. For the better conceiuing of which grace, cōſider in the words three things: firſt, the perſon on whome we are to waite by hope, namely, our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, together with the properties of this waiting, which are foure: firſt, it muſt be certaine without doubting: for the Apoſtle aſcribeth a full perſwaſion and aſſurance vnto our hope, as well as vnto our faith, Heb. 6. 11. neither doth hope make A a man aſhamed by diſappointing him of the thing hoped for, Rom. 5. 5. Secondly, it muſt be againſt hope, that is, againſt all humane hope, reaſon, ſenſe, and whatſoeuer may be grounded vpon theſe. Thus Abraham beleeued againſt hope, Rom 4. 18. Thirdly, it muſt be a patient waiting on Chriſt: Rom. 8. 15. If we hope for that we ſee not, we doe with patience abide for it: for otherwiſe the thing hoped for deferred, maketh our waiting painfull and tedious. Fourthly, it muſt be grounded vpon the word and promiſes of life, Pſal. 130. 5. My ſoule hath waited, and I haue truſted in his word: Heb. 6. 18. the ground and anchor of our hope is made not onely the promiſe, but the oath of God who B who cannot lie, although he ſhould not ſweare, that we might holde faſt the hope that is ſet before vs.

The ſecond point is, the thing for which we muſt waite, which is not for gold, ſiluer, honours, pleaſures, but onely for the mercie of God in Chriſt vnto life eternall: by which we muſt not vnderſtand the beginnings of mercie, for theſe we alreadie here enioy, and hauing the preſent hold thereof neede not hope for the ſame, but for the full meaſure and accompliſhment of Gods mercies hereafter to be enioyed. The like manner of ſpeech hath Paul, Rom. 8. 22. We wait for our adoption and redemption, not that we are alreadie adopted and redeemed; but that it is not as yet fully finiſhed and C accompliſhed in vs, as hereafter it ſhall be.

The third point is, the fruite and profit of this waiting; and that is life eternall, and therefore is added, vnto life eternall, giuing vs to vnderſtand, that our waiting ſhall bring vs vnto, and ſet vs in the poſſeſſion of this life. So as the deſcription ſtandeth in ſetting downe two effects of hope, deſcribed firſt, that it cauſeth to waite on Chriſt for mercie: ſecondly, that it doth not faile nor make a man aſhamed, for he waiteth vnto eternall life, and in this expectation is put in poſſeſſion of the ſame. From the former effect, we learne firſt to put a difference betweene hope and confidence: firſt, by hope we waite on Chriſt, but by confidence we reſt vpon him, and quiet our hearts in him. Secondly, hope is of things to come, and confidence of D things preſent, at leaſt made preſent by faith. Matth. 9. 2. Haue confidence, and thy ſinnes are forgiuen thee. Whence we may diſcerne an error in Popiſh religion. They teach with vs that a man is to haue confidence in Chriſt, but they include it vnder hope, and will not permit that it ſhould be referred to faith, becauſe then they ſhould be drawne to grant a ſpeciall faith. But that is erroneous, ſeeing confidence is not of things to come as hope is, but of things preſent: and therefore although confidence goeth with hope, yet it is no branch of it, but proceedeth from faith. Secondly, ſeeing this waiting is a certaine expectation of Chriſt, hence I gather that there is a ſpeciall faith; for if there be a ſpeciall hope, there muſt needes be a ſpeciall faith to ground this ſpeciall hope vpon: for we can neuer certainely waite for that, whereof we are vncertaine whether it belong vnto vs or no: he that hath receiued the earneſt, may certainely waite for the whole ſumme; but it is faith which receiueth the earneſt of the ſpirit, from whence our hope is raiſed. Heb. 11. 1. Now faith is the ground of things hoped for: for which cauſe it is that hope alſo hath his full aſſurance aſcribed vnto it as well as faith. And hence we may further take knowledge of another of their errors, whereas they teach that hope indeede is ioyned with a certaintie, but they diſtinguiſh of certaintie, which is (they ſay) either of the will or vnderſtanding: hope they grant hath the certaintie of will, but not of iudgement and vnderſtãding: but this is falſe, ſeeing the Apoſtle Heb. 12. commandeth to reioyce in hope; which no man can doe, vnleſſe the iudgement be certaine and ſetled; he that is not certaine of mercie, can neuer hope certainely for mercie. Thirdly, we learne hence to waite by our hope in Chriſt for life euerlaſting euen to the death, that muſt be the white which muſt euer be in our eie, at which we muſt continually direct our aime. We haue many examples of holy men who haue gone before vs in this duty; Iacob when he was making his will, inſerteth and as it were interlaceth this ſpeech: O Lord, I haue waited for thy ſaluation, Gen. 49. 18. Moſes had his eye euer vpon the recompence of reward. Heb. 11. 26. Iob will truſt in the Lord, yea although he ſhould kill him, Iob. 13. 15. Dauid was much and often in this expectation of the Lords mercie, Pſal. 40. 1. In waiting I haue waited on the Lord, that is, I haue inſtantly waited: and mine eyes haue failed me whileſt I haue waited for my God. Pſal. 63. 3. and Pſal. 16. 9. My fleſh ſhall reſt in hope: his hope was that his fleſh ſhould riſe againe vnto life euerlaſting. Obiect. But how can we nouriſh this hope (will ſome man ſay) ſeeing we are ſo toſſed and perplexed with ſo many miſeries and grieuances in this life? Anſ. Paul meeteth with this obiection, Rom. 1. 3. We reioyce in tribulation. Queſt. How can we doe ſo? Anſ. When we ſubiect our ſelues vnto God in afflictions, he ſheddeth abroad his loue in our hearts, and this breedeth patience, which bringeth forth experience, and experience hope, which maketh not aſhamed; beeing the helmet of ſaluation, and our anchor which ſtaieth our ſhip in the troubleſome ſea of this life. Fourthly, if we muſt by our hope wait on Chriſt; then in all our requeſts and petitions vnto God we muſt abide the Lords leiſure, not limiting him or preſcribing the time vnto him of hearing; for herein our hope muſt exerciſe it ſelfe.

We muſt waite for mercie, and not for iuſtice, as the Papiſts teach by their doctrine of merits.

Further, from the obiect of this waiting, which is the mercie of God, we may learne diuers points: firſt that there is no ſuch merit of worke as the Papiſts dreame of, for then might we waite for iuſtice, and of due lay claime to life eternall. But here we haue another leſſon read vs, namely, that the Saints of God iuſtified, ſanctified, and ſo continuing, (for to ſuch Iude wrote as verſe 1.) muſt waite for the mercie of God vnto life eternall. Yea let a man keep all Gods Commandements he ſhall merit nothing, he doth but his dutie. In the ſecond Commandement the Lord ſaith he ſhewes mercie on thouſands: but who are they? euen to them that loue me and keepe my Commandements. If Adam had ſtood in innocencie, he could not haue merited any better eſtate then he was in; how much leſſe can we ſince the fall? nay Chriſt as he was man alone, could not merit, nor did not, but in regard of perſonall vnion. But the Papiſt will here ſay, that life etenall is promiſed vpon condition, and if we can keepe the Commandements we may merit. I anſwer, If we keepe the condition of our ſelues we may merit indeede; but this is impoſſible, for euen our keeping of the condition were of mercie; and mercie and merit will neuer meete and ſtand together. Secondly, if we wait for mercie in Chriſt then we muſt altogether deſpaire in regard of our ſelues for euer attaining life euerlaſting, for hope ſendeth a man out of himſelfe, and cauſeth him wholy to relie himſelfe vpon Chriſt. Thirdly, if we muſt wait for the accompliſhment of mercie, which tendeth to life euerlaſting, then much more muſt we in our dangers or troubles waite for Gods mercie in our deliuerance. If we muſt waite for the greater, we may for the leſſe. Hab. 2. 3. At laſt the viſion ſhall ſpeake, and not lie; though it tarrie, waite. And Iſa. 28. 16. He that beleeueth maketh not haſte. This meeteth with mans corruption, who in preſent trouble will haue preſent helpe, or elſe he will fetch it from hell it ſelfe, from Satan and Sorcerers: but ſuch neuer learned to waite on Gods mercie for ſaluation; for then could they wait his leiſure in leſſer matters for health and eaſe, and with more comfort make farre leſſe haſt.

Wicked men in preſent troubles muſt haue preſent help, though from Satan himſelfe.

Secondly, from the ſecond effect or fruit of hope, namely, that it deceiueth not nor diſappointeth him that hopeth; note firſt a difference betweene humane or carnall, and religious or Chriſtian hope. The former often deceiueth men, at leaſt when death commeth all ſuch hopes periſh: but the ſecond neuer deceiueth a man in time of neede, no not in death it ſelfe. Secondly, hence a man may and muſt beleeue his owne perſeuerance in grace; for where this hope is, ſuch a man cannot fall wholly from Chriſt, for then his hope ſhould diſappoint him: neither from his owne ſaluation, becauſe this hope laies hold on the mercie of God vnto eternall life: and herein can neuer fruſtrate his expectation, or make him aſhamed. Thirdly, if our hope bring vs to the fulneſſe of happineſſe, and to the accompliſhment of mercie hereafter, then it bringeth vs to the beginnings of this happines euen in this life; for the beginning of life eternal is in this life, and ſtandeth in the cõuerſion of ſinners vnto God, and in amendment of life: and whoſoeuer hath true hope, he is thereby ſtirred vp vnto daily repentance and reformation of life: 1.Ioh.3. 3. He that hath this hope, purgeth himſelfe, euen as he is pure. Now there is none of vs but we ſay we hope for life eternall, and looke to be ſaued by the mercie of God in Chriſt: it ſtandeth vs then in hand to trie the truth of this hope within our ſelues, and manifeſt the truth of it vnto others, and both theſe by this note, namely, that we finde it to purge our hearts and liues, and that it conforme vs vnto Chriſt: for if we hope to be like him after this life, we muſt labour to reſemble him euen in this life, by beeing in ſome meaſure pure, holy, innocent, meeke, louing, &c. euen as he was: for otherwiſe if our liues be not in ſome reformation of our ſelues, and conformitie to our head ſutable to the profeſſion of our hope, it is but pretence of hope, and will make men in the ende aſhamed.

V.22. And haue compaſſion of ſome, in putting difference:

23. And others ſaue with feare, pulling them out of the fire, and hate euen that garment which is ſpotted by the fleſh.

Theſe words containe the two laſt rules tending to the preſeruation of the faith, both of them teaching how we may and are to recouer, and reſtore thoſe who are fallen or declining from faith or good conſcience. For the better vnderſtanding whereof, conſider in the words two things: firſt, the way to beginne this recouerie, which is in the ende of v.22. By putting difference. Secondly, the manner how they are to be recouered; expreſſed in both the rules: the former concerneth Chriſtian meekeneſſe, Haue compaſſion on ſome:] the latter concerneth Chriſtian ſeueritie; and other ſaue with feare.] D Concerning the former: the way of this recouerie is to put a difference] that is, by Chriſtian wiſdome to diſtinguiſh betweene offenders. For our direction wherein, we muſt know that men erre and offend two waies: firſt, in opinion and iudgement: ſecondly, in practiſe and life. Againe, thoſe that erre in opinion are alſo diuerſly to be diſtinguiſhed, according to the diuerſitie of their errors: for ſome erre in the foundation of religion, and matters of greateſt importance, as the Papiſts at this day, when they teach inuocation of Saints, iuſtification by workes, a reall ſacrifice for the quicke and dead in the Supper, with other falſe doctrines raſing the foundation: others may hold the foūdation, but erre in ſmaller points of leſſer importance. As for example, the Anabaptiſts holding that warre is not to be made, nor oathes to be taken, erre groſſely: but yet herein (though in other points they doe) they raſe not the foundation. Theſe ought wiſely to bee diſtinguiſhed, for he that erres in the foundation, ouerturneth his faith and religion: but he that holdeth the foundation, and erreth in ſmaller points, doth not. 1. Cor. 3. 12. If any man build on the foundation hay or ſtubble, his worke ſhall burne, but himſelfe may be ſafe. One thing it is to beate downe a wall, to pull downe a window, yea ſome one ſide of a houſe; and another to plucke vp the foundation, for this deſtroyeth all. Which difference if it had beene made and minded, many which haue ſeparated themſelues from the Church of England, had ſtil remained members of it. Secondly, of thoſe that erre in opinion, ſome erre of ignorance and blinde zeale, ſeeing no other truth then that they hold; as the Iewes did, Rom. 10. 2. who had the zeale of God, but not according to knowledge: others erre of malice, who know they are deceiued, and yet perſiſt obſtinately in their error and falſe opinion, leſt they ſhould loſe their credit, as Heretikes. Now betweene theſe alſo a difference is to be put: Tit.3.10. An heretike after once or twice admonition reiect; for ſuch a one is condemned of his owne ſelfe. But if the error be of ignorance, Paul ſpeaketh; If any bee otherwiſe minded, the Lord will reueile it, Philip. 3. 15. But here wee muſt alwayes remember, that ſeeing we can hardly diſcerne the ground of mens errours whether they proceede of ignorance or malice, we are euer to condemne their error, but haue reſpect to their perſons, and not paſſe ſentence raſhly againſt them. For the error of the vbiquitie of Chriſts bodie hath beene held and maintained by many both godly, and learned Proteſtants; their error we are alwaies able to condemne, but we may not condemne their perſons, no not although they haue defended it of malice, or out of the pride of their hearts, ſeeing the Lord might giue them repentance before or at their death. Thirdly, againe thoſe that doe erre of ignorance muſt be diſtinguiſhed: for ſome of them are miſled of ſimple ignorance, as thoſe who haue no meanes, or very ſmall meanes to come to knowledge: others erre of affected ignorance, which is when men are willingly ignorant, hauing meanes of knowledge, but refuſe the ſame. As aboue fortie years agoe the people of this land erred of ſimple ignorance, becauſe they had not the meanes (which yet did not excuſe them) but now their ignorance is wilfull, and affected, neglecting at leaſt, if not fearefully deſpiſing ſo great ſaluation: and therefore as the ſinne of the land is greater, ſo the more fearefull is the iudgement like to be, if it be not ſeaſonably preuented by repentāce. Fourthly, there is alſo wiſe difference to be put betweene the authors of ſects and hereſies, and thoſe who are by them ſeduced. The Sect-maſters and leaders are to be vſed with more ſeue-

All errors are not of the ſame ſize.

Popiſh doctrine departeth frō the foundation.

The ignorance of this land more fearefull then it was fourtie yeares agoe.

A ritie, and ſinne more grieuouſly: Rom. 16. 17. Obſerue them which cauſe diuiſions among you: as in a wiſely ordered Common-wealth, the heads of conſpiracies and authors of treaſons are moſt aimed at.

Secondly, errors in practiſe or action, is any actuall ſinne, or offence in word or deede; and men that offend in theſe are not all to be ranged in one ranke, but to be diſtinguiſhed. For of theſe, firſt ſome ſinne of ignorance, not knowing what they doe; as Paul perſecuted the Church of God ignorantly, and through a blind zeale. Now ignorance is twofold: firſt, generall ignorance, when the thing is vtterly vnknowne: ſecondly ſpeciall, when the equitie of a particular fact, or ſome ſpeciall action is vnknowne; as B oppreſſion and vſurie in generall are knowne to be euill; but many particular actions vnder this kind are vnknowne to many ſo to be: and ſometime theſe two ignorances are ioyned both together, according vnto which we may put difference betweene the faults and offences of men. Secondly, ſome ſinne of infirmitie, who know what they doe, but yet are ouercarried by ſudden and violent paſſions of anger, feare, ſorrow, or ſuch like vnto euill. Thus Peter denied his Maſter vpon ſudden feare of danger. Thirdly, ſome ſinne of malice, beeing carried vnto euill by the malice of their owne will, not of ignorance, or paſſion as the former: of this the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Heb. 10. 26. If we ſinne willingly, C after we haue receiued the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſinnes. Now of this malice of the will, there be two degrees: firſt particular, when a man wittingly and willingly ſinneth againſt ſome particular Commandement; as Act. 7. 51. the Iewes were ſtiffe-necked, and alwaies reſiſted the holy Ghoſt: that is, the miniſterie of the Prophets in ſome things, not in all. Secondly, generall malice, when a man is carried wittingly and willingly to oppugne all the law of God, yea Chriſt himſelfe, true religion, and ſaluation by Chriſt, and ſo reuerſeth all the Commandements. This is the ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, and of this degree the Apoſtle ſaith, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for ſinne: this beeing an vniuerſall and generall Apoſtaſie. Now of- D fenders according to theſe differences muſt be diſtinguiſhed.

Further, of thoſe that actually offend, ſome ſinne ſecretly, when it is knowne but to ſome one onely; and priuately, when it is knowne but to ſome few, and the ſcandall is the ſmaller. Some ſinne publikely, when the ſinne is notorious and the offence giuen great. If the offence be ſecret, the Apoſtle ruleth the caſe, ſaying; that loue couereth a multitude of ſuch ſinnes. For the ſecond, if the offence be priuate, then muſt thou admoniſh the partie betweene thee and him: if he heare thee, thou haſt ſaued and won him: if not, but he perſiſt in offending, tell the Church. But he that offendeth publikely, muſt be publikely reprooued, that others may feare, 1. Tim. 5. 20. By theſe differences obſerued, a notable way is made for the recouerie of thoſe that are ſliding or fallen from the faith, in matter either of doctrine, or practiſe.

Hence we learne firſt, that it is our duty to obſerue one another in our ſpeeches and actions; or elſe we can neuer put any difference in them; the ende of which obſeruing muſt bee (not as the manner of many is, to imitate others in their euills, or traduce or floute men) but that of the Apoſtle, Heb. 10. 24. Let vs conſider one another, to prouoke vnto loue and good workes. Secondly, for the making of this difference betweene offenders, we ought to haue in vs a Chriſtian wiſdome, wherby we may diſcerne aright of perſons and things, and not to iudge of all alike. Our head Chriſt was a notable preſident vnto vs herein: for though many profeſſed him, and beleeued in him, yet would he not commit himſelfe vnto them, becauſe he knew what was in man, Ioh. 2. 24. Loue indeede muſt hope all things, beleeue all things, ſuffer all things, 1. Cor. 8. 7. but yet this Chriſtian loue muſt be ordered by Chriſtian wiſdome.

Chriſtian loue muſt goe hand in hand with Chriſtian wiſdome.

The ſecond point concerneth the manner of reſtoring offenders, ſtanding in two rules; firſt of compaſſion; ſecondly of ſeueritie. In the former conſider two things: firſt, on whom compaſſion is to be ſhewed: the Apoſtle ſaith, on ſome, that is, on thoſe that erre of ignorance, or infirmitie: on thoſe alſo who are caried away with the violence of ſome ſudden paſſion, if they repent, yea or giue any hope of amendement: all ſuch muſt be reſtored with the ſpirit of meeknes, Galat. 6. 1. Secondly, the manner of ſhewing the compaſſion, which is not by winking at, or ſoothing men in their ſinnes, but by admonitions, and exhortations ſeaſoned with compaſſion: Matth. 18. 15. If thy brother treſpaſſe againſt thee, goe and tell him his fault betweene thee and him: if he heare thee not, take yet with thee one or two. This is the meanes firſt to conuince the offenders, and then to bring them to repentance with all mercie and meeknes, and confirme them therein. Thus God himſelfe dealt with Adam, firſt conuinced him, and then in much mercie made that gratious promiſe, that the ſeede of the woman ſhould bruiſe the Serpents head. Thus Chriſt looked on Peter, & mercifully reſtored him. Thus Paul reſtored the Galathians, beeing fallen from the faith, by mercifull admonitions.

Obiect. But if we admoniſh men before witnes, according to the rule of Chriſt, wee may draw our ſelues into danger, for they may take ſuch admonitions for ſlanders, and vſe them as witneſſes thereof againſt vs.

Anſ. If therefore the fault be ſecret, we muſt onely admoniſh our brother alone; and if that will not ſerue to reclaime him, leaue him to God to turne him: and if it be priuate, that is known to ſome few, it is Chriſtian wiſdom to admoniſh him before ſome two of thoſe that can teſtifie of this ſinne, that ſo the partie admoniſhed may be conuinced, and the admoniſher cleered from all ſhewe and apparance of ſlaunder.

Vſe 1. By this rule is condemned the rigour and auſteritie of many in too ſeuere cenſuring offenders and offences. This was a fault and blemiſh in the auncient Church; which ſometime for no faults would enioyne penance, as if a man had married the ſecond time: yea for ſmall and light offences were wont to enioyne a penance for two, fiue, yea and ſometime of tenne yeares. This is the ſinne alſo of thoſe that are departed from our Church, condemning vs (for ſome wants) vtterly as no church, nor people of God, refuſing to heare the word of God, to pray, and to ioyne in other religious duties with vs. It is alſo the ſinne of many of the Lutherans, who becauſe we diſſent from them in ſome opinions, condemne vs and our Churches to hell; and ſpeake and write that we are limmes of the Deuill. Which were too great ſeueritie, if we helde not the truth againſt them in the things wherein we differ. Vſe. 2. We ought on the contrarie to put on the bowels of compaſſion towards offenders, if there be any hope of amendement; following herein the footeſteps of Chriſt himſelfe, who was very tender ouer Ieruſalem, ſo as he wept ouer it. Moſes when the Iſraelites had ſinned in making them their golden Calfe, he mourned for them, faſted fourtie daies and fourty nights for them, and would not depart from God till he was intreated of him in their behalfe. Men cannot but be compaſſionate towards ſicke, and dangerouſly diſeaſed, or wounded bodies; but a rare thing it is to be ſo tender ouer the ſicke ſoules of our brethren. But bleſſed is he that iudgeth wiſely of the poore, whether afflicted in bodie or minde.

The ſecond rule of reſtoring offenders, concerneth Chriſtian ſeueritie: and it is the laſt of the fiue, laide downe in the verſe 23. In it the Apoſtle laieth downe three things; firſt, the rule it ſelfe, to ſaue with feare. Secondly, the reaſon of the rule, or manner of it; pulling them out of the fire. Thirdly, a caueat for the better obſeruing it: And hate euen the garment ſpotted by the fleſh. In the rule it ſelfe conſider two things: firſt, who are to be ſaued by feare? namely, thoſe who otherwiſe are incurable, which is manifeſt in the oppoſition of theſe words with the former, ſome are to be cured with mercie and compaſſion, as thoſe which ſinne of ignorance and infirmitie: but thoſe who are hardly curable muſt be terrified, affrighted, and ſo ſaued by terrour and feare. Secondly, what this feare is? namely not a bodily feare, as neither the meanes cauſing it are: but a ſpirituall feare, and that of euerlaſting deſtruction. The meanes of feare are either ciuil or ſpirituall. The former is the power and authoritie of the Magiſtrate, who carrieth not the ſword in vaine againſt offenders; but that thoſe that doe euill might feare, Rom. 13. 4. but neither is this feare, nor the meanes of it meant. The ſecond means are ſpirituall, directly reſpecting the ſoule, not the bodie, and they are reduced to three kindes or heads: firſt, admonition, with denunciation of Gods iudgements againſt the partie not repenting. Secondly, ſuſpenſion, whereby offenders are debarred from the Lords Table. Thirdly, excommunication, whereby men are deliuered vp to Satan, and caſt out of the ſocietie of Gods people. Of theſe three this laſt is here moſt properly meant. Ob. But ſome will ſay, Excommunication is of no force, it is lightly regarded, and therefore can be no great meanes of feare to offenders. Anſ. This cenſure vſed according to the word of God, cannot but be full of horror, and terrour, and the moſt forcible (as the laſt) meanes of this feare. Math. 18. 17. If he heare not the Church, let him be to thee as an Heathen. What will mooue a man if this will not, that the whole Church ſhould account of him as a Pagan or Heathen? The inceſtuous perſon, 1. Cor. 5. 5. thus cenſured, is giuen vp to Sathan, and deliuered into the deuills power: then which what can be more fearefull? Both theſe places, the enemies of this cenſure, ſeeke to elude, that they might make it leſſe forcible: for that in Matth. 18. they interpret of ſeeking ciuill remedie, againſt ciuill harme or wrong, as though the ſenſe were thus: If thy brother iniurie thee, admoniſh him firſt priuately; and if he refuſe to heare thee, bring him before the Magiſtrate, thou maieſt goe to law with him, and vſe him as a Heathen man, in calling him before the heathen Magiſtrate. But this expoſition cannot ſtand; for to ſhew that it is no direction of the manner to reuenge ciuill wrongs, but appertaineth vnto the conſcience, it is added euen in the very next words, verſe 18. Whatſoeuer they binde on earth, ſhall be bound in heauen: and whatſoeuer they looſe in earth, ſhall be looſed in heauen. For the other place 1. Corin. 5. they expound it of an extraordinarie puniſhment, which might be executed in thoſe daies by Satan vpon the bodies of ſuch offenders; Deliuer him to Sathan: that is ſay they, that he may torment his bodie. But this cãnot be a bare bodily puniſhment, but an excluding of the ſinner from the Communion and fellowſhip of the Church, and muſt be done in the face of the Church, by the conſent of the whole Church, which appeare to be ſo verſ. 2. and 4. Againe, if it had beene meant of ſome ſuch extraordinarie puniſhment, Paul by his Apoſtolical Rod could haue done that alone, & needed not haue troubled the whole Church with it.

The ſecond point is the reaſon of this rule, taken from the danger of the delay of it; Pulling them out of the fire. They are in perill of preſent danger, they muſt therefore preſently be ſaued: euen as things that are in the fire muſt be preſently pulled out violently, or elſe they are preſently conſumed: ſo muſt theſe offenders be preſently preſerued and pulled out of the fire of hell. Out of theſe two former points we learne diuers inſtructions.

Firſt, that their cenſure of excommunication is an ordinance of God, and no inuention of man: for euen in this verſe we may obſerue, firſt, that obſtinate offenders are to be ſaued by terrible meanes, ſome muſt be ſaued by feare. Secondly, violent and ſudden meanes muſt be vſed, they muſt be as it were ſnatched out of the fire. Thirdly, they muſt be ſeparated from in regard of ſocietie, in the next words; all which three things cannot agree to any thing but only to excommunication.

The cenſure of excommunication not to be inflicted but in moſt deſperate caſes.

Secondly, note the end of excommunication, which is to plucke men out of the fire of hell with violence; and therefore this deſperate remedie is onely to be vſed in deſperate caſes, when there is no other way to ſaue the ſoule, and not for trifles. The Surgeon cutteth not off armes and legges, vntill the life be diſparaged; neither the Phyſition preſcribeth ranke poyſon, but in moſt deſperate diſeaſes. Againe, if this be the end of it, then it reſpecteth the ſpirituall eſtate of men, and not the temporall; the ſoule properly, and not the bodie. Wickedly then doth the Pope (for the vpholding of his eſtate) excommunicate Kings and Princes, to depoſe them from their Crownes, and depriue them of their ſcepters, and by it free their ſubiects from their allegeance: this is no ende of this cenſure warranted in the word. And thirdly, if there be ſuch a neceſſarie end and vſe of it, it were to be wiſhed that in this ende it were more vſed againſt open and notorious ſinners, whome the word cannot preuaile with to their ſaluation; ſeeing many go on euery where obſtinately in their ſinnes without amendment, to the great ſcandall of others.

Thirdly, hence we learne that many be ſo wedded and addicted to their wicked waies, that although they be in the mouth of hell, yet they feare nothing: neither God nor Deuil: nor care neither for heauen nor hell; elſe what need were there of ſuch a cenſure as this is? Ahab was ſo addicted to Naboths vineyard that he was ſicke for it: beſides, he ſold himſelfe to worke wickedneſſe. Manaſſes ſold himſelfe to Satan, nothing could returne him but fetters & captiuitie. Fruitful of ſuch hath beene, and is our barren age.

Fourthly, when gentle meanes will not ſerue to reclaime men, it is the will of God that terrible meanes ſhould be vſed, if by any meanes they may be pulled out of the fire: and thus the Lord vſed to deale with his owne people of the Iewes, proceeding with them according to that order in Rom. 2. 4. firſt by patience, by long ſuffering calling them to repentance: but when they hardened their heart againſt theſe meanes, then he horded and treaſured vp wrath for them againſt the day of wrath. The ſame hath beene his dealing with vs in this land; for theſe fourty yeares and more he hath hedged vs in with peace and proſperitie, together with the liberties of his glorious Goſpel, ſtill expecting our further fruitfulneſſe, anſwerable to ſuch meanes; but we become ſtill more barren, and leſſe fruitfull; he hath often taken in hand his pruning knife, and lopped vs by famine, peſtilence, and other his iudgements, and yet behold we abound with bitter fruites of blaſphemies, iniuſtice, prophaneneſſe, contempt of the Goſpel, which was more embraced and eſteemed of twentie yeares agoe, then now it is in theſe daies, which make no end of declining: that ſurely we cannot now but expect that the Lord ſhould open vpon vs the treaſures of his wrath, and ſtorehouſes of iudgements, vnleſſe we vſe meanes to preuent them, and that in due time. Some will aske, what be they? Anſ. Remember 2. rules, firſt the counſell of Amos, chap. 5. 12. Prepare to meete thy God O Iſrael. Meanes in this land are prepared to meete our Enemies, and it is well don, but we muſt firſt prepare to meete our God by vnfained repentance, and forſaking of ſinne: for that is it which maketh the breaches of our land, and ſtrengtheneth our enemies againſt vs. Secondly, the practiſe of Iehoſaphat, 2. Chron. 20. 12. We know not what to doe, but our eyes are towards thee, O Lord. Depend vpon him alone, and nothing beſides him; make him thy hiding place in life & death, ſhroud thy ſelfe vnder the wings of his protection, and thou ſhalt bee ſafe vnder his feathers.

Againſt the Iriſh Rebels.

Now followeth the third point in this laſt rule, that is, the caueat tending to the obſeruing of it, in theſe words: And hate euen the garment ſpotted with the fleſh: that is, keepe no companie, haue no fellowſhip or ſocietie with them: which precept is propounded in a dark compariſon or ſimilitude, taken from the ceremoniall pollutions of the law: that looke as men were then made vncleane, not onely by conuerſing with perſons legally vncleane; but alſo by touching (though it was vnwares) their houſes, veſſels, and garments, as appeareth Leu. 15. 4. and Numb. 9. and therefore did not onely auoide ſuch perſons, but hated euen their garments: ſo muſt we vnder grace deal with obſtinate offenders, auoide their perſons, ſinnes, yea and ſocieties, as occaſions thereof. Firſt; then in the former part of the compariſon two queſtions may be demanded. The former is this:

Why ſhould any mans fleſh be vncleane, or his garments ſpotted, and ſo deteſtable and to be hated, ſeeing they are the good creatures of God? Anſ. There be three kinds of vncleanneſſe: 1. Naturall, 2. Morall, 3. Ceremoniall. Naturall vncleannes is, wherby the creature becommeth by his corrupted nature vncleane for mans vſe: I ſay by corrupted nature, becauſe this vncleannes cannot riſe from created nature, but from mans ſinne and Gods curſe; as the Serpents are now to mans vſe vncleane, that is, noiſome, and full of hurt and poiſon. Morall is, when any creature is vſed againſt Gods Law and commandement, ſeparating it from the vſe of man: as to marrie within any of the degrees prohibited, Leu. 19. commeth within this vncleanenes. Thus a man borne of vncleane ſeed is vncleane, Iob 14. Ceremoniall is when the creature beeing cleane it in owne nature, yet in ſome other reſpects by vertue of Gods prohibition, becommeth vncleane. Thus were certaine beaſts, and fowles, & dead bodies vncleane, not in their nature, but in ſome reſpects, which eſpecially were three: firſt, in regard of touching: ſecondly, of taſting: thirdly, of ſacrificing: in which reſpects they might not be vſed. Now the creature might be hated, not in regaad of it ſelfe, or as it is the good creature of God; but as farre as this ceremonial vncleanneſſe was faſtned vnto it, beeing prohibited in this or other reſpects by God.

2. Queſt. But why ſhould any man hate the fleſh, or garmēts of another, ſeeing this ceremoniall vncleanenes was no ſinne; yea to burie the dead corpes was a dutie to be performed neceſſarie: & ſo neceſſarie was it to touch them: & for garments they were naturall, and no more ſinne to touch them then to eate or drinke? Anſ. Although legall defilement was not alwaies a ſin, yet it was alwaies an euill, and prefigured the defilement of men by originall ſinne: and beſides, vpon Gods prohibition was to be hated. Secondly, although the defilement it ſelfe was no ſinne: yet hee that wittingly without cauſe did touch or meddle with the thing defiled, did ſinne, becauſe God commanded the contrarie.

Secondly out of the ſecond part of the ſimilitude, in that we are to hate the company of obſtinate offenders, it may be demanded whether we may keepe any company, or haue any fellowſhip with an obſtinate ſinner? Anſ. The familiar companie with ſuch is forbidden, but all companie is not abſolutely forbidden: for in two caſes it is lawfull to accompanie with ſuch a one, firſt, to doe him good with conference, inſtruction, or admonition; an heretike muſt be once or twice admoniſhed, and if he be not then reclaimed, he muſt be auoided, Titus 3. 10. Secondly, when a man is bound to ſuch a one by the bond of ciuill ſocietie: as for example, if a man were by the Church excommunicated, yet a wife muſt performe the dutie of a wife; the childe of a childe; the ſeruant of a ſeruant; for theſe diuine ordinances aboliſh not, but eſtabliſh ciuill ſocieties. Then I ſay familiar companie muſt bee denied to ſuch obſtinate ſinners, but not all companie; as when by the ſame wee can either reclaime them, or elſe to performe ſome ciuill dutie towardes them.

Ceremoniall vncleannes figured with ſpirituall filthineſſe.

Vſe. Firſt we ſee here what was the ende of ceremonial vncleanneſſe: and that was to repreſent that ſpirituall vncleanneſſe in the whole man, by originall and actuall ſinne in thought, word, & deed. Zach. 13. 1. In that day ſhall there be a fountaine opened to the houſe of Dauid, & to the inhabitants of Ieruſalem, for ſin and for vncleanes: whereby is ſignified ſuch an vncleanneſſe, whereby not onely our ſelues are defiled wholly, but whatſoeuer we touch and meddle withal, which is infected by reaſon of that dwelling ſin in vs, euē as it was which in the law was touched by a polluted and vncleane perſon. This conſideration ſhould cauſe vs to looke into the filthineſſe of our hearts; which if we could, or did ſee, as it is both in it ſelfe, and in the vile fruites which without intermiſſion it ſendeth out, it would make vs humble our ſelues, and neuer be at reſt vntil this fountaine of the blood of Chriſt were ſet open vnto vs, and we euen plunged into it, & ſo clenſed from this vncleanneſſe; whereof the vncleanneſſe of the fleſh was but a figure and ſhadowe.

2. Vſe. We learne how to vnderſtand the Commandements of the Morall lawe, namely, not onely according to the letter, and bare words in which they are propounded, which mention the maine ſinnes onely againſt God and man; but by a Synecdoche in the mentioned ſinnes, all of that kind, as all occaſions, alſo motiues, and inducements thereunto, as here the Apoſtle wiſheth the Saints to hate the fleſh, yea the garments ſpotted; ſo we are to hate the ſinne it ſelfe, yea and all the kinds, and all the occaſions of the ſame.

3. Vſe. Hence we haue a direct way wherein all beleeuers are to walke: firſt, we muſt hate the company and ſocietie of maniſeſt and obſtinate ſinners, who will not be reclaimed. Secondly, all their ſinnes, not communicating with any man in his ſinne, we muſt haue no fellowſhip (as with the workers, ſo) with the vnfruitefull workes of darkeneſſe. Thirdly, all occaſions and inducements vnto theſe ſinnes. Fourthly, all apparances of wickednes, 1. Theſ. 5. 22. that is, which men in common iudgement account euill; and all this muſt proceede from a good ground, euen from a good heart hating ſinne perfectly, that is all ſinne, as Dauid Pſal. 139. I hate them with a perfect hatred: and not as ſome who can hate ſome ſin, but cleaue to ſome other; as many can hate pride, but loue couetouſneſſe, or ſome other darling ſinne: but we muſt attaine to the hatred of all, before we can come to the practiſe of this precept; beſides that all ſinnes are hatefull euen in themſelues. A needefull duty to be heedefully regarded in theſe daies, wherein are ſo fewe haters of the fleſh, and ſo many haters of thoſe that hate it: ſo many that are ſo farre from hating the appearances of euill, that many ſinnes themſelues are ſwallowed vp and made no bones of; horrible blaſphemies muſt nowe credit mens ſpeeches: the breach and violating of the Sabbath in iourneying is as good a ſeruice of God on horſebacke as neede be, or as he requireth: raylings, alſo fightings, and ſuch workes of the fleſh, are notes of valour and ſpirit: and ſo in other. Thus men who profeſſe religion in word; denie it in deede; ſeeing true religion ſtandeth not onely in the hatred of the ſinnes themſelues, but euen of all occaſions and appearances of them: becauſe God hath commanded them to be hated.

A 4. Vſe. As the Iewes (beeing not to come neere the houſes nor touch the vncleane) if they did touch any ſuch thing, they were vncleane and polluted:and for that cauſe muſt waſh their bodies,and change their garments, yea if they did but ſuſpect that they had defiled themſelues, they were preſently to be purified;ſo we beeing defiled with any knowne ſinnes, or ſuſpecting any vnknowne; our next courſe muſt be to the blood of Chriſt the Lauer of the Church, ſuing vnto God by prayer that our ſinnes may be therewith waſhed away:we muſt put off our garments,that is, the olde man with his luſts, and put on the wedding garment, that is, Chriſt Ieſus with his righteouſneſſe, daily B proceeding in the duties of ſanctification; for he that hath waſhed himſelfe, had neede ſtill haue his feete waſhed, that is, daily renewe his repentance, and bring daily fruits worthy amendement of life.

v.24. Now vnto him that is able to keepe you that you fall not, and to preſent you faulteleſſe before the preſence of his glory with ioy. 25. That is to God onely wiſe, our Sauiour, be glorie, and maieſtie, and dominion, and power, both now and for euer. Amen.

In theſe words are contained the third part of the Epiſtle, namely,the concluſion of it,and it is nothing elſe but a lawding and prayſing of God: wherein three things are to be noted:firſt the perſon praiſed, which is Chriſt the ſecond perſon in the Trinitie;the Sonne of the eternall Father; this appeareth by two reaſons in the words: firſt, becauſe he is here deſcribed to be a Iudge that doth preſent all men before himſelfe, which is proper to the Sonne of God. Secondly, becauſe he is called our Sauiour, which is the title of Chriſt, according to the name Ieſus. And yet here muſt be noted that in this praiſing of the Sonne, the Father and the holy Ghoſt are not excluded: for as the nature of the three perſons is all one, ſo is their worſhip all one alſo. The ſecond point be the reaſons or inducements moouing vs to praiſe Chriſt, which be three. The firſt drawne from his power: To him which is able,&c. The ſecond from his wiſdome: to God onely wiſe. The third from the worke of our redemption and ſaluation: Our Sauiour. The third point is the praiſe it ſelfe, in theſe words: Be glory, and maieſtie, and dominion, and power, both now and for euer, Amen. Of theſe points in order. And firſt of the perſon to whom this praiſe is giuen.

Firſt, note how the Apoſtle concludeth his epiſtle with the praiſe of Chriſt as the Iudge,as alſo the Sauiour of mankind; in whoſe example we are taught with willing minds to ſpend our daies in the honour of Chriſt: for that which the Saints doe in heauen, that muſt we doe while we liue vpon earth; for ſo we pray in the Lords Prayer: but they in heauen doe continually caſt downe their Crownes at the feete of the Lambe, Reu. 5. 11. as worthie to receiue all honour, and glorie, and praiſe, and power; we muſt therefore be readie vnto this dutie. Again, he hath ſubiected himſelfe to exceeding diſhonour and abaſement, yea to the death, and that of the croſſe: and all that we might firſt honour him, and then be honoured by him:how therefore ought we in way of thankefulneſſe for the great worke of our redemption, glorifie him, and aduance his honour? But inſtead hereof many euen of thoſe that profeſſe Chriſt diſhonour him, vſing him as a packehorſe to lay vpon him all their ſinnes,and ſo lade him with their ſinnes paſt, and crucifie him againe with daily newe ſinnes, & yet they look he ſhould be their Sauiour to bring thē to honour & immortall glorie.

The inducements follow. The firſt of which is taken from the power of Chriſt, vnto him who is able &c. That we may knowe the force of this reaſon, we will firſt conſider what this power of Chriſt is. The power of Chriſt is twofold: firſt, abſolute: ſecondly, actuall. By abſolute I vnderſtand that power of his, whereby he is able to C doe euen that which he will neuer doe;of which Iohn Baptiſt ſpeaketh: God is able euen of ſtones to raiſe vp ſeede to Abraham. By this power God could haue made many thouſand worlds, whereas he made but one;& by the ſame Chriſt could haue commanded a legion of Angels to haue deliuered him frō the hands of the Iewes, but would not. This abſolute power goeth beyond his actuall power or wil, yet is not greater then his will: for as what God doth, that he willeth: ſo what he can doe,he can alſo will:but this power is not here meant. The ſecond, namely, the actuall power of Chriſt, is, whereby he doth and affecteth whatſoeuer he willeth, and it is of two ſorts: firſt his generall power which tendeth on his prouidence, whereby he ordereth all things both in heauen and earth: D Pſal. 115. 3. Our God is in heauen and doth whatſoeuer he will. Secondly, a more ſpeciall power which accompanieth his grace, and alwaies goeth with it: of which Paul ſpeaketh, Epheſ. 1. 19. That we may know what is the exceeding greatneſſe of his power towards vs that beleeue, according to the working of his mightie power. Of this power working life and grace to them which beleeue, Iude here ſpeaketh. Concerning which obſerue three concluſions.

The power of Chriſt is either abſolute or actuall.

Firſt, that this power is giuen to Chriſt in time, Matth. 28. All power is giuen to me in heauen & in earth. Act.2.36. He is of God made Lord and Chriſt, importing that this power is giuen him to be a Lord. Indeede the Sonne of God as God,is of equal power with the Father, and that from all eternitie: in which regard no power can be giuen him: but if we reſpect his office of mediation, to the performance of which he muſt lay aſide his power, and become as a ſeruant ſubiecting himſelfe to the death; thus this power may be ſaid to be giuen him againe, namely, when by his riſing from the dead and aſcending into heauen, he was mightely declared to be the Sonne of God: ſo that in Pſal. 2. Thou art my Sonne, this day haue I begotten thee, is in Acts 13. applied to the reſurrection of Chriſt: as if he had ſaid, This day haue I made manifeſt by thy powerful reſurrection that thou art my ſonne, & that I haue begotten thee before all worlds.

and

The ſecond concluſion is, that this power is manifeſted in Chriſt the head eſpecially: namely, when it cauſed him ſo victoriouſly to ouercome death in ſuffering it; to riſe from the graue, aſcend to heauen, and ſit at the right hand of God his Father. Paul prayeth that the Epheſians might know the greatneſſe of this power, which raiſed Chriſt from the dead, and ſet him at Gods right hand in heauenly places, Epheſ. 1.20.

The third concluſion: That this power conueyeth it ſelfe from Chriſt the head to all his members, Eph. 3.20. To him that is able to doe abundantly aboue all that wee aske or thinke, according to the power that worketh in vs. Col. 1.29. I alſo labour and ſtriue according to his working, which worketh in me mightely. Now beeing conueied vnto the members of Chriſt, it is not idle in them, or vnprofitable, but worketh proportionably in them all, as it did in Chriſt himſelfe: for as it cauſed Chriſt to die for our ſinnes, ſo it maketh vs die to our owne ſinnes; as this power made him to liue againe to his father, ſo it maketh vs his members to liue vnto God; that as he by vertue hereof roſe againe, ſo it cauſeth vs to riſe to a new life in this life, and to our eternall life in the life to come.

Further, this power is commended here by foure effects: firſt, it is able to keepe them that they fall not, namely, into manifeſt ſinnes ioyned with obſtinacie: for of ſuch ſinnes and ſinners he had ſpoken in the former words; and cannot be meant of euery kind of fall, ſeeing the children of God fall daily, but of ſuch as Dauid prayed againſt, Pſal. 19. laſt. Keepe thy ſeruant from preſumptuous ſinnes, let them not raigne ouer me. The ſecond effect is, to preſent you faultleſſe, that is, firſt to iuſtifie beleeuers: ſecondly, to ſanctifie them here in part while they liue, & in death to finiſh and perfect that inchoate ſanctification. The third effect, in the day of iudgement to preſent them before the preſence of his glorie. The fourth effect, with ioy, that is, to poſſeſſe them with ioy euerlaſting.

Vſe. 1. In that Chriſt is able to keepe them that beleeue, we may note that this his power doth order the wils of beleeuers both in and after their conuerſion. In their conuerſion it frameth and turneth their wils. Ioh. 6. No man commeth to the Sonne, except the Father drawe him, that is, except he incline, and turne mans will vnto his owne, and make it of an vnwilling will a willing will. Againe, after conuerſion it is not an idle power in them: 1. Ioh. 3.9. He that is borne of God ſinneth not, that is, addicteth not himſelfe nor ſetteth himſelfe to the practiſe of ſinne, and the reaſon is giuen, becauſe the ſeede of God remaineth in him, which is all one with this power, which is able, and accordingly keepeth him. Whereby that Popiſh error is detected, namely, that in the conuerſion of a ſinner it is in mans power and will, either to receiue or reſiſt the grace of God: and that mans will can either apply it ſelfe to grace offered of it will; or elſe refuſe it: but if this were true, the power of God ſhould not order mans will, but mans will ſhould order Gods grace, yea and ouercome this omnipotent power of God. Againe, this ouerthroweth the diſtinction of grace into ſufficient and effectuall: for ſufficient grace is effectuall, ſeeing that this power of Chriſt waiteth vpon it to make it effectuall.

Gods power ſhall not order mans will, if the diſordered doctrine of Poperie may obtaine.

Secondly, hence we ſee that this power of Chriſt in his members, is a continued power, neuer wholly interrupted, for it keepeth them in this life that they fall not into preſumptuous ſinnes. Secondly, it iuſtifieth them and ſanctifieth them imperfectly in life, and perfectly in death. Thirdly, after death it preſenteth them vnto their glorie. Fourthly, after the laſt iudgement, it poſſeſſeth them with vnſpeakeable ioy. Thus the righteous man by vertue of this power, becomes like a tree whoſe leafe neuer faileth nor faideth, Pſal. 1.3. And hence is it that hope is ſaid to be a ſure anchor, Heb. 6. ver. 19. for this propertie hath it, not from it ſelfe (as alſo loue and faith in themſelues are changeable, and nothing indeede is in it ſelfe vnchangeable but God) but the power of Chriſt is it that maketh it an anchor ſure and ſtedfaſt. By which conſideration, thoſe two vncomfortable errors are confuted: firſt that the childe of God beeing regenerate may fall maliciouſly, and euen wholy away. Secondly, that he may fall finally: ſeeing God putteth his hand vnder, and this power of Chriſt is able to keepe them that they fall not (though fearefully they may) yet neither wholy nor finally.

Thirdly, we muſt labour to haue experience of this power of Chriſt in our ſelues, working in our hearts the death of our ſinnes, and quickning them againe vnto the life of grace and of God: for this power of Chriſt conſiſteth not in any fancie, but in an effectuall feeling, in the heart of euery true beleuer. Paul prayed that the Epheſians might feele in themſelues this proportionall power to Chriſt his power in his death & reſurrection, Eph. 1.19. himſelfe counted all things dung in compariſon of the knowledge of this power, Phi. 3.10. and that he might haue experience heereof, he will reioyce in

A his owne weaknes, 2. Cor. 12. 9. And what will this power be profitable vnto vs (be it neuer ſo powerfull in it ſelfe) vnleſſe we finde our ſelues thus ſtrengthened in grace and godlineſſe by it?

Fourthly, we may not content our ſelues with a forme and ſhew of godlineſſe, but ſtriue to attaine the power of it; or elſe let vs neuer profeſſe Chriſt, and pleaſe our ſelues only in ſuch a profeſſion: for whoſoeuer is truly Chriſts, in him this power worketh mightely in ſubduing ſinne, in ſtriuing againſt temptations, in ſtirring vp zeale of Gods glorie, and in a word in making men fruitfull and abundant in all well doing: yea it can no more hide it ſelfe where it is, then can the Sunne at noone day, but it will B cauſe men to ſhine as lights in the middeſt of a froward generation: which fruites and effects, if a man cannot finde in himſelfe, let him ſuſpect himſelfe that he is not as yet knit vnto Chriſt, for then he would be by vertue of this power in ſome proportion conformable vnto him.

Fifthly, this doctrine miniſtreth a ſtay and prop to our faith and hope, ſeeing that Chriſt hath ſuch a working power as this is, whereby he is able to make good, and accompliſh whatſoeuer he hath promiſed cōcerning our ſaluation: thus he ſtrengthened his Diſciples, Ioh. 17. But be of good comfort, I haue ouercome the world: and thus Abraham beleeued aboue hope C becauſe he knew that God was able to performe what he had promiſed, Rom. 4. 21. teaching all the ſonnes of faithfull Abraham vpon what prop they are to leane, and ſtay vp themſelues while the promiſes are delaied. Here the Papiſt teacheth that in regard of God indeed and his promiſe, we may beleeue our owne ſaluation; but in reſpect of our ſelues, and in regard of our owne indiſpoſition we muſt ſtill doubt, and it is preſumption (ſaith he) to beleeue it. Anſ. But this is falſe, for we muſt not doubt in regard of our owne indiſpoſition, but muſt certainly by faith lay hold on our owne ſaluation, ſeeing that Chriſt by his power correcteth, yea and aboliſheth in his members this indiſpoſition, fitting them (notwithſtanding it) and keeping thē vnto life eternall.

D Sixtly and laſtly, we muſt ſtriue to become like vnto Chriſt, ſeeing the ſame power that was in him is conueied and deriued from him into euery one of his members, that as he liued in obedience vnto his Father, both doing and ſuffering whatſoeuer his Father enioyned and willed; euen ſo ought we: looke what was his diſpoſition and conuerſation whileſt he conuerſed here vpon earth, ſo ought wee to be diſpoſed and conuerſe, reſembling him in meekneſſe, humilitie, patience, loue towards Father, and brethren, yea and towards our enemies: and as he was minded, the ſame minde ought alſo to be in vs, Phil. 2. 6. So much for the firſt reaſon moouing vs to the praiſe of Chriſt, drawne from his power.

The ſecond motiue is in the verſe 25. To God onely wiſe, drawne from his wiſedome; wherein three things are to bee obſerued: firſt, that Chriſt is God: ſecondly, that he is wiſe: thirdly, that he is only wiſe. For the firſt, this is a notable teſtimonie, and to be obſerued againſt the Arrians and Atheiſts, to confirme the Diuinitie of Chriſt, who like dogs moſt blaſphemouſly with blacke mouthes barke againſt their Creator, affirming him to be one of the great ſeducers of the world: againſt whom (that we may be the better armed) I will firſt propound one or two euident reaſons, and then anſwer their allegations. The firſt argument: Conſider that whoſoeuer haue taken vpon themſelues to be called Gods; the iuſt iudgement and vengeance of God hath befallen them, and they haue beene deſtroyed by the hand of God. Adam and Eue becauſe they would haue beene but like God, or as Gods, were grieuouſly puniſhed in themſelues and all their poſteritie. Herod becauſe hee was contented that the people ſhould call him God, the hand of God was inſtantly vpon him, and the Angell of God ſmot him, and he was eaten vp of lice. But Chriſt profeſſed himſelfe to be God, yea and diſputed Ioh. 7. againſt the Phariſies that he was the Sonne of God, and yet no harme beſel him: nay he prooued manifeſtly by his doctrine, and miracles, by his death & glorious reſurrection, that he ſpoke true when he ſaid he was God and the Sonne of God.

The ſecond reaſon: Chriſt wrought miracles, which could not be done either by naturall or Satanicall power; as to raiſe the dead, to make thē which were borne blind to ſee; and theſe by a diuine & omnipotent power, not as an inſtrument, but as an author of them; and therefore he was true God. Now if they alledge here, that wee haue no proofe hereof, but out of the new Teſtament, which they reiect as they doe the other Scriptures: I anſwer, that many of the ſame things in effect are extant alſo euen in Heathen writers themſelues. Obiect. But they alledge againſt the Diuinitie of Chriſt, that Chriſt is inferiour vnto God: Ioh. 14. 18. The Father is greater then I: 1. Cor. 11. 3. God is the head of Chriſt, as the man is the womans head: and chapter 15. 28. The Sonne ſhall be ſubiect vnto him that ſubdued all things vnder him. But as none is aboue God, ſo God is inferiour to none, and therefore Chriſt is not God. Anſ. The two former places muſt be vnderſtood of Chriſt as he is man and Mediatour: which hindereth not but that as he is God he is equall to the Father. The third place 1. Cor. 15. 28. muſt be thus vnderſtood: that the Sonne is made eternally ſubiect vnto the Father, not as he is God, but in regard of his humanitie. Secondly, of his myſticall bodie; that is, the Church: ſo as this ſubiection and inferioritie of Chriſt, is nothing elſe but a manifeſtation of the difference of Chriſt as he is Man and as he is God, & of the inferiority of his manhood to the Godhead : which ſhall be eſpecially reuealed at the day of iudgement. The ſecond obiection: Acts the 20. 53. It is a more bleſſed thing to giue, then to receiue: but Chriſt receiueth wiſedome, liſe, yea and his ſubſtance from his father, and ſo the Father is more bleſſed then he? Anſ. That place ſpeaketh of ſuch a receiuing, as preſuppoſeth want, which is more miſerable then to be able to giue, which argueth plentie and abundance: but Chriſt receiueth not thus his ſubſtance, wiſedome, and life, for he neuer wanted them: when he receiued them he had them; and hauing them he receiued them, and both had & receiued them before all worlds, and ſo that allegation is to no purpoſe. The third obiection: Chriſt is a Mediatour and prayeth vnto God, and ſo he is not God, for nothing prayeth to it ſelfe. Anſ. Chriſt is directly a Mediatour to the Father the firſt perſon in Trinitie: now becauſe the perſons haue all one nature and will, therefore he is alſo Mediatour euen to himſelfe as the ſecond perſon, as alſo to the holy Ghoſt. Let vs be ſtill armed againſt theſe wicked hellhounds, and deteſt their Satanicall deluſions and ſuch damnable doctrines, derogatorie to the honour of the Sonne of God.

The ſecond point in this ſecond reaſon is, that Chriſt is wiſe. This wiſdome of Chriſt is a propertie common to him with the Father and holy Ghoſt, whereby he perfectly knoweth all things as they are. Concerning which, remember theſe eight things: firſt, that this wiſedom of Chriſt is of it ſelfe, & hath the beginning from it ſelfe, and not from any other: for though he receiueth it from the Father, yet it is all one with the Fathers, and therefore it is not begotten nor proceedeth from any, but is the fountaine of all wiſdome in the creatures, men or Angels. Secondly, we by our wiſedome conceiue things by formes and apparances preſented to our mindes; but Chriſt he knoweth all things by the things themſelues, and not by any repreſentations thereof; he needeth no helpe from the thing it ſelfe to conceiue of it as we doe. Thirdly we know and conceiue of things by ſenſe and diſcourſe, but Chriſt doth this by one ſimple act of vnderſtanding. Fourthly, this wiſedome of God is all one with God himſelfe, for his wiſedome is his ſubſtance. In men and Angels it is not ſo, but a qualitie diſtinct from their ſubſtances. Fiſthly, this wiſedome is infinite, for hereby God knoweth both himſelfe and all other things paſt, preſent, or to com; things good and bad; things that are, and things which are not; yea the very motions and thoughts of the heart. Sixtly, this is alwaies a certaine and infallible knowledge; neuer coniecturall as ours is. Seuenthly, it is moſt perfect, both becauſe it doth not onely know ſome things, but there is nothing which it knoweth not; as alſo becauſe nothing can bee added vnto it, nor detracted from it, in all which it differeth from ours. Eightly, it is a diſtinct wiſedome, ſeeing God knoweth not in groſſe and confuſedly all things; but diſtinguiſheth euery particular thing and action, euen as they are; he knoweth euery haire of our heads, and the places thereof, euery lighting of a ſparrowe vpon the ground. The conſideration of which pointes ſheweth the admirable greatneſſe of this wiſedome of Chriſt.

The third point is, that he is onely wiſe.] Where is not excluded the wiſedome of the Father and holy Ghoſt, but all the wiſedome of all creatures, as Ioh. 17. This is life eternall to knowe thee the onely God; where the Sonne and holy Ghoſt may not be excluded. Ob. But ſome will ſay, the creatures haue wiſedome, and ſo the Sonne is not onely wiſe. Anſ. The wiſedom of the creatures is but a created wiſedome: God is onely wiſe by a wiſedome vncreated, theirs is but an image and ſhadowe of this. Yea compared thereunto it is no wiſedome at all, ſo as ſtill God may be ſaid to be onely wiſe.

Vſe. 1. Seeing Chriſt is affirmed to be God, note that his death although it was but momentanie and ſhort in time, yet it was of endeleſſe merit. Queſt. But how can this be that a ſhort death of ſo fewe houres ſhould countervaile the eternall torment due to ſinne? Anſw. The perſon that died beeing God, the dignitie of the perſon counteruaileth the eternitie of the puniſhment; ſo as the Sonne of God ſuffering, although it was not for halfe a day, it was as much as if all men had died for euer; ſo infinite and endeleſſe it was (though not in time) yet in merit and efficacie.

2. Vſe. Seeing Chriſt hath ſuch an abſolute wiſdome diſtinctly knowing all things, we are taught to feare and tremble before him, doing all things as in his preſence; he beholdeth vs with all our actions, there is not a word in our tongue but he knoweth it wholly, yea he vnderſtandeth our thoughts, and that a farre off. See Pſal. 139. 2, 3.

3. Vſe. Such as are in diſtreſſe, reſting themſelues vpon Gods mercie in Chriſt, may herein ſtay and vphold themſelues with this comfort, that Chriſt is God and able to releeue them, yea he is the onely wiſe God, and therfore he knoweth all their miſeries diſtinctly, he knoweth how farre forth it is good for them to ſuffer, how to turne their ſuffering to the beſt vnto them, as alſo the beſt and fitteſt time when to deliuer them ſeaſonably out of their trouble: and therefore patiently commit thy ſelfe into his hand, and rely thy ſelfe vpon him as on a mercifull redeemer.

Our wiſdom muſt be fetched from Chriſt who is only wiſe.

4. Vſe. If Chriſt be only wiſe, then muſt we take counſell of him, and learne wiſedome of him: Learne of me. If it be asked, how ſhall we learne of him ſeeing he is in heauen? I anſwer, he hath left his word with vs in the Scriptures, there we may learne his wiſedome, there we may haue his directions. If it be asked what is the ſumme of that counſell there contained? I anſwer, it ſtandeth in the hearing and doing of his Commaundements, to which three things are required: firſt, to beleeue on him and depend vpon him alone for ſaluation. Secondly, to turne vnfainedly with all our hearts vnto him. Thirdly, to obey him in our liues and conuerſations. This is the right wiſedome: for the teaching of which, Wiſedome her ſelfe vttereth her voice, and calleth to the children of men, Prou. 8. 4.

The third reaſon is taken from the worke of our redemption, in the words Our Sauiour.] The which reaſon that we may rightly vnderſtand, foure points are to be propounded. Firſt, what kind of Sauiour Chriſt is? Anſw. He muſt bee conceiued, firſt a perfect Sauiour, ſauing perfectly all that are ſaued. Heb. 7. 25. He is able to ſaue perfectly all that come vnto him; yea he perfectly ſaueth by himſelfe (and not by any other creature) whoſoeuer attaine to ſaluation, for this alſo is required vnto his perfection: Rom. 3. 25. Whom God hath ſet out to bee a reconciliation through faith in his blood. Hebr. 1. 3. By himſelfe hee hath purged our ſinnes. Where note an error in the Church of Rome; which teacheth that Chriſt did by his death merit, that we might by our own workes merit ſaluation: but this is falſe, Chriſt ſaueth not man by man, or by any creature, but by himſelfe; yea he ſhould not ſo be a Sauiour, but an inſtrument, by whom we muſt ſaue our ſelues. Secondly, hence we learne to acknowledge him an alone Sauiour, without any fellow, partner or deputie: Acts 2. There is no other name vnder heauen giuen to ſaue vs, but the name of Chriſt; and if he haue any partner, he is but halfe a Sauiour. Hence we ſee that the Romane Religion, although in word it honour Chriſt, yet in deede it denieth him, in ioyning to Chriſts all-ſufficient ſatisfaction, others ſatisfactions: and ſo likewiſe they ioyne to his ſacrifice vpon the Croſſe, their ſacrifices in ther Maſſe; to his meritorious interceſſion, the interceſſion of the Virgin Mary and other Saints, and that not by way of requeſt, but of the merit of their interceſſion. Thus they ſet vp many Sauiours in ſtead of this our perfect and alone Sauiour.

Popiſh doctrine admitteth not that Chriſt ſhold be a Sauiour, but an inſtrument whereby we muſt ſaue our ſelues.

The ſecond point is, from what danger doth he ſaue vs? Anſ. Saluation euer implieth endleſſe deſtruction, which is the thing from which he doth ſaue vs. In which endleſſe perdition note firſt the foundation of it, that is our ſinnes; noted in the expoſition of his name, Matth. 1. He ſhal ſaue his people from their ſinnes. Secondly, the degrees, which are three: firſt, in this life a ſubiection to all kindes of miſeries inward and outward; in ſoule, bodie, goods, name, in our ſelues and others. Secondly, in the ende of this life, death, beeing in it ſelfe a curſe, and an entrance into hell. Thirdly, after the firſt, the ſecond death, which is euerlaſting deſtruction in hell fire for euer. Now Chriſt is a Sauiour to ſaue and free vs both from this foundation, our ſinnes themſelues; as alſo from the degrees, frō the bondage to Satan by ſinne: ſecondly, from the firſt death ſo farre forth at it is a curſe: thirdly, from the ſecond death and eutrlaſting deſtruction.

The third point is: How doth Chriſt ſaue men? Anſ. According to that order which God hath ſet downe in the couenant; not of workes but of grace: wherein God promiſeth to giue Chriſt with all his merits and graces to euery beleeuer. Now according to the tenour of this couenant, firſt Chriſt with his merits is giuen vnto the beleeuer, he againe is giuen vnto Chriſt: by vertue of which donation a man may ſay Chriſt is mine, his benefits are mine alſo, as truely and as ſurely as my land is my owne. Hereupon to make this mutuall donation effectuall, followeth a ſecond thing, which is the vnion of vs with him by the bond of the ſpirit, and this is a myſticall but a true vnion, whereby he that is giuen vnto Chrſt is made one with him. After this commeth a third thing, which is a communication of Chriſt himſelfe and all his benefits vnto beleeuers. This is done two waies: firſt, by way of imputation, which is an accounting and accepting of his obedience and ſufferings as ours, for the diſcharge of our ſinnes and acquiting vs from them. Secondly, by a kinde of propagation, whereby grace is deriued from his grace, and inſuſed into thoſe that are ſet into him: For as many candles receiue light from one great Torch or light, and as many ſtreames flowe from one fountaine or headſpring, and as from one roote proceede many branches; euen ſo all his members drinke of his fountaines, are enriched by his treaſures of wiſedome and knowledge: yea indeede and liue by no other life, then that which by his ſpirit he inſpireth into the faces of their ſoules: and hereby he ſheweth himſelfe to be a roote, euen that roote of Ieſſe, and that ſecond Adam conueying vnto all his branches righteouſneſſe and life, as the firſt Adam (beeing a roote alſo) deriued corruption from himſelfe to all his poſteritie ſpringing and ariſing from him; ſo is that place 1. Cor. 1. 30. to be vnderſtood, He is made of God to vs wiſedome, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification and redemption; becauſe he is the roote and fountaine of all theſe graces vnto vs, of whoſe fulneſſe we receiue them.

The fourth point is: Of whom is Chriſt a Sauiour? Anſ. Our Sauiour,] that is, a Sauiour of the Catholique Church: Ephe. 5. 23. The Sauiour of his bodie: that is, his Church. More plainly the perſons that are to be ſaued by him, are ſuch as truely beleeue in him, and teſtifie their faith by their conuerſion vnto God, and forſaking their ſinnes. For the euidence whereof conſider two things:

Firſt, thas it is moſt neceſſarie, that the perſon that is to be ſaued ſhould be thus qualified, if he be of yeares (for with infants it is otherwiſe) for marke the order preſcribed to be obſerued in the Word and Sacraments, in which God requireth in the firſt place repentance and faith, and then afterwards maketh promiſe of ſaluation by Chriſt, luk. 24. 47. That repentance

Repentance for ſin muſt goe before remiſſion of ſinne.

And remiſſion of ſinnes ſhould be preached in his name. Repentance for ſinne muſt goe before remiſſion of ſinne: Act.2.38. Repent and be baptized, there is the firſt: for remiſſion of ſinnes, there is the ſecond. This is the rather to be obſerued, becauſe many goe prepoſterouſly to worke, beginning there where God endeth: comforting themſelues in their Sauiour, and in the promiſes of life by his meanes, but let goe faith and repentance, at leaſt deferre them. This is the cauſe of much wickednes, and a falſe comfort, not fetched from that order which is appointed by God.

True grace though neuer ſo weak is accepted.

Secondly, thoſe who bring the beginnings of faith and repentance (if ſo be the beginning be true) conſtant and ſtill increaſing, to theſe Chriſt becommeth a Sauiour: Matth. 9. Chriſt came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance: that is, thoſe who acknowledge themſelues to be ſinners, confeſſing and forſaking their ſinnes, and not ſuch as preſume of their owne righteouſnes: Matth. 25. I am ſent to the loſt ſheepe of the houſe of Iſrael: euen thoſe who in their owne iudgement are loſt, who are in the mouth of the lyon, and in all mans iudgement loſt. Iſa. 45. 1. The well of water of life is promiſed to all thoſe that thirſt: that is, ſuch as want water, and long after the welſprings of it, and wiſh after nothing ſo much: Iſa. 42. 3. A bruiſed reede he will not breake, the ſmoking flaxe he will not quench; euen ſmall beginnings of grace, be they neuer ſo weake nor feeble, ſo they be true, he deſpiſeth not. Thus are the perſons to be qualified vnto whome Chriſt will become a Sauiour. Now becauſe all men are not thus diſpoſed, it followeth that redemption, and the worke of ſaluation is not vniuerſall.

Vſe. Firſt, the multitude of our people are iuſtly blamed as enemies of Chriſt: for if they be asked how they looke to be ſaued; they anſwer, by their good ſeruing of God, and their iuſt and honeſt dealing among men. Now this their ſeruing of God, is but to repeate ouer the tenne Commandements, the Creede, and the Lords Prayer: and their good dealing is but to deceiue no man, or not to offer them open iniurie, and here they ſtay themſelues; not all this while euer looking after Chriſt, as men not ſtanding in neede of him, or of his righteouſnes, but ſet vp themſelues for their owne Sauiours, and know not any other way to life then their owne, which carieth them from Chriſt. Secondly, we are taught to conceiue of Chriſt as of our Sauiour; which we ſhall doe, if we be touched with the ſenſe of our ſinne, and daunger by it, and with the neede we haue of his moſt pretious blood, which will cauſe vs to prize it aboue the moſt pretious things, which the world can containe. When our hearts are thus affected, then we conceiue of him as we ought. Thirdly, we muſt carrie our ſelues as perſons ſaued alreadie by Chriſt; for he is a Sauiour vnto vs euen in this life, and our ſaluation is begunne and is in part here. This we doe when we ioyne with the profeſſion of faith a true conuerſion vnto God. Reaſons hereof: Firſt, becauſe regeneration although it be no cauſe, yet it is a part of our ſaluation: for by it a man is freed from the corruption of his ſinne in part, which whoſoeuer looketh for remiſſion of ſinnes muſt atteine vnto. Secondly, whomſoeuer Chriſt saueth from hell, he firſt ſaueth them from their ſinnes: he redeemeth men not only from deſerued condemnation, but alſo their vaine conuerſation. If then thou wouldeſt know whether Chriſt hath ſaued thee from hell or no; looke into thy ſelfe, and trie whether his death hath wrought the death of ſinne in thee or no: for if thou art not turned from ſinne, thou art not ſaued from hell. Thirdly, to whomſoeuer Chriſt is a Sauiour by merit, to him he is a Sauiour by efficacie alſo, for he is a Sauiour both theſe wayes: by the former he procureth pardon of ſinne; by the latter he turneth the heart of the ſinner from ſinne vnto God: this if it be wanting, there can be no true aſſurance of the other. Laſtly, the ſaluation of a ſinner ſtandeth not in the fruition of riches, honours, wealth, or deliuerance from the miſeries of this life, but properly in righteouſneſſe, and life eternall, the recompence of the ſame: which fruite whoſoeuer would reape, he muſt ſow the ſeeds thereof in righteouſnes, and ceaſe from hencefoorth to bee the ſeruant of ſinne.

He that is not by Chriſts death turned from ſinne, is not by it ſaued from hell.

The third generall point in this concluſion is, the praiſe of Chriſt it ſelfe in the laſt verſe: Be glorie and Maieſtie, and dominion, and power, both nowe and for euer, Amen. Which words containe the forme of the praiſe of God and Chriſt; where foure things are to be conſidered: firſt, what be the things that are here aſcribed to Chriſt? and they be foure; firſt, Glorie: by which we are to vnderſtand an infinit and incomprehenſible excellencie, whereby Chriſt excelleth all things that euer were, are, or euer ſhall be. Now as there be in God two things diſtinct: firſt, eſſence, which is the God-head it ſelfe ſimply conſidered. Secondly, perſon, as Father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt: ſo accordingly the glorie of God is twofold: firſt, the glorie of eſſence: ſecondly, the glorie of perſon. The glorie of eſſence is the Godhead it ſelfe, or God himſelfe, who is glorie it ſelfe, or the excellencie of the diuine attributes is the glorie of God: Rom. 1. 19. That which may be knowne of God is his wiſedome, glorie, power, iuſtice, and mercie. And verſ. 23. They turned the glorie of the incorruptible God, &c. Whatſoeuer therefore that may be knowne of God is a part of his glorie: Exod. 33. 19. Moſes deſireth the Lord that he would let him ſee his glorie; the Lord anſwered him, Thou canſt not ſee my face and liue. Where to ſee the face of God and his glorie is all one, and ſo of all diuine attributes.

The glorie of the perſons is diſtinct from the other, as the perſons themſelues are by their perſonall proprieties, as the Fathers glorie is to beget the Sonne, the Sonnes glorie is to be begotten of the Father, the holy Ghoſts is to proceede from them both. Thus Heb. 1. 3. Chriſt is called the brightneſſe of the glorie, and the ingrauen forme of his Fathers perſon. Ioh. 1. 14. Wee ſaw the glorie thereof as the glorie of the onely begotten Sonne of the Father. Both theſe are here to be vnderſtood; both which are incomprehenſible, and therefore our care muſt be to walke by faith, whereby we may attaine vnto it, rather then more curiouſly to ſeeke to comprehend the knowledge of it.

The ſecond thing attributed to Chriſt is Maieſtie. Whereby we are to vnderſtand that highnes and greatneſſe of God and Chriſt, whereby he is in himſelfe, in his workes, and euery way wonderfull, Luk. 6. 43. When Chriſt had wrought a famous miracle of caſting out a Deuil, it is ſaid they were amazed at the mightie power of God.

The third thing is dominion; which word properly ſignifieth power and authoritie, and by conſequent dominion, as the ſecond word tranſlated power ſignifieth properly dominion; but it commeth all to one. By dominion is meant an abſolute power and ſoueraigntie in gouerning and commanding all creatures.

The fourth thing is power; which ſignifieth that abſolute might of God, whereby he doth whatſoeuer he will. Here by the way wee muſt obſerue that of theſe foure, Glorie is the chiefeſt, the other three are but as parts of his glorie, and added to make a deſcription of his glory. For the glorie of God is herein manifeſt, in that he is full of Maieſtie, dominion, and power.

The ſecond thing to be obſerued is, that theſe foure are giuen to Chriſt alone; for the word onely muſt be referred to the whole ſentence, the Father and holy Ghoſt not beeing excluded thereby, but all falſe and Idoll Gods.

The third thing is the time of praiſe: Now and for euer: for there is no time wherein it is not to be expreſſed.

The fourth thing is the Affection, which is euer to be vſed in the praiſing of Chriſt in the word Amen, that is, verily, or ſo be it: ſignifying that the affection of the heart muſt euer be ioined with this religious action of the praiſe of God.

Vſe. Firſt, we learne hence, that we are bound to giue praiſe and glorie to God and Chriſt: Pſal. 65. 1. O God praiſe waiteth for thee in Sion, it is one of his rights, properly due vnto him. 1. Cor. 5. Whether we eate or drinke, or whatſoeuer we doe, it muſt all be done to his glorie. Secondly, looke what is Gods principall ende in all his actions, that ought to be ours in our actions. But his principall ende of all his actions is his owne glorie: Prou. 16. 4. The Lord made all things for himſelfe, that is, for his glories ſake; which ende we alſo muſt aime at in all our actions. Thirdly, the ende of all Gods bleſſings is to mooue vs to ſet out the vertues of God, 1. Pet. 2. 9. which is then done of vs, when with our mouth we confeſſe, and in our liues we expreſſe his mercie, wiſedome, power, and ſuch other his properties. Fourthly, that we may not thinke that this is an arbitrarie dutie left to our owne libertie, or put in our owne power whether we will performe it or not; we muſt know that it ſitteth neere, or ought to ſit neere vs, and is a caſe of neceſſitie to preferre the glorie of God before our liues, yea before the ſaluation of our ſoules. In the Lords Prayer we are taught firſt to pray for the glorie of God ſimply without any reſpect to our ſelues, and afterwards come to the petitions concerning our ſelues and others. Ob. But here it will be ſaid, God is the fulneſſe and perfection of all glorie, how can we then adde any glorie vnto him? Anſ. The glorie of God is taken two waies: firſt, for that infinite glorie which is in himſelfe, or rather which is himſelfe, to the perfection of which nothing can be added, neither can any thing be detracted from it to make it leſſe perfect. Secondly, for that glorie of his which is in, and from vs, the which is nothing elſe but the acknowledging, confeſſing, and praiſing of this his glorie, in which ſenſe we may be ſaid to giue him glorie, or not to giue it. Ob. But it may be alleadged, that God beeing the perfection of glorie in himſelfe, he needeth not glorie or praiſe from vs; and therefore the dutie is not ſo abſolute neceſſarie. Anſ. Our praiſe of God is not needefull in regard of God: Pſal. 16. 2. O Lord my goodnes extendeth not vnto thee, but it is needefull in regard of our ſelues beeing creatures, and in this reſpect bound to honour and glorifie our Creator. Secondly, becauſe (although it is not his happines) yet it is our chiefe good and happines to praiſe him. Thus are we to take knowledge of our maine dutie, and on the contrarie of our maine ſinne, who herein haue ſo often failed, diſhonouring the Lord by our wicked thoughts, ſpeeches, and actions, and that continually, and ſo haue robbed him of his glorie, for whoſe glorie alone we were created.

2. Vſe. In this forme of praiſe, obſerue the foundation of all diuine and religious worſhip, all which may be referred vnto foure heads: Firſt, adoration, the ground whereof is Gods Maieſtie and glorie: for it followeth well if God be full of Maieſtie and glorie, then we muſt adore him, we muſt ſubmit our ſelues before him, we muſt ſubiect our conſciences to his lawes, we muſt beleeue all his promiſes, and tremble at all his threatnings. Secondly, faith: the ground of which is Gods dominion and power; for if he be the ſoueraigne Lord of life and death, if he haue ſuch abſolute power to ſaue and deſtroy, then muſt we place all our faith in him for our ſaluation. Thirdly, prayer: and fourthly thankſgiuing, both which haue their grounds and foundation in his power, dominion, and glorie; ſo in the Lords Prayer after the petitions, is added as the ground of prayer the reaſon of all the requeſts, for thine is kingdome, power, and glorie.

3. Vſe. Hence we muſt learne to adore and reuerence the iudgements and workes of God, howſoeuer they ſeeme vnto vs, and may be harſh in our ſhallow reaſon; for he is glory it ſelfe, Maieſtie it ſelfe, power it ſelfe, and he worketh that for his owne glorie which we cannot comprehend. If God therefore loue Iacob, and hate Eſau, for nothing ſeene in themſelues, but becauſe he will ſo doe; which might ſeeme to the eye of fleſh a thing vniuſt and partiall, let vs ſtop our mouthes at this moſt righteous iudgement of God; for he is all power and dominion, hauing ſoueraigntie and abſolute Lordſhip ouer all his creatures, to make ſome veſſels of honour, and ſome of diſhonour; ſome of mercie, and ſome of wrath, all men being as the clay in the hand of the Potter: and therefore the Apoſtle Rom. 9. ſo ſoone as he had propounded this famous and memorial example, to ſhut the mouthes of men which otherwiſe would haue beene opened againſt this iuſt and incomprehenſible proceeding of God, he brought them preſently to the conſideration of the power and ſoueraigntie of God, verſ. 17. 19. We our ſelues thinke it no iniuſtice to kill the creatures, becauſe God hath giuen vs a Lordſhip and dominion ouer them; and ſhall we denie it to be iuſt in God to deſtroy likewiſe his creature, ouer which he hath infinitely more ſoueraigntie then man hath ouer them?

4. Vſe. We are to be afraid to ſinne againſt God; we muſt reſigne our will vnto his whatſoeuer it is, and ſimply ſubiect our ſelues vnto the obedience of the ſame, fearing in the leaſt thing to offend him; and all this becauſe of his Maieſtie, power, and dominion ouer vs; for this is the liuing holy and acceptable ſacrifice which he requireth of vs, Rom. 1. 12. euen our reaſonable ſeruing of him.

Further, whereas all theſe are to be giuen to God alone, note firſt, that the wicked Aſtrologer with his Art is here condemned, ſeeing all glory is properly belonging vnto God: but the Aſtrologer arrogateth to himſelfe that part of Gods glory which conſiſteth in the foreknowledge of things to come, in that by erecting a figure and the aſpect of the ſtarres, he takes vpon him to foretell things meerely caſuall and contingent, as of life and death, woe, or wealth, peace or warre; wherein he entreth vpon Gods poſſeſſions, Iſa. 41. 23. Beſides that, the ſtarres neither by creation, nor by any ordinance of God, can be any meanes to foretell things to come. Secondly, deteſtable is the Romiſh doctrine, which giueth the glorie and power of God to Saints, as of hearing the prayers of all men in all places, and knowing the hearts. Secondly, it giueth to the Pope power to make lawes to binde the conſcience. Thirdly, it aſcribeth to the Pope and his Shauelings, power to forgiue ſinnes properly; all which be incommunicable properties of the Godhead.

Now for the time for euer.] Learne that it is the dutie of euery childe of God to dedicate himſelfe vnto the praiſe of God, and that continually, Pſal. 119. 117. For this ſhall be the eternall calling and condition of thoſe who ſhall poſſeſſe the kingdome of glorie, and it muſt be begun euen in this life.

Laſtly, from the affection in the word Amen.] Note that whatſoeuer we are to performe in the ſeruice of God, it muſt be not of faſhion; but with the earneſt affection of our harts: Pſal. 103. 1. My ſoule praiſe the Lord, and all that is within me praiſe his holy name. It is ſaid of Ioſias that he turned to god with all his ſoule, & all his heart, according to all the lawe of Moſes; ſo we in like manner in our conuerſion to God, in our prayers, praiſe, or whatſoeuer holy worſhip and ſeruice we tender vnto him, muſt beware leaſt in drawing neere him with our lippes, we withdrawe our hearts from him: which we ſhall the better performe, if we carry in minde his owne commandement, My ſonne giue me thy heart.

POST-SRIPT.

MAny excellent points might I, as gemmes and pearles in this Commentarie, commend vnto thy Chriſtian conſideration (Chriſtian Reader:) but that one ſhall ſuffice to giue notice of, and direct thee vnto, as worthieſt of my penning and thy peruſing; which, as it is moſt ioyned with the ſcope of this whole Epiſtle; ſo moſt ſeaſonably is it fitted to our preſent condition, and moſt diligently trauaſed by this our Author, namely, that The ſeducers of the laſt age, eſpecially here aymed at by the ſpirit of God; deniers of the maine grounds of Religion in doctrine, and practiſe, are the Papiſts and the preſent Romiſh Church. The neceſſarie conſequent whereof is directly prooued, namely, That we may neuer ioyne with them in their religion: but for euer contend againſt them for the faith once giuen to the Saints: which we can neuer doe, if verſ.3. we auoide not their doctrines, as the rockes on which we ſhall neceſſarily ſuffer ſhipwracke, or death it ſelfe, vnto which they cannot but carrie the profeſſors. The antecedent or former part ſeemeth (by the way) to be a direct and naturall anſwer vnto a Popiſh pamphlet, alreadie by three learned men ſufficiently confuted; wherein H. T. by twelue triuiall articles (in compariſon) goeth about the buſh to prooue, that Proteſtants haue neither faith nor pietie, religion nor good life. To whom our author in the expoſition of the third verſe reioyndeth, and (doubling the number of thoſe articles with aduantage) in the ſame order prooueth the Romiſh faith to be aduerſarie in ſixe and twentie ſeuerall, ſolid, and maine grounds vnto Chriſtian faith and practiſe. I will no longer ſtand on this part then I haue ſhewed who theſe Papiſts be, meant by the Author from whom we muſt depart; and that for this ende, that the ſequell of our ſeparation from them may be acknowledged moſt iuſt and neceſſarie. By ſuch a Papiſt we vnderſtand not euery one who in ſome things may be Popiſhly affected, for true faith may ſtand with ſome errors, and in the ende of that faith be the ſaluation of mens ſoules: ſo be the partie aberring be framed to theſe two rules: Firſt, he muſt of neceſſitie holde the foundation, namely, that in Ieſus Chriſt alone, and in no other name, either Angell or man, himſelfe or others, ſaluation is to be ſought for. If a man vpon this foundation build ſome woode, A hay, ſtubble, or chaffe, though theſe ſhal be burned, yet himſelfe ſhal be ſaued, notwithſtanding as it were through fire. 1.Cor 3. Secondly, thoſe errors muſt not be ioyned with either a willing, or wilfull ignorance, for ſuch errors are deſperate & bring ſwift damnation. 2.Pet 2.1. And thus where God reueales no more but naked Chriſt, and where there is a ſubiection of the heart to the word, cauſing it to depend on the Miniſterie for further and more full inſtruction, the acknowledgement of euery diuine truth is not of ſuch abſolute neceſſitie to ſaluation, but that true faith may ſtand with ſome (euen Popiſh) errors. The Ruler is ſaide to beleeue (and that was by a iuſtifying faith, when as yet he was onely ouercome by the Maieſtie of Chriſt; Ioh 4.53. appearing in the miracle of raiſing his ſonne, to aſſent vnto and acknow- B ledge the maine truth that Chriſt was the Meſſiah: but ſo, as himſelfe and his houſehold depended on his mouth for further inſtruction, and became his diſciples. Yea euen the Diſciples themſelues were long after their calling and conuerſion very ignorant in no ſmall points of Chriſtianitie. Philip, of the firſt perſon in Trinitie: Ioh.14.8. Lord ſhew vs the Father. Others of them conceiued of Chriſt as a worldly King: whence two of them deſire to ſit the one at his right hand, and the other at his left, when he came to his kingdome. Matth.20. Others of them (euen after his reſurrection) harping on the ſame ſtring, and hearkning after temporalities expect it. Luk.24.21. Act.1.6. Others aske him when he would reſtore it to Iſrael. Peter himſelfe held not as he ought the doctrine of the paſſion, ſeeing he diſſwaded Chriſt from it. Matth.16.22. C Wherein marueilous ignorance deſcrieth it ſelfe in them beeing true beleeuers: but ſo much the more tolerable, in that firſt Chriſt reuealed no more vnto them, either not opening the things, or their vnderſtandings to apprehend them, till afterwards that he ſent the ſpirit of truth. And ſecondly, this ignorance (the mother of their errors) was accompanied with a deſire of knowledge: for they were euer queſtioning with him, deſiring him to open vnto them his parables, and reſolue their doubts, inſtantly liſtning vnto the gratious words of his mouth, and in a word were bleſſed euen in hungring and thirſting after righteouſneſſe. The perſons then here aimed at, are abſolute and perfect Papiſts, againſt whō alone this graue Author dealeth in all ſuch places of this or other his works, Note well. Perk.Probl. p. 1. operum vlt.edit.p.367 & p.741.

wherein he may ſeeme ſeuere againſt them: as himſelfe here and there thorough his writings hath deſcribed them, to bee ſuch as acknowledge the Pope their head: hold and maintaine the doctrines and deuices of the Councell of Trent, and therein are become otterturners and raſers of the foundation of Chriſtian religion; members of Babylon, Idolaters, not onely outwardly towards Saints and Images: but inwardly ſacrificing to their owne nets: theſe zealous Papiſts, eſpecially the Teachers among them, are the deceiuers ſo liuely deſcribed throughout the Epiſtle.

Perk. operum.

The ſecond point is our conſequent dutie, ſtanding in our ſtanding out with theſe aduerſaries of Gods grace and Goſpel: neuer offering to communicate with them in their cup of fornications; nor once bethinke vs of leaguing ſuch abhorring natures as are light and darknes; and truth (which is of an vnſtained nature) with moſt foule and deformed falſehood. For we cannot drinke of the cup of the Lord and of Deuils. Which point let me with good leaue a little further declare: not that I loue to kindle or keepe in any coales of contention, (the Lord put farre from me ſuch vnpleaſant thoughts) but calmely to ſhew the ouerſight of diuers mediatours, attempting to reconcile ours with the preſent religion of the Romiſh Synagogue: eſteeming it to be too much peremptorines ſo far as we do to depart from them: yea cenſuring it, either as wilfulneſſe on the one hand, or ſcrupuloſitie on the other, to be ſo oppoſit vnto them as we are: reputing it a matter of no difficultie to frame both ſides to a meane, either ſide (as they ſay) yeelding a little: nay it is buzzed out, into the eares, by the tongues of common men, that there is no ſuch diſcrepance and difference betweene vs in matters of moment as is made; but that the ſubſtance of both our Religions is not farre from the ſame: ſo as many are in a mammering whether way may be better: whereunto (after the Hebrew ὑστέρωσις, imitated alſo by the Greeks and Latins, that I may begin with the laſt for the helping of memorie) 1 firſt we may bewaile, in beholding in what a feareful (if not deſperate) degree of declining many are alreadie come: that after ſo many yeares profeſſion of the truth, powerfully both publiſhed, and protected, they ſhould not onely admit a dangerous deliberation; but euen call the very maine grounds thereof into queſtion: whereas if it be in a motion to Idolatrie, they ought inſtantly to ſay with Sidrach; We are not carefull what to anſwer in this matter. But this iudgement of God is iuſt vpon them, that whereas they neuer receiued the truth in loue of it, they ſhould loſe of their ground, and be left vnto further deluſion. Good cauſe haue we all to lament the remembrance of our ruine, through this Satanicall ſtratageme: If the woman will needes be ſo vnwiſe as (not needing) to enter parley with Satan, whom ſhe ought to haue reſiſted: and that in matter of ſuch moment, as wherein Gods truth, his glorie, and her owne glorious eſtate muſt be queſtionable: moſt iuſtly muſt ſhee be left of God, ſnared by Satan, foyled through her owne follie, throwne from her eſtate, (though of innocencie) and diſpoſſeſſed (not alone we all knowe) euen of Paradiſe it ſelfe. Beſides, how farre ſhort come theſe men in zeale to the truth, not onely of our aduerſaries the Papiſts themſelues, among whom no doubts or queſtions in their grounds and principles are tolerable; but euen of the Iew, who wil admit of no diſpute againſt his Religion; yea of the barbarous Turke himſelfe, who inflicteth death on whomſoeuer they conuince to haue called a word of their Alcaron into queſtion.

2 Secondly, concerning thoſe who cannot diſcerne ſuch eſſentiall differences betweene our Religions, both of vs (as they ſay) profeſſing ſaluation by the ſame Chriſt; and all the articles of the ſame faith; I wiſh them no worſe then that their eyes were cleered with the eye-ſalue, that they might ſee, that he that ſeeth not ſuch a Papiſt as is mentioned to profeſſe a falſe Chriſt, and a falſe faith, ſeeth in Religion ſcarſe any thing at all: neither doubt I but (to whom malice, or ignorant ſuperſtition ſhutteth not their eyes) to ſhew plainly in few words, that whatſoeuer in words they confeſſe with vs, yet in doctrine and deed they altogether reuerſe it and diſſent from vs, in caſes wherein we may neuer conſent vnto them. And firſt, ſeemeth it a ſmall matter of difference, that in generall they charge our whole doctrine of noueltie, whence ordinarily they tearme the teachers thereof Nouators? and in ſpeciall, firſt, that our doctrine of iuſtification by faith alone (for this ſtriketh at the head, and vnbowelleth all their ſhifting deuices) is but a new deuice of ours? as appeareth in their Champians challenge. But confounded herein was he, his cauſe and abetters: our learned men at the conference with him in the Tower not only mightely by the Scriptures conuincing; but out of Greeke & Latin Fathers alſo, who liued aboue a thouſand yeares agoe, oppreſſing him with thoſe very formall words, that faith onely iuſtifieth; ſo driuing him to ridiculous ſhifts, and newly coyned diſtinctions (ſo neere the Mint was he) before vnheard of: euen as in this controuerſie beeing much ſtraitned, they were forced to caſt about for that as falſe as new diſtinction of iuſtification into the firſt and ſecond, neuer heard of for the ſpace of a thouſande and fiue hundred yeeres after Chriſt.

2 Let me adioyne hereunto the challenge of our Englands Iewell, who vndertooke, and performed the proofe, that in ſeuen and twentie points (none of them trifles) the Papiſts are different, not onely from ours, but from the doctrine of the Primitiue Church: and that neuer one of thoſe their new deuices was once heard of, or receiued in the Church of God, for the ſpace of ſixe hundred yeeres after Chriſt. then they challenge our doctrine of Noueltie: and we haue prooued (they not improouing) that theirs is of no auncient, and not neere Apoſtolicall authority : I hope this cannot ſeeme a circumſtance betweene vs; for there can be but one truth, and that is moſt auncient.

3. Againe, can it ſeeme ſo ſmall a moate in the eye of any man of ſight, that the ſacrilegious Synod of Trent teacheth, (curſing the contrarie minded) that on their Romiſh Altars, ſacrifices propitiatorie are daily, properly, and truely offered for the ſinnes of the quicke and the dead? ſeeing that this doctrine vtterly derogateth from, yea and abrogateth that moſt perfect and onely once for all offered, whereby their ſinnes are expiated that ſhall ſee the Lord in the holy of holies.

Heb. 9. 25, 26.

4. Further let any indifferent and ſingle eye behold, and conſider whether thoſe be but trifling differences which our reuerend Reignolds hath worthily diſputed, both againſt Bellarmine in his bookes intituled, The Idolatrie of the Romane Church: as alſo againſt Hart, both in the two principal queſtions concerning Peters and the Popes ſupremacie: (by which their doctrine they would make Kings and Princes but vaſſals and feodataries vnto the Pope; to whom they aſcribe abſolute power to excommunicate Kings; to diſcharge their ſubiects from their obedience, and allegeance: to diſpenſe with their oathes of loyaltie, and faithfull ſubiection; and diſpoſe of their Crownes at his pleaſure: which no good ſubiect (much leſſe Chriſtian) can ſay is a triuiall point, or a little to be yeelded vnto) as alſo in thoſe ſixe concluſions annexed, wherein he hath ſubſtantially and learnedly determined, that the faith profeſſed by the preſent Church of Rome is not the Catholike faith. That their Church is ſo far from beeing the Catholike Church, that it is no ſound member of the Catholike Church, and conſequently that the reformed Churches of Great Brittaine, France, Germany, &c. haue lawfully, that is, by warrant of Gods word ſeuered themſelues therefrom.

5. Neither may we yeeld that to bee a circumſtanticall queſtion diſcuſſed betweene our learned Whittaker and Stapleton concerning the Authoritie of the holy Scriptures, which they ſo farre debaſe and ſubordinate to their church: ſeeing through that great booke of his (neuer like to be anſwered by them) he grauely prooued, that the foundation of Papiſticall faith is laid vpon man, and not vpon God; and ſo it is an humane faith, and not diuine; vnto which their whole ſeruice is ſutable, according to Durandus his deſcription in his Rationale. And laſtly, none but inconſiderate men would auerre either that the moſt learned Proteſtants of Europe haue ſpent their ſtrength, and beaten their braines only for the beating of the ayre in matters immateriall: or that thoſe who haue as yet vncontroleably publiſhed, that the Popiſh Teachers haue reuerſed the whole Decalogue, with the moſt of the Articles of the Creede, and Petitions of the Lords Prayer, haue differed and ſquared in points not eſſentiall: or that ſo many zealous Martyrs, many of them of very profound knowledge ſhould giue their liues and moſt innocent blood, for matters of ſhadow (as is pretended) rather then of ſubſtance: for thus to impeach the labours of the former, or the ſufferings of the latter, would ſcarſe beſeeme any but either a Papiſt, or ſome ſpeciall fauourite of theirs.

1. Booke, 2. chap. pag. 51.

3 Thirdly, to ſuch as are of minde that a harmleſſe mediation may be made; me thinkes it no other but the feeding of a fancie: beſides that, it is not harder to make them preſerue, and yet neither without preiudice. In which point, as I would not ſeeme too rigorous or auſtere, well knowing how ſweete is the name, and yet more pleaſant is peace it ſelfe; ſo would I chooſe an honourable warre, before a diſhonourable peace; a free and iuſt diſſention, before a baſe and ſlauiſh agreement, ſuch as theirs would be: For Nahaſh the Ammonite will make no concord with Iabeſh Gilead, vnleſſe euery man ſuffer his right eye to be pulled out, that ſo he may bring ſome ſhame vpon Iſrael. And firſt it ſeemeth to me a matter harder to be brought about, then I out of my ſhallow reach can expect euer to ſee effected: both in regard of our ſelues, as alſo of them: for if the truth be with vs (as we are bound to confeſſe, both in reſpect of it ſelfe, and the [a] law whereby it is eſtabliſhed) [b] then our turnings backe muſt not reproone vs; but hauing found the old way, we are to walke in it, (without turning aſide) that we may in it finde reſt for our ſoules. The Lords counſell to his Prophet muſt be our direction in this caſe: Sonne of man, goe not thou to them, but let them come to thee: for to looſe our hold of the truth, much leſſe to leeſe any part of it, as in exchange with falſhood, were not onely a wrongfull betraying of it ſelfe, but a wilfull wronging of our ſelues and poſterities; whome Gods bleſſings for the preſent hath made able to hold it entire, not onely without danger, but with encouragement, power, and protection. But more hopeleſſe or impoſſible rather in reſpect of them ſhall our meeting in the midway ſeeme to be, to whomſoeuer with iudgement ſhall perpend theſe foure ſubſequent conſiderations.

Firſt, that their faith beeing not [c] Apoſtolicall, their Religion a [d] falſe Religion, their Church a [e] falſe Church, and their worſhip a falſe worſhip: it will prooue not a matter of repairing (as requiring leſſe coſt and labour) but of founding their faith, before they can be raiſed vnto vs: which how hard it is for them to be brought vnto, who are ſo ſetled in their lees and dregges for ſo many hundred yeares, they cannot be ignorant, who know how difficult it is for a Blackmoore to change his skinne, or a Leopard his ſpots: for ſo hard is it for thoſe who are accuſtomed to euill, to be drawne to good.

Thirdly, their cautelous circumſpection, leſt by any meanes the knowledge of our doctrine might perhaps be ſcattered among them, argueth an vtter auerſation in them for euer acknowledging it, which appeareth in ſundrie their practiſes: 1. In that they bind the conſciences of all Catholikes, to a perpetuall ſeparation from all Eccleſiaſticall aſſemblies in religious publike duties, which is the ground of all Recuſancie; to which purpoſe they teach it to be a ſinne to heare our ſermons, for that were a [f] participation with blaſphemies: and for prayer with vs ſo ſtrait laced are they, as they may not ſay Amen in publike or priuate, (ſuppoſe at their tables) if any Proteſtant be preſent. 2. In that they cenſure moſt ſeuerely all their ſubiects that trauell or trafficke into Proteſtant countries, blaſting them with excommunication. 3. In that they haue erected in their Cities an Inquiſition to examine vpon oath any forreiner or ſtranger, whereby they ranſake not onely all his carriages, but euen his conſcience alſo, leſt he ſhould bring any opinion within him; or inſtrument without him, that ſtandeth not with their mindes and liking: wherein not onely ſome little eſcape, but euen ſuſpition it ſelfe prooueth often capitall. 4. In their warineſſe, leaſt any of our bookes, eſpecially of our tranſlations of the Bible ſhould be had, or read among them: whence it is that no bookes, which paſſe not the Inquiſition, may be ſold in Italy: to which purpoſe alſo ſtudiouſly they teach it to be a ſinne againſt the firſt Commandement to read any of their prohibited bookes, of which they haue a large Index very common, and conſequently beeing ſuch a mortall ſinne, it muſt neceſſarily be confeſſed at time of ſhrift: yea as men euery way foreſeeing what way our doctrines may be induced among them, to ſhut vp ſurely euery cranny and entrance, they ſcarſly ſuffer to ſee, or be ſeene in the light their owne greateſt Writers; ſuch as Bellarmine, Gregorie de Valencia, &c. that our poſitions, allegations, and anſwers (though anſwered by themſelues) in thoſe books may not be made known; leſt perhaps it ſhould befall others of them as it did Pighius, who reading ouer Caluins Inſtitutions, with purpoſe of refuting it, was (ere he was a ware) wonne to the defence of the doctrine of iuſtification by free imputation according to the Apoſtle. So as Spaine maketh not a more diligent annuall ſearch that the Iewes among them haue no armes in their houſes, then both Spaine and Italy vigilantly ſecure themſelues in this behalfe: and no maruaile if our bookes be ſo auoided, ſeeing that they inhibite men from the reading of the Scriptures themſelues, leaſt they ſhould become heretikes: condemning it, and [g] bringing men in danger of their liues for reading them as for an hereticall practiſe. In a word at this day ſuch a night doe theſe Owles delight to liue in, that among themſelues euen their Regulars (much leſſe their Laicks) may not without licence from the Pope or their Prelates, reade the Bible, no not in the Catholike tranſlation.

[g] Fox, Acts and Monuments.

Fourthly, conſider their irreconciliable hatred againſt ours, far aboue all other (although moſt hereticall and damnable) religions; for why elſe can they content themſelues, with ſo ſtudious preuention of the Proteſtants profeſſion onely; whereas both Iewes and Grecians, euen in Rome it ſelfe the Popes Sea, are ſuffered with their Ceremonies, Synagogues, Seruices, yea and Circumciſion it ſelfe adminiſtred to the dead as well as to the liuing? which lowdly proclaimeth, that farre they are from iudging, and deeming ſo indifferently of our differences, as ſome among our ſelues ſeeme to doe; and that they would ſooner be wonne to the Iewes or Turkes in profeſſion then the Proteſtants: which [h] one of them ſaith is in nothing better then that of the Alcaron; and in many things farre worſe and more deteſtable. And good reaſon (me thinkes) they haue of ſuffering among them the forenamed Sectes and Heretikes, as from whom together with the heathen, the whole bodie of Poperie is peecemeale patched together, and yet the name of a Proteſtant be as much deteſted of them, as Iewes names were of the heathen Kings. For which cauſe Daniel and his fellowes muſt haue all their names changed before they may be brought into the preſence of Nebuchadnezzar whence their ordinarie practiſe proceedeth, that in their writings, their bitterneſſe and diſdaine ſuffer them not to name, but in moſt reproachfull tearmes, the firſt reformers and reſtorers of our Religion: calling them vſually, Caluiniſts, Puritans, Innouators, and Heretikes, neither doth this inbred malice of Papiſts againſt our Religion ſtay it ſelfe here, but hath broken out into moſt barbarous butcheries, and moſt cruell bloodſheddings, which yet they could neuer account ſufficiently ſauage: not of their owne ſubiects onely, and within their owne Territories: but within other dominions: not of priuate onely, but of publike perſons: not of meane, but of moſt noble, yea Royall diſcent: and not of perſons onely, but of Cities, States, Kingdomes, and Countries. But where ſhould I begin, or if I ſhould, where ſhould I make an ende of inſtancing their moſt matchmatchles, and endles tyranny? (euer a note of falſe Religion, and inſeparable to the Romiſh) whoſe curſed rage (like that of Simeon and Leui) *Gen.*34.39. and 47.7. euen fierce & cruell, cauſing them to ſtincke among the inhabitants of the earth, hath made the ſtreetes of infinite Cities (which either there force, or fraud and falſe arts could caſt open) to runne with the blood of Proteſtants, as did once Ieruſalem with the blood of the Saints which Manaſſeh ſhed like water. What ſhall I need to ſpeake of that notorious bloodie inquiſition in Spaine and Italy the chiefe ſeates of it? what of the many miſerable maſſacres, Canniball like conſpiracies, and tragicall murthers in France and the low Countries? In our own country, who but ſtrangers at home are ignorant what fierceneſſe, feares, and fires, were raiſed to conſume the innocent bodies of the Saints liuing and dead: in ſuch ſort as euery corner of the Land ſeemed as hot as Nebuchadnezzars furnace, euen ſeauen times hotter then it vſed to bee: wherein were to be caſt whoſoeuer would not fall downe, and worſhip the Image which the Romiſh Nebuchadnezzar had erected? Neither yet were thoſe fires thought furious inough for ſuch: as might haue appeared, if the Lord had not tataken the rodde out thoſe wicked hands in that ſeaſon when he did: and ſince that time; what a number of deuilliſh plots and conſpiracies were attempted againſt the noble perſon of her late Maieſtie of bleſſed memorie, by Arden, Someruile, Babington, Parry, Lopez, Squire, and others? and thoſe ſtratagems not performed by perſons exorbitant, but with the priuitie of the Pope, and Principals of their religion, backing the ſame not only with their [i] doctrin, to which it is moſt ſutable (as appeareth by ſundrie their ſeditious poſitions; lately collected by Mr. Morton) but with pardons, promiſes, paies to particular [k] perſons: and commandements generally to all ſubiects whoſoeuer, as appeareth by the Popes Bull againſt her late Maieſtie: Volumus & iubemus vt aduerſus Elizabetham &c. ſubditi arma capeſſant. And yet (as though all were well) they can couer all the ill hearing of ſuch traiterous practiſes, vnder the name of Catholike pretenſes: for the furthering of which intentions, what may not, and muſt not be attempted? Now to theſe purpoſes mainetaine they innumerable Catholike intelligencers and inſtruments (I meane their Prieſtes and Ieſuites) ſent out by them, not only as eies to ſearch out the ſecrets of ſtates and countries, and watch their beſt aduantages: but as hands (full of blood) to execute whatſoeuer miſchiefe vpon any of the Lords annoynted ones, not onely oppoſing themſelues to the Papall power; but which is more, if they bee but ſuſpected not ſo firme to the Pope as they wiſh; or (which is moſt of all to be marked) though they be their owne dead ſure; yet if they ſhewe not themſelues as readie to execute the Popes bloodie deſignes, as hee to commaund: which was the caſe of the late King of France, ſlaine treacherouſly for no other cauſe by a Iacobin. What argument then can bee brought to perſwade vs of their euer according with vs in whole or part in our religion? of which they deeme no other, then as of a peccant humour neceſſarily to bee purged out euerie fewe yeares, either by murther, if it preuaile in the head: or by maſſacre, if in the bodie of any countrie; and rather then it ſhould not, they will not ſticke with Blaſius at the commandement of their great Gracchus to ſet on fire or to blow vp euen the Capitol it ſelfe: although nature and Gentiliſme condemne ſuch graceleſſe deuotednes. The late moſt diabolicall and furious attempt againſt his Maieſtie and the whole ſtate that euer was inuented; (the like whereof both in the contriuing, and whole carriage could neuer bee ſhewed, no I thinke if there were Annals and Chronicles kept in hell it ſelfe (cryeth out againſt them long erre this time in all the corners of Chriſtendome. God Almightie ſtill deliuer his Highnes and Royall race from them: and by his Maieſties meanes, vs and our land from them. For how much better had it beene, that his Maieſtie had beene mooued to haue baniſhed theſe vipers out of his Realmes, then thoſe who profeſſe the ſame Lord Ieſus, and labour (though with acknowledgement of too much weakeneſſe and wants,) to bee found faithfull before the Lord and their Soueraigne? But not to depart from our purpoſe: Theſe bee the wayes wherein the Popiſh Baalamits would meete vs, and with vs, if the Lord ſhould not meete with them, comming againſt them in euery corner. While then they walke in theſe waies of Caine, what booteth it vs to ſpeake of a peace with them? for while we ſpeak of peace, they are bent to warre.

But be it ſome peaceable conſent and agreement were on their part promiſed; yet that one conſideration of the treacherie in compactes, would keepe any iudicious man from ſetling his conceite, and affection vpon any ingenious concluſions with them: which treacherie is not onely practiſed by the perſons of faithleſſe Papiſts; but is preſcribed as a maine precept of that moſt infidell doctrine of theirs; nay which euen infidels themſelues would bluſh at in this behalfe: for doth not their doctrine make it lawfull for them to vſe any Æquiuocations, or reſeruations (as they terme them) with their aduerſaries, almoſt vpon any aduantage? yea and that (leſt they ſhould not come to the height of impietie) in giuing anſwer not onely on their words, but vpon oth before the lawful Magiſtrate, though not their liues, but their leſt liberties only be touched? Which doctrine till it bee reuerſed, how dare we take their words or any aſſumpſit from them in any thing wherein wee would not be ouerreached? But ſuppoſe againe ſuch peaceable concluſions were not promiſed only, but purchaſed; what yet were

A wee better then before? what billes or bonds would or could they lay in ſure enough for our ſecuritie, ſo long as their doctrine ſtandeth in force publiſhed in word and writing, that fides hæreticis non eſt ſeruanda, and that Leagues with them are more honourable in breaking then in making? how long can we conceiue, would the continuance of our peace laſt longer, then by it they could with aduantage vndermine vs.

Tol. Inſtruct. Sacerd.

But becauſe I muſt ſhut vp many matters in fewe words, let vs ſee the preiudice which would enſue vpon ſuch pretended mediation, in matter of Religion: and firſt ſeeing they are a ſeede of the wicked, corrupt children, hauing forſaken the Lord, in whom from the ſole B of the foote, to the crowne of the head, there is nothing but wounds, and ſwellings, and ſores full of corruption; and ſeeing themſelues are become open Idolaters, their Cities cages of Idolatrie, their ſeruices all Idolatrous, hauing thus forſaken the couenant of their youth; ſeeing filthineſſe appeareth on their skirts; and finally ſeeing by ſeeking their iuſtification by the workes of the lawe, they are aboliſhed from Chriſt, and fallen from grace: (the which particulars haue beene clearely prooued by many our vnanſwered aud vnanſwerable bookes) to communicate with them by accepting; yea not abſtaining from the leaſt appearance of any of theſe euills; were no other but to expoſe and lay out ſelues open and naked to all manner of danger, of infection of our ſoules, defection C from our God, and in the ende of deſtruction both of bodie and ſoule. It was a dangerous diſeaſe which Iſraell brought out of Egypt, hauing through their long continuance there by reaſon of thoſe mariſhes, and the Riuer Nilus, (to which Lucretius in a diſtich appropriateth this diſeaſe) contracted the ſame vpon them: for the proouing, and purging whereof, the Lord inſtituted ſo many ceremonies and ſeparations: but farre more fearefull was that inward leproſie, euen that abhominable Idolatrie which they brought forth with them, and which coſt them ſo deare both in the wilderneſſe, and in the land of Canaan; yea ſo habituall and inbred was the infection, that although the Lord vſed moſt wiſe preuentions euery way: yet D preſently vpon their deliuerie out of the ſea, will it burſt forth, and become in the ende their vtter ouerthrowe. It cannot be but the ſtrangers which come with Iſrael out of Egypt, beeing accuſtomed to the Egyptian faſhion and diet, will ſtill be harping on their cucumbers, leekes, onyons, and garlicke: and drawe the Iſraelites to the ſame luſtings, though with the loathing of Manna it ſelfe; but ſuch an exceeding plague ſhall proceede from the Lord, that in perpetuall memorie thereof, the place ſhall be called the graues of luſting: and if the daughters of Moab may haue free acceſſe to Iſraell in Sittim, Iſrael will eaſily be ioyned to Baal Peor, till the wrath of the Lord be kindled, and there fall in one day, three and twentie thouſand. The certaine perill and ineuitable danger whereof, the Lord well perceiuing, did not onely charge his people to haue nothing to doe at all with the Heathen, leaſt by any meanes they ſhould be ſnared: but alſo that they ſhould be ſo oppoſite vnto them, that they ſhould in all appearances and circumſtances (and yet none will ſay the Lord herein was too ſeuere & ſtrait) be vnlike vnto them both in Religious and Ciuill exerciſes: for if they looke towards the Eaſt in their Temples in the honour of the Sunne, his people ſhall in his Sanctuary and Temple contrarily looke to the Weſt: and in the Weſt ſhall the Sanctum Sanctorum be ſet. If they offer ſacrifices vnto Oxen, Sheepe, Doues, Goates, &c. as vnto Gods: the Lord in deteſtation hereof, will haue his people to conſume and burne theſe creatures before him in ſacrifice: and hence was it that euery ſhepheard was an abhomination to the Egyptians: with whom they might not eate nor conuerſe, becauſe they did kill, eate, and ſacrifice thoſe beaſts, whom the other worſhipped as Gods. If they vſe to eate almoſt none but Swines fleſh, and yet neither that, before they haue ſacrificed of the kinde to the Moone, or Bacchus: the Lord eſpecially prohibiteth this meate of all other to his people, they ſhall not meddle with it, it ſhall be an abhomination vnto them. If their Prieſts [n] make their pates balde, ſhaue the locks off their beards, and make cuttings in their fleſh, as Baals Prieſts did; the Prieſts of the Sonnes of Aaron may not doe ſo. If they make glorious Altars, and plant Groues about them; the Iſraelites may not doe ſo, (eſpecially in the wilderneſſe) but either Altars of earth, which preſently vpon the remouall might be demoliſhed and caſt downe, leaſt the remainds ſhould be abuſed to ſuperſtition: or if of ſtones, they muſt be rough and rude, vnhewen and vnpoliſhed, leaſt any beautie of them ſhould ſolicite their preſeruation: as for groues, ſee Deut. 16. 21. If they ſhall in way of ſuperſtition, or worſhip, reſerue any portion of their ſacrifices: the Lord rather then he will haue any portion of the Paſchall Lambe preſerued till the morrow will haue it burnt with fire: neither ſhall Moſes bodie be knowne where it is buried, leaſt they ſhould make an Idoll of it. Nay which is more, and as worthy the noting, we may obſerue how the Lord euen in ciuill things draggeth his people from their ſocietie and fellowſhip: for firſt Iſrael is charged, that they ſhould goe no more backe to Egypt that way; ſo as the danger was (if any) by their neighbours, whoſe countries were adiacent vnto them: the which the Lord vſeth all meanes to preuent: both in that he willeth his people to nouriſh a perpetuall enmitie with the Moabite, and Ammonite, the peace and proſperitie of whome they may neuer ſeeke all their dayes: as alſo to debarre them from preſſing into his people, he chargeth that neither of them euer enter into the congregation of the Lord, to the tenth generation: intending hereby that they ſhould not riſe to preferment, authoritie or Magiſtracie among them. And as for the other ſtrangers, though Iſrael ſeemed in priuate reſpects to be, if not ſomewhat obliged and indebted to diuers of them, yet as it were bound to peace, and to hold their hands from open hoſtilitie; yet might they not be admitted into the congregation of God, vnto the third generation. Beſides this, foreſeeing that the next and moſt direct way, whereby the heathen might league and linck in themſelues with his people, might be by mariages and contracts: the Lord is very ſtudious that all ſuch meanes be cut off; and therefore would haue the diſtinctions of Tribes obſerued; with ſtraite prohibition, that no Iew (except the Leuite) ſhould marry out of his own Tribe, much leſſe without his owne people: whereof although I acknowledge other more maine cauſes (as the diſtinction of the Tribe of the Meſſiah from the reſt: the cleare acknowledgement of his race: the execution of the Lords whole regiment Eccleſiaſticall and Ciuill in that policie, fitted according to that diſtinction to their ſeuerall offices, and poſſeſſions) yet I thinke this is one included reaſon not to bee neglected, eſpecially ſeeing they had ſtraite charge againſt it. Againe, in caſe a ſeruant Iew would marry a ſtranger into his Maſters houſe, he was not at his departure to carrie his wiſe and children, for they were to bee his Maſters: but if hee would abide ſtill with her, hee was then ſhamefully to come before the Magiſtrat, and for euer renounce his libertie, vntill the Iubily releaſed him: by which ſtraite lawes the Lord would reſtraine euen ſlaues and ſeruants (who for the moſt part are neglected) from matching themſelues with ſtrangers. Such another law to this purpoſe is recorded, Deut. 21. 10. that if an Iſraelite in warre, ſhould ſee a bewtifull woman taken captiue, whom he did affect for his wife, it was ordered by God, that firſt all meanes ſhould bee vſed for the alienating of his affection, as that he muſt haue her home a moneth before, and not marrie vpon any ſudden motion. Secondly, ſhee muſt ſhaue her head to make her as ill fauored in his eies as might bee. Thirdly, ſhe muſt nouriſh her nailes, to make her yet more ſordid. Fourthly, ſhee muſt put off the garment wherein ſhe was taken, and put on baſe, and neglected garments fit for a penſiue captiue. Fifthly ſhee muſt bewaile her Father and mother a whole moneth, to ſhew how hardly, and ſorrowfully ſhee was brought from her fathers houſe, into the power of ſtrangers; and then if by all theſe meanes the man could not bee drawne from her loue, it was permitted to him to marrie her for his wiſe: which law letteth vs ſee how hardly the Lord endureth, and is drawne to admitte the leaſt libertie in this behalfe. How many ciuill things might I inſtance in, wherein the Lord ſtraitened his people, that they might bee vtterly vnlike the Gentiles in habit, manner of liuing, behauiour, and other like circumſtances, otherwiſe in themſelues very indifferent? which I had here inſerted but that I muſt conſider that I write an addition, not a booke; an admonition, and not an expoſition; and if yet theſe ordinances of God himſelfe, ſeeme in ſome mens opinions too ſtraite, and not to bee imitated of vs in regard of the Papiſts, towards whome we are not to bee ſo ſeuere, as ſo farre to ſeuer our ſelues; that is but the ſeeking of a knot in a ruſh, and to be acute in diſtinguiſhing, where God hath not diſtinguiſhed; and in effect to affirme, either that the Idolatrie of the Romiſh Church is not ſo vile and groſſe, as is that of other Idolaters: or elſe (ſeeing our people conuerſe with them more then any Idolaters) that to communicate with their Idolatrie, is nothing ſo dangerous now, as it was for Gods people to participate with the Idolatrie of the heathen againſt Gods expreſſe commaundement. But if with any ſuch the teſtimonie of man, bee greater then the teſtimonie of God (as it is commonly, with the Popiſh minded, who flie from the Scriptures vnto men, becauſe their doctrine is from below) let them looke vnto thoſe moſt auncient Councels, which were the purer, for ſixe hundred yeares after Chriſt; and they ſhall finde that the Church would haue her children diametrally oppoſed euen on lawfull things, to the Iewes, and heathen of whome they were in danger to bee corrupted. Thoſe were more famous, of Nice, [y] which decreed that the feaſt of Eaſter ſhould not be kept of Chriſtians, at that time, and in that manner that the Iewes did: that in nothing they might agree with them. That alſo of Bracca [z] decreed, that Chriſtians ſhould not decke their houſes with bay-leaues and greene boughes, (then which what can bee more indifferent?) neither reſt the ſame day from their callings wherein they did: nor keepe the firſt day of euery moneth as they did: It would bee too tedious, and argue forgetfulneſſe of my ſelfe, and no remembrance of my reader, to receite the teſtimonies of other Councels, Fathers, and our owne principall Writers in this behalfe: which otherwiſe eaſily had I beene carried vnto by the tenacity and ſtiffenes of many in this argument. But to end: as our Sauiour wiſhed his hearers, Beware of the leauen of the Phariſies; ſo let euery man beware of the leauen of the Papiſts: for what is Popiſh doctrine elſe, but a Phariſaicall leauen, alwaies to bee purged out of Churches, and ſtates; as the Iewes vpon ſome occaſions were to purge all leauen out of their houſes. Let no man ſay it is but a little, and ſuch a difference which may bee tolerated: for euen the Phariſies doctrine was much of it more true, then this Phariſaicall doctrine of theirs; yet was their leauen hid in it, (as

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRALE SIR EDVVARD COKE Knight, Lord chiefe Iuſtice of his Maieſties Court of Common Pleas;

Grace and Peace.

RIght Honourable: The word of God that onely Oracle of truth, hath pointed out the Enemie of mankinde, by his proper Characters, in ſundrie places. Our Sauiour tearmes him, the [a] Prince of this World; and a [b] Murtherer from the beginning. Peter compares him to [c] a roaring Lyon, that rangeth abroad in the earth, ſeeking whome he may deuoure. His attempts in regard of their qualitie, are called [d] νοήματα, ſubtill and deepe deuiſes; yea [e] μεθοδείας, plots exquiſitely contriued, and orderly framed, as it were in Methode. The meaning of the holy Ghoſt in theſe and ſuch like attributes, is, to expreſſe that meaſure of policie and power, which Satan hath reſerued vnto himſelfe euen in the ſtate of his Apoſtaſie, improoued by long experience, and inſtantly practiſed vpon the ſonnes of men, that he might ſet vp in the world, a ſpirituall regiment of ſinne, as a meane to encounter the kingdome of grace, and, if it were poſſible, to bring the ſame to ruine. To forbeare inſtances of open force made againſt God and his Church by other courſes, for the compaſſing of his deſires; how skilfully he workes his owne aduantage, by ſecret oppoſition, in the exerciſe of that curſed Art, which is the Subiect of the preſent Diſcourſe, is a point not vnworthie your Honourable conſideration.

The Power of this Prince of darkneſſe, being aboue the might of all ſenſible Creatures, and euery way ſeconded by the greatneſſe of his knowledge and experience, manifeſteth it ſelfe herein, for the moſt part, by workes of wonder, tranſcendent in regard of ordinarie capacitie, and diuerſly diſpenſed by his choſen inſtruments of both ſexes, ſometime in matter of Diuination, ſometime by Inchantment, ſometime by rare ſleights and deluſions; otherwhiles by hurting, by curing, by raiſing of Tempeſts, by ſpeedie conueyance and tranſportation from place to place, &c. and all to purchaſe vnto himſelfe admiration, feare, and faith, of the credulous world, which is vſually carried away, with affectation and applauſe of ſignes and wonders. His Policie, appeareth in a wiſe and exquiſite manner of framing and conceiuing both his practiſes and grounds; the one to procure credit and intertainment, the other that he may not faile of his purpoſe, but proceede vpon certenties.

Touching the manner of his practiſe. He ſtands reſolued, that the world hath taken notice of him to be [f] a lyar, and the father thereof: and therefore if he ſhould offer to ſpeake in his owne language, or informe an Art by Rules of his owne deuiſing; he might haply incurre ſuſpicion of falſhood. Hereupon he compoſeth his courſes μιμητικῶς, by way of counterfait and imitation, not of the actions and dealings of men, but of the order of Gods owne proceeding with his Church; holding it a ſure principle in policie, That actions will be much more effectuall, when they be framed vnto the beſt preſidents, then when they are ſuted to the direction of meaner examples. To this purpoſe, as God hath made a Couenant with his Church, binding himſelfe by promiſe to be their God, and requiring of them the condition of faith and obedience; ſo doth Satan indent with his Subiects by mutuall confederacie, either ſo-lemnly or ſecretly; whereby they bind themſelues on the one part to obſerue his Rules, and he on the other to accompliſh their deſires. Againe; God giues his Word, the Interpreter of his will, and his Sacraments, the ſeales of his promiſes, to which beeing rightly adminiſtred and receiued, he hath tied his owne preſence, and the worke of his grace in them that beleeue. Anſwerably to this, the Deuill giues a word of direction to his Inſtruments, and addeth vnto it, Charmes; Figures, Characters, and other outward Ceremonies, at the vſe whereof he hath bound himſelfe to be preſent, and to manifeſt his power in effecting the thing deſired. Furthermore, God hath reuealed his will to the Patriarchs, Prophets, and Apoſtles, by familiar [a] conference, by [b] dreames, by [c] inſpiration, by [d] Trances: In the ſame manner, Satan hath his Diuinors, and Soothſayers, his Pithoniſſes, his Caſſandraes, his Sibylles, to whom he maketh knowne things to come, by familiar preſence, by dreames, &c. To conclude, God had in the Olde Teſtament his Temple at Ieruſalem, yea his [e] Oracle, from whence he ſpake, and gaue the anſwer vnto Moſes: So of auncient times, the Deuil erected his Temple at * Dodona, and Delphos, whence he gaue his anſwers, for the ſatisfaction of the ſuperſtitious Heathen. Yea and at this day, as the Miniſters of God doe giue reſolution to the conſcience, in matters doubtfull and difficult; ſo the Miniſters of Satan, vnder the name of Wiſemen, and Wiſe-women, are at hand by his appointment, to reſolue, direct, and helpe ignorant and vnſetled perſons, in caſes of diſtraction, loſſe, or other outward calamities.

Now the Grounds whereupon he buildeth his proceedings for certaintie, are cunningly gathered from the diſpoſition of mans heart, by naturall corruption, and that in three ſpeciall inſtances. Firſt, he knowes that Man naturally out of the light of grace, hath but [f] a meere Soule, indued onely with ſome generall and confuſed notions; and as for matters of deeper apprehenſion touching God and heauenly things, there is a vaile of ignorance and blindneſſe drawne ouer the eyes of his minde. Whereupon, though he be apt to knowe and worſhip a God, and learne his will, yet for want of information by the word, he is prone to erre in the practiſe of his notion. Here Satan applyes himſelfe to mans meaſure, and at his owne will, drawes the minde into error, by his deluſions and impoſtures. This made the [g] Samaritans in the Olde Teſtament, and the ſuperſtitious [h] Athenians in the Newe, to worſhip an vnknowne God, that is, the [i] Deuill. Hence it was, that the greateſt Clarks of Greece, [k] Thales, Plato, and the reſt, for want of a better light, ſought vnto the Wizzards of Egypt, whom they called Prophets, men inſtructed by Satan in the grounds of Diuination. And of this ſort were Iannes and Iambres mentioned in the [l] Scriptures. Hence it was alſo that the auncient Heathen, hauing [m] no lawe and Teſtimonie from God, inquired at Soothſayers and murmuring Inchanters; others betooke themſelues, in matters of doubt and difficultie, to the olde Oracles of [n] Iupiter Ammon in Libya, of [o] Iupiter Dodonæus at Dodona in Epirus; of [p] Apollo at Delphos, of [q] Iupiter Trophonius in Bœotia, and the reſt; where the Deuill gaue the anſwer, ſometimes one way, and ſometimes another. Secondly, Satan by obſeruation perceiueth that man vpon a * weake and ignorant mind, is prone ſuperſtitiouſly to dote vpon the creatures, attributing ſome diuine operation or vertue to them, without any ground of Gods word, or common vnderſtanding; and conſequently diſpoſed to worſhippe God in ſome worke of man, or to ioyne to the ſame worſhip the inuentions of man, which he hath not commanded. Vpon which ground he made the Heathen to dote vpon their wiſemen, to regard [h] Soothſayers, and them that wrought with Spirits; The Chaldean [i] Philoſophers renowmed for their ſuperſtitions and Magicall courſes, to make the Heauens, fatalium Legum Tabulam, aſcribing that to the vertue of the Stars, which was knowne and done by Satanicall operation; The Magicians of Perſia, to admit of corruptions in their auncient good learning, and to giue themſelues, vpon the reading of the fabulous writings of the Chaldean Sorcerers, to the ſtudie of vnlawfull Arts inuented by himſelfe, both before and after the times of Daniel the Prophet: Laſtly, the ancient Romanes vpon a ſuperſtitious dotage, neuer to vndertake any buſineſſe of waight, niſi auſpicatô, vnleſſe they had luckie conſent and warrant from the Colledges of their Augurors erected by Romulus. Thirdly, there is a naturall Diſtemper in the minde of man, ſhewing it ſelfe in theſe particulars, That he cannot indure to ſtand in feare of imminent danger; That he ſwells in an high conceit of his owne deſerts, eſpecially when he is in lower eſtate, then he would bee; That he will not beare a wrong done, without reuenge; That hee reſts not ſatisfied, with the meaſure of knowledge receiued, but affecteth the ſearching of things ſecret, and not reuealed. When the minde is poſſeſſed with theſe troubled paſſions, with care to helpe it ſelfe; then comes the Deuill, and miniſtreth occaſion to vſe vnlawfull meanes in the generall, and forceth the minde by continuall ſuggeſtion, to determine it ſelfe in particular vpon his owne crafts. It was the caſe of [k] Saul, and of [l] Nebuchadnetſar. It cauſed many of the Heathen Philoſophers, to goe from Athens to Memphis, from Grecia to Syria, from men on earth to wicked Spirits in hell, to get more illumination at the hands of the Prince of darkeneſſe. It mooued ſundrie mal-contented [a] Prieſts of Rome, to aſpire vnto the chaire of Supremacie, by Diabolicall aſſiſtance; yea [b] to exerciſe Magicall arts, when they were Popes; and thereby to manifeſt indeed, that they were not the true Succeſſors of Simon Peter, but heyres of the vertues of Simon that Magus, who bewitched the People of Samaria, and profeſſed to doe that by the great power God, which hee wrought by the ayde and aſſiſtance of the Deuill.

If any doe thinke it ſtrange, that Satan ſhould in this ſort oppoſe himſelfe to the kingdome of God, and maintaine his owne principalitie, by ſuch vngodly arts and exerciſes; They muſt know, that this and all other euills come to paſſe euen by the will of God, who hath iuſtly permitted the ſame; To puniſh the wicked for their horrible ſinnes; as Saul for his wickedneſſe; To auenge himſelfe vpon Man for his ingratitude; who hauing the truth reuealed vnto him, will not beleeue or obey it; To waken & rouze vp the godly, who are ſleeping in any great ſinnes or infirmities: Laſtly, to trie and prooue his people, whether they will cleaue to him and his word, or ſeeke vnto Satan and wicked Spirits.

Now from the conſideration of the premiſſes, we conclude it a neceſſarie thing for the Church and people of God, to be acquainted with the dealing of Satan in this kinde, that knowing his ſubtile deuiſes, they may learne to auoyd them. For which purpoſe this Treatiſe was firſt framed, and now exhibited to your Lordſhip. The iuſt commendation whereof, aboue others formerly divulged touching this Argument, appeareth herein, that it ſerueth to the full opening and declaration of Satans Methode in the grounde and practiſes of Witchcraft. Wherein among many other remarkable points, it may pleaſe you to take ſpecial notice of theſe particulars. I. That they doe groſſely erre, who either in expreſſe tearmes denie that there be Witches, or in effect, and by conſequent; auouching that there is no league betweene them and the Deuill; or affirming they can doe no ſuch miraculous workes as are aſcribed to them. The former iſſueth plainly out of the bodie of the Diſcourſe. And for the latter; That there is a Couenant betweene them, either explicite in manner and forme, or implicite by degrees of ſuperſtitious proceeding in the vſe of meanes inſufficient in themſelues; is plainly taught and confirmed in the ſame. That Witches may and doe worke wonders, is euidently prooued: howbeit not by an omnipotent power, (as the *gainſayer hath vnlearnedly and improperly termed it) but by the aſſiſtance of Satan their Prince, who is a powerfull Spirit, but yet a Creature, as well as they. And the Wonders wrought by them, are not properly and ſimply miracles, but workes of wonder, becauſe they exceede the ordinarie power and capacitie of men, eſpecially ſuch as are ignorant of Satans habilitie, and the hidden cauſes in nature, whereby things are brought to paſſe. II. That the Witch truely conuicted, is to be puniſhed with death, the higheſt degree of puniſhment; and that by the Law of Moſes, the equitie whereof is perpetuall. Yea euen the better Witch of the two in common reputation, becauſe both are equally enemies to God, and true religion: and it is well knowne by true experience, that all profeſſed Socerers, are guiltie of many moſt monſtrous impieties. III. That the Miracles of the Popiſh Church at this day, are indeed either no Miracles, or falſe and deceitfull workes.

Touching

Touching corporal preſence in the Sacrament, which they affirme to be by miracle: If it were true, then miracles were not yet ceaſed, but ſhould ſtill be as ordinarie in the Church, as are the Sacraments. A point not onely confuted in the latter part of this Treatiſe, but alſo by the teſtimonie of purer Antiquitie. Lib. de civ. Dei.22. c.8. Auguſtine ſaith, That miracles were once neceſſarie to make the world beleeue the Goſpel: but he that now ſeekes a ſigne that he may beleeue, is a wonder, yea a monſter in nature. Homil. 19. oper. imperfect. Chryſoſtome concludeth vpon the ſame grounds, that there is now in the Church, no neceſſitie of working Miracles; and calles him a falſe Prophet, that now takes in hand to worke them. Againe, if there be a miracle in the Sacrament, it is contrarie to the nature of all thoſe that were wrought, either by Moſes and the Prophets, or by Chriſt, and his Apoſtles. For they were apparant to the eye, but this is inſenſible: and therefore neither of force to mooue admiration, nor to conuince the minde of man, and make him to beleeue. As for thoſe, which are pretended to be wrought by Saints, in that Church; if we make recourſe to the Primitiue times, wherein God gaue the gift, to breede faith in the Gentiles; we ſhall finde that the power of producing ſuch works, was neuer actually inherent in the Apoſtles, but diſpenſed by them in the name of Chriſt. Act.3. 12. 16. Neither was it in their libertie, to worke miracles, when they would, but when it pleaſed God, vpon ſpeciall cauſe, to call them thereunto. And if neither the power nor the will was in them, much leſſe is it likely to be found in any of the Saints. And for their Reliques, of what name ſoeuer, ſo greatly magnified and reſorted vnto; we denie there is any ſuch vertue in them. For they may not be thought to be more effectuall then the hem of Chriſts garment, from which the power of healing the woman did not proceede, but from himſelfe: Luk 8.46. Act.19. 11. 12. Or, then the Napkin of Paul, which did not cure the ſicke, but the power of God onely, diſpenſed by the hands of Paul. Miracles therefore, auouched by them, to be wrought at the Tombs and Statues of Saints, and by their reliques and Monuments, are but meere Satanicall wonders, ſeruing to maintaine Idolatry and ſuperſtition: and are in truth, no better then the wonders of the Donatiſts in S. Auguſtines time, aut figmenta mendacium hominum, aut portenta fallacium ſpirituum. Aug. lib. de vnitat. eccl. cap. 16. 2.Cor.4.4. IV. That the light of the Goſpel purely preached, is a ſoueraigne meane, to diſcouer and confound the power and policie of Satan in Witch-craft and Sorcerie. 2.Cor.10.4. The word of God preached, is the weapon of the Chriſtians warfare, and is mightie through God to caſt downe ſtrong holdes. At the diſpenſation of it by the diſciples of Chriſt, Satan fell from heauen as lightening. Luk.10.18. After the aſcenſion of Chriſt into Heauen, in the times of Claudius Ceſar *, the Deuill ſtirred vp ſundry perſons, who in regard of the admirable works which they did, by the helpe of Magick and Sorcerie, were accounted as Gods, and their Statues erected and worſhipped with gteat reuerence. * Iuſt. Mart. Apol. ad Anton. Amongſt the reſt one Simon, called by a kind of eminencie, Magus, practiſing his trade with ſucceſſe, to the admiration of the multitude, was holden to be the great power of God. Act.8.10. Whoſe dealing was firſt diſcouered by the light of the word, ſhining in the Miniſterie of the Apoſtles, and himſelfe conuicted with ſuch euidence of truth, to be an Iuſtrument of Satan, that he was forced at length to flie out of Samaria into the Weſterne parts, as Euſebius recordeth in his Eccleſiaſticall Hiſtorie. Euſeb. Eccl. hiſt. lib.2. cap.12. Rev.20.2. By this, Chriſt the true Angell of the Couenant, locked and bound vp Satan for a 1000. yeares after his aſcenſion, that he might not be ſo generally powerfull in ſeducing the Gentiles, as he had beene before his incarnation. But toward the expiration of thoſe yeares, when corruption began to creepe into the Papacie: when the Biſhops affected that Sea, and aſpired vnto it by Diabolicall arts: when the Canons, Decrees, Sentences, Synodalls, Decretalls, Clementines, Extrauagants, with other Lawes and Conſtitutions, preuailed aboue the Scriptures; then began Satan againe to erect his kingdome, and theſe workes of iniquitie to be ſet abroach.

Theſe points together with the whole worke enſuing, I humbly commend to your Honourable patronage, that vnder your protection they may freely paſſe to the common viewe of the world. Wherein if I ſeeme ouer-bold, thus to preſſe vpon your Lordſhip vnknowne; my anſwer is at hand; That all by-reſpects ſet a part, I haue beene hereunto induced many wayes. Firſt, vpon a reuerent opinion of thoſe rare gifts of knowledge and pietie, wherewith God hath beautified your perſon, and thereby aduanced you to high place, and eſtimation in this Common-wealth; Whereof thoſe your graue and iudicious ſpeeches, euen in the weightieſt matters touching God and Ceſar, as alſo thoſe many learned Law-writings, haue giuen large teſtimonie. From which hath iſſued the greatneſſe of your name, both in the preſent iudgement of the world, and in future expectation. Next, out of a reſolued perſwaſion of your Honourable diſpoſition, as in generall to the whole houſe of Leui, ſo particularly to thoſe, whoſe labours haue fruitefully flowed out of the Schooles of the Prophets, amongſt whom the Author of this booke, in his time, was none of the meaneſt. Laſtly, by the conſideration of the Argument, ariſing out of a Law Iudiciall, agreeable to the calling and qualitie of a Iudge. A Law penall in regard of the offence, and therefore ſutable to his proceedings, whoſe office is to heare with fauour, and to determine with equitie, to execute iuſtice with moderation. A law of the higheſt, and greateſt waight, immediately concerning God and his Honour, and therefore appertaining to him, that ſits in the place of God, to maintaine his right, that he may be with him, in the cauſe and iudgement. Deut.1.16. 2.Chron.19.6.

By ſuch Motiues, I haue encouraged my ſelfe, vnder aſſurance of your Lordſhips pardon, to preſent you with that, wherein you are moſt deſeruedly intereſſed; further intreating your fauourable interpretation and acceptance, both of the qualitie of the Worke, and of the paines of the Publiſher. And thus heartely wiſhing to your Lordſhip increaſe of grace and honour, with a daily influence of bleſſing and direction from heauen, vpon your graue conſultations and employments, I humbly take my leaue, and commend you to the grace of God, by whom doe rule all the Iudges of the earth. Prov.8.16. # A DISCOVRSE OF WITCHCRAFT.

EXOD. 22. 18.

Thou ſhalt not ſuffer a Witch to liue.

A THis Text containeth one of the Iudiciall Lawes of Moſes touching the puniſhment of Witchcraft: which argument I haue choſen to intreat of, for theſe cauſes:

Firſt, becauſe Witchcraft is a riſe and common ſinne in theſe our daies, and very many are intangled with it, beeing either practitioners thereof in their owne perſons, or at the leaſt, yeilding to ſeeke for helpe and counſell of ſuch as practiſe it.

Againe, there be ſundrie men who receiue it for a truth, that Witchcraft is nothing elſe but a meere illuſion, and Witches nothing but perſons deluded by the deuill: and this opinion B takes place not onely with the ignorant, but is holden and maintained by ſuch as are learned, who doe auouch it by word and writing, that there be no Witches, but as I ſaid before.

Vpon theſe and ſuch like conſiderations, I haue beene mooued to vndertake the Interpretation of this Iudiciall law, as a ſufficient ground of the doctrine which ſhall be deliuered. In handling whereof, two things are diſtinctly to be conſidered. The firſt, what is a Witch. The ſecond, what is her due and deſerued puniſhment. And both theſe beeing opened and handled, the whole meaning of the law will the better appeare.

C For the firſt. To giue the true deſcription of a Witch, is a matter of great difficultie, becauſe there be many differences and diuerſities of opinions touching this point; and therefore that we may properly, and truly define a Witch, we muſt firſt pauſe a while in opening the nature of Witchcraft, ſo farre forth as it is deliuered in the bookes of the Olde and Newe Teſtament, and may be gathered out of the true experience of learned and godly men.

Touching Witchcraft therefore I will conſider three points.

I. What Witchcraft is.

II. What is the ground of the whole practiſe thereof.

III. How many kinds and differences there be of it.

CHAP. I.

Of the Nature of Witchcraft.

TO begin with the firſt: According to the true meaning of all the places of holy Scripture which treat of this point, it may be thus deſcribed:

Witchcraft is a wicked Art, ſeruing for the “ working of wonders, by the aſſiſtance of the “ Deuill, ſo farre forth as God ſhall in iuſtice permit. “

Sect. I.

I ſay it is an Arte, becauſe it is commonly ſo called and eſteemed amongſt men, and there is reaſon why it ſhould be thus tearmed. For as in all good and lawfull arts, the whole practiſe thereof is performed by certaine rules and precepts, and without them nothing can be done: ſo Witchcraft hath certaine ſuperſtitious grounds and principles whereupon it ſtandeth, and by which alone the feats & practiſes thereof are commonly performed.

If it be demaunded, what theſe rules be, and whence they had their beginning, conſidering that euery Arte hath reference to ſome author, by whome it was originally taught and deliuered? I anſwer, that they were deuiſed firſt by Satan, and by him reuealed to wicked and vngodly perſons of auncient times, as occaſion ſerued: who receiuing them from him, became afterward, in the iuſt iudgement of God, his inſtruments to report & conuey them to others from hand to hand.

For manifeſtation whereof, it is to be conſidered, that God is not onely in generall a Soueraigne Lord and King ouer all his creatures, whether in heauen or earth, none excepted, no not the deuils themſelues; but that he exerciſeth alſo a ſpeciall kingdome, partly of grace in the Church militant vpon earth, and partly of glorie ouer the Saints and Angels, members of the Church triumphant in heauen. Now in like manner the Deuill hath a kingdome called in Scripture the kingdome of darknes, whereof himſelfe is the head and gouernour, for which cauſe he is tearmed [a] the Prince of darknes, [b] the God of this world, ruling and effectually working in the hearts of the children of diſobedience.

[a] Eph.6.12.
[b] 2.Cor.4.4.

Againe, as God hath enacted Lawes, whereby his kingdome is gouerned, ſo hath the Deuill his ordinances, whereby he keepeth his ſubiects in awe and obedience, which generally and for ſubſtance, are nothing els but tranſgreſſions of the very lawe of God. And amongſt them all, the precepts of Witchcraft are the very chiefe and moſt notorious. For by them eſpecially he holdes vp his kingdome, and therefore more eſteemeth the obedience of them, then of other. Neither doth he deliuer them indifferently to euery man, but to his owne ſubiects, the wicked; and not to them all, but to ſome ſpeciall and tried ones, whom he moſt betruſteth with his ſecrets, as beeing the fitteſt to ſerue his turne, both in reſpect of their willingneſſe to learne and practiſe, as alſo for their abilitie to become inſtruments of the miſchiefe, which he intendeth to others.

If it be here asked, whence the Deuill did fetch and conceiue his rules? I anſwer, out of the corruption and deprauation of that great meaſure of knowledge he once had of God, and of all the duties of his ſeruice. For that beeing quite depraued by his fall, he turnes the ſame to the inuenting and deuiſing of what he is poſſibly able, againſt God and his honour. Hereupon, well perceiuing that God hath expreſſely commanded to renounce and abhorre all practiſes of Witch-craft, he hath ſet abroach this art in the world, as a maine pillar of his kingdome, which notwithſtanding is flatly and directly oppoſed, to one of the maine principall lawes of the kingdome of God, touching the ſeruice of himſelfe in ſpirit and truth.

Ioh.4.24.

Againe, the reaſon why he conueiues theſe vngodly principles and practiſes from man to man is, becauſe he findes in experience, that things are farre more welcome and agreeable to the common nature of mankind, which are taught by man like vnto themſelues, then if the deuill ſhould perſonally deliuer the ſame, to each man in ſpeciall. Hereupon, he takes the courſe at firſt to inſtruct ſome fewe onely, who beeing taught by him, are apt to conuey that which they knowe to others. And hence in probabilitie this deuilliſh trade, had his firſt originall and continuance.

Sect. II.

In the ſecond place, I call it a wicked art, to diſtinguiſh it from all good and lawfull arts, taught in ſchooles of learning, which as they are warrantable by the word of God, ſo are they no leſſe profitable and neceſſarie in the Church. Againe, to ſhew the nature and qualitie of it, that it is a moſt vngracious and wicked art, as appeareth by the Scriptures. For when Saul had broken the expreſſe commandement of God, in ſparing Agag and the beſt things; Samuel tels him, that rebellion and diſobedience is as the ſinne of Witchcraft, that is, a moſt horrible and grieuous crime, like vnto that wicked, capitall, and mother ſinne. 1.Sam.15.23.

Sect. III.

Thirdly, I adde, tending to the working or producing of wonders, wherein is noted the proper ende of this art, whereby I put a further difference betweene it, and others that are godly and lawfull.

Nowe if queſtion be mooued, why man ſhould deſire by Witchcraft, to worke wonders? I anſwer, the true and proper cauſe is this: The firſt temptation, whereby the deuill preuailed againſt our firſt parents, had incloſed within it many ſinnes; for the eating of the forbidden fruite, was no ſmall or ſingle offence, but as ſome haue taught, contained in it the breach of euery Commandement of the Morall lawe, Amongſt the reſt, Satan laboured to bring them to the ſinne of diſcontentment, whereby they ſought to become as Gods, that is, better then God had made them, not reſting content with the condition of men. This ſinne was then learned, and could neuer ſince be forgotten, but continually is deriued from them to all their poſteritie, and now is become ſo common a corruption in the whole nature of fleſh and blood, that there is ſcarſe a man to be found, who is not originally tainted therewith as he is a man.

This corruption ſhewes it ſelfe principally in two things, both which are the maine cauſes of the practiſes of Witchcraft.

Firſt, in mans outward eſtate: for he beeing naturally poſſeſſed with a loue of himſelfe, and an high conceite of his owne deſeruing, when he liues in baſe and low eſtate, whether in regard of pouertie, or want of honour and reputation, which he thinkes by right is due vnto him: he then growes to ſome meaſure of griefe and ſorrow within himſelfe. Hereupon, hee is mooued to yeeld himſelfe to the Deuil, to bee his vaſſall and ſcholler in this wicked art, ſuppoſing that by the working of ſome wonders, he may be able in time to releeue his pouertie, and to purchaſe to himſelfe credit and countenance amongſt men.

It were eaſie to ſhewe the truth of this, by examples of ſome perſons, who by theſe meanes haue riſen from nothing, to great places and prepreferments in the world. In ſtead of all, it appeareth in certaine Popes of Rome, as Sylueſter the ſecond, Benedict the eight, Alexander the ſixt, Iohn the 20, and the twentie one, &c. who for the attayning of the Popedome (as hiſtories record) gaue themſelues to the deuil in the practiſe of witchcraft, that by the working of wonders, they might riſe from one ſtep of honour to another, vntill they had ſeated themſelues in the chaire of the Papacie. So great was their deſire of eminencie in the Church, that it cauſed them to diſlike meaner conditions of life, and neuer to ceaſe aſpiring, though they incurred thereby the hazard of good conſcience, and the loſſe of their ſoules.

August. confeſſ. l. 10. c. 35

The ſecond degree of diſcontentment, is in the minde and inward man; and that is curioſitie; when a man reſteth not ſatisfied with the meaſure of inward gifts receiued, as of knowledge, wit, vnderſtanding, memorie, and ſuch like, but aſpires to ſearch out ſuch things as God would haue kept ſecret: and hence hee is mooued to attempt the curſed art of Magick and Witchcraft, as a way to get further knowledge in matters ſecret and not reueiled, that by working of wonders, he may purchaſe fame in the world, and conſequently reape more benefit by ſuch vnlawfull courſes, then in likelihood he could haue done, by ordinarie and lawfull meanes.

Sect. IV.

Fourthly, it is affirmed in the deſcription, that Witchcraft is practiſed by the aſſiſtance of the Deuill, yet the more fully to diſtinguiſh it from all good, lawfull, and commendable arts. For in them experience teacheth, that the Arts-maſter is able by himſelfe to practiſe his art, and to doe things belonging thereunto, without the helpe of another. But in this it is otherwiſe; for here the worke is done by the helpe of another, namely, the Deuill, who is confederate with the Witch. The power of effecting ſuch ſtrange workes, is not in the art, neither doth it flow from the skill of the Sorcerer, man or woman, but is deriued wholly from Satan, and is brought into execution by vertue of mutuall confederacie, betweene him and the Magician.

Now that this part of the deſcription may be more cleerely manifeſted, we are to proceede to a further point, to ſhew what kind of wonders they be which are ordinarily wrought by the miniſterie and power of the deuill.

§ 1. Wonders therefore be of two ſorts; either true and plaine, or lying and deceitfull.

A true wonder is a rare worke, done by the power of God ſimply, either aboue, or againſt the power of nature, and it is properly called a miracle. The Scripture is plentifull in examples of this kind. Of this ſort, was the deuiding of the rede ſea, and making it drie land by a mightie eaſt wind, that the children of Iſrael might paſſe through it, Exod. 14.21. For though the Eaſt wind be naturally of great force to mooue the waters, and to drie the earth; yet to part the ſea aſunder, and to make the waters to ſtand as walls on each ſide, and the bottome of the ſea as a pauement, this is a worke ſimply aboue the naturall power of any wind, and therefore is a miracle. Againe, ſuch were the wonders done by Moſes and Aaron before Pharaoh in Egypt, one whereof, in ſtead of many, was the turning of Aarons rodde into a ſerpent, a worke truely miraculous. For it is aboue the power of naturall generation, that the ſubſtance of one creature ſhould be really turned into the ſubſtance of another, as the ſubſtance of a rodde into the ſubſtance of a ſerpent. Of the like kinde, were the ſtanding of the Sunne in the firmament without moouing in his courſe, for a whole day, Ioſh. 10. 13. the going backe of the Sunne in the firmament tenne degrees, 2. King. 20. 11. the preſeruation of the three men, Shadrach, Meſhach, and Abednego in the midſt of the hoat fiery fornace, Dan. 3. 25. and of Daniel in the lyons den, Dan. 6. 22. the feeding of fiue thouſand men, beſide women and children, with fiue loaues and two fiſhes, Matth. 14. 20. 21. the curing of the eyes of the blinde man with ſpittle and clay tempered together, Ioh. 9. 6. 7. &c.

Now the effecting of a miracle in this kinde, is a worke proper to God onely; and no creature, man, or Angell, can doe any thing either aboue or contrarie to nature, but he alone which is the Creator. For as God in the beginning made all things of nothing, ſo he hath reſerued to himſelfe, as a peculiar worke of his almightie power, to change or aboliſh the ſubſtance, propertie, motion, and vſe of any creature. The reaſon is, becauſe he is the author and creator of nature, and therefore at his pleaſure, is perfectly able to command, reſtraine, enlarge, or extend the power and ſtrength thereof, without the helpe or aſſiſtance of the creature.

Againe, the working of a miracle is a kinde of creation, for therein a thing is made to be, which was not before. And this muſt needs be proper to God alone, by whoſe power, things that are, were once produced out of things that did not appeare. The concluſion therefore muſt needes be this, which Dauid confeſſeth in the Pſalme: God onely doth wondrous things, Pſal. 136. 4. that is, works ſimply wonderfull.

But it is alleadged to the contrarie, that the Prophets in the olde Teſtament, and the Apoſtles in the newe, did worke miracles. I anſwer, they did ſo, but how? not by their owne power, but by the power of God, beeing onely his inſtruments, whom he vſed for ſome ſpeciall purpoſe in thoſe works; and ſuch as did not themſelues cauſe the miracle, but God in and by them. The ſame doth Peter and Iohn acknowledge, when they had reſtored the lame man to the perfect vſe of his limmes, that by their power and godlineſſe, they had not made the man to goe, Act. 3. 12.

Againe, it is obiected, that our Sauiour Chriſt in his manhood wrought many miracles, as thoſe before mentioned, and many more. Anſ. Chriſt as he was man did ſomething in the working of miracles, but not all. For in euery miraculous worke there be two things; the worke it ſelfe, and the acting or diſpenſing of the worke: the worke it ſelfe, beeing by nature and ſubſtance miraculous, conſidering it was aboue or againſt the order of naturall cauſes, did not proceede from Chriſt as man, but from him as God; but the diſpenſation of the ſame, in this or that viſible manner, to the viewe of men, was done and performed by his manhood. For example; The raiſing vp of Lazarus out of the graue, hauing beene dead foure daies, was a miracle: to the effecting whereof, both the Godhead and the manhood of Chriſt concurred, by their ſeuerall and diſtinct actions. The manhood onely vttered the voice, and bad Lazarus come forth, but it was the godhead of Chriſt that fetched his ſoule from heauen, and put it againe into his bodie, yea which gaue life and power to Lazarus, to heare the voice vttered, to riſe and come forth, Ioh. 11.43. In like manner, when he gaue ſight to the blinde, Matth. 20. 34. he touched their eyes with the hands of his manhood, but the power of opening them, and making them to ſee, came from his Godhead, whereby he was able to doe all things. And in all other miraculous workes which he did, the miracle was alwaies wrought by his diuine power onely, the outward actions and circumſtances that accompanied the ſame, proceeded from him as he was man.

Now, if Chriſt as he is man, cannot worke a true miracle, then no meere creature can doe it, no not the Angels themſelues, & conſequently not Satan, it beeing a meere ſupernaturall worke, performed onely by the omnipotent power of God.

§ 2. The ſecond ſort of wonders, are lying and deceitfull, which alſo are extraordinarie workes in regard of man, becauſe they proceed not from the vſuall and ordinarie courſe of nature: and yet they be no miracles, becauſe they are done by the vertue of nature, and not aboue or againſt nature ſimply, but aboue and againſt the ordinarie courſe thereof: and theſe are properly ſuch wonders, as are done by Satan and his inſtruments: examples whereof we ſhall ſee afterwards.

If any man in reaſon thinke it not likely that a creature ſhould be able to work extraordinarily by naturall meanes; he muſt remember that thongh God hath reſerued to himſelfe alone the power of aboliſhing and changing nature, the order whereof he ſet and eſtabliſhed in the creation, yet the alteration of the ordinarie courſe of nature, hee hath put in the power of his ſtrongeſt creatures, Angels and deuils. That the Angels haue receiued this power, and doe execute the ſame vpon his command or permiſſion, it is manifeſt by Scripture, and the proofe of it is not ſo neceſſarie in this place. But that Satan is able to doe extraordinarie workes by the helpe of nature (which is the queſtion in hand) it ſhall appeare, if we conſider in him theſe things.

Firſt, the deuill is by nature a ſpirit, & therefore of great vnderſtanding, knowledge, and capacitie in all naturall things, of what ſort, qualitie, and condition ſoeuer, whether they bee cauſes or effects, whether of a ſimple or mixt nature. By reaſon whereof he can ſearch more deeply & narrowly into the grounds of things, then all corporall creatures that are clothed with fleſh and blood.

Secondly, he is an auncient ſpirit, whoſe skill hath beene confirmed by experience of the courſe of nature, for the ſpace almoſt of ſixe thouſand yeares. Hence he hath attained to the knowledge of many ſecrets, and by long obſeruation of the effects, is able to diſcerne and judge of hidden cauſes in nature, which man in likelyhood cannot come vnto by ordinarie meanes, for want of that opportunitie both of vnderſtanding and experience. Hereupon it is, that whereas in nature there be ſome properties, cauſes, and effects, which man neuer imagined to be; others, that men did once know, but are now forgot; ſome, which men knewe not, but might know; and thouſands which can hardly, or not at all be knowne: all theſe are moſt familiar vnto him, becauſe in themſelues they bee no wonders, but only myſteries and ſecrets, the vertue and effect whereof he hath ſomtime obſerued ſince his creation.

Thirdly, he is a ſpirit of wonderfull power and might, able to ſhake the earth, and to confound the creatures inferiour vnto him in nature and condition, if he were not reſtrained by the omnipotent power of God. And this power, as it was great by his creation, ſo it is not impayred by his fall, but rather increaſed and made more forcible by his irreconciliable malice he beareth to mankind, ſpecially the ſeede of the woman.

Fourthly, there is in the deuill an admirable quickneſſe and agilitie, proceeding from his ſpirituall nature, whereby he can very ſpeedily and in a ſhort ſpace of time, conueigh himſelfe and other creatures into places far diſtant one from another. By theſe foure helpes, Satan is enabled to doe ſtrange works. Strange I ſay to man, whoſe knowledge ſince the fall is mingled with much ignorance, euen in naturall things; whoſe experience is of ſhort continuance, and much hindred by forgetfullneſſe; whoſe agilitie by reaſon of his groſſe nature, is nothing, if he had not the helpe of other creatures; whoſe power is but weakeneſ and infirmity in compariſon of Satans.

Yet if there be any further doubt, how Satan can by theſe helps worke wonders, we may be reſolued of the truth thereof by conſidering three other things. Firſt, that by reaſon of his great knowledge and skill in nature, he is able to apply creature to creature, and the cauſes efficient to the matter, and thereby bring things to paſſe, that are in common conceit impoſſible.

Secondly, he hath power to mooue them, not onely according to the ordinarie courſe, but with much more ſpeed and celeritie.

Thirdly, as he can apply and mooue, ſo by his ſpirituall nature he is able, if God permit, to conuey himſelfe into the ſubſtance of the creature, without any penetration of dimenſions, and beeing in the creature, although it be neuer ſo ſolide, he can worke therein, not onely according to the principles of the nature thereof, but as farre as the ſtrength and abilitie of thoſe principles will poſſibly reach & extend themſelues. Thus it appeareth, that the deuil can in generall worke wonders.

§ 3. Now more particularly, the Deuils wonders are of two ſorts. Illuſions, or reall actions.

An illuſion is a worke of Satan, whereby he deludeth or deceiueth man. And it is twofold, either of the outward ſenſes, or of the minde. An illuſion of the outward ſenſes, is a worke of the deuill, whereby he makes a man to think that he heareth, ſeeth, feeleth or toucheth ſuch things as indeede he doth not. This the deuill can eaſily doe diuers waies, euen by the ſtrength of nature. For example, by corrupting the inſtruments of ſenſe, as the humor of the eye, &c. or by altering and changing the ayre, which is the meanes whereby we ſee, and ſuch like.

Auguſt. de civ. Dei. l. 18. c. 18.

Experience teacheth vs, that the deuill is a skilfull practitioner in this kinde, though the meanes whereby he worketh ſuch feats, be vnknowne vnto vs. In this manner Paul affirmeth that the Galatians were deluded, when he ſaith, O fooliſh Galatians, who hath bewitched you? Gal. 3. 1. Where he vſeth a word * borrowed from the practiſe of Witches and ſorcerers, who vſe to caſt a miſte (as it were) before the eies, to dazle them, and make things to appeare vnto them, which indeede they doe not ſee; and the ground of Pauls compariſon, is that which he takes for a graunted truth, that there be ſuch deluſions, whereby mens ſenſes are and may be corrupted by ſatanicall operation.

Thus againe the deuil by the Witch of Endor deceiued Saul in the appearance of Samuel, 1. Sam. 28. making him beleeue that it had beene Samuel indeede, whereas it was but a meere counterfeit of him, as ſhall appeare hereafter. Againe, the deuill knowing the conſtitutions of men and the particular diſeaſes whereunto they are inclined, takes the vantage of ſome, and ſecondeth the nature of the diſeaſe by the concurrence of his owne deluſion, thereby corrupting the imagination, and working in the minde a ſtrong perſwaſion, that they are become, that which in truth they are not. This is apparant in that diſeaſe which is termed Lycanthropia, where ſome, hauing their brains poſſeſſed & diſtempered with melancholy, haue verily thought thēſelues to be wolues, & ſo haue behaued thēſelues. And the hiſtories of mē in former ages, haue recorded ſtrange teſtimonies of ſome that haue beene thus turned into wolues, lyons, dogges, birds, and other creatures, which could not be really in ſubſtance, but onely in appearance, and phantaſie corrupted, and ſo theſe records are true. For God in his iuſt iudgment may ſuffer ſome men ſo to be bewitched by the deuill, that to their conceit they may ſeeme to be like theſe bruite beaſts, though indeede they remaine true men ſtill. For it is a worke ſurmounting the deuils power, to change the ſubſtance of any one creature, into the ſubſtance of another. By this kind of deluſion the Church of Rome, in the times of blindneſſe and ignorance, hath taken great aduantage, and much encreaſed her riches and honour. For there be three points of the religion of that Church, to witte, Purgatorie, Innocation of Saints, and honouring of Reliques, whereby ſhe hath notably inriched her ſelfe, all which had their firſt foundation from theſe, and ſuch like Satanicall impoſtures. For the onely way whereby they haue brought the common ſort to yeeld vnto them, both for beleefe and practiſe, hath beene by deluding their outward ſenſes, with falſe apparitions of ghoſts and ſoules of men, walking and ranging abroad after their departure, and ſuch like; whereby ſimple perſons, ignorant of their fetches and deluſions, haue beene much affrighted, and cauſed through extremitie of feare and dread, to purchaſe their owne peace and ſecuritie, by many and great expenſes. And indeede theſe were the ſtrongeſt arguments that euer they had, and which moſt preuailed with the common people as is manifeſt in ſtories of all nations and ages, where ſuch deceits haue taken place, though oftentimes by the iuſt iudgement of God, they were taken in their craft, & their feats reuealed.

The ſecond kinde of illuſion, is of the mind, whereby the deuill deceiues the minde, and makes a man thinke that of himſelfe which is not true. Thus experience teacheth, that he hath deluded men both in former & later times, who haue auouched and profeſſed themſelues to be Kings, or the ſonnes of Kings. Yea ſome haue holden themſelues to be Chriſt, ſome to be Elias, ſome to be Iohn the Baptiſt, and ſome extraordinarie Prophets. And the like conceits haue entred into the minds of ſundrie Witches, by the ſuggeſtion and perſwaſion of the deuill. To whom, when they haue wholly reſigned their ſoules and bodies, they haue beene mooued to beleeue things impoſſible touching thēſelues, as that they haue indeed beene changed into other creatures, as catts, birds, miſe, &c. The inquiſitions of Spaine and other countries, wherein theſe and ſuch like things are recorded touching Witches really metamorphoſed into ſuch creatures, cannot be true; conſidering that it is not in the power of the deuil, thus to change ſubſtances into other ſubſtances. And thoſe conuerſions recorded by them, were onely Satans illuſions, wherewith the minds of Witches were poſſeſſed, and nothing elſe; which though they were extraordinary, (as the reſt of this kind are) yet they went not beyond the power of nature.

The ſecond ſort of the deuils wonders, are reall workes, that is, ſuch as are indeede that which they ſeeme and appeare to be. Theſe, howſoeuer to men that knowe not the natures of things, nor the ſecret and hidden cauſes thereof, they may ſeeme very ſtrange and admirable, yet they are no true miracles, becauſe they are not aboue & beyond the power of nature.

If it be here alleadged, that the deuills works are not reall and true actions, becauſe the holy Ghoſt calleth them Lying wonders, 2. Theſſ. 2. 9. I anſwer, that they are called Lying wonders, not in reſpect of the works themſelues, for they were wonders truely done and effected; but in regard of the deuils ende and purpoſe in working them, which is to lie vnto men, and by them to deceiue. The truth of which point will appeare in the view of ſome particular exãples.

Iob 1.16. Firſt, we reade in the hiſtorie of Iob, that Satan brought downe fire from heauen, which burnt vp Iobs ſheepe and ſeruants; and cauſed a mightie winde to blowe down the houſe vpon his children, as they were feaſting, to deſtroy them. (verſ.19.) Againe, he ſmot the bodie of Iob with botches and boyles. All theſe were true and reall works, very ſtrange and admirable, and yet no miracles, becauſe they exceeded not the compaſſe of nature. For firſt, when he caſt downe the fire from heauen, he did not create the fire of nothing, for that is a worke proper to God alone, but applyed creature to creature, and thereof produced ſuch a matter as was fit to make fire of. If it be demanded, how he is able to doe this? we muſt remember, that his knowledge in natural cauſes is great, and therefore he was not ignorant of the materiall cauſe of fire, which beeing throughly knowne and found out, Satan brought fire vnto it, and ſo putting fire to the matter of fire, he brought it down by his power and agilitie from heauen, vpon the cattell and ſeruants of Iob. Againe, the winde which blewe downe the houſe, where his ſonnes and daughters were eating and drinking, was not created by the deuill, but he knowing well the matter whereof winds are generated naturally, added matter to matter, and thence came the winde; whereunto he ioynes himſelfe, beeing a ſpirit of a ſwift and ſpeedie nature, and ſo makes it for his owne purpoſe, the more violent and forcible. Thirdly, he ſmote Iobs bodie with ſore boyles, from the crowne of his head to the ſole of his foote. Now this may ſeeme ſtrange that he ſhould haue ſuch power ouer mans bodie, as to cauſe ſuch diſeaſes to breed in it. Therefore we are further to vnderſtand, that his knowledge extendeth it ſelfe to the whole frame and diſpoſition of mans bodie, whereby it comes to paſſe, that the cauſes of all diſeaſes are well knowne vnto him, and he is not ignorant how the humors in the bodie may be putrified, and what corrupt humors will breed ſuch and ſuch diſeaſes, and by what meanes the aire it ſelfe may be infected: hereupon preparing his matter, and applying cauſe to cauſe, he practiſed vpon the bodie of Iob, & filled him with grieuous ſores.

Another example of Satans reall workes is this. By reaſon of his great power and skill, he is able to appeare in the forme and ſhape of a man, and reſemble any perſon or creature, and that not by deluding the ſenſes, but by aſſuming to himſelfe a true bodie. His power is not ſo large, as to create a bodie, or bring againe a ſoule into a bodie, yet by his dexteritie and skil in naturall cauſes he can worke wonderfully. For he is able, hauing gathered together fit matter, to ioyne member to member, and to make a true bodie, either after the likeneſſe of man, or ſome other creature; and hauing ſo done, to enter into it, to mooue and ſtirre it vp and downe, and therein viſibly and ſenſibly to appeare vnto man; which though it be a ſtrange work, and beſides the ordinary courſe of nature, yet it is not ſimply aboue the power thereof.

For a third inſtance. The deuill is able to vtter a voice in plaine words and ſpeech, anſwerable to mans vnderſtanding in any language. Not that he can take vnto himſelfe, beeing a ſpirit, an immediate power to ſpeake or frame a voyce of nothing without meanes, but knowing the naturall and proper cauſes and meanes by which men doe ſpeake, by them he frames in himſelfe the voyce of a man, and plainely vtters the ſame in a knowne language. In this manner he abuſed the tongue and mouth of the ſerpent, when in plaine words he tempted Eue to eate the forbidden fruit. Now it is to be remembred here, that when the deuill ſpeakes in a creature, it muſt be ſuch a creature, as hath the inſtruments of ſpeech, or ſuch whereby ſpeech may be framed and vttered, not otherwiſe: for it was neuer heard that he ſpake in a ſtocke or a ſtone, or any created entity, that had not the meanes and power of vttering a voice, at leaſt in ſome ſort; it beeing a worke peculiar to the Creator, to giue power of vtterance where it is not by creation. Againe, when he frameth a voyce in a creature, he doth it not by giuing an immediate power to ſpeake, for that he cannot doe, and the creature abuſed by him, remaineth in that regard, as it was before. But it beeing naturally fitted and diſpoſed to vtter a voice, though not perfectly to ſpeak as a man he furthereth and helpeth nature in it, and addeth to the facultie thereof a preſent vſe of words, by ordering and ruling the inſtruments to his intended purpoſes. And to conclude this point, looke what ſtrange works and wonders may be truely effected by the power of nature, (though they be not ordinarily brought to paſſe in the courſe of nature) thoſe the deuil can doe, and ſo farre forth as the power of nature will permit, he is able to work true wonders, though for a falſe and euill end.

Here a queſtion is mooued by ſome, whether the deuil can change one creature into another, as a man or a woman into a beaſt? for ſome, notwithſtanding the doctrine already taught, are of opinion, that he can turne the bodies of Witches into other creatures, as hares, cattes, and ſuch like. Anſ. The tranſmutation of the ſubſtance of one creature into another, as of a man into a beaſt of what kind ſoeuer, is a worke ſimply aboue the power of nature, and therefore cannot be done by the deuill, or any creature. For it is the proper work of God alone, as I haue ſaid, to create, to change, or aboliſh nature.

It is obiected, that ſuch changes haue beene made. For Lots wife was turned into a pillar of ſalt, Gen. 19. 26. Anſ. It is true, but that was done by the mightie power of God, neither can it be prooued that any creature, Angel, or other was euer able to doe the like.

But it is further ſaid, that king Nabuchadnezzar was turned into a beaſt, and did eate graſſe with the beaſts of the field, Dan. 4. 30. Anſ. There is no ſuch matter: his ſubſtance was not changed, ſo as his bodie became the bodie of a beaſt indeed, but his condicions onely were altered by the iudgement of God vpon his mind, whereby he was ſo farre forth bereaued of humane ſenſe and vnderſtanding. Againe, for his behauiour and kinde of life, he became altogether brutiſh for the time, and excepting onely his outward forme and ſhape, no part of humanitie could appeare in him: but that he retained his humane bodie ſtill, it is euident by his owne words, verſ. 31. when he ſaith, And mine vnderſtanding was reſtored to me: which argueth plainly, that the hand of God was vpon him in ſome kinde of madneſſe and furie, and therefore that there was not a change of his bodie & ſubſtance, but a ſtrange and fearefull alteration in his minde and outward behauiour. And though ſuch a tranſmutation ſhoud be granted, yet is makes nothing for the purpoſe, conſidering it was the worke of God onely, and not of the deuill. And thus we ſee what kinde of wonders the Deuill can bring to paſſe. The meditation of which point may teach vs two things.

Firſt, that the working of wonders is not a thing that will commend man vnto God, for the deuill himſelfe, a wicked ſpirit, can worke them: and many ſhall alledge this in the day of iudgement, that they haue by the name of God caſt out deuills, and done many great workes, to whome notwithſtanning the Lord will ſay, I neuer knew you; depart from me ye workers of iniquitie, Matth. 7. 22. 23. It behoooueth vs rather to get vnto our ſelues the precious gifts of faith, repentance, and the feare of God, yea to goe before others in a godly life and vpright conuerſation, then to excell in effecting of ſtrange workes. When the ſeauentie Diſciples came to our Sauiour Chriſt with ioy, and tolde him, that euen the deuills were ſubdued vnto thẽ through his name, Luk. 10. 17. he counſels them, not to reioyce in this, that wicked ſpirits were ſubdued vnto them, but rather, becauſe their names were written in heauen, verſ. 20.

Indeed to be able to worke a wonder, is an excellent gift of God, and may miniſter matter of reioycing, when it proceedeth from God: but ſeeing the deuill receiued this power by the gift of creation, our ſpeciall ioy muſt not be therein, but rather in this, that we are the adopted ſonnes of God, in which priuiledge the deuill hath no part with vs. And therefore the Apoſtle, 1. Cor. 13. making a compariſon of the gifts of the ſpirit, as of ſpeaking diuers tongues, of prophecying, and working miracles, with loue: in the ende, wiſheth men to labour for the beſt gifts, which are faith, hope, and loue, becauſe by theſe we are made partakers of Chriſt, on whom we ought to ſet our hearts, & in whome we are commanded alwaies to reioyce. Phil. 4. 4.

Secondly, we learne from hence, not to beleeue or receiue a doctrine now or at any time, becauſe it is confirmed by wonders. For the deuill himſelfe is able to confirme his errours and Idolatrous ſeruices by ſtrange and extraordinarie ſignes, by which vſually he laboureth to auouch & verifie the groſſeſt points of falſehood in matter of religion. On the contrarie, we muſt not reiect or contemne a doctrine, becauſe it is not thus confirmed. This was a maine fault in the Iewes, who would not receiue the word preached by Chriſt, vnleſſe he ſhewed them a ſigne from heauen. Indeed in the primitiue Church it pleaſed God to confirme that doctrine which the Apoſtles taught, by great ſignes and miracles, but now that gift is ceaſed, and the Church hath no warrant to expect any further euidence of the religion it profeſſeth & enioyeth by arguments of that kind; yea rather it hath cauſe to ſuſpect a doctrin taught for the wonders ſake, wherby men labour to auouch it.

Sect. V.

The laſt clauſe in the deſcription, is this; ſo farre forth as God in iuſtice ſuffereth: which I adde, for two cauſes. Firſt, to ſhew that God, for iuſt cauſes, permitteth the Arts of Magicke and Witchcraft, and the practiſes thereof. Now this he doth in his prouidence, either for the triall of his children, or for the puniſhment of the wicked.

Auguſt. de Trin. l. 3. c. 7.

Firſt therefore God permits theſe wicked arts in the Church, to prooue whether his children wil ſteadfaſtly beleeue in him, and ſeek vnto his word, or cleaue vnto the deuil, by ſeeking to his wicked inſtruments. This Moſes plainely forwarned the Church of God, in his time. Deu. 13. v. 1. If there ariſe among you a Prophet, or a dreamer of dreams, and giue thee a ſigne or wonder, v. 2. and the ſigne and wonder which he hath told thee, come to paſſe: ſaying, Let vs goe after other gods, which thou haſt not knowne, and ſerue them, v. 3. thou ſhalt not hearken to the words of that Prophet, &c.

A Againe, God ſuffereth them for the puniſhment of vnbeleeuers and wicked men: for oftentimes God puniſheth one ſinne by another, as the antecedent ſinnes by the conſequent. This Paul plainely ſheweth (ſpeaking of the daies of Antichriſt) that becauſe men receiued not the loue of the truth, therefore God would ſend vpon them ſtrong illuſions, that they ſhould beleeue lies. And we may reſolue our ſelues, that for this very cauſe, God ſuffereth the practiſes of Witchcraft, to be ſo rife in theſe our daies, to puniſh the ingratitude of men, who haue the truth reuealed vnto them, and yet will not beleeue and obey the ſame, but tread it vnder their feete, that all they might be condemned which beleeued not the truth, but tooke pleaſure in vnrighteouſneſſe. B

v. 12.

Secondly, this laſt clauſe is added, to ſhew that in the practiſes of ſorcerie and Witchcraft, the Deuill can doe ſo much onely as God permits him, and no more. Doubtleſſe, his malice reacheth further, and conſequently his will and deſire; but God hath reſtrained his power, in the execution of his malitious purpoſes, whereupon he cannot goe a whit further, then God giues him leaue and libertie to goe. The Magicians of Egypt did ſome wonders, in ſhew like vnto the miracles wrought by Moſes and Aaron, and that for a time, by changing a rodde into a ſerpent, and water into blood, and by bringing frogs through the ſleight and power of the Deuill; but when it pleaſed God to C determine their practiſes, and giue them no further libertie, they could not doe that, which in likelihood was the meaneſt of all the reſt, the turning of the duſt of the land into lice; and themſelues gaue the true reaſon thereof, ſaying, That this was the finger of God, Exod. 8. 19. When the deuill went out and became a falſe ſpirit in the mouth of all Ahabs prophets, to intiſe him to goe to fall at Ramoth Gilead, he went not of his owne will, but by the authoritie of God, who commanded him to goe to entiſe Ahab, and ſuffered him to preuaile, 1. King. 22. 22. and the act was not the act of Sathan, but of God, whoſe inſtrument he was; and therefore the holy Ghoſt ſaid by Micaiah, The Lord hath put a lying ſpirit in the mouth of D all theſe thy Prophets, and the Lord hath appointed euill againſt thee, v. 23. Hence alſo it was, that the deuills, beeing caſt out of the man that had an vncleane ſpirit, asked leaue of Chriſt to enter into the heard of ſwine, and could not enter in till he had permitted them; Mark. 5. 12, 13. And we read oftentimes in the Goſpell, that our Sauiour caſt out many deuills by his word onely, thereby ſhewing that he was abſolute Lord ouer them, and that without his permiſſion, they could doe nothing.

Exod.7. & 8.

And thus much touching the generall nature of this Arte.

CHAP. II.

The Ground of Witchcraft, and of all the practiſes thereof.

THe Ground of all the practiſes of Witchcraft, is a league or couenant made betweene the Witch and the Deuill: wherein they doe mutually binde themſelues each to other. If any ſhall thinke it ſtrange, that man or woman ſhould enter league with Satan, their vtter enemie; they are to knowe it for a moſt euident and certaine truth, that may not be called into queſtion. And yet to cleare the iudgement of any one in this point, I will ſet downe ſome reaſons in way of proofe.

Firſt, the holy Scripture doth intimate ſo much vnto vs in the 58. Pſal. v. 5. where, howſoeuer the common tranſlation runneth in other tearmes, yet the wordes are properly to be read thus: which heareth not the voice of the mutterer ioyning ſocieties cunningly. And in them the Pſalmiſt layeth downe two points. Firſt, the effect or worke of a charme, muttered by the Inchanter; namely, that it is able to ſtay the Adder from ſtinging thoſe which ſhall lay hold on him, or touch him. Secondly, the maine foundation of the charme; ſocieties or confederacies cunningly made, not betweene man and man, but (as the words import) betweene the Inchanter and the deuill. The like we reade, Deut. 18. 11. where the Lord chargeth his people when they come into the land of Canaan, that amongſt other abhominations of the heathen, they ſhould beware leaſt any were found amongſt them, that ioyned ſocietie, that is, entred into league and compact with wicked ſpirits.

A ſecond reaſon may be this: it is the practiſe of the deuill to offer to make a bargaine and couenant with man. Thus he dealt with our Sauiour Chriſt in the third temptation, wherewith he aſſaulted him, promiſing to giue vnto him all the kingdomes of the earth, and the glorie of them, (which he ſhewed him in a viſion) if Chriſt for his part would fall downe and worſhip him. The offer was paſſed on the behalfe of Satan, and nowe to make a perfect compact betweene them, there was nothing wanting but the free conſent of our Sauiour vnto the condition propounded. Whereby it is manifeſt, that the deuill makes many couenants in the world, becauſe he findeth men and women in the moſt places, fitted for his turne in this kind, who will not let to worſhip him for a farre leſſe matter then a kingdome. And it is not to be doubted, that thouſands in the world, had they beene offered ſo faire as Chriſt was, would haue been as willing to haue yeelded vpon ſuch conditions, as the deuil to haue offered.

Matth.4.9.

Thirdly, the common confeſſion of all Witches and Sorcerers, both before and ſince the com-comming of Chriſt, doth yet more fully confirme the ſame. For they haue confeſſed with one conſent, that the very ground-worke of all their practiſes in this wicked art, is their league with the deuill. And hence it appeareth, how and whereupon it is, that Sorcerers & Witches can bring to paſſe ſtrange things by the helpe of Satan, which other men ordinarily cannot doe; namely, becauſe they haue entred a league with him, whereby he hath bound himſelfe to them, for the effecting of rare and extraordinarie workes, which others, not ioyned with him in the like confederacie, are not able either by his helpe, or any power or policy of their owne to bring to paſſe. Hereupon it was, that the Witch of Endor ſhewed vnto Saul the appearance of Samuel, which neither Saul himſelfe, nor any in all his court could doe. There was no great vertue in the matter or frame of her words, for ſhe was ignorant and had no learning. By power ſhe could not effect it, beeing a weake woman; neither was it like that ſhe had more cunning and pollicie then any of the learned Iewes in thoſe times had for ſuch purpoſes. The maine reaſon was, her league made with Satan, by vertue whereof ſhe commanded him to appeare in the likeneſſe of Samuel, which neither Saul, nor any of his companie coulde doe, by vertue of ſuch couenant, which they had not made.

The ende why the Deuill ſeeketh to make a league with men, may be this; It is a point of his pollicy, not to be readie at euery mans command to doe for him what he would, except he be ſure of his reward; and no other meanes will ſerue his turne for taking aſſurance hereof, but this couenant. And why ſo? that hereby he may teſtifie both his hatred of God, and his malice againſt man. For ſince the time that he was caſt downe from heauen, he hath hated God & his kingdome, and greatly maligned the happy eſtate of man, eſpecially ſince the couenant of grace made with our firſt parents in Paradiſe. For he thought to haue brought vpon them by their fall, eternall and finall confuſion, but perceiuing the contrarie by vertue of the couenant of grace, then manifeſted, and ſeeing man by it to be in a better and ſurer eſtate then before, he much more maligned his eſtate, and beares the ranker hatred vnto God for that his mercie beſtowed vpon him.

Now that he might ſhew forth this hatred and malice, he takes vpon him to imitate God, and to counterfeit his dealings with his church. As God therefore hath made a couenant with his people, ſo Satan ioynes in league with the world, labouring to bind ſome men vnto him, that ſo, if it were poſſible, he might draw them from the couenant of God, and diſgrace the ſame. Againe, as God hath his word and Sacraments, the ſeales of his couenant vnto beleeuers; ſo the deuill hath his words and certaine outward ſignes to ratifie the ſame to his inſtruments, as namely, his figures, characters, geſtures, and other Satanicall ceremonies, for the A confirmation of the truth of his league vnto them. Yea further, as God in his couenant, requires faith of vs to the beleeuing of his promiſes: ſo the deuill in his compact, requires faith of his vaſſals, to put their affiance in him, and rely on him for the doing of whatſoeuer he bindes himſelfe to doe. Laſtly, as God heares them that call vpon him according to his will: ſo is Satan readie at hand vpon the premiſſes, endeauouring to the vtmoſt of his power, (when God permits him) to bring to paſſe whatſoeuer he hath promiſed. And ſo much of the league in generall.

More particularly, the league betweene the B Deuill and a Witch, is twofold: either expreſſed and open, or ſecret and cloſe.

The expreſſe and manifeſt compact is ſo tearmed, becauſe it is made by ſolemne words on both parties. And it is not ſo expreſſely ſet downe in Scriptures, as in the writings of learned men, which haue recorded the confeſſions of Witches, and they expreſſe it in this manner. Firſt, the Witch for his part, as a ſlaue of the deuill, bindes himſelfe vnto him by ſolemne vowe and promiſe to renounce the true God, his holy word, the couenant he made in Baptiſme, and his redemption by Chriſt; and withall to beleeue in the Deuill, to expect and receiue aide and helpe from him, and at the ende of his life, to giue him either bodie, or ſoule, or both: and for the ratifying hereof, he giues to the deuill C for the preſent, either his owne hand writing, or ſome part of his blood, as a pledge and earneſt penny to bind the bargaine. The deuill on the other ſide, for his part promiſeth to bee ready at his vaſſals commaund, to appeare at any time in the likeneſſe of any creature, to conſult with him, to aide and helpe him in any thing he ſhall take in hand, for the procuring of pleaſures, honour, wealth, or preferment, to goe for him, to carrie him whether he will; in a word, to doe for him, whatſoeuer he ſhall command. Many ſufficient teſtimonies might be alleadged for the proofe hereof, but it is ſo manifeſt in daily experience, that it cannot well be called into queſtion.

But yet if it ſeeme ſtrange vnto any, that D there ſhould be ſuch perſons in the world, that make ſuch fearefull couenants with the deuill, let them conſider but this one thing, and it will put them out of doubt.

The nature of man is exceeding impatient in croſſes, and outward afflictions are ſo tedious vnto mortall mindes, and preſſe them with ſuch a meaſure of griefe, that ſome could be contented with all their hearts to be out of the world, if thereby they might be releaſed of ſuch extremitie, and hereupon they care not what meanes they vſe, what conditions they vndertake to eaſe and helpe themſelues. The deuill finding men in theſe perplexities, is readie to take his aduantage, and therefore perceiuing them now fitted for his purpoſe to worke vpon, he inſinuates and offers himſelfe to procure them eaſe

A and deliuerance, if they will vſe ſuch meanes, as he ſhall preſcribe for that purpoſe: and to a natural man there is no greater meane then this to make him ioyne ſocietie with the deuill. He therefore, without any further doubting or deliberation, condeſcendes to Satan, ſo as he may be eaſed and releeued in theſe miſeries.

Againe, we are to conſider, that in theſe caſes the deuill getteth the greater hold of man, and mooues him to yeeld vnto his ſuggeſtions the rather, becauſe that which he promiſeth to doe for him is preſent and at his command, and therefore certaine; whereas the thing to be performed on the behalfe of the partie himſelfe, as the giuing of bodie and ſoule, &c. is to come B ſundrie yeares after, and therefore in regard of the particular time, vncertaine. Now the natural man not regarding his future and finall eſtate, preferres the preſent commoditie before the loſſe and puniſhment that is to come a farre of, and therby is perſwaded to yeeld himſelfe vnto Satan. And by theſe and ſuch like antecedents are many brought to make open league with the deuill.

The ſecret and cloſe league betweene the Witch and Satan is that, wherein they mutually giue conſent each to other, but yet without a ſworne couenant conceiued in expreſſe words and conference. Of this there be two degrees. Firſt, when a man vſeth ſuperſtitious formes of prayer, wherein he expreſſely requireth the helpe of the deuill, without any mention of C ſolemne words or couenant going before. That this is a kind of compact it is plaine, becauſe herein there is a mutuall vnder-hand conſent betweene the partie and the deuill, though it be not maniſeſt. For when a man is content to vſe ſuperſtitious formes of inuocation, for helpe in time of need; by the very vſing of them, his heart conſenteth to Satan, and he would gladly haue the thing effected. When therefore the deuill hath notice of them, and endeauoureth to effect the thing prayed for, therein alſo he giues cōſent; ſo as though there be no expreſſe words of cōpact outwardly framed on both parts, yet the concurrence of a mutuall conſent for the bringing to paſſe of the ſame things, makes the couenant authenticall. For according to the receiued rules of equitie and reaſon; mutuall con- D ſent of partie with partie, is ſufficient to make a bargain, though there be no ſolemn courſe or forme of words to maniſeſt the ſame to others.

The ſecond degree is, when a man vſeth ſuperſtitious meanes to bring any thing to paſſe, which in his owne knowledge, haue no ſuch vertue in themſelues to effect it, without the eſpeciall operation of the deuill.

Superſtitious meanes I call all thoſe, which neither by order of creation, nor by the ſpeciall appointment and bleſſing of God ſince, haue any vertue in them, to bring to paſſe that thing for which they are vſed. For example; A charme, conſiſting of ſet words and ſyllables, both rude, barbarous, and vnknowne, vſed for the curing of ſome diſeaſe or paine, is a ſuperſtitious meanes; becauſe it hath no vertue in it ſelfe to cure, either by the gift of God in the creation, or by any ſpeciall appointment afterward in his word or otherwiſe. And therefore when this meane is vſed by man, which he knoweth hath no ſuch vertue in it, for the effecting of that worke for which it was vſed, there is a ſecret league made with the deuill.

Yet here I adde this clauſe, in his own knowledge, to put a difference betweene men, which vſe ſuperſtitious meanes to bring ſome things to paſſe: For ſome there be which when they vſe them, know they be meerely ſuperſtitious, yea weake and impotent, hauing no vertue in themſelues for the purpoſe whereto they are vſed; as the repeating of certaine formes of words; the vſing of ſignes, characters, and figures, which in effect are meere charmes, no whit effectuall in themſelues, but ſo farre forth as they ſerue for watchwords vnto Satan, without whoſe ayd nothing is done by them. A plaine argument that the vſer hereof hath in his heart ſecretly indented with Satan, for the accompliſhment of his intended workes. A ſecond ſort there is, which vſeth them for ſome ſpeciall ende, beeing perſwaded that there is vertue in the means thēſelues to bring the thing to paſſe, & yet not knowing that either they be ſuperſtitious, or haue their efficacie by the power and worke of the deuill. Such perſons haue made as yet no league with Satan, but they are in the high way thereunto. And this courſe is a fit preparation to cauſe them to ioyne with him in couenant. I ſhew it by an example. A man is fallen into ſome extremitie, and findes himſelfe bewitched; his paine is great, and he deſires with all his heart to be cured and deliuered: Hereupon he ſendeth for the ſuſpected Witch; beeing come, he offers to ſcratch him or her, thinking by this meanes to bee cured of the Witchcraft. His reaſon is no other, then a ſtrong perſwaſion, that there is ſimply vertue in his ſcratching to cure him, and diſcouer the Witch, not once ſuſpecting that the helpe commeth by the power of the Deuill, but from the action it ſelfe. This doing, he may be healed: but the truth is, he ſinneth and breakes Gods commandement. For the vſing of theſe meanes is plaine Witchcraft, as afterward wee ſhall ſee. And yet for all this, the partie cannot be ſaid in preſent to haue made a league with Satan, becauſe he thought, that though he yeelded to the vſe of ſuperſtitious meanes for his curing, yet there had bin in the ſaid meanes a vertue of healing, without any helpe or worke of the deuill.

CHAP. III.

Of the kinds of Witchcraft, and firſt of Diuination.

Witchcraft is of two ſorts; Diuining, or Working. For the whole nature of this art, conſiſteth either in matter of Diuination and coniecture, or in matter of practiſe. And in both theſe it is to be remembred, that nothing can be effected, vnleſſe the partie haue made a league with the Deuill, expreſſe or ſecret, or at the leaſt, a preparation thereunto, by a falſe and erroneous opinion of the meanes.

19049a

Sect. I.

Diuination is a part of Witchcraft, whereby men reueale ſtrange things, either paſt, preſent, or to come, by the aſſiſtance of the deuill.

If it be here demanded, how the deuill beeing a creature, ſhould be able to manifeſt and bring to light things paſt, or to foretell things to come: I anſwer, firſt generally, that Satan in this particular worke, transformes himſelfe into an Angell of light, and takes vpon him the exerciſe of theſe things in an ambitious (though falſe) imitation of diuine reuelations and predictions, made and vſed by God in the times of the Prophets and Apoſtles. And this he doth (as much as in him lieth) to obſcure the glorie of God, and to make himſelfe great in the opinion of ignorant and vnbeleeuing perſons. Againe, though Satan be but a creature, yet there be ſundry wayes whereby he is able to diuine.

Firſt, by the Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament, wherein are ſet downe ſundrie prophecies concerning things to come. In the Old Teſtament are recorded many prophecies concerning the ſtate of Gods Church, from the firſt age of the world, till the comming of Chriſt. In the new Teſtament likewiſe are recorded others, touching the ſelfe ſame thing, frõ the cõming of Chriſt in the latter dayes, to the ende of the world. Now the deuill beeing acquainted with the hiſtorie of the Bible, and hauing attained vnto a greater light of knowledge in the Prophecies therein contained, then any man hath; by ſtealing diuinations out of them, he is able to tell of many ſtrange things, that may in time fall out in the world, & anſwerably may ſhew them ere they come to paſſe.

For example; Alexander the great before he made warre with Darius king of Perſia, conſulted with the Oracle, that is, with the deuill, touching the euent and iſſue of his enterpriſe. The Oracle anſwered him thus; Alexander ſhall be a Conquerour; vpon the prediction of the Oracle, Alexander wages warre with Darius, and inuades Aſia, and hauing conquered him, tranſlated the Empire from Perſia to Greece, according as the Oracle had ſaid. Now if queſtion be made, how the deuil knew the euent of this warre, and conſequently made it knowne to Alexander? The anſwer is, by the helpe of a prophecie in the Olde teſtament; for this thing was particularly ſet downe before hand by the Prophet Daniel, Dan. 11. 3. where he ſaith; That a mightie King ſhall ſtand vp, and ſhall rule with great dominion, and doe according to his pleaſure, & this was Alexander the great. Satan therefore knowing the ſecret meaning of the Angels words vnto Daniel, framed out of them a true and direct anſwer, whereas he was not able of himſelfe to define certainly of the euent of things to come in particular.

The ſecond meanes, whereby the Deuill is furniſhed for his purpoſe, is his owne exquiſite knowledge of all naturall things; as of the influences of the ſtarres, the conſtitutions of men, and other creatures, the kinds, vertues, and operations of plants, rootes, hearbs, ſtones, &c. which knowledge of his, goeth many degrees beyond the skill of all men, yea euen of thoſe that are moſt excellent in this kind, as Philoſophers, and Phycians. No maruelle therefore, though out of his experience in theſe and ſuch like, he is able aforehand to giue a likely geſſe at the iſſues and euents of things, which are to him ſo manifeſtly apparent in their cauſes.

A third helpe and furtherance in this point, is his preſence in the moſt places: for ſome deuils are preſent at all aſſemblies and meetings, and thereby are acquainted with the conſultations and conferences both of Princes and people; whereby knowing the drift and purpoſe of mens mindes, when the ſame is manifeſted in their ſpeaches and deliberations, they are the fitter to foretell many things, which men ordinarily cannot doe. And hence it is apparant, how Witches may know what is done in other countries, and whether one nation intends warre againſt another, namely, by Satans ſuggeſtion, who was preſent at the conſultation, and ſo knew it, and reuealed it vnto them. But how then comes it to paſſe, that the conſultations and actions of Gods Church and children, are not diſcloſed to their enemies? euen by the vnſpeakeable mercie and goodneſſe of God, who though for ſpeciall cauſes ſometimes, he ſuffers Satan by this meanes to bring things to light, yet he hath reſtrained this his libertie, and ſubiected it vnto his owne will, ſo as he keepes him out of ſuch meetings, or compells him to conceale; whereas otherwiſe his malice is ſo great, that not a word could be ſpoken, but it ſhould be carried abroad to the hurt & diſturbance both of Churches and common-wealths.

The fourth way, is by putting into mens mindes wicked purpoſes and counſels; for after the league once made he laboureth with them by ſuggeſtions, & where God giues him leaue, he neuer ceaſes perſwading, til he hath brought his enterpriſe to paſſe. Hauing therefore firſt brought into the minde of man, a reſolution to doe ſome euill, he goes and reueales it to the Witch, and by force of perſwaſion vpon the partie tempted, he frames the action intended to the time foretold, and ſo finally deludes the Witch his owne inſtrument, foretelling nothing, but what himſelfe hath compaſſed and ſet about.

The fift helpe, is the agilitie of Satans nature whereby he is able ſpeedily to conuey himſelfe from place to place, yea to paſſe through the whol world in a ſhort time. For God hath made him by nature a ſpirit, who by the gift of his creation, hath attained the benefit of ſwiftnes, not onely in diſpatching his affaires, but alſo in the cariage of his perſon with great expedition for the preſent accompliſhment of his owne deſires.

Laſtly, God doth often vſe Sathan as his inſtrument, for the effecting of his intended workes, and the executing of his iudgements vpon men; and in theſe caſes manifeſteth vnto him, the place where, the time when, and the manner how ſuch a thing ſhould be done. Now all ſuch things as God will haue effected by the deuill, he may fortel before they come to paſſe, becauſe he knowes them before hand by reuelation and aſſignment from God. Thus by the Witch of Endor hee foretolde to Saul the time of his death and of his ſonnes, and the ruine of his kingdome, ſaying, To morow ſhalt thou and thy ſonnes be with me, and the Lord ſhall giue the hoſte of Iſrael into the hands of the Philiſtims: which particular euent, and circumſtances appertaining, he did truely define; not of himſelfe, but becauſe God had drawne away his good ſpirit from Saul, and had deliuered him to be guided by the deuill, whom he alſo appointed as a meanes, and vſed as an inſtrument to worke his ouerthrowe. The Scripture indeede maketh not particular mention of the time of Sauls death, it onely recordeth the manner thereof, and that which followed vpon his death, the tranſlating of the Kingdome to his neighbour Dauid after him; and yet becauſe God vſed Satan as an inſtrument to bring this to paſſe, hereupon he was able to fortell the particular time, when the will of God ſhould be wrought vpon him. And theſe be the ordinarie meanes and helps whereby the deuil may know and declare ſtrãge things, whether paſt, preſent, or to come.

Neither may this ſeeme ſtrange, that Satan by ſuch meanes ſhould attaine vnto ſuch knowledge, for euen men by their owne obſeruations may giue probable coniectures of the ſtate and condition of ſundry things to come. Thus wee read, that ſome by obſeruation haue found out probably, and foretold the periods of families and kingdomes. For example, that the time and continuance of kingdomes is ordinarily determined at 500 yeares, or not much aboue; and that great families haue not gone beyond the ſixt and ſeauenth generation. And as for ſpeciall and priuate things, the world ſo runnes (as it were) in a circle, that if a man ſhould but ordinarily obſerue the courſe of things, either in the weather, or in the bodies of men, or otherwiſe, he might eaſily foretell before hand what would come after. And by theſe and ſuch like inſtances of experiences, men haue geſſed at the alterations and changes of eſtates and things in particular. Now if men which be but of ſhort continuance, and of a ſhallow reach in compariſon, are able to doe ſuch things, how much more eaſily may the Deuill, hauing ſo great a meaſure of knowledge and experience, and beeing of ſo long continuance, hauing alſo marked the courſe of all eſtates, be able to foretell many things which are to come to paſſe? ſpecially conſidering what the wiſe man hath ſet downe to this purpoſe, that that which hath beene, ſhall be; and that which hath beene done, ſhall be done; and there is no new thing vnder the Sunne, Eccl. 1. 9.

If it be here alleadged, that diuination is a prerogatiue of God himſelfe, and a part of his glorie incommunicable to any creature, Iſai. 41. 23. I anſwer; Things to come muſt be conſidered two wayes; either in themſelues, or in their cauſes and ſignes, which either goe with them, or before them. To foretell things to come, as they are in themſelues, without reſpect vnto their ſignes or cauſes, is a propertie belonging to God onely; and the deuill doth it not by any direct and immediate knowledge of things ſimply conſidered in themſelues, but onely as they are preſent in their ſignes or cauſes. Againe, God foretelleth things to come certainely, without the helpe of any creature, or other meanes out of himſelfe; but the predictions of Satan are onely probable and coniecturall; and when hee foretelleth any thing certainely, it is by ſome reuelation from God, as the death of Saul; or by the Scripture, as Alexanders victory; or by ſome ſpeciall charge committed vnto him, for the execution of Gods will vpon ſome particular places or perſons, as before hath beene ſhewed.

Thus much for the cauſes of Diuination. Now follow the parts and branches thereof. Diuination is of two ſorts; either in and by meanes, or without meanes. Diuination by meanes, is likewiſe of two ſorts: either by ſuch as are the true creatures of God; or thoſe which are meerely counterfeit and forged.

Sect. II.

Diuination by the true creatures of God, is diſtinguiſhed according, to the number of the creatures, into fiue diſtinct kinds, whereof foure are mentioned in the Scriptures.

§ 1. The firſt, is by the flying and noiſe of birds. Sorcerers among the heathen, vſed to obſerue foules in their flight; for example, whether they did flie on the right hand, or on the left; aboue them, or below by them; whether croſſe and ouerthwart, or directly againſt them. In like manner they obſerued the noiſe and ſound of the foule. And both theſe wayes, ſometimes by the noyſe, and ſometimes by the flight, they diuined of things to come, both publike and priuate, of good and bad ſucceſſe in mans affaires; of the ſtate of kingdoms, townes, families, and particular perſons. Now this kind of diuination is condemned by Moſes, Deu. 18. 10. Let none be found among you that is a ---diuiner of diuinations: that is, (as ſome interpret it) a marker of the flying of foules: or a charmer, or a conſulter with ſpirits, or a ſoothſayer; that is, ſuch a one as by obſeruing the flying and noiſe verſ.11.

of fowles, takes vpon him to foretell good or bad ſucceſſe.

§ 2. The ſecond kind of creatures vſed for diuination, are the intralls of beaſts, of which mention is made, Ezek. 21. 21. where Nabuchadnezzar beeing to make warre both with the Iewes and the Ammonites, and doubting in the way which enterpriſe to vndertake firſt, he offers a ſacrifice to the Idol-gods, and opening the bellie of the ſacrifice, lookes vpon the liuer, and by the ſignes therein found, he iudgeth what ſhould be the iſſue of the warre. Which thing Nabuchadnezzar did according to the vſuall practiſe of the Heathen, who when they were to make warre, or to attempt any buſines of importance, were wont to offer ſacrifice to their gods, and to prie into the intralls of the beaſt ſacrificed: for example, the heart, ſtomake, ſplene, kidneies, but ſpecially the liuer, and by certaine ſignes appearing in thoſe parts, the deuill was wont to reueale vnto them, what ſhould be the ſucceſſe of their affaires they had in hand. It were eaſie to exemplifie both theſe ſorts of Diuination by ſundrie particulars out of Heathen writers, but ſeeing the Scripture hath manifeſted that there are ſuch, and experience ſhews the ſame, I wil forbeare that labour, and proceede.

But here it is demãded, why both theſe kinds of Diuination ſhould be condẽned in ſcripture, conſidering they had great applauſe among the heathen? I anſwer, becauſe the flying of birds, & the diſpoſition of the inward parts of creatures, are no true ſigns either of good or bad ſucceſſe. For that which is a true ſigne of a future euent, muſt haue the vertue and power whereby it ſignifieth, from God himſelfe, either by creation in the beginning, or by his ſpeciall ordinance and appointment afterward. Now it cannot be ſhewed, that God in the creation infuſed any ſuch vertue into the natures and motions of theſe creatures, whereby they might ſignifie ſuch things; neither is there any apparent teſtimonie in the whole booke of the Scriptures, whereby it may bee prooued, that ſince the creation, they were appointed by God, to ſerue ſuch vſes and ends. And therefore howſoeuer they were eſteemed of the Heathen, yet the word of God hath iuſtly cenſured them, as no true and proper cauſes of Diuination, ſanctified by God, but meerely diabolicall.

It is alleadged, that Ioſeph diuined by his cuppe, as may appeare both by his ſtewards ſpeech, as alſo by his owne, Gen. 44. 5. & 15. & yet that cup receiued no power from God, either the one way or the other, to be a cauſe or meane of Diuination.

The anſwer aunciently and commonly made is this, that Ioſephs ſteward ſpake not as the thing was indeed, but as the common receiued opinion was among the Egyptians, who eſteemed Ioſeph to be a man of great skill and wiſedom, able by ſundrie meanes to diuine and propheſie. To this I adde a ſecond anſwer, that the ſteward ſpake not as he thought, but his purpoſe was in thoſe words, to conceale the knowledge of Ioſeph his maſter from his brethren, that thereby they might not diſcerne who he was, but take him to be an Egyptian. Thirdly, the words may not vnfitly admit this interpretation, as if the ſteward had ſaid, Know yet not that this cuppe which I find in the ſackes mouth of your yongeſt brother, is that whereby my maſter will eaſily prooue what manner of men you are? this anſwer is alſo auncient, and may well be receiued.

It is further obiected, that our Sauiour Chriſt by his ſpeech vnto the Phariſies ſeemeth to approoue of Diuining by creatures, as by winds, and by clouds; When you ſee a cloud (ſaith hee) riſing out of the Weſt, ſtraight way you ſay, a ſhowre commeth, and ſo it is: and when you ſee the South wind blow, ye ſay, that it will be hoate, and it commeth to paſſe, Luk. 12. 54. 55.

Anſ. There be ſome kinds of predictions that are and may be lawfully vſed, becauſe they are naturall, of which ſort are thoſe that are made by Phyſicians, Mariners, and husbandmen, touching the particular alterations and diſpoſitions of the weather; and theſe beeing agreeable to that order which God hath ſet in nature from the beginning; by them a man may probably gather the ſtate of the weather, whether it will be faire or foule; and of theſe naturall ſignes our Sauiour Chriſt ſpeaketh, not of diabolicall, which haue no warrant, either from the common courſe of nature created, or by any ſpeciall appoyntment from God. So that whatſoeuer can be ſaid in their defence, this yet remaineth certaine, that the flying and noiſe of birds, and the ſtate of the intralls of beaſts, are no true ſignes ordained by God, but inuented by the deuill and his inſtruments, and therefore all diuination by them is iuſtly condemned, as wicked and deuilliſh.

Whence it appeareth, what iudgement may be giuen of thoſe common ſignes of Diuination, which are obſerued in the world, ſpecially of the more ignorant ſort. For example: A man finds a piece of yron, he preſently conceiueth a prediction of ſome good lucke vnto himſelfe that day. If he light on a piece of ſiluer, then he ſtands contrarily affected, imagining ſome euill will befall him. Againe, when a man is taking his iourney, if a hare croſſe him in the way, all is not well, his iourney ſhall not be proſperous, it preſageth ſome miſchiefe towardes him. Let his eares tingle or burne, he is perſwaded he hath enemies abroad, and that ſome man either then doth, or preſently will ſpeake ill of him. If the ſalt fall towards a man at the table, it portendeth (in common conceit) ſome ill newes. When a rauen ſtands vpon ſome high place, looke what way he turnes himſelfe and cries, thence, as ſome thinke, ſhall ſhortly come a dead corps; albeit this ſometime may be true by reaſon of the ſharpe ſenſe of ſmelling in the rauen. Theſe & ſundrie other of the like ſort, are meerely ſuperſtitious. For the truth is, they haue no vertue in themſelues to foreſhew any thing that is to come, either in nature, or by Gods ordinance. Therefore whatſoeuer diuination is made by them, muſt needes be fetched from Satanicall illuſion. And though we cannot ſay they be ſoothſayings, or tearme the vſers & fauourers of them Soothſayers, yet we may ſafely referre them to this kind of diuining, being ſuch as no Chriſtian may warrantably vſe, though ſome of them be not ſo groſſe and palpable, as thoſe that are condemned in the Scriptures.

§. 3. The third kind of creatures vſed to diuine by, are the ſtarres. Diuination by ſtarres, is commonly called Indiciall Aſtrologie; of which we may reade, Deu. 18. 10. 11. where the holy Ghoſt doth of purpoſe reckon vp all thoſe kinds of deuilliſh arts, whereby men haue dealing & ſociety with Satan, either in diuining or practiſing: among which, this is the ſecond.

The word there vſed * may carrie a double ſenſe. For it ſignifieth either him that obſerueth times; vnder which acception Aſtrologie is comprehended, or him that obſerueth the cloudes. And howſoeuer the beſt learned Interpreters doe diſſent about the notation of it, yet all agree in this, that this profeſſion of Diuining by the ſtarres, is there condemned: and that it is to be numbred among the reſt expreſſed in the prohibition, may further appeare by other places of Scripture, as in Iſay 47. 13. 14. where the Lord threatneth the ſame iudgements againſt Diuiners by the ſtarres, that he doth againſt Soothſayers and Magicians. Againe, in Dan. 2. 2. Inchanters, Aſtrologians, and Sorcerers are ioyned together, as beeing all ſent for about the ſame buſines, viz. to expound the Kings dreame. Now if the Lord himſelfe haue allotted the ſame puniſhmẽt to the Aſtrologer, which he hath to the Soothſayer and Magician, & account thẽ all one; it is manifeſt, that Diuining by the ſtarres, ought to be held as a ſuperſtitious kind of Diuination.

Here, if it bee thought ſtraunge, that predictions by ſo excellent creatures as the ſtarres be, ſhould carie both the name and nature of diabolicall practiſes, which can be done by none but ſuch as are in league with Satan:

I anſwer, The reaſons hereof are theſe:

Firſt, it muſt be conſidered, that the drift and ſcope of this art, is to foretell the particular euents of things contingent, as the alteration of the ſtates of kingdomes, the deaths of Princes, good or badde ſucceſſe of mens particular affaires, from the houre of their birth, to the day of their death. And from this all men may iudge, what the art it ſelfe is. For the foretelling of things to come, which in their owne nature are contingent, and in regard of vs caſuall (I ſay not in regard of God, to whom all things are certenly knowne) is a propertie peculiar to God alone, and not within the the power of any creature, man, or Angel. A point that is plainely taught by the Prophet Eſai, from the 4. chap. of his propheſie, to the 48. The ſcope whereof is to prooue, that it is a prerogatiue appropriated to the Deitie, and not communicable to the creature, to foreſhew the euent of things to come, which in our vnderſtanding and reach, may either be, or not be; and which when they are, may be thus or otherwaies. It remaines therefore, that Diuinations of this kind, taking from God his right, and robbing him of his honour, are iuſtly cenſured of impietie, and are in themſelues wicked and abominable.

It is alleadged, that ſtarres in the heauens, are the cauſes of many things happening in the world, and therefore to practiſe by them in this manner, deſerueth no ſuch imputation.

Anſ. It cannot be denied that they are cauſes of ſome things, but I demand, what cauſes? not particular of particular euents; but generall and common, that worke alike vpon all things: and no man can diuine of a particular euent, by a generall cauſe, vnleſſe he alſo know the particular cauſes ſubordinate to the generall, and the particular diſpoſitions and operations of them. For example, let twentie or thirtie egges of ſundry kinds of birds be taken, and ſet vnder one and the ſame henne to be hatched; it is not poſſible for any man, onely vpon the bare conſideration of the heat of the hen, which is the generall cauſe of hatching the egges, to ſet downe certainely what kinde of bird each egge will bring forth, vnleſſe he know what the egges were particularly. For a generall and common cauſe, doth not immediately produce a particular effect, but onely mooueth and helpeth the particular, immediate, and ſubordinate cauſes. Therfore the heat of the hen doth not make one egge to ſend forth a henne-chicken, another egge a ducke, a third a ſwane, &c. but onely helpeth it forward by ſitting and crouching vpon them. In like manner the ſtarres are generall cauſes of naturall things, as the heat of the hen is of the hatching of the egges, and by them no man can rightly define of particular euents, and therefore Diuination by the ſtarres, whereby are foretold particular contingent euents, in kingdomes, families, or particular perſons, is but a forged skil, that hath no ground in nature frõ the vertue of the ſtarres, for any ſuch purpoſe.

A ſecond reaſon may be this; All the rules & precepts of Aſtrologie, ſet down by the moſt learned among the Chaldeans, Egyptians, & other Aſtrologers, are nothing els but meere dotages and fictions of the braine of man: for the rules and concluſions of al good and lawful arts, haue their ground in experience, and are framed by obſeruation, whereupon they are called Axiomes, or poſitions of arte, ſo generally and vndoubtedly true, that they can not deceiue: But theſe rules are of a contrarie nature, hauing no foundation in experience at all; for if they had, this muſt needes follow, that the poſition of the heauens, and the courſe of all the ſtarres, muſt needes continue one and the ſame; for the principles of art ought to be immutable : but neither the poſition of the heauens, nor the courſe of all the ſtarres, is alway one and the ſame. Againe, he that would make ſound rules of art by obſeruation, muſt knowe the particular eſtate of all things he obſerueth: But no man knoweth the particular eſtate of all the ſtarres, and conſequently none can gather ſound rules of art by them. Thirdly, no man knoweth or ſeeth all the ſtarres, and though they might be all diſcerned, yet the particular vertues of thoſe which are ſeene, cannot be knowne, becauſe their influences in the aire, and vpon the earth, are confuſed; and therefore by obſeruation of them,no rules can be made, whereby to iudge of particular euents to come that be cõtingent.

But experience teacheth(may ſome ſay) that if a man addicted to this courſe ſhall practiſe the rules of Aſtrologie, it will fall out that the moſt things he foretelleth ſhall be true, and come to paſſe accordingly: which beeing verified in experience, it ſhould ſeeme, that theſe principles are not vncerten: for how is it poſſible that vpon falſe grounds, ſhould proceede true predictions? To this obiection, learned Diuines haue framed anſwer thus. That in this there is a ſecret Magicke at the leaſt, if not an open league with Satan.For looke what is wanting to the effect of the ſtarres, the deuill maketh ſupply of it by his owne knowledge in things that are to come to paſſe. And this is the iudgement of them that haue knowne this art; which was alſo receiued for true in the dayes of the Apoſtles.

The third reaſon. The man that repaireth to the Aſtrologian vpon the particular caſe for his helpe and counſell, muſt beleeue that he can and will doe for him; otherwiſe if he come doubting of his abilitie, or in way of tempting him,he cannot helpe him.Now in common vnderſtanding, if the diuiner bring the thing to paſſe, here muſt needes be more then Art. For he that is a maſter of a lawfull art,can worke by his rules, whether a man beleeue that he can or no;yea though all the men in the world ſhould doubt, his rules would be effectuall. The art therefore it ſelfe is the olde ſuperſtitious art of the Chaldeans, which they beeing Idolaters, firſt fetched from the deuill, and his Oracles: yea, the practiſe thereof is nothing but ſuperſtitious ſorcerie, and the vndertakers no better then Sorcerers. If any man doubt hereof, their writings are ſufficient teſtimonies, and they themſelues auouch it. For it is a rule & maxime among thẽ in all kind of Sorcerie, that the learner muſt come credulous, and not doubting,or to tempt; otherwiſe no anſwer can be giuen.

But notwithſtanding all theſe reaſons alleadged for the proofe of this point, ſundry things are oppoſed to the contrary.

For firſt, it is ſaid that the Sunne, Moone, and ſtarres were created for ſignes, Gen. 1. 14. and therefore that it is lawfull to diuine by A them, ſeeing that in ſo doing, we doe but vſe them to the ende for which God made them.

Anſ. The reaſon is of no force. The ſtarres indeede by this ordinance doe ſerue for ſignes, but of what? not of all things, but (as the text plainely ſheweth of daies, weekes, moneths, and yeares; yea, of the ſeaſons of the yeare; as of Spring, Summer, Autumne, and Winter; yea further, of the alterations of the weather in generall: but all this maketh nothing to ratifie Diuination of particular euents in things contingent, which are to fall out in the ſtate of kingdomes, families, and perſons: for they are not cauſes, but Signes, and that of ſome generall things onely, not of particular.

B Againe, it is ſaid, that Moſes and Daniel, two famous Prophets, are commended for their skill in this art: for of Moſes it is ſaid, Act. 7. 22. that he was learned in all the wiſedome of the Egyptians: and Daniel in all the wiſedome of the Chaldeans, Dan. 1. 17. 20. and we know that the Egyptians and Chaldeans were the maſters of Diuination, and eminent aboue all others in matters of Aſtrologie.

Anſ. It cannot be prooued out of thoſe places, that Moſes or Daniel were trained vp in this art : and though it ſhould be graunted they were; yet it followes not, that they were practiſers of it, at leaſt continually. For albeit, beeing children and of tender yeares in the courts of Pharaoh and Nebuchadnetſar, they C had been trained vp by their gouernours in this knowledge, it may not thence be concluded, that they finally ſubmitted themſelues to the practiſe thereof; conſidering that a man may learne that when he is young, which afterward vpon better iudgement and conſideration, he may vtterly diſclaime. And ſo we are to thinke of them, that after God had called them, they did for euer lay aſide all ſuch wicked and deuilliſh practiſes, forbidden by God, and yet in vſe among the Egyptians and Chaldeans.

Thirdly, it is obiected, the ſtarres are admirable creatures of God, and the cauſes of many ſtrange effects in the aire, in the waters, and vpon the earth alſo, in the bodies of men and beaſts: it may ſeeme therefore not vnlawfull to diuine by them.

D Anſw. We grant that the Starres, and eſpecially the Sunne and Moone, haue great vertue and force vpon the creatures that are belowe, partly by their light, and partly by their heat; but hence it will not followe, that they are, or may be lawfully vſed for Diuination: for whereas it hath beene ſhewed,that the grounds of all good arts are gathered by obſeruation and experience, it is not poſſible for any man, truely, and certainely to obſerue all particular euents brought forth by the ſtarres, whereupon he might ground his rules. And for proofe hereof; Suppoſe there were a heap of all kinds of hearbs growing vpon the earth gathered together, which ſhould be all ſtrained into one veſſell, and the liquour brought to the moſt skilfull Phyſitian that is, or euer was; can we think him able by taſting or ſmelling thereof, to diſtinguiſh the vertues of the hearbs, & to ſay which is which? To doe this when all are ſeuered each from other, is a hard matter, yet poſſible, conſidering they haue their ſeuerall natures and operations; but in this confuſed mixture to diſcerne the ſeueralls, is a thing paſſing the skill of man.

The like may be ſaid of the particular vertue of euery ſtarre; for they all haue their operation in the bodies of men, and other creatures; but their vertues beeing all mixed together in the ſubiect whereon they work, can no more be knowne diſtinctly, then the vertues of a maſſe of hearbs of infinite ſorts beaten together. For this is an vndoubted truth in nature: that the vertues of Celeſtiall bodies in their operations, are mingled with the qualities of the elements in the inferiour bodies; and the vertues of them all doe ſo concurre, that neither the heate or light of the ſtarres, nor the vertue of the elements, can be ſeuered one from another. And therefore though there be notable vertue in the ſtarres, yet in regard of the mixture thereof in their operation, no man is able to ſay by obſeruation, that this is the vertue of this ſtarre, and this of that. The ſeauen planets beeing more notable, then the other lights of the heauen, ſpecially the Sunne and Moone, haue their operations and effects plainely and perfectly knowne; as for the other, there was neuer any man that could either feele their heate, or certainely determine of any thing by them.

There beeing then ſome ſtarres, whoſe vertues are vnknowne, how can their operations and effects be diſcerned in particular? Therefore no rules can be made by obſeruation of the vertues of the ſtarres in their operations, whereupon we may foretel particular euents of things contingent, either concerning mens perſons, families, or kingdomes.

A fourth reaſon. All ſtarres haue their worke in the qualities of heate, light, colde, moiſture, and drineſſe: as for the ſecret influences which men dreame of, comming from them beſides the ſaid qualities, they are but forged fancies. The Scripture neuer mentioneth any ſuch, neither can it be prooued that the Sunne hath any efficacie vpon inferiour bodies, but by light and heate, which becauſe they are mixt with other qualities, they affoard no matter of prediction touching particular euents. For what though the celeſtial bodies doe cauſe in the terreſtriall, heate and colde, drought and moiſture? doth it therefore followe, that theſe effects doe declare before hand the conſtitution of mans bodie? the diſpoſition of mens mindes? the affections of mens hearts? or finally, what ſucceſſe they ſhall haue in their affaires, touching wealth, honour, and religion? Hence I conclude, that diuining by them in this ſort, is meere ſuperſtition, and a kinde of Sorcerie: for which cauſe in Scripture Aſtrologians are iuſtly numbred among Sorcerers.

Now that which hath beene ſaide touching this point, may ſerue for ſpeciall vſe.

And firſt, it giues a caueat to all Students, that they haue care to ſpend their time and wits better, then in the ſtudie of Iudiciall Aſtrologie; and rather imploy themſelues in the ſearching out of ſuch things, as may moſt ſerue for the glory of God, and the good of his Church. It is the ſubtiltie of Satan, to drawe men into ſuch meditations, and to make this ſtudie ſo pleaſant, that it can hardly be left, when it is once begun: but let them take heede betime. For aſſuredly theſe vaine and ſuperſtitious practiſes, are not the builders and furtherers, but the hinderers and deſtroiers of religion, and the feare of God.

Againe, this muſt admoniſh them which ſuffer any loſſes, not to ſeeke for helpe or remedie at the hands of Aſtrologers, commonly called Figure-caſters: for their directions in the recouerie of things loſt or ſtollen, commeth not by the helpe of any lawfull art, but from the worke of the deuill, reuealing the ſame vnto them. And better it were to looſe a thing finally, and by faith to expect till God make ſupply another way; then in this manner to recouer it againe: yea, the curſe of God hangeth ouer the head of him, that to helpe himſelfe vſeth diabolicall meanes. For put the caſe a thing loſt of great value, be againe reſtored by the helpe of Satan, yet God in his iuſtice, for the vſe of theſe vnlawfull meanes, may take from the conſulter twiſe as much; or at the leſt his grace, and ſo giue him vp to a reprobate ſenſe, to beleeue the deuill to his vtter perdition.

Thirdly, it ſerueth to admoniſh vs of ſome other vanities that accompany Aſtrologie; eſpecially of two.

The firſt, is the obſeruation of the ſigne in mans bodie wherein not onely the ignorant ſort, but men of knowledge doe farre ouerſhoot themſelues, ſuperſtitiouſly holding, that the ſigne is ſpecially to be marked. An opinion in it ſelfe fantaſticall and vaine, not grounded in nature, but borrowed from Aſtrologie. For the Aſtrologians for better expreſſing and eſtabliſhing thereof, haue deuiſed newe ſpheres in the heauens, more then indeede there be, to wit, the ninth and the tenth; and in the tenth; commonly called the firſt mooueable, haue placed an imaginarie ſphere, which they tearme the Zodiacke, and in the Zodiacke twelue ſignes, Aries, Taurus, Gemini, and the reſt, which they imagine to haue power ouer the twelue parts of mans bodie; as Aries, the head and face, Taurus necke and throat, &c. But theſe are onely twelue imaginarie ſignes: for in the heauens there is no ſuch matter as a ramme, a bull, &c. And howe can it ſtand with reaſon, that in a firmament faigned by Poets and Philoſophers, a forged ſigne, which indeede is nothing, ſhould haue any power or operation in the bodies of men?

Primum mobile.

Againe, the very order of the gouernment of theſe ſignes in mans bodie, is fond and without ſhewe of reaſon. For according to this platforme, when the Moone commeth into the firſt ſigne, Aries, ſhe ruleth in the head; and when ſhe commeth into the ſecond ſigne, Taurus, in the necke; and ſo deſcends downe from part to part, in ſome part ruling two, in ſome three daies, &c. Where obſerue, that the Moone is made then to rule in the cold and moiſt parts, when ſhe is in hoate and drie ſignes: when as in reaſon, a more conſonant order were this; that when the Moone were in hoat and drie ſignes, as Aries, Leo, and Sagittarius, ſhee ſhould rule in hoate and drie parts of the bodie; and when ſhe is in cold and moiſt ſignes, ſhe ſhould rule in the colde and moiſt parts of the bodie; and ſo ſtill gouerne thoſe parts, which in temperature come nereſt to the nature of the ſignes wherein the Moone is.

Beſides this, ſome learned Phyſitians haue vpon experience confeſſed, that the obſeruation of the ſigne, is nothing materiall, and that there is no danger in it, for gelding of cattell, or letting of blood. Indeede it preuailes oftentimes by an olde conceit and ſtrong imagination, of ſome vnlettered perſons, who thinke it to be of force and efficacie for reſtoring and curing; and yet the vanitie of this conceit, appeares in the common practiſe of men, who commonly vpon S. Steuens day vſe to let blood, be the ſigne where it will; though it be in the place where the veine is opened. But the truth is, the ſigne in it owne nature, is neither way auaileable, beeing but a fancie, grounded vpon ſuppoſed premiſſes, and therefore ought to be reiected, as a meere vanitie.

The ſecond thing belonging to Aſtrologie, which ought to be eſchewed, is the choice and obſeruation of daies. Curious diuiners doe ſet apart certaine dayes, whereof ſome are (as they ſay) lucky, ſome vnlucky. And theſe they appoint to be obſerued for the beginning of ordinarie works and buſineſſes; as to take a iourney; to beginne to lay the foundation of a building, to plant a garden, to weane a child, to put on new apparell, to flit into a newe houſe, to trafficke into other countries, to goe about a ſuit to a Prince, or ſome great man, to hunt and vſe exerciſes, to pare the nailes, to cut the haire, in a word to attempt any thing in purpoſe or action, which is not done euery day. The effect and force of theſe daies, is not grounded either in art or in nature, but onely in ſuperſtitious conceit and diabolicall confidence, vpon a wicked cuſtome, borrowed from the practiſe of diuiners; and the danger of ſuch confident conceits is this; that the deuill by them takes the vantage of fantaſticall perſons, and brings them further into league and acquaintance with himſelfe, vnleſſe they leaue them. And all ſuch perſons as make difference of dayes for this or that purpoſe, are in expreſſe words plainly condemned, Deut. 18. 10. 11.

§ 4. The fourth kind of Diuination by true meanes, is the prediction of things to come by dreames.

In the olde Teſtament we reade that Sorcerers and falſe Prophets vſed to foretell ſtrange euents, by reuelations which they had in their dreames. Such diuiners were among the Iewes; and for that cauſe the people of God were expreſſely forbidden to hearken vnto Dreamers of Dreames, Deut. 13. 3. And the Lord himſelfe by the Prophet Ieremie, taxeth the falſe Prophets, who broached falſe doctrine in his name by this deuilliſh meanes, ſaying, I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed, Ierem. 23. 25.

Yet here it is to be remembred, that foretelling of future things by dreames, is not ſimply to be condemned, but onely in part. For of dreames there be three ſorts, Diuine, Naturall, and Diabolicall. Diuine, are thoſe which come from God: Natural which proceed from a mans owne nature, and ariſe from the qualitie and conſtitution of the bodie: Diabolicall, which are cauſed by the ſuggeſtion of the deuill.

Touching Diuine dreames: that there are, or at leaſt haue beene ſuch, it is euident. For theſe be the words of God, Num. 12. 6. If there be a Prophet of the Lord among you, I will be knowne vnto him by a viſion, and will ſpeak vnto him by a dreame. And Iob ſaith, that God ſpeaketh in dreames and viſions of the night, when ſleepe falleth vpon men, and they ſleepe vpon their beds, Iob. 33. 15. Now theſe diuine dreames were cauſed in men, either immediately by God himſelfe, as the former places ſhew; or by meanes of ſome good Angell. In this latter kind was Ioſeph often admoniſhed in dreames what to doe, by the miniſterie of an Angell; as Matth. 1. 20. and chap. 2. 13. 19. and diuining by ſuch dreames, is not condemned: for by them the moſt worthie Prophets of God haue reuealed Gods will in many things to his Church. Thus Ioſeph by dreame had notice giuen him of his owne aduancement, Gen. 37. 7. 9. and by Pharaohs dreames which were ſent from God, he alſo foretolde the ſtate of the kingdome of Egypt, touching prouiſion for ſeauen yeares dearth, Gen. 41. 25. By the ſame meanes the Prophet Daniel propheſied of the flouriſhing and fading of the chiefe Monarchies of the world, from his time to the comming Chriſt, Dan. 9. &c. Theſe therefore beeing one of the extraordinarie means, whereby God hath manifeſted his will vnto man in times paſt, more or leſſe: diuination by them is not to be cenſured as vnlawfull, but rather to be honoured and eſteemed, as the ordinance of God.

For the ſecond ſort which be Naturall, ariſing either from the thoughts of the minde, or the affections of the heart, or the conſtitution of the bodie: as they are ordinary in all men, in ſome more, in ſome leſſe: ſo they vary according to the diuerſitie of mens thoughts, affections, and conſtitutions: and by them a man may probably bably coniecture of ſundry things concerning the ſtate and diſpoſition, partly of his bodie, and partly of his minde.

As firſt he may geſſe in likelihood, what is his conſtitution, as the learned in all ages doe conſtantly auouch. For when his minde in dreaming runnes vpon warres, and contentions, fire, and ſuch like, it argueth his complexion is cholerike. When he dreames of waters and inundations, it betokeneth abundance of phlegme. When his phantaſie conceiueth heauie and doleſull things, full of griefe, feare, and horror, it bewraieth a melancholike conſtitution. When his dreames be ioyfull and pleaſant, as of mirth, paſtimes, and delightfull newes; his complexion is iudged to be ſanguine.

Againe, by naturall dreames a man may geſſe at the corruption of his owne heart: and knowe to what ſinnes he is moſt naturally inclined. For looke what men doe ordinarily in the day time conceiue and imagine in their corrupt hearts, of the ſame, for the moſt part, they doe corruptly dreame in the night. And this is the rather to be obſerued, becauſe though the wicked man ſhut his eies, and ſtop his eares, and harden his heart, and will not take notice of his enormities by the light of the Law; yet euen by his owne dreames in the night, his wickedneſſe ſhall be in part diſcouered, and his conſcience thereby conuinced, and he himſelfe left in the ende inexcuſable before God. Now albeit a man may probably coniecture of the premiſſes by naturall dreames; yet no Diuination of things to come, whether publike or priuate, good or bad, can be made by them either concerning perſons, families, or kingdomes. Therefore the common obſeruations of dreams in the world, whereby men imagine things that are to come to paſſe, and accordingly foretell them by thoſe meanes, are vaine and ſuperſtitious, and iuſtly ſo condemned in the places before named, Deut. 13. Ier. 23.

Concerning the third kinde of dreames, which are cauſed by the deuill; It hath beene granted in all ages for a truth, that Satan can frame dreames in the braine of man, and by them reueale his diuinations. And it is plainely manifeſted by the continuall obſeruation of the Gentiles before the comming of Chriſt. For when Oracles, (that is, anſwers from the Deuill) were in force, men that vſed to conſult with them, and deſired to be reſolued in matters of doubt, were to lay them downe and ſleepe beſides the altar of Apollo, where they had offered their gift, and ſleeping they receiued in a dreame the anſwer for which they came; and this dreame was framed in the braine of him that ſlept, by the deuill, and in it the anſwer was deliuered by him ſpeaking at or in the Oracle. So likewiſe in the Primitiue Church, ſince the comming of Chriſt, though Oracles then ceaſed, which were the greateſt and ſtrongeſt deluſions that euer Satan had; yet he hath by dreames and viſions wrought in the heads of many men moſt ſtrange and curious conceits for the raiſing vp of hereſies, to the great diſturbance of the peace of the Church. For we reade in Eccleſiaſticall ſtories, that the Maniches had their damnable opinions firſt inſpired into them, and then confirmed by dreames. And in this age the firſt authors of the ſect of the Anabaptiſts, had their curious conceits of reuelation, partly in dreames, partly in viſions. Likewiſe the Familie of loue haue their reuealations in dreames. For he that deſires to become one of that ſect, muſt aſcende thereunto by degrees, before he can come to perfection to be an elder illuminate or a man deified; to which eſtate when he is once come, he hath for his confirmation ſtrong illuſions, both waking and ſleeping in viſions & dreames. Hiſtories of later times, and wofull experience ſheweth this to be true, the deuill preuailing ſo ſtrongly, that many haue fallen away by this meanes, beeing corrupted by a doctrine meerely carnall, howſoeuer maintained with great pretenſe of holineſſe. Againe, as the good Angels may cauſe diuine dreames from God, and therein reueale vnto men his wil and pleaſure concerning things to come; ſo no doubt the euill ſpirits may cauſe in men diabolicall dreames, and therein reueile vnto them many ſtrange things; which they by meanes vnknown to men, may foreſee and knowe. By all which it is euident, that there are and may be as well diabolicall dreames as diuine dreames.

The concluſion then is this: That as diuining by the ſecond ſort is ſuperſtitious, hauing no ground from Gods word; ſo foretelling by this third ſort is flat Witchcraft, directly condemned in the places aforenamed, where men are forbidden to prophecie by them, or to regard them.

Yet foraſmuch as dreames be of ſundrie kinds, as hath beene ſaid, it ſhall not be amiſſe to ſet downe ſome notes of difference betweene them, whereby they may be knowne and diſtinguiſhed each from other. Which point indeede hath long agone been handled in the Primitiue Church, but hardly determined. For the learned of that age haue auouched it a very hard matter, conſidering that the deuill in theſe, as well as in other things, can transforme himſelfe into an Angel of light. But howſoeuer the caſe be hard, and the deuill politicke, yet by light of direction from the word of God, there may ſome true differences be ſet downe betweene them; as namely theſe:

Firſt of all; diuine dreames haue alwaies had their preeminence aboue others, that generally they haue concerned the weightieſt matters in the world; as the comming and exhibiting of the Meſſias, the changes and alterations of Kingdomes, the reuealing of Antichriſt, and the ſtate of the Church of God. And this may plainly appeare by thoſe which Ioſeph expounded vnto Pharao, and Daniel vnto the Kings of Babel and Perſia. But in the other ſort it is o-therwiſe. For if there be any thing repreſented more then ordinarie in thoſe that be naturall, it proceedeth meerely from fancy and imagination. And as for diabolicall they are not of ſo weightie matters, nor ſo hard to foretell. For though the Deuill haue great power and skill, yet it is aboue his reach to determine of ſuch things as theſe are, or to foretell them without helpe from God.

Secondly, diuine dreames be alwaies either plaine and manifeſt, or if they be obſcure yet they haue a moſt euident interpretation annexed vnto them. Of the plainer ſort, were the dreames of Ioſeph the husband of Marie. Mat. 1. Of the other ſort were Pharaohs very darke and hidden, but God raiſed vp Ioſeph to giue them an eaſie interpretation vpon the inſtant. Gen. 41. Nebuchadnetſars dreames were full of obſcuritie, and many matters were contained in them, ſo as his ſpirit was troubled, and he forgat them; but God ſtirred vp Daniel and reuealed to him the ſecret, ſo as he remembred it to the King, and declared the true meaning thereof, Dan. 2. 1, 28. 36. Laſtly, Daniels dreames of the foure beaſts, &c. were of like difficultie, but the Angell Gabriel was preſently ſent to make him vnderſtand them, Dan. 8. 16. Now thoſe that are cauſed by the Deuill, as they be obſcure and intricate, ſo the interpretation of them is ambiguous and vncertaine, becauſe he himſelfe cannot infallibly determine how things ſhall come to paſſe, and thereupon is conſtrained to giue doubtfull anſwers by dreames. And ſuch were not onely the ancient Oracles among the heathen, where he gaue the reſolution, but the moderne Prophecies giuen by him to ſome of his inſtruments in the later time.

Thirdly, the dreame that comes from God, is alwaies agreeable to his reuealed will, and repreſenteth nothing contrary to the ſame, in whole or in part: whereas thoſe that proceede from nature, doe ſauour of nature, and bee agreeable to mans corruption, which is repugnant vnto Gods will. And thoſe that are ſuggeſted by Satan, are of the ſame nature; the generall ſcope whereof is to croſſe the will of God, and to withdrawe the heart from obedience thereunto.

Fourthly, diuine dreames ayme at this end, to further religion and pietie, and to maintaine true doctrine: but the deuill, an enemie to God, worketh in his dreames the ſubuerſion of true religion, and the worſhip of God, that in the roome thereof he may ſet vp Idolatrie and ſuperſtition. For ſo much we learne, Deut. 13. where the falſe Prophet brings his dreame, and vtters it, yea and confirmeth it by a wonder; but marke his ende: It was to drawe men to Apoſtacie; Let vs (ſaith he) goe after other Gods, which thou haſt not knowne, and let vs ſerue them, verſ. 2. Anſwerable to which, was the practiſe of the falſe prophets afterwards, who cauſed the people to erre by their lies and flatteries. Ier. 23. 32.

To conclude this point, it muſt be here remembred, that howſoeuer there are and haue beene diſtinct ſorts of dreames, yet thoſe which are from God, were onely in ordinarie vſe in the olde Teſtament, and in the Church of the Newe are ceaſed, and take not place ordinarily. Whereas therefore men in their ſleepes haue dreames, they muſt take them commonly to be naturall, and withall knowe that they may be diabolicall, or mixt partly of the one kinde, and partly of the other. And howſoeuer there may be ſome vſe of the naturall, as hath beene ſaid, yet commonly they are not to be regarded. And for the other which are from Satan, or mixt, they are not to be receiued, beleeued, or made meanes whereby to foretell things to come, leſt by this vſe of them, we growe into familiaritie with the deuill, and before God be guilty of the ſinne of Witchcraft.

§ 5. The fift and laſt kind of Diuination by true meanes, is by Lots, when men take vpon them to ſearch out fortune (as they vſe to ſpeak) that is, good or bad ſucceſſe in any buſineſſe, by caſting of Lots, whether it be by caſting a die, or opening of a booke, or any ſuch caſuall meanes. I mention this the rather, becauſe among the ignorant and ſuperſtitious ſort, ſuch practiſes are common and in great account: the Lot is an ordinance of God, appointed for ſpeciall ends and purpoſes, but when it is thus applyed, it ceaſeth to be lawfull, becauſe it is abuſed to other ends then God by his word and ordinance hath allowed.

That we may the better know the abuſe of a Lot in this kind, we muſt remember there be three ſorts of Lots; the Ciuill, the Sporting, and the Diuining Lot.

The ciuill vſe of Lots, is when they be vſed for the ending of controuerſies; the diuiding of lands and heritages: the diſpoſition of offices amongſt many that are equally fit, the trying of the right in doubtfull things, or laſtly, the diſcouerie of a malefactor hid amongſt many ſuſpected. By this vſe of the Lot was Saul choſen to be king ouer Iſrael, 1. Sam. 10. 21. the skape-goate ſeparated from that which was to be ſacrificed, Leuit. 16. 8. the land of Canaan diuided among the children of Iſrael, Ioſ. 14. 2. &c. the treſpaſſe of Achan found out, Ioſh. 7. 15. and Matthias choſen to be one of the twelue, Act. 1. 26. and of this Lot Salomon ſaith, Pro. 18. 18. The Lot cauſeth contentions to ceaſe, and maketh partitions among the mightie. Hereupon the ciuill vſe of Lots hath his warrant in Gods word, ſo it be lawfully vſed in caſe of neceſſitie, with inuocation of the name of God, and with expectation of the euent from God, by whoſe hand and immediate prouidence it is diſpoſed. For the Lot (ſaith Salomon) is caſt into the lappe, but the whole diſpoſition thereof is from the Lord, Prou. 16. 33.

The Sporting Lot is that which is commonly ly vſed for ſome vaine and vnneceſſarie ende; as to ſet vp banck-rupts, or ſuch like. This hath no warrant in the word of God whereupon men ſhould vſe it, and therefore is no better then an abuſe of Gods ordinance, to ſpeake no more of it.

Now the diuining Lot performed by the opening of a booke, or the caſting of a die, or ſuch like, thereby to declare good or bad ſucceſſe, cannot be done without confederacie with Satan either explicite, or implicite. For the plaine caſt of a die, or the opening of a book without beleeuing, can doe nothing for the diſcouering of future contingents. And what is there in the nature of theſe actions to produce ſuch effects? or where, or when did God giue this vertue to them certainely to determine of things hidden from man, and knowne onely to himſelfe? Diuination therefore by them is to be holden as a practiſe, not onely ſauouring of ſuperſtition, but proceeding from the arte of Witchcraft and Sorcerie.

And thus much of Diuination by meanes of the creatures; and the ſeuerall kinds thereof.

Sect. III.

The ſecond kind of Diuination, is by counterfeit and forged meanes, which are none of the creatures of God: whereof one kinde onely is mentioned in Scripture, viz. when Satan is conſulted with in the ſhape of a dead man. This is commonly called Necromancie, or the blacke art, becauſe the deuill beeing ſought vnto by Witches, appeares vnto them in the likeneſſe of a dead bodie. And it is expreſſely forbidden, Deut. 18 11. yea condemned by the Prophet Eſay, 8. 19, 20. who ſaith in plaine tearmes, that Gods people ought not to goe from the liuing to the dead, but to the Lawe and to the teſtimonie. A memorable example hereof is recorded in 1. Sam. 28. the obſeruation whereof will diſcouer vnto vs the chiefe points of Necromancie. There Saul about to encounter the Philiſtims, beeing forſaken of God, who refuſed to anſwer him, either by dreames, or by Vrim, or by the Prophets, inquired for one that had a familiar ſpirit: and hearing of the Pythoneſſe at Endor, went vnto her by night, & cauſed her to raiſe vp Samuel, to tell him the iſſue of the warre. Now the Witch at his requeſt raiſed vp the Deuil, with whome ſhee was confederate, in Samuels likeneſſe; who gaue him anſwer, concerning his owne ouerthrowe, and the death of his ſonnes. Which example declareth plainely, that there is a kinde of diuination, whereby Witches and Sorcerers reueale ſtrange things, by meanes of the deuill appearing vnto them in the ſhapes or ſhadowes of the dead.

Touching the truth of this example, two Queſtions may be mooued.

The firſt is, Whether that which appeared was true Samuel or not? Some ſay it was Samuel indeede: others (who holde that there are no Witches) denie that it was either Samuel, or the deuil; and affirme it to be ſome other counterfeit comming in Samuels attire to deceiue Saul: both which opinions are falſe, and here to be confuted.

And firſt, that their opinion which ſay that true Samuel appeared vnto Saul, is a flat vntruth I prooue by theſe reaſons.

I. Before this time, God had withdrawne his ſpirit from Saul, as himſelfe confeſſeth, and denied to anſwer him any more by ordinarie meanes, in ſuch ſort as before he had done. Hereupon I gather, that it was not probable, that God would now vouchſafe him the fauour to ſuffer Samuel to come vnto him extraordinarily, and tell him what ſhould be the ende of his warre with the Philiſtims: and to this purpoſe it is affirmed twiſe in that chapter, that God had taken his good ſpirit from Saul.

II. The ſoules of the faithfull departed, are in the hands of God, and doe reſt in glory with himſelfe, and their bodies are in the earth, and there reſt in peace. So ſaith the voice from heauen, Reuel. 14. 13. Bleſſed are the dead that die in the Lord: for they reſt from their labours, and their works, that is, the reward of their works, follow them immediatly, or at the heeles, as the word ſignifieth. Now ſuppoſe the Deuill had power ouer Samuels bodie, yet to make true Samuel, he muſt haue his ſoule alſo. But it is not in the power of the Deuill, to bring againe the ſoules that are in heauen vnto their bodies, and ſo to cauſe them to appeare vnto men vpon earth, and to ſpeake vnto them. The Deuills kingdome is in hell, and in the hearts of wicked men on earth; yea whiles the children of God are in this world, he vſurpeth ſome authoritie ouer them, by meanes of their owne corruption: But heauen is the kingdome of God and his Saints, where Satan hath nothing to doe, conſidering that there is no fleſh or corruption, to make him entrance or yeeld him intertainment. Neither can it be prooued by Scripture, that the Deuill can diſturbe either the bodies or ſoules of them that die in the Lord: and therefore the Witch with all her power & ſkill, could not bring Samuels rotten bodie (for ſo no doubt it was now) and ſoule together.

III. This ſhape which appeared ſuffered Saul to adore and worſhip it, whereas the true Samuel would neuer haue receiued adoration from Saul the King, though it had beene in ciuill manner onely. Whome then did Saul adore? Anſ. The Deuill himſelfe, who beeing an enemie to the glorie of God, was content to take to himſelfe that honour, which a King in dutie is to performe to God himſelfe.

IV. If it had beene true Samuel, he would certainly haue reprooued Saul for ſeeking help at Witches, contrary to Gods commandement, and that doctrine which he had taught him from God in his life time. But this counterfeit reprooued him not, and therefore it is not like to be the true Prophet of God, but Satan himſelfe, A ſelfe,framing by his art and skill the perſon and ſhape of Samuel.

But it is alledged to the contrarie, that Samuel after his ſleep,prophecied of the death of Saul, Eccleſiaſtic.46.v.20. After his ſleepe alſo he told of the Kings death,&c. Anſw. That booke penned by Ieſus the ſonne of Sirach is a very worthie deſcription of Chriſtian Ethicks, conteining more excellent precepts for manners, then all the writings of heathen Philoſophers or other men. But yet it is not ſcripture, neither did the Church euer hold and receiue it as Canonicall; yea,the author himſelfe inſinuateth ſo much in the beginning thereof, for in the preface he diſableth himſelfe to interpret hard things, and after a ſort craues pardon for B his weaknes, which is not the manner of the men of God, that were penmen of Scripture. For they were ſo guided by Gods ſpirit in their proceedings, that nothing could be hard vnto them. This priuiledge no ordinarie man hath aſſurance of: & therfore this author writing vpon his owne priuate motion,was ſubiect to error; and no doubt this ſpeach of his,being contrarie to that which is recorded in the Canonicall Scriptures, is a flat vntruth.

Secondly, it is obiected, that the Scripture calleth him Samuel, that appeared vnto Saul. Anſ. The Scripture doth often ſpeake of things, not as they are in themſelues,but as they ſeeme to vs. So it is affirmed, Gen. 1. 16. that God made two great lights, the Sunne and the C Moone; whereas the moone is leſſer then many ſtarres, yet becauſe in regard of her neareneſſe to the earth, ſhee ſeemeth to vs greater then the reſt, therefore ſhee is called a great light. In like manner Idols in the Scripture are called Gods, not that they are ſo indeed,(for an Idoll is nothing, 1. Cor. 8.4.)but becauſe ſome men doe ſo conceiue of them in their mindes. In a word; the Scripture oftentimes doth abaſe it ſelfe to our conceit, ſpeaking of things not according as they are, but after the manner of men; and ſo in this place calleth counterfeit Samuel,by the name of the true Samuel,becauſe it ſeemed ſo vnto Saul.

The third obiection; That bodie which appeared, prophecied of things that came to paſſe D the day after, as the death of Saul, and of his ſonnes; which indeede ſo fell out, and at the ſame time, therefore was like to bee Samuel. Anſw. There is nothing there ſaid or done, which the deuill might not doe. For when the Lord vſeth the deuill as his inſtrument to bring ſome things to paſſe, he doth before hand reueile the ſame vnto him: and looke what particulars the deuill learneth from God, thoſe he can foretell. Now the truth is, Satan was appointed by God to worke Sauls ouerthrow,and it was made knowne vnto him when the thing ſhould be done; by which meanes, and by none other, the deuill was enabled to foretell the death of Saul. Where (by the way) obſerue, that in this caſe the deuill can reueale things to come certenly, to wit, if hee be appointed Gods immediate inſtrument for the execution of them,or knows them by light of former prophecies in Scripture.

Fourthly, dead men doe often appeare and walke after they are buried. Anſ. It is indeede the opinion of the Church of Rome,and of many ignorant perſons among vs: but the truth is otherwiſe. Dead men doe neither walke nor appeare in bodie or ſoule after death: for all that die, are either Righteous or wicked: The ſoules of the Righteous goe ſtraight to heauen, and the ſoules of the wicked to hell, and there remaine till the laſt iudgement: and therfore of the iuſt it is ſaide, that they are bleſſed when they die, becauſe they reſt from their labours, Apoc. 14. 13. But how doe they reſt, if after they be dead they wander vp and downe in the earth?

If it be ſaide, that Moſes and Elias appeared when Chriſt was transfigured in the Mount; and that Lazarus roſe againe,and at Chriſts reſurrection many dead bodies roſe againe and appeared.

I anſwer; there were two times when God ſuffered the dead to be raiſed vp againe; either at the planting of his Church, or at the reſtoring and eſtabliſhing of it, when it was raſed to the foundation. Thus at the reſtoring of religion in Elias and Eliſhas times, the ſonne of the Shunamitiſh woman, 2. King. 4. 34. and the widowes ſonne at Sarephta, 1. King. 17. 21. were raiſed. Againe, when God would reſtore his Church, which was fallen to Idolatrie about the death of Eliſha, he cauſed the like miracle to be wrought in the reuiuing of a dead man by the touching of Eliſhas dead carkeiſe in the graue, thereby to aſſure the people of their deliuerance, and to cauſe them to embrace the doctrine of the Prophet after his death,which in his life they had contemned. In like manner at the eſtabliſhing of the Goſpel in the new Teſtament, it pleaſed Chriſt to raiſe vp Moſes and Elias, and to make them knowne to his Diſciples by extraordinarie reuelation, that they might beleeue that the doctrine which he preached was not new, but the ſame in ſubſtance with that which was recorded in the Law and the Prophets, both which were repreſented by Moſes and Elias. So alſo he wrought the miracle vpon Lazarus, the widowes ſonne, and Iairus daughter, thereby to ſhew the power of his Godhead,the truth of his calling, the teſtimonie of his doctrine: laſtly,to make knowne the power of his reſurrection, he cauſed ſome to riſe and appeare to others, when he himſelfe roſe againe. But out of theſe two times we haue neither warrant nor example, that God ſuffered the dead to be raiſed vp. Wherefore thoſe inſtances will not any way confirme Samuels appearing, which indeede was not true, but counterfeit and forged by the Deuill himſelfe.

Now for the Second Opinion, of thoſe which denie that there be any Witches, and A thereupon hold that this was a meere coſenage of the Witch, ſuborning ſome man or woman to counterfeit the forme, attire, and voyce of Samuel, thereby to delude Saul, that alſo is vntrue. For he that ſpake foretolde the ruine of Saul, of his ſonnes, and of his army, yea the time alſo wherein this was to come to paſſe: whereas in likelihood no man or woman in all Iſrael, could haue foretolde ſuch things before hand of themſelues. It was not then any coſenage, as is affirmed, but a thing effected by the deuill, framing to himſelſe a bodie in the likeneſſe of Samuel, wherein he ſpeake.

If therefore it be manifeſt, that by counterfeit apparitions of the dead, Witches and Sorcerers B can foretell things to come: hence ſundrie points of Witchcraft may be obſerued.

Firſt, that there is a league betwene the Witch and the deuill. For this was the cauſe which mooued Saul to ſeeke to Witches, becauſe neither he himſelfe, nor any of his ſeruants could raiſe vp Satan in Samuels likenes, as the Witch of Endor did. But Saul beeing a King, might haue commanded helpe from all the wiſe and learned men in Iſrael, for the effecting of ſuch a matter: why then would he rather ſeeke to a ſilly woman, then to them? The reaſon was, becauſe ſhe had made a compact with the deuill, for the vſing of his helpe at her demaund, by vertue whereof he was as readie C to anſwer, as ſhe to call him; whereas Saul and the learned Iews, hauing made no ſuch league, neither he by his power, nor they by their skill, could haue performed ſuch a worke.

Secondly, the deuill will be readie at the call and command of Witches and Sorcerers, when they are intending any miſchiefe. For here the Witch of Endor no ſooner ſpake, but he appeared, and therefore the text giues her a name that ſignifieth one hauing rule and command ouer Pytho, that is, the familiar ſpirit: yet when he is cōmanded, he yeelds not vpon conſtraint, but voluntarily, becauſe he builds vpon his own greater aduantage, the gaining of the ſoule of the Witch. Where by the way, let it be obſerued, what a pretious thing the ſoule of man is; the purchaſing whereof, can make the prooud D ſpirit of Satan ſo farre to abaſe it ſelfe, as to be at the command of a ſilly woman. Againe, what an inueterate malice Satan beareth to man, which for the gaining of a ſoule, will doe that which is ſo contrarie to his nature. It may teach man what to eſteeme of his ſoule, and not to ſell it for ſo baſe a price.

Thirdly, by this, the great power of the deuill in the behalfe of the Sorcerer, is made manifeſt. For he was preſently at hand to counterfeit Samuel, and did it ſo liuely and cunningly, as well in forme of bodie, as in attire and voice, that Saul thought verily it was the Prophet: which may be a caueat vnto vs, not eaſily to giue credit to any ſuch apparitions. For though they ſeeme neuer ſo true and euident, yet ſuch is the powet and skill of the deuill, that he can quite deceiue vs, as he did Saul in this place.

Sect. IV.

Hitherto I haue ſhewed the firſt kinde of Diuination by means, both true & forged. Now followeth the ſecond; practiſed without means.

Diuination without meanes, is the foretelling and reuealing of things to come, by the alone and immediate aſſiſtance of a familar ſpirit. This kinde is mentioned and expreſſely forbidden, Leuit. 19. 31. Ye ſhall not regard them that worke with ſpirits. Againe, Leuit. 20. 6. If any turne after ſuch as worke with ſpirits, to goe a whoring after them, I will ſet my face againſt that perſon, and will cut him off from among his people. So, Deut. 18. 11. Let none be found among you, that conſulteth with ſpirits. In which places the holy Ghoſt vſeth the word Ob, which more properly ſignifieth a ſpirit, or deuill, in which ſenſe it is taken in Leuit. 20. 27. and in 1. Sam. 28. 8. And by reaſon of the league which is betweene the Witch and the deuill, the ſame is alſo giunn to the Witch, that woketh by the deuill: and therefore the Pythoneſſe at Endor, is both called Ob, 1. Sam. 28. 9. and ſhe that ruleth Ob. v. 7. 8.

Now this kinde of Diuination is practiſed two wayes: either inwardly, when the ſpirit is within the Witch: or outwardly, when beeing forth of the Witch, he doth onely inſpire him or her.

An example of the former way, the Scripture affoardeth, Act. 16. 16. of a woman at Philippi, that had a ſpirit of Pytho; which gat her maſter much vantage with diuining. And this ſpirit whereby ſhe diuined was within her. For Paul beeing moleſted, ſaid to the ſpirit, I command the in thee name of Ieſus Chriſt, that thou come out of her, and he came out of her the ſame houre, v. 18. And becauſe the deuill is not wont in this kind to ſpeak out of the throat and breſt, or bellie of the Witch poſſeſſed, hereupon learned men haue thought that this name (Ob) is giuen to the deuill, becauſe he ſpeaketh out of the Witch as out of a bottle or hollow veſſell; for ſo the word Ob, properly ſignifieth.

Secondly, this may be practiſed when the deuill is forth of the Witch, and then he either inſpireth her, or els caſteth her into a trance, and therein reueileth vnto her ſuch things as ſhe would knowe.

Of this kinde, though we haue no example in Scripture, yet the hiſtories of the Heathen doe afford vnto vs many inſtances of experience therein. One of the principall is the hiſtorie of the tenne Sibylles of Greece, who were moſt famous Witches, and did prophecie of many things to come, whereof ſome were true concerning Chriſt and his kingdome, which the deuill ſtole out of the Bible, and ſome other were falſe: and all of them they receiued by reuelation from the deuill in trances.

But it will be ſaid, if the deuill reueileth vnto his inſtruments ſtrange things in trances, then how ſhall a man diſcerne between diabolicall reuelations, and the true gift of Prophecie; which God in trances reueileth vnto his Prophets.

Anſ. In this point Satan is (as it were) Gods ape: For as he in olde time raiſed vp holy Prophets to ſpeak vnto the fathers, for the building vp of his Church: ſo hath Satan inſpired his miniſters, and furniſhed his inſtruments with propheticall inſpirations from time to time, for the building vp of his owne kingdome: and hereupon he hath notably counterfeited the true gift of prophecie receiued firſt from God himſelfe. And yet, though in many things they be like, there is great difference betweene them.

Firſt, diuine trances may come vpon Gods children, either when the ſoule remaineth vnited with the bodie, or elſe when it is ſeuered for a time. So much Paul inſinuateth, when he ſaith of himſelfe, 2. Cor. 12. 2. that he was rapt vp (as it were in a heauenly trance) into the third heauen, but whether in the bodie, or out of the bodie, he knewe not. But in all diabolicall ecſtaſies, though the bodie and ſenſes of the Witch be (as it were) bound or benummed for the time; yet their ſoules ſtill remaine vnited to their bodies, and not ſeuered from them. For though the deuill by Gods permiſſion may kill the bodie, and ſo take the ſoule out of it for euer; yet to take it from the bodie for a time, and to reunite them againe, is miraculous, and therefore beyond the compaſſe of his power.

Secondly, in diuine trances the ſeruants of God haue al their ſenſes, yea and all the powers of ſoule and bodie remaining ſound and perfect, onely for a time the actions and operations are ſuſpended and ceaſe to doe their duty: but in ecſtaſies that be from Satan, his inſtruments are caſt into frenzies and madneſſe: ſo as reaſon in them is darkened, vnderſtanding obſcured, memorie weakened, the braine diſtempered; yea all the faculties are ſo blemiſhed, that many of them neuer recouer their former eſtate againe, and they that ſcape beſt, doe carrie their blemiſhes, as the deuills ſkars, euen to their graue. So kinde is Satan to his friends, that he will leaue his tokens behind him where euer he comes in this ſort. The ſeruants of God receiue no ſuch blemiſh, but rather a further good, and a greater meaſure of illumination of all the powers of the ſoule.

Thirdly, diuine ecſtaſies tend alway to the confirming of the truth of the Goſpell, and the furtherance of true religion and pietie. Such was Peters, Act. 10, 11. which ſerued to aſſure him of his calling to preach the Goſpell to the Gentiles, and to informe his iudgement in this truth, that there was no acception of perſons with God, and that to them of the newe Teſtament, all things were cleane, and nothing polluted. But the ſcope of them that are from Satan, is principally the ſuppreſſing and hinderance of religion, the drawing of the weake into errours, the ratifying and confirming of them that are fallen thereinto, and the generall vpholding of the practiſes of vngodlineſſe. And by theſe and ſuch like particular differences, hath God pulled off the Deuils vizar, and made him better knowne and diſcerned of true Chriſtians. And thus much concerning Diuination, the firſt part of Witch-craft.

CHAP. IV.

Of operatiue or working Witch-craft.

THe ſecond part is that which conſiſteth in Operation, and is therefore called Operatiue or working Witchcraft.

Witch-craft in Operation, is that which is employed in the practiſe and reall working of ſtrange things or wonders, and it hath two parts, Inchantment, and Iugling.

Sect. I.

Inchantment.

Inchantment is the working of wonders by a Charme. This the Lord expreſſely forbiddeth, Deut. 18. 11. Let none be found among you, that is a Charmer. In this deſcription, two points are to be conſidered: 1. what things may be done by inchantment, namely wonders, for I ſay it is the practiſe of wonders: 2. by what meanes theſe wonders are wrought, that is, by a Charme.

For the firſt: The wonders done by Inchanters are, 1. The raiſing of ſtormes and tempeſts; windes and weather, by ſea and by land: 2. The poyſoning of the ayre: 3. Blaſting of corne: 4. Killing of cattell, and annoying of men, women and children: 5. The procuring of ſtrange paſſions and torments in mens bodies and other creatures, with the curing of the ſame: 6. Caſting out of deuils. Theſe and ſuch like things Inchanters can doe by their charmes. And for proofe hereof, we haue the vniforme conſent of all ages, with the records of Witches confeſſions to manifeſt the ſame; beſides the teſtimony of experience in this age: ſo as the man that calles it into queſtion, may as wel doubt of the Sunne ſhining at noone day.

Yet for the further declaration thereof, we wil alleadge what the Scripture ſaith in this point. Salomon ſaith, If the Serpent bite when he is not charmed, no better is a babler, Eccles. 10. 11. thus the words are in our Engliſh tranſlation: but they may better be thus read according to the originall: If the ſerpent bite before he be charmed, what profit hath the maſter of the tongue thereby, that is, the Charmer. And ſo they beare this ſenſe. If the Inchanter be bitten, before the ſerpent be charmed, then he hath no benefit by his charme. For Salomon in that place giueth vs to vnderſtand, what power Inchanters haue, and what they may doe by their charmes, if they come in time, namely, ſtay the poiſon of the ſerpent, ſo as he cannot hurt, either by biting or ſtinging. When Balac intended euill againſt Iſrael, he hired Balaam to curſe thẽ, Num. 22. 6. Now this Balaam was an inchanting Witch; for though he be called a Prophet, yet this was onely in the reputation of the world; for his practiſe was to inchant by charms of words; and to that purpoſe he was hired to curſe Gods people, that is, to bring miſchiefe vpon them by charming; which thing when he had often and many waies aſſaied to doe, and could no way preuaile, but that it pleaſed God contrary to his endeauours, to bleſſe Iſrael, then he breakes out into theſe words: There is no ſorcerie againſt Iacob, nor ſoothſaying againſt Iſrael, Num. 23. 23. As if he ſhould haue ſaid, I know wel that ſorcerie is powerfull in many things, and of force to bring much miſchiefe vpon men, yet it can take no place againſt the people of God, becauſe he hath bleſſed them; and whome he bleſſeth, them no man can hurt by curſing. Inchanters therefore, may vpon Gods permiſſion worke ſtrange things, as appeares by theſe places, to name no more.

The ſecond point to be obſerued, is the meanes whereby theſe wonders are practiſed; theſe are counterfeit and ſuppoſed meanes, not ordeyned & ſanctified by God, which are commonly called Charmes.

A Charme is a Spell or verſe, conſiſting of ſtrange words, vſed as a ſigne or watchword to the deuill, to cauſe him to worke wonders.

Firſt, I ſay it is a Spell conſiſting of ſtrange words, becauſe in theſe inchantments, certaine words or verſes are ſecretly vttered, which in regard of the common formes of words are ſtrange, and wherein there is thought to be a miraculous efficacie to bring ſome extraordinarie and vnexpected thing to paſſe. A point of it ſelfe euident and needing no further proofe, conſidering it is not vnknowne to the more ignorant ſort, who are better acquainted with theſe, then with the word of God. And theſe words are not all of one and the ſame kind; but ſome are rude and barbarous, neither knowne nor conceiued or vnderſtood; of which the auncienter ſort of Charmes were wont to be made eſpecially, and ſome later. Some againe are plaine and knowne tearmes, which may be vnderſtood; as the names of the Trinitie, ſome words and ſentences of Scripture, as In principio erat verbum, &c. Againe, charmes that conſiſt of words, are not all of one ſort, but ſome be imprecations, wiſhing ſome euill: others in ſhew haue the forme of praiſes and bleſſings, whereby the Witch either flatteringly commendeth, or fauourably wiſheth ſome good: others againe are made in forme of prayer A and petition: and they all are ſometimes plainely conceiued, ſometimes in ruder and more vnknown words, as thoſe well know, who haue heard them, or reade them where they are to be found.

Secondly, I adde, that the charme is vſed for a ſigne and watchword to the deuill, to cauſe him to worke wonders, wherein ſtandeth the nature and proper end of a charme. The nature, in that it is a diabolicall ſigne; the end, to cauſe the deuill to worke a wonder: whereby it is diſtinguiſhed from all other ſpeaches of men. For all they commonly carry the nature of the thing, whereof and whereabout they be made, but the Charme doth not alwaies follow the B nature of the words, but hath another nature in regard of the immediate relation it hath to the deuill, to whom it is a ſigne. Again, the charme pronounced doth not the wonder, but the deuil admoniſhed by it as by the watchword to doe the feate.

Now becauſe ſome are of opinion, in regard of the ordinarie production of ſtrange effects by theſe meanes, that the Spell hath in it ſelfe ſome vertue and power to ſuch and ſuch purpoſes whereunto it is vſed; I will ſtand a little in the proofe of the contrarie, That a Charme is onely a diabolicall watchword, and hath in it ſelfe no ſuch effectuall power or poſſibilitie to worke a wonder. My reaſons are C theſe.

Firſt, this muſt be taken for a maine ground; That as there is nothing in the world, that hath being but from God, ſo nothing hath in it any efficacie, but by his ordinance. Now whatſoeuer efficacie, is in any creature from God, it receiued the ſame into it ſelfe, either by creation, or ſince the creation by ſome newe and ſpeciall inſtitution, appointment, and gift of God. For example. The bread in the Sacrament, by a naturall power giuen vnto it in the creation, ſerueth to nouriſh the bodie, and the ſame bread, by Gods ſpeciall appointment in his word, feedes the ſoule, in that by his ordinance it is made to vs a ſigne & ſeale of the body of Chriſt broken for vs: And ſo it is in euery creature; if the effect be ordinarie and naturall, it hath it D by creation; if extraordinarie and ſupernaturall, it hath that by diuine ordination: So that whatſoeuer comes to paſſe by any other meanes, is by Satanicall operation. Now Charmes and Spells, ſtanding of ſet words and ſillables, haue no power in them to worke wonders, either by the gift of nature in the creation, or by Gods appointment ſince the creation: and therefore they haue in them no power at all for any ſuch purpoſe. This latter part of the reaſon, being the aſſumption or application of the ground to the preſent inſtance, conſiſteth of two partes, which I will prooue in order. Firſt then I affirme, that by the gift of nature, no wordes of Charmes haue power in them to worke wonders; and I prooue it in this manner.

I. All words made and vttered by men, are in their owne nature but ſounds framed by the tongue, of the breath that commeth from the lungs. And that which is onely a bare ſound, in all reaſon can haue no vertue in it to cauſe a reall worke, much leſſe to produce a wonder. The ſounds of bells and of many muſicall inſtruments, and the voices of many bruite creatures, are farre more ſtrong and powerfull then the voice of a man: yet who knoweth not, that none of all theſe is auaileable to ſuch purpoſes. Indeede they haue power to affect the minde, by their ſweetneſſe or otherwiſe, but they are not able to bring to paſſe a reall worke, either by the inflicting of hurts and harmes, or by the procuring of good. I conclude therefore, that the voice of man by nature, hath no power to worke any wonders.

II. Againe, euery thing which hurteth or affecteth another, muſt neceſſarily touch the thing which it hurteth or affecteth. For it is a granted rule in nature, that euery agent worketh vpon the patient by touching: But words vttered in Charmes are commonly made of things abſent, and therefore though it ſhould be granted, that they had the power of touching a ſubſtance (which they cannot haue) yet of themſelues they are not auaileable to bring vpon things abſent either good or euill.

Omne agens, agit per contactum.

III. Moreouer, if wordes conceiued in charmes and ſpells haue any ſuch power as is pretended, why ſhould not euery word that any man ſpeaketh haue the ſame power, inaſmuch as all words are of the ſame nature, beeing onely ſounds framed in the breaſt, and vttered of the tongue in letters and ſyllables? But experience teacheth, that the ſame word ſpoken by another, hath not the ſame vertue; For the charme vttered by the Charmer himſelfe, will take effect, but being ſpoken in the ſame manner by another man, that is no Inchanter, maketh to no purpoſe, for nothing is effected by it.

IV. That which is in nature nothing but a bare ſignification, cannot ſerue to worke a wonder, and this is the nature of all words; for as they be framed of mans breath, they are naturall, but yet in regard of forme and articulation they are artificiall and ſignificant, and the vſe of them in euery language is, to ſignifie that which the author thereof intended; for the firſt ſignifications of words, depended vpon the will and pleaſure of man that framed and inuented them. Beeing therefore inuented onely to ſhewe or ſignifie ſome thing, it remaines that neither in nature nor proper vſe, they can be applyed to the producing of wonderfull and ſtrange effects. Thus the former part of the aſſumption is cleared.

In the ſecond place I affirme, that the words of charmers haue not this power in them, by any ſpeciall gift, bleſſing, or appointment of God, ſince the creation which is the other part of the aſſumption. And I ſhewe it thus: whatſoeuer is powerfull and effectuall to any ende or purpoſe, by Gods gift, bleſſing, or appointment, the ſame is commanded in his word to be vſed, and hath alſo a promiſe of bleſſing annexed to the right vſe thereof. To vſe the inſtance before made for explanation ſake. The bread in the Lords ſupper, hath this power and propertie giuen it by Chriſt, to ſeale and ſignifie vnto euery beleeuing receiuer the bodie of Chriſt; and by this propertie giuen it, it is auaileable to this purpoſe; though it be a thing aboue the common and naturall vſe of bread; and thereupon we haue warrant from Chriſts own commandement, ordinance, and example ſo to vſe it. But in the whole bodie of the Scripture, there is not the like commandement to vſe the words of Charmes for the effecting of wonders, much leſſe the like promiſe of bleſſing vpon the ſame ſo vſed: therefore the concluſion is, that God hath giuen no ſuch power vnto them in ſpeciall.

If it be asked then, what they are, and whereto they ſerue? I anſwer, they are no better then the deuils ſacraments and watchwords, to cauſe him to do ſome ſtrange worke. For the Inchanter hath relation in his minde to the deuill, whoſe helpe he hath at hand by couenant either open or ſecret; or at leaſt ſome ſuperſtitious opinion of the force of the words, which is a preparation to a couenant.

The truth of this doctrine, howſoeuer it be thus made manifeſt, yet it findes not generall intertainment at all mens hands. For there are and haue beene ſome learned men, in all ages, who maintained the contrarie, both by word and writing; and namely, that there is great vertue and power in words pronounced in time and place, to effect ſtrange things. For proofe whereof they alledge theſe reaſons.

Firſt, that the bare conceit and imagination of man, is of great force to doe ſtrange things; and therefore words expreſſed much more. An. The ground of the reaſon is naught. Imagination is nothing elſe but a ſtrong conceit of the minde touching any thing, whatſoeuer it be, and by reaſon of the communion that is betweene the bodie and ſoule being together, it is of great force to worke within the man that imagineth diuerſly, and to cauſe alteration in himſelfe, which may tend either to the hurt or to the good of his owne bodie: but yet imagination hath no force out of a man to affect or hurt an other. A man (conceiuing deſperately of his owne eſtate) by the ſtrength of imagination may kill himſelfe; but the ſame conceit, be it neuer ſo ſtrong, can not hurt his neighbour. For it is no more then Cęſars image vpon his coyne, which ſerueth onely to repreſent Cęſar: ſo imagination is nothing but the repreſentatiō of ſome thing in the minde by conceit, and therfore as the perſon of Cęſar is nothing hurt, though his image be defaced; ſo when we conceiue of men in our mindes, though neuer ſo badly & malitiouſly, yet all is of no force to hurt

A or annoy them, either in perſon or ſtate.

Secondly, they alleadge that Witches by malitious and wrie lookes, in anger and diſpleaſure, may and doe hurt thoſe vpon whom they looke, whether they be men or other creatures. And it is an old receiued opinion, that in malitious and ill diſpoſed perſons, there proceed out of the eye with the beames, noyſome and malignant ſpirits, which infect the ayre, and doe poiſon or kill, not onely them with whom they are daily conuerſant, but others alſo whoſe companie they frequent, of what age, ſtrength, and complexion ſo euer they be. Anſ. But the opinion is as fond, as it is old: for it is as much againſt nature that ſuch vertue ſhould proceede out of the eye, or ſuch ſpirits breake out of the B nerues to the partie hated, as it is for the blood of the bodie, of it ſelſe, to guſh out of the veines.

Yet for the ratifying of this opinion, they alledge that which is writtē in *Gen.*30.37. where Iacob laid ſpeckled roddes before the ſheepe in their waterie troughes, and that by Gods appointment, for this ende, that they might bring forth partie coloured lambs. I anſwer, that was not a worke of ſight, but a ſpeciall and extraordinarie worke of Gods prouidence vpon Iacob in his neceſſitie, as we may plainely ſee in the chapter next following, v. 9. and 11. yea it was taught Iaacob by God himſelfe; and if it had beene an ordinarie worke, doubtleſſe the gaines thereof beeing ſo good, Iacob would C haue done it againe afterward; but wee neuer reade that he did it againe. And be it granted it were a naturall worke, yet it cannot prooue witching by ſight, becauſe the ſheepe receiued into their eyes the ſpecies and reſemblance of the rodds, which is according to nature; whereas in faſcination or bewitching by ſight, malignant ſpirits ſhould not bee receiued in, but ſent foorth of the eye, which is againſt nature.

Yea, but the Baſiliske or Cockatrice doth kill man and beaſt with his breath and ſight, yea the wolfe takes away the voyce of ſuch as he ſoddenly meetes withall and beholdes, and why may not wicked men or women doe the like? Anſ. Indeede it is a thing receiued by common errour, and held of ſome D for a truth; but no experience of any man hath yet beene brought for the proofe thereof, and therefore it is to be reputed as fabulous. Thus much in probabilitie may be thought (if the allegation ſhould be true) that the Baſiliske being poſſeſſed of a thicke poyſon, may by his breath ſend forth ſome groſſe venemous vapours, and thereby infect the ayre, and poiſon the thing that is neere vnto him. Againe that the ſoddaine and vnexpected beholding of the venemous Cockatrice, or the rauenous wolfe, (beeing creatures in their kind fearefull, eſpecially to thoſe that are not acquainted with thē) may cauſe preſent aſtoniſhment, & conſequently perill of death. But that this ſhould bee done by the eyes of theſe creatures only, in manner aforeſaid, it is not credible; and therfore Authors haue vpō good ground denied it, as being confirmed neither by reaſon, nor experience.

Thirdly, they reaſon thus; Inchanters by whiſpering of words in charmes can ſtay the ſtinging and poiſoning of ſerpents; for ſo Dauid in effect ſpeaketh; that the voice of the Charmer charmeth the ſerpent, Pſal. 58.5. It may ſeeme therefore that there is no ſmal force in words for the effecting of ſtrange workes. Anſ. It muſt be granted that the charmer may inchant the ſerpent: but how? not by vertue of the words in the Charme, but by power of the deuill, who then is ſtirred vp, when the charme is repeated, to doe the thing intended. The truth of this anſwer appeares by the words of the text, as they are reade in the originall, that the Inchanter ioyneth ſocieties very cunningly, namely, with the deuill. Now theſe ſocieties betweene Satan and the Charmer, are the very ground of the worke vpon the ſerpent: which worke, vpon confederacie formerly made, is done by the deuill, and the words of the Charme are no more but the Inchanters Item or watchword, to occaſion him thereunto. And let any other man repeate the ſame words a thouſand times, that either is not thus confederate with Satan, or hath not a ſuperſtitious opinion of Charmes, and all his labour will be in vaine.

Fourthly, the word of God is of great force in the hearts of men to conuert and change them, as it is vttered by the mouth of mortall man; and this force is not in the man by whom it is ſpoken; where then ſhould it be, but in the words? and then if in the words, why may not other words be of like efficacie, beeing vttered by man? Anſw. 1. The power of Gods word commeth not from this, that it is a word, and barely vttered out of the mouth of a man; for ſo it is a dead letter: but it proceedeth from the powerfull operation of the ſpirit, annexed by Gods promiſe thereunto, when it is vttered, read, and conceiued; which operation if it were taken away, the word might be preached a thouſand yeares together, without any fruite or effect, either to ſaluation or condemnation.

2. The word of God is powerful by the concurrence of the worke of the ſpirit, not in all things; as for example, in raiſing winds and tempeſts, in infecting the ayre, in killing and annoying men or other creatures; but in the conuerſion of ſinners, in gathering the elect, and in confirming thoſe that be called; and this power it hath alſo by his ſpecial bleſſing & appointment.

3. Furthermore, the ſame word is not of power, when it is barely read, heard, or ſpoken, vnleſſe it be alſo conceiued in the vnderſtāding, receiued with reuerence, treaſured vp in the memory, and mingled with faith in the heart: whereas the bare reading and muttering ouer the words of a Charme by an Inchanter, though

A in an vnknowne tongue, in rude and barbarous words, is ſufficient to procure the working of wonders.

Now though the word of God be in it ſelfe pure, and ſerue to excellent purpoſe, as hath beene ſaid, yet by the way we may remember; That as it is with all things that are moſt precious, nothing is ſo excellent in it kind which may not be abuſed; ſo it is with this heauenly word: for it is and may be made a Charme two waies. Firſt, when ſome part of it, is indeede vſed for a charme. Thus many Texts of Scripture; both in Latin and other languages, haue been abuſed by Inchanters, as might eaſily be ſhewed. Secondly, when it is heard, read, recited or made a matter of prayer without vnderſtanding. And thus the ignorant man; as much as B in him lieth, makes it a Charme. For in his ordinarie vſe thereof, he neither conceiueth nor taketh care to vnderſtand it, as lamentable experience teacheth. Yet in neither of theſe is the very bare repeating of the word effectuall. For as when a man heares or reades it, vnleſſe the Spirit of God inlighteneth his heart, it is to no purpoſe; ſo when it is made the matter of a Spel, nothing will be effected, vnleſſe the deuill either by confederacie, or ſuperſtitious conceit be drawne to conferre his helpe in the point, for his owne aduantage.

Howbeit, of all Inchantements theſe are the moſt diſhonourable to God, moſt acceptable C to Satan, and moſt hurtfull to the Charmer, which are made of the Scriptures. For beſide the ſinne of Witchcraft in the Charming, this inconuenience inſueth, that Satan procureth more credit to one of theſe, then to twenty other, becauſe the words are Scripture; heereby cloking his miſchieuous practiſes vnder the colour of holyneſſe, and ſo confirming the truth of that which the holy Ghoſt ſaith, that when he worketh moſt deceitfully, he transformes himſelf into an Angel of light, 2.Cor.11.14. He knoweth well, that ordinarie words ſeeme nothing to ſome men, therefore he teacheth and ſuggeſteth phraſes and ſentences out of the word, for ſuch vngodly ends, that euen the grace of them fetched from the Scriptures, may make them ſeeme powerfull. Wherefore let euery one that is endued with grace and D knowledge, duely conſider this with himſelfe. Cannot Gods word be effectuall, when it is vſed to edification, vnleſſe the worke of his owne Spirit accompany the ſame? then ſurely it is impoſſible, that the ſame which is holy, beeing vſed to an euill ende, ſhould be powerfull, except the deuill affordeth his helpe for the effecting thereof. To conclude therefore, let men ſay what they will, the truth is this, that words of Inchantment, be they neuer ſo holy or prophane, either by way of curſing or bleſſing, haue no power of themſelues to the producing of ſtrange workes; but are (as hath beene ſaid) onely diabolicall ſignes, admoniſhing the Deuill of ſome wickedneſſe intended and deſired, which he through his power muſt cauſe to be done.

And thus much of Inchantment ſtanding vpon the practiſe of wonders by a Charme.

To this head of Inchantment, ſundry other practiſes of Witches are to be referred, the chiefe whereof are theſe.

Firſt, the vſing and making of Characters, Images, or Figures, ſpecially the framing of Circles, for this ende to worke wonders by them. As to drawe the picture of a childe, or man, or other creature in clay or waxe, and to burie the ſame in the ground, or to hide it in ſome ſecret place, or to burne it in the fire, thereby intending to hurt or kill the partie reſembled. Againe, to make an impreſſion into the ſaid picture, by pricking or gaſhing the heart or any other place with intent to procure dangerous or deadly panies to the ſame parts. This is a meere practiſe of Inchantement, and the making of the image, and vſing of it to this ende, is in vertue a Charme, though no words be vſed. For the bare picture hath no more power of it ſelfe to hurt the bodie repreſented, then bare words. All that is done commeth by the worke of the deuill, who alone by the vſing of the picture in that ſort is occaſioned ſo or ſo, to worke the parties deſtruction.

Secondly, hither we may referre the vſing of Amulets, that is, remedies and preſeruatiues againſt inchantments, ſorceries, and bewitchings, made of hearbes or ſome ſuch things, and hanged about the necke for that ende.

Thirdly, the vſing of Excorciſmes, that is, certaine ſet formes of words vſed in way of adiuration, for ſome extraordinarie ende. A practiſe vſuall in the Church of Rome, whereby the Prieſt coniures the ſalt, holy water, creame, ſpittle, oyle, palmes, &c. all which are in truth meere inchantmēts. For howſoeuer the Councell of Trent hath ratified them by their decrees, and ſo commended them to generall vſe within the compaſſe of the Popiſh Church; yet they haue in them no power or abilitie of bleſſing or curſing, either by nature or Gods appointment.

Concil. Trid. ſeſſ. 23. cap. 2.

Fourthly, In this number we reckon the vſing of the name Ieſus, to driue away the deuil, or to preuent Witchcraft; a common practiſe among the ignorant. Wherein the wonderfull malice of Satan bewraies it ſelfe, in making the ignorant people think that Chriſt is a coniurer, and that there is vertue in the naming of his name, to doe ſome ſtrange thing. Whereas the truth is, he careth neither for that name, nor for all the names of God, if a man goes no further then the bare repeating of them; but rather delighteth to ſee them ſo abuſed and diſgraced. And hereupon it is, that in all coniurations, when he is raiſed by the Sorcerer, he is willing to be adiured by all the holy names of God that are in the Scripture, to the ende that he may the more deepely ſeduce his owne inſtruments, and make them to thinke that theſe holy names will bind him, and force him to yeeld vnto their deſires in the particular, when indeed there is no ſuch matter. Which point throughly conſidered, may admoniſh vs to take ſpeciall heede of theſe cunning glozes and deuilliſh inſinuations, whereby he intendeth to delude vs; alway remembring, that the Apoſtles themſelues, to whome the power of working miracles was giuen, did neuer acknowledge the worke to be done by the name of Ieſus, but as S. Peter affirmeth, through faith in his name, Act. 3. 6. 16.

Fiftly, the croſſing of the bodie, to this ende, that we may be bleſſed from the deuill. A thing vſuall euen of latter times, ſpecially in Poperie; wherein the croſſe carrieth the very nature of a Charme, and the vſe of it in this manner, a practiſe of Inchantment. For God hath giuen no ſuch vertue to a croſſe, either by creation, or ſpeciall priuiledge and appointment.

Sixtly, the Scratching of a Witch to diſcouer the Witch. For it is a meanes which hath no warrant or power thereunto, either by the word of God, or from nature, but onely from the Deuill; who if he yeeldeth either at croſſing, or ſcratching, he doth it willingly, and not by compulſion, that he may feede his inſtrument with a falſe faith, and a ſuperſtitious conceit, to the diſhonour of God, and their owne ouerthrow. In a word, looke whatſoeuer actions, geſtures, ſignes, rites, and ceremonies are vſed by men or women to worke wonders, hauing no power to effect the ſame, either by creation and nature, or by ſpeciall appointment from God, they muſt all be referred to this head, and reckoned for Charmes.

The vſe. Now conſidering that all kinds of Charmes are the Deuills watchwords to cauſe him to worke the wonder, and haue no vertue in them, be the words wherein they are conceiued neuer ſo good: hereby we muſt be admoniſhed, to take heede of the vſe of them, and all other vnlawfull ceremonies, both in reſpect of their formes, be they praiſes or prayers, or imprecations; as alſo in regard of their endes, be they neuer ſo good in outward appearance. But alas! the more lamentable is the caſe, Charming is in as great requeſt as Phyſicke, and Charmers more ſought vnto, then Phyſitians in time of neede. There be charmes for all conditions and ages of men, for diuers kinds of creatures, yea for euery diſeaſe; as for head-ach, tooth-ach, ſtitches, and ſuch like. Neuertheleſſe, howſoeuer ſome haue ſubiected themſelues to ſuch baſe and vngodly meanes, yet the vſe hereof by the mercie of God, hath not beene vniuerſall. And thoſe that haue ſought for helpe, are to be aduiſed in the feare of God, to repent of this their ſinne, and to take a better courſe. Let them rightly conſider, that they haue hitherto depended vpon Satan for helpe, and conſequently haue diſhonoured God, and renounced lawfull meanes ſanctified by him, which ſhould not haue beene done in caſe of the greateſt worldly gaine. For no man may doe euill, that good may come of it.

But they that vſe the helpe of Charmers, and conſult with Wiſemen, are wont to alledge ſomething in defence or excuſe of their practiſe.

Firſt, that they for their part, meane no hurt, they know no euill by the man whome they ſeeke to, they onely ſend to him, and he does them good, how and in what manner they regard not. Anſ. 1. Indeede many be ignorant of the Inchanters courſes. But in caſes of loſſe and hindrance, men ought not onely to inquire the meanes, but to waigh and conſider the warrantablenes thereof, otherwiſe they doe not that they doe of faith, and ſo are guiltie of ſinne before God, Rom. 15. laſt v. 2. Put the caſe they themſelues meane no hurt, yet in this action they doe hurt to themſelues, by repoſing truſt in things, which vpon better conſideration they ſhall finde to be diſhonourable, and therefore hatefull to God.

Secondly, they alleadge; we goe to the Phyſitian for counſell, we take his Recipe, but we know not what it meaneth; yet, we vſe it, and finde benefit by it; if this be lawfull, why may we not as well take benefit by the Wiſeman, whoſe courſes we be ignorant of? Anſ. 1. Phyſicke vſed in time and place, is a worthie ordinance of God, and therefore beeing rightly vſed, God giues his bleſſing to it. But for Inchantment it was neuer ſanctified by God, and therefore cannot be vſed in any aſſurance of his bleſſing. 2. The Phyſitians receit beeing a compoſition and mixture of naturall things, though a man knowes it not, yet he takes it into his ſtomake, or applies it to his bodie, and ſenſibly perceiues the vertue and efficacie thereof in the working: whereas the Charmers courſe conſiſteth of words, which neither are knowne in themſelues, nor are manifeſt in their vſe to ſenſe or vnderſtanding. And hereby it is plaine, there is not the ſame reaſon of Phyſicke and charmes: the one hauing a ſenſible operation by vertue giuen it of God; the other inſenſible, and wrought aboue ordinarie meanes by the worke of Satan.

Thirdly, they alleadge, God is mercifull, and he hath prouided a ſalue for euery ſore, they haue vſed other meanes, but they haue not ſucceeded, and what ſhould they doe more, may they not in extremitie repaire to the Inchanter, and ſee what he can doe for them, rather then their goods and cattell ſhould be loſt and ſpoyled? Anſ. 1. It were better for you to bide by the loſſe, yea to liue and die in any ſickeneſſe, then to tempt God by ſeeking helpe at charmers hands: for their helpe is dangerous and commeth from the deuill, whereupon if ye reſt your ſelues, ye ioyne league with him, and ſo hazzard eternally the ſafetie both of bodies and ſoules. 2. Vſe good meanes allowed of God and when they haue beene vſed often without ſucceſſe, proceed not to other courſes, but referre your ſelues to God, and ſay with Iob: The Lord hath giuen, and the Lord hath taken away; bleſſed be the name of the Lord, Iob. 1. 21. And thus much of Inchanting, the firſt part of Operatiue Witchcraft.

Sect. II.

Iugling.

The ſecond part is Iugling. Iugling, is the deluding of the eye with ſome ſtrange ſleight done aboue the ordinary courſe of nature. In this deſcription there are two points neceſſarily required in the point of Iugling, Deluſion of the eye, and extraordinarie Sleight.

Deluſion is then performed, when a man is made to thinke he ſees that which indeede he ſees not. And this is done by operation of the deuill diuerſly, but eſpecially three waies. Firſt, by corrupting the humor of the eye, which is the next inſtrument of ſight. Secondly, by altering the ayre, which is the meane by which the obiect or ſpecies is carried to the eye. Thirdly, by altering and changing the obiect, that is, the thing ſeene, or whereon a man looketh.

This deluding of the ſenſe is noted by Paul, Gal. 3. 1. O fooliſh Galatians, who hath * bewitched you, where the ſpirit of God vſeth a * word borrowed from this kind of ſorcerers, which in full meaning ſignifieth thus much: who hath deluded your eyes, and cauſed you to thinke you ſee that, which you ſee not. As if he ſhould haue ſaid, Looke as the Iugler, by his deuiliſh art, deludeth the outward eye, and maketh men thinke they ſee that, which indeede they doe not: Euen ſo the falſe Apoſtles, by their erroneous doctrine, haue deluded the eyes of your mindes, and haue cauſed you Galatians, to iudge that to be the word of God, which is not, and that to be truth, which is errour and falſhood. Paul giues vs to vnderſtand by the very phraſe vſed, that there is ſuch a kind of Iugling, as is able to deceiue the eye. For otherwiſe his compariſon would not hold.

* ἐβάσκανε.

The ſecond thing required in Iugling, is a Sleight done aboue the order and courſe of nature. This is the point which maketh theſe conueiances to be Witchcraft. For if they were within the compaſſe of nature, they could not be rightly tearmed and reputed Sorceries: conſidering that diuers men by reaſon of the agilitie of their bodies, and ſleight of their hands, are able to worke diuers feats, which ſeeme ſtrange to the beholders, and yet not medle with Witchcraft. Againe, ſome by the lawfull art of Opticks, may ſhewe ſtrange and admirable things, by meanes of light and darkeneſſe, and yet may be free from imputation of Magicall workes; becauſe they keepe themſelues wholy within the power and practiſe of nature. But ſleights done in Iugling ouer and aboue deluſion, muſt paſſe the ordinarie bounds and precincts of nature, and ſo are made points of Witchcraft. One memorable example, for the clearer manifeſtation of this point, we haue in the Scripture, by name in the 7. 8. and 9. Chapters of Exodus, where Moſes and Aaron, wrought wonders before Pharaoh, turning the rodde into a ſerpent, and water into blood, with many other ſuch like. Now Iannes and Iambres (for ſo Paul calleth them, 2. Tim. 3. 8.) the Magicians of Egypt, did worke the ſame miracles which Moſes and Aaron had done; But here was the difference; Moſes made true creatures, and wrought true miracles, whereas they did all in appearance and outward ſhewe. For theirs were not true reall actions, but onely Magicall illuſions, wrought by the ſleight and ſubtiltie of the Deuill, in the practiſe of Iugling.

A

And becauſe ſome thinke, that the ſerpents B and frogs cauſed by the Magitians, were true creatures, and all their other workes as really and truely done as thoſe which Moſes & Aaron did, I will here ſtand a litle to ſhew and prooue the contrary, that they were onely in ſhew and appearance, and not in deed and truth.

Firſt then, if the frogs and ſerpents cauſed by Iannes and Iambres were true creatures indeede, and their other ſleights true and reall workes; then they were made and cauſed either by the deuill, or by God himſelfe: (for no man of himſelfe can make a rodde to become a true ſerpent.) But this was done neither by the deuill, nor by God, as ſhall appeare in the ſequele.

They were not done by the Deuill; becauſe C the deuill cannot make a true creature, either ſerpent or frogge.

How doth that appeare? Anſ. To make a true creature of any ſort, by producing the ſame out of the cauſes, is a worke ſeruing to continue the creation, and is indeede a kinde of creation. Now the deuill as he cannot create a thing at the firſt, ſo he is not able to continue the ſame by a newe creation; that beeing a propertie belonging to God onely. For better conceiuing hereof, we muſt knowe, that God createth two waies; either primarily in the beginning, when he made all things of nothing, Gen. 1. 1. or ſecondarily, in the gouernment of the world, when he produceth a true creature in a true miracle; yet not making it of nothing (as he did in the beginning) but producing it D by miniſtring and informing the matter immediately by himſelfe, without the aide of ordinarie meanes and inſtruments appointed after the creation. The former is creation properly called, the latter a continuance thereof. Both theſe God hath reſerued to himſelfe, as incommunicable to any creature. As for the ſucceſſion and propagation of creatures in their kinds, as of men, beaſts, birds, fiſhes, &c. it is onely a continuation of the creatures in their kindes, and is wrought by ordinarie meanes of generation; but is no continuance of the worke of the creation. And the deuill by his power may make counterfeits of the true creatures of God, but neither by creating them, nor by continuing their creation; theſe two beeing workes peculiar liar and proper to the Deitie alone.

Againe, if the deuill could turne a rodde into a true ſerpent, and water into blood indeed, then his power ſhould be equall to the power of the Sonne of God himſelfe. For the firſt miracle that he wrought, was the turning of water into wine, Ioh. 2. And that was no greater a worke, then the turning of water into bloode, or a rodde into a ſerpent. But this were moſt horrible blaſphemie, to match the deuill with the Sonne of God, and his finite power, with the power of the Godhead, by which miracles are wrought. And the truth is, Satan can worke no true miracles; neither doth the text import, that the Migicians did that which they did by miracle, but by Inchantment and Sorcerie, Exod. 7. 11. 22. & 8. 7.

In the ſecond place, I affirme that God did not create theſe creatures, or cauſe the workes of the Magicians to be effected. And this is prooued by the words of Paul, 2. Tim. 3. 8. who ſaith that Iannes and Iambres (which did theſe workes) withſtood Moſes and Aaron, whom god had ſent, and by whom he wrought. If then God had wrought with the Magicians alſo, he ſhould haue beene againſt himſelfe, yea, he ſhould haue wrought both wayes, for himſelfe, and againſt himſelfe, and conſequently ſhould haue impeached his owne glorie, for the manifeſtation whereof he wrought miracles by Moſes and Aaron; which we may not once thinke of God. Seeing therefore that theſe ſerpents, if they were true creatures, were not created either by Satan, becauſe he could not, or by God himſelfe, becauſe he would not; it muſt needs remaine, that they, and all other the Magicians works, were meere illuſions, and not otherwiſe.

Yet for the further clearing of the matter in hand: the text it ſelfe yeeldeth ſundry reaſons, to prooue that theſe acts of the Sorcerers, were but appearances, and not things really produced.

Firſt, they that can not doe a leſſer thing, can not poſſibly doe a greater. Now Moſes ſheweth that the Egyptian Inchanters could not doe a leſſer thing, then the turning of roddes into true ſerpents, or waters into blood. For they could not by all their power and skill, preſerue themſelues from the plagues of Egypt, as the botch, and other iudgements, Exod. 9. 11. which was a more eaſie thing, then to make or change a creature. Nay, they were not able to bring forth lice by their inchantment, which ſeemeth to be the leaſt miracle, but acknowledged that to be the finger of God, Exod. 8. 18, 19.

Secondly, the text ſaith, that Aarons ſerpent deuoured their ſerpents, Exod. 7. 12. hence it followes, that theirs could not be true creaturs. For in all likelihood they were all of the ſame kind, and of like quantitie, at leaſt in ſhew. And it was neuer ſeene, that one creature ſhould receiue into it ſelfe an other creature of equall A bignes, with preſeruation of it ſelf. Neither hath it beene obſerued ordinarily, that one creature ſhould deuoure another of the ſame kind. It was therefore a worke of Gods ſecret power in the true ſerpent, whereby he would ſhew that the other were not true and reall, but formall and imaginarie.

Thirdly, if the Magicians had beene able to haue made true frogges and ſerpents, then by the ſame power they might haue remooued thoſe which Moſes brought; for the like ability is required in both: yet this they could not doe, but were faine to intreat Moſes, to pray for their remoouall. So ſaith the text, Then Pharaoh called B for Moſes and Aaron, and ſaid, Pray, &c. Exod. 8. 8.

Laſtly, the frogges which Moſes cauſed, when they were remooued, beeing gathered on heapes, cauſed great corruption, and the whole land ſtanke of them, Exod. 8. 14. Againe, the water turned into blood, made the fiſh in the riuer to die, and the water to ſtinke, ſo that the Egyptians could not drinke of the water of the riuer, Exod. 7. 21. But we read of no ſuch effect of the frogges and waters of the Inchanters, which doubtleſſe would haue followed as well as the other, if both had beene true and reall creatures. It remaines therefore, that theſe were but meere appearances and Iugling tricks, and the Sorcerers themſelues Iuglers, yea all their works but ſleights, cauſed by the power and C ſubtiltie of Satan, and no true workes, as hath beene ſaid. Thus I haue declared the whole nature, grounds, and kinds of this damnable Art.

CHAP. V.

What Witches be, and of how many ſorts.

HAuing in the former part of this Treatiſe opened the nature of Witchcraft, and thereby made way for the better vnderſtanding of this Iudiciall Law of Moſes, I come now to ſhew who is the practiſer hereof, whome the D Text principally aimeth at, namely, the Witch, whether man or woman.

A Witch is a Magician, who either by open or ſecret league, wittingly and willingly, conſenteth to uſe the aide and aſſiſtance of the Deuill, in the working of wonders.

Firſt, I call the Witch [a Magician] to ſhew what kind of perſon this is: to wit, ſuch a one as doth profeſſe and practiſe Witchcraft. For a Magician is a profeſſor and a practiſer of this art, as may appeare, Act. 8. 9. where Simon a Witch of Samaria is called Magus, or Simon the Magician.

Againe, in this generall tearme, I comprehend both ſexes or kinds of perſons; men and women, excluding neither from beeing Witches. A point the rather to be remembred, becauſe Moſes in this place ſetting downe a Iudiciall Law againſt Witches, vſeth a word of the feminine gender [mecaſhephah] which in Engliſh properly ſignifieth, a woman Witch: whereupon ſome might gather, that women onely were Witches. Howbeit Moſes in this word exempteth not the male, but onely vſeth a notion referring to the female, for good cauſes; principally for theſe two.

Firſt, to giue vs to vnderſtand, that the woman beeing the weaker ſexe, is ſooner intangled by the deuils illuſions with this damnable art, then the man. And in all ages it is found true by experience, that the deuill hath more eaſily and oftner preuailed with women, then with men. Hence it was, that the Hebrewes of ancient times, vſed it for a prouerb, The more women, the more Witches. His firſt temptation in the beginning, was with Eue a woman, and ſince he purſueth his practiſe accordingly, as making moſt for his aduantage. For where he findeth eaſieſt entrance, and beſt entertainment, thither will he oftneſt reſort.

Secondly, to take away all exception of puniſhment from any partie that ſhall practiſe this trade, and to ſhewe that weakneſſe cannot exempt the Witch from death. For in all reaſon, if any might alledge infirmitie, and plead for fauour, it were the womã, who is weaker then the man. But the Lord ſaith, if any perſon of either ſexe among his people, be found to haue entred couenant with Satan, and become a practiſer of Sorcerie, though it be a woman and the weaker veſſell, ſhe ſhall not eſcape, ſhe ſhall not be ſuffred to liue, ſhe muſt die the death. And though weaknes in other caſes, may leſſen both the crime and the puniſhment, yet in this it ſhall take no place.

The ſecond point in the deſcription is conſenting to vſe the helpe of the deuill, either by open or ſecret league, wittingly and willingly: wherein ſtandeth the very thing, that maketh a Witch to be a Witch: The yeelding of conſent vpon couenant. By which clauſe, two ſorts of people are expreſſely excluded from beeing Witches. Firſt, ſuch as be tainted with phrenzy or madneſſe, or are through weakneſſe of the braine deluded by the deuill. For theſe, though they may be ſaid after a ſort to haue ſocietie with Satan, or rather he with them, yet they cannot giue their conſent to vſe his aide truly, but onely in imagination; with the true Witch it is farre otherwiſe. Secondly, all ſuch ſuperſtitious perſons, men or women, as vſe Charmes and Inchantment for the effecting of any thing vpon a ſuperſtitious and erroneous perſwaſion, that the Charmes haue vertue in them to doe ſuch things, not knowing that it is the action of the deuill by thoſe meanes; but thinking that God hath put vertue into them, as he hath done into herbes for Phyſicke. Of ſuch perſons we haue (no doubt) abundance in this our Land, who though they deale wickedly & ſinne grieuouſly in vſing Charmes, yet becauſe they intend not to ioyne league with the deuill, either ſecretly, or formally, they are not to be counted Witches. Neuertheles, they are to be aduertiſed in the meane time, that their eſtate is fearefull. For their preſent vngodly practiſes haue prepared thẽ already to this curſed trade, and may bring them in time to be the ranckeſt Witches that can be. Wherefore I aduiſe all ignorant perſons, that knowe not God nor the Scriptures, to take heed and beware of this dangerous euill, the vſe of Charmes. For if they be once conuinced in their conſciences, and knowe that God hath giuen no power to ſuch meanes, and yet ſhall vſe them, aſſuredly they doe in effect conſent to the deuill to be helped by him, and thereupon are ioyned in confederacie with him in the confidence of their owne hearts, and ſo are become Witches.

The third and laſt thing in the deſcription, is the end of Witchcraft, The working of wonders. Wonders are wrought three wayes (as hath beene ſhewed,) either by Diuination, or by Inchantment, or by Iugling: and to one of theſe three heads, all feates & practiſes of Witchcraft are to be referred.

Now if any man doubt, whether there be ſuch Witches indeede as haue beene deſcribed, let him remember, that beſides experience in all ages and countries, wee haue alſo ſundrie examples of them euen in the Scriptures.

In the old Teſtament we reade of Balaam, Num. 23. who though he be called a Prophet, becauſe he was ſo reputed of men, yet indeede he was a notorious Witch, both by profeſſion and practiſe, and would haue ſhewed his cunning in that kind vpon the Iſraelites, if God had not hindered him againſt his will. Of the ſame kind were the Inchanters of Egypt, Exod. 7. the Witches of Perſia, Dan. 2. and the Pythoniſſe of Endor, knowne for a renowmed Sorcerer ouer all Iſrael, and therefore Sauls ſeruants being asked, could preſently tel of her, as we read, 1. Sam. 28.

In the new Teſtament, mention is made of Simon, whoſe name declared his profeſſion; his name was Magus; and the text ſaith, that he vſed Witchcraft, and bewitched the people of Samaria, calling himſelfe a great man; Act. 8. 9. Whence it was that after his death, there was a ſtatue ſet vp in Rome in honour of him in the daies of Claudius Cęſar, with this inſcription; Simoni Deo ſancto. And it is not vnlike, but Bar-ieſus the falſe Prophet at Paphus, was a man addicted to the practiſes of Witchcraft, and for that cauſe was called by a kind of excellencie, *Elymas the * Magician,* Act. 13. 6, 8. that is, the great or famous Sorcerer. Laſtly, the Pythoniſſe at Philippi, that gat her maſter much aduantage by diuining, Act. 16. 16. And all theſe vſed the helpe of the deuill, for the working of wonders.

Iuſt. Mart. Apolog. ad Anton. Pium.

Of Witches there be two ſorts: The bad Witch, and the good Witch: for ſo they are commonly called.

The

A The bad Witch, is he or ſhe that hath conſented in league with the deuil to vſe his helpe, for the doing of hurt only, as to ſtrike & annoy the bodies of men, women, children, and cattell with diſeaſes, and with death it ſelfe: ſo likewiſe to raiſe tempeſts, by ſea and by land, &c. This is commonly called the binding Witch.

The good Witch, is he or ſhee that by conſent in a league with the deuil, doth vſe his help for the doing of good onely. This cannot hurt torment, curſe, or kill, but onely heale and cure the hurts inflicted vpon men or cattell, by bad Witches. For as they can doe no good, but onely hurt: ſo this can doe no hurt, but good onely. And this is that order which the deuill hath ſet B in his kingdome, appointing to ſeuerall perſons their ſeuerall offices and charges. And the good Witch is commonly tearmed the vnbinding Witch.

Now howſoeuer both theſe be euill, yet of the two, the more horrible and deteſtable Monſter is the good Witch: for looke in what place ſoeuer there be bad Witches that hurt onely, there alſo the deuill hath his good ones, who are better knowne then the bad, beeing commonly called Wiſemen, or Wiſewomen. This will appeare by experience in moſt places in this countrie. For let a mans child, friend, or cattell be taken with ſome ſore ſickeneſſe, or ſtrangely tormented with ſome rare and vnknowne diſeaſe, the firſt thing he doth, is to bethinke C himſelfe and inquire after ſome Wiſeman or Wiſewoman, and thither he ſends and goes for helpe. When he comes, he firſt tells him the ſtate of the ſicke man: the Witch then beeing certified of the diſeaſe, preſcribeth either Charmes of words to be vſed ouer him, or other ſuch counterfeit meanes, wherein there is no vertue; beeing nothing els but the Deuils Sacraments, to cauſe him to doe the cure, if it come by Witchcraft. Well, the meanes are receiued, applyed, and vſed, the ſicke partie accordingly recouereth, and the concluſion of all is, the vſual acclamation; Oh happie is the day, that euer I met with ſuch a man or woman to helpe me!

Here obſerue, that both haue a ſtroke in this D action: the bad Witch hurt him, the good healed him; but the truth is, the latter hath done him a thouſand time more harme then the former. For the one did onely hurt the bodie, but the deuill by meanes of the other, though he haue left the bodie in good plight, yet he hath laid faſt holde on the ſoule, and by curing the bodie, hath killed that. And the partie thus cured, cannot ſay with Dauid: The Lord is my helper; but the deuill is my helper; for by him he is cured. Of both theſe kindes of Witches the preſent Law of Moſes muſt be vnderſtood.

This point well conſidered, yeeldeth matter both of inſtruction and practiſe.

Of inſtruction, in that it ſhewes the cunning and craftie dealing of Satan, who afflicteth and tormenteth the body for the gaine of the ſoule. And for that purpoſe hath ſo ordered his inſtruments, that the bad Witch giues the occaſion, by annoying the bodie or goods; and the good immediately accompliſheth his deſire, by intangling the ſoule in the bands of errour, ignorance, and falſe faith. Againe, this ſheweth the blindneſſe of naturall corruption, ſpecially in ignorant and ſuperſtitious people. It is their nature to abhorre hurtfull perſons, ſuch as bad Witches be, and to count them execrable; but thoſe that doe them good, they honour and reuerence as wiſe men and women, yea ſeeke and ſue vnto them in times of extremitie, though of all perſons in the world they be moſt odious: and Satan in them ſeemes the greateſt friend, when he is moſt like himſelfe, and intendeth greateſt miſchiefe. Let al ignorant perſons be aduiſed hereof in time, to take heede, to themſelues, and learne to knowe God and his word, that by light from thence they may better diſcerne of the ſubtile practiſes of Satan and his inſtruments.

For matter of practiſe; Hence we learne our duetie, to abhorre the wizzard, as the moſt pernicious enemie of our ſaluation, the moſt effectuall inſtrument of deſtroying our ſoules, and of building vp the deuills kingdome; yea, as the greateſt enemie to Gods name, worſhip, and golrie, that is in the world, next to Satan himſelfe. Of this ſort was Simon Magus, who by doing ſtrange cures and workes, made the people of Samaria to take him for ſome great man, who wrought by the mightie power of God, whereas he did all by the deuill. He therefore beeing a good Witch, did more hurt in ſeducing the people of God, then Balaam a bad one could with all his curſes. And we muſt remember that the Lord hath ſet a lawe vpon the Witches head, he muſt not liue, and if death be due to any, then a thouſand deaths of right belong to the good Witch.

But the patrons of Witches indeauour to delude the true interpretation of that Law. For by a Witch (ſay they) we muſt vnderſtand a poiſoner, and they alledge for that purpoſe the 70. Interpreters, who tranſlate the originall word [Mecaſhephah] by φαρμακεὺς, which ſignifieth a poiſoner.

I anſwer: Firſt; the word vſed by the 70. Interpreters ſignifieth indeede ſo much, yet not that onely, but alſo a Witch in generall, as may appeare in ſundry places of Scripture. The Apoſtle, reckoning vp Witchcraft among the Gal.5.20. workes of the fleſh, vſeth the Greeke word φαρμάκεια, not for poiſoning, but for all Magical arts, as Hierome teſtifieth vpon the place. And that it muſt neceſſarily be ſo tranſlated, it is euident, becauſe in the next verſe murther is termed another work of the fleſh, vnder which, poiſoning & all other kinds of killing are comprehended. And the ſame word is vſed in the like ſenſe, Reu.21.8. and 22.15.

Againe, the word [Mecaſhephah] which Moſes vſeth, is aſcribed to the Inchanters of Egypt, gypt in the 7. 8. and 9. chapters of Exodus; and to the wiſemen of Babel, Dan. 2. who are alſo called φαρμαχεῖς in the tranſlation of the Seuentie: and both ſorts of them were Witches and Sorcerers. The kings of Egypt and Babylon vſed theſe [Mecaſhephim] for ſundrie purpoſes, and made them of their counſell; and if they had bin according to this allegation, poiſoners, it is not like they would haue ſo fitted the humors of thoſe two Princes, Pharaoh and Nebuchadnetſar, much leſſe that they would haue ſo ordinarily required their preſence and aſſiſtance, in the buſines there mentioned.

Thirdly, there is a peremptorie Law againſt the wilfull murtherer, Num. 35. 31. that he ſhould be put to death, and that no recompence ſhould be taken for his life. In which place all poiſoners are condemned, becauſe they are wilfull murtherers. Now if here in Exodus, by [Mecaſhephah] we ſhould vnderſtand a poiſoner, then there ſhould be one and the ſame law twice propounded for the ſame thing, which is not like: and therefore the word vſed by Moſes in this text, ſignifieth not a poiſoner properly, but a Witch.

CHAP. VI.

Of the puniſhment of Witches.

HItherto I haue treated of the nature of Witchcraft, both in generall, and particular, and haue alſo ſhewed what Witches are, both good and badde. And now I proceede to the ſecond point conſidered in this Text, the Puniſhment of a Witch, and that is Death.

In the Iudiciall lawes of Moſes (whereof this is one) the Lord appointed ſundrie penalties, which in qualitie and degree differed one from another, ſo as according to the nature of the offence, was the proportion and meaſure of the puniſhment ordained. And of all ſinnes, as thoſe were the moſt heinous in account, which tended directly to the diſhonour of God, ſo to them was aſſigned death, the greateſt and higheſt degree of puniſhment. He that deſpiſed the Law of Moſes, died without mercie vnder two or three witneſſes, Hebr. 10. 28. the puniſhment of the theefe, was reſtitution fourefold, Exod. 22. 1. but the murtherer muſt be put to death, Num. 35. 31. the Idolater and Seducer were commanded to be ſlaine, Exod. 22. 20. Deut. 13. 5. the Blaſphemer muſt be ſtoned, Leuit. 29. 19. And the Witch is numbred amongſt theſe grieuous offenders; therefore his puniſhment is as great as any other. For the text ſaith, he might not be ſuffered to liue, Exod. 22. 18.

But why ſhould the Witch be ſo ſharply cenſured? And what ſhould mooue the Lord to allot ſo high a degree of puniſhment to that

A ſort of offenders? Anſ. The cauſe was not the hurt, which they brought vpon men in bodie, goods, or outward eſtate. For there be ſundrie that neuer did harme, but good onely. We read not of any great hurt that was done by the Inchanters of Egypt, or by the Pythoniſſe of Endor, or by Simon Magus in Samaria. And thoſe diuining Witches, which haue taken vpon them to foretell things to come, hurt not any, but themſelues, yet they muſt die the death. This therefore is not the cauſe. But what if theſe doe hurt, or kill, muſt they not then die? yes verily, but by another law, the lawe of murther, and not by the law of Witchcraft: For in this caſe, he dieth as a murtherer, and not as a Witch, and B ſo he ſhould die, though he were no Witch.

The cauſe then of this ſharpe puniſhment, is the very making of a league with the Deuill, either ſecret, or open, whereby they couenant to vſe his helpe for the working of wonders. For by vertue of this alone it commeth to paſſe, that Witches can doe ſtrange things, in Diuining, Inchanting, and Iugling. Now let it be obſerued, of what horrible impietie they ſtand guiltie before God, who ioyne in confederacie with Satan. Hereby they renounce the Lord that made them, they make no more account of his fauour and protection, they doe quite cut themſelues off from the couenant made with him in Baptiſme, from the communion of the Saints, from the true worſhip and C ſeruice of God. And on the contrarie they giue themſelues vnto Satan, as their god, whome they continually feare and ſerue. Thus are they become the moſt deteſtable enemies to God, and his people, that can be. For this cauſe Samuel told Saul, that rebellion was as the ſin of Witchcraft: that is, a moſt heinous and deteſtable ſinne in the ſight of God. The traytour, that doth no hurt to his neighbour, but is willing and readie to doe him the beſt ſeruices that can be deſired, is notwithſtanding by the law of Nations, no better then a dead man, becauſe he betraies his Soueraigne, and conſequently can not be a friend vnto the Common-wealth. In like manner, though the Witch were in many reſpects profitable, and did no hutt, but procu- D red much good; yet becauſe he hath renounced God his king and gouernour, and hath bound himſelfe by other lawes to the ſeruice of the enemie of God, and his Church, death is his portion iuſtly aſſigned him by God; he may not liue.

CHAP. VII.

The application of the doctrine of Witchcraft to our times.

THus hauing deliuered the true ſenſe and interpretation of this Iudiciall Law, both concerning the ſinne of Witchcraft, and the perſons, by whome this ſinne is practiſed; it re-

A maineth now that I ſhould make ſome vſe thereof, by way of application to the Witches of our times.

In doing whereof, foure particular Queſtions of moment, are to be handed.

I. Whether the Witches of our times, be the ſame with thoſe, that are here condemned by the lawe of Moſes? for ſome there be, and thoſe men of learning, and members of Gods Church, that holde they are not.

II. If they be the ſame (as it ſhall appeare they are) then howe we may in theſe daies be able to diſcerne, and diſcouer a Witch?

III. What remedie may be vſed againſt the hurt of Witchcraft? B

IV. Whether our Witches are to be puniſhed with death, and that by vertue of this law of Moſes?

Sect. I.

I. Queſtion. Whether the Witches of our times, be the ſame with thoſe that are here condemned by Moſes Lawe.

Anſ. If we doe well conſider the qualitie, and condition of the Witches of our daies, we ſhall eaſily ſee, that they be the ſame. For experience ſheweth, that whether they be men or women, but eſpecially aged women, they be ſuch perſons, as doe renounce God, and their Baptiſme, and make a league with the deuill, C either ſecretly or openly; in which the deuill bindeth himſelfe to teach them certaine rites and ceremonies, whereby they may be able to worke wonders, as to ſtirre vp tempeſts, to reueale ſecrets, to kill or hurt men, and cattell, or to cure and doe good, according to the tenour of their couenant.

The * confeſſions of Witches recorded in the Chronicles of countries through all Europe, doe with common conſent declare and manifeſt this point. So that howſoeuer our Witches may differ in ſome circumſtances from thoſe in the time of Moſes, as either in the inſtruments, and means vſed, or in the manner and forme, or in ſome particular ends of their practiſes; yet in the ſubſtance and foundation of Witchcraft, they agree with them. D For both of them haue made a couenant with the Deuill one way or other, and by vertue thereof haue wrought wonders aboue the order of nature. Agreeing therefore in the very foundation, and forme of Witchcraft, which is the league, and in the proper ende, the working of wonders: they muſt needes be in ſubſtance and effect the ſame with the Witches mentioned by Moſes. And yet this point is denied by ſome, and the Witches of theſe dayes haue their patrons, who vſe reaſons to prooue that now we haue none ſuch as we ſpeak of. Their reaſons are ſpecially three.

Firſt, they labour to take away the forme of Witchcraft, affirming that there can be no confederacie made betweene the Witch and the Deuill, and that for foure cauſes.

I. In euery league and contract the parties muſt be mutually bound each to other: now betweene man or woman and the Deuill, there can be no bond made, and though there could, yet man is bound in conſcience to God, to renounce the bond of obedience to Satan, and to breake the couenant. Anſ. There be two ſorts of leagues; lawfull, and vnlawfull: in all lawfull leagues it is true, that there muſt be a mutuall bond of both parties each to other, which may not be diſſolued; but in vnlawfull compacts it is otherwiſe. And no man can ſay that this league betweene a Witch and the Deuill is lawfull, but wicked and damnable, yet beeing once made, howſoeuer vnlawfully; it is a league and compact. This therefore prooueth not, that there can be no couenant at all, but that there can be no lawfull couenant betwixt them, which no man will denie.

II. Satan and the Witch are of diuers natures: he is ſpirituall, they are corporall ſubſtances: therefore there can be no league made betweene them. Anſ. The reaſon is not good. For euen God himſelfe, who is of nature moſt ſimple and ſpirituall, made a couenant with Adam, renued the ſame vnto Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob: and continued it with his Church on earth, from age to age. Hence it appeareth, that diuerſitie of nature in the parties, cannot hinder the making of a couenant. And therefore if man may make couenant with God himſelfe, who is moſt ſpirituall; then may he likewiſe come in league with the Deuill, whoſe ſubſtance is not ſo pure and ſpirituall. Againe, we muſt remember, that in making of a couenant, it is ſufficient, that the parties conſent and agree in will and vnderſtanding, though other circumſtances and rites, which are but ſignes of confirmation, be wanting. Be it then, that Satan hath not a bodily ſubſtance, as man hath, yet conſidering that man is indued with vnderſtanding, to conceiue of things, as the deuill doth, and hath alſo will to yeeld conſent, and approbation thereunto, though in a corrupt and wicked manner, there may paſſe a confederacie, and a couenant may be made, and ſtand in force betweene them.

III. Whatſoeuer the deuil doth in this compact, he doth it in fraud and deceit, neuer meaning in his promiſes, as man doth, & when both parties meane not one and the ſame thing, how can they grow to agreement in any kind? Anſ. Suppoſe this be true, yet it onely prooueth, that the couenant made betweene them, was deceitfull, and vnlawfull. But what of that? ſtill it remaineth a bargain howſoeuer: for it faileth onely in the circumſtance, the ſubſtance, which is the conſent of the parties, was not wanting.

IV. Witches of our times (ſay they) are aged perſons, of weake braines, and troubled with abundance of melancholie, and the deuill taketh aduantage of the humor, and ſo deludes them, perſwading that they haue made a league with him, when they haue not, & conſequently moo-

moouing them to imagine that they doe, and may doe ſtrange things, which indeed are done by himſelfe, and not by them.

Anſ. This reaſon is a meere melancholike conceit, without ground. And the contrary is a manifeſt truth, that they are not ſo, as is affirmed, parties deceiued by reaſõ of their humors. For firſt, our Witches are as wiſe and politike, yea as crafty and cunning in all other matters, as other men be; whereas brainſicke perſons troubled with melancholy, if their vnderſtanding be diſtempered in one action, it will be faultie likewiſe in others more or leſſe. Againe, our Witches know that they ſinne in the practiſes of Witchcraft, and therefore they vſe ſubtile meanes to couer them, and he that would conuict them, muſt haue great dexteritie to goe beyond them. Now if they were perſons deluded, through corruption of any humours; looke what humor cauſed them to doe a thing, the ſame would vrge them to diſcloſe it. Thirdly, they are alſo of the ſame ſtamp, they take the ſame courſes in all their practiſes; their conſent in word and action is vniuerſall. Men of learning haue obſerued, that all Witches through Europe, are of like cariage and behauiour in their examinations and conuictions: they vſe the ſame anſwers, refuges, defenſes, proteſtations. In a word, looke what be the practiſes and courſes of the Witches in England, in any of theſe particulars, the ſame be the practiſes of the Witches in Spaine, France, Italy, Germany, &c. Wherefore the caſe is cleare, they are not deluded by Sathan, through the force of humor, as is auouched; for ſuch perſons, according as they are diuerſely taken, would ſhewe themſelues diuerſly affected, and varie in their ſpeeches, actions, and conceipts, both publike and priuate. Fourthly, our Witches are wont to communicate their skill to others by tradition, to teach and inſtruct their children and poſteritie, and to initiate them in the grounds, and practiſes of their owne trade, while they liue, as may appeare by the confeſſions recorded in the Courts of all countries. But if they were perſons troubled with melancholie, their conceipts would die with them. For conceits, and imaginarie fancies, which riſe of any humor, cannot be conueied from partie to partie, no more then the humor it ſelfe. Laſtly, if this ſleight might ſerue to defend Witches vnder pretence of deluſion thorough corrupted humours, then here were a couer for all manner of ſinnes. For example: a fellon is apprehended for robberie or murther, and is brought before the Iudge: Vpon examination he confeſſeth the fact, beeing conuicted the law proceedes to condemnation. The ſame mans friends come in and alleadge before the Iudge in this manner; This man hath a crazie braine, and is troubled with melancholy, and though he hath confeſſed the fact, yet the truth is, it was not he, but the deuill who himſelfe committed the murther, and made him thinke he did it, when he did it not, and hereupon he hath confeſſed. Would any man thinke, that this were a reaſonable allegation, and a ſufficient meane to mooue the Iudge to acquit him? Aſſuredly if it were, vpon the ſame ground might any ſinne be laid vpon the deuils backe, and all good lawes and iudiciall proceedings be made voide.

Therefore howſoeuer the patrons of Witches be learned men, yet they are greatly deceiued in fathering the practiſes of Sorcerie vpon a melancholike humour.

But for the further ratifying of their aſſertion, they proceede, and vſe this argument: They which confeſſe of themſelues things falſe and impoſſible, muſt needes be parties deluded: but our Witches doe this, when they be examined or conſulted with, as that they can raiſe tempeſts, that they are carried through the aire in a moment, from place to place, that they paſſe through key-holes, and clifts of doores, that they be ſometimes turned into cats, hares, and other creatures; laſtly, that they are brought into farre countries, to meete with Herodias, Diana, and the Deuill, and ſuch like; all which are meere fables, and things impoſſible.

Anſ. We muſt make a difference of Witches in regard of time. There is a time, when they firſt beginne to make a league with Satan, and a time alſo after the league is made and confirmed.

When they firſt beginne to grow in conſederacie with the deuill, they are ſober, and their vnderſtanding ſound, they make their match waking, and as they thinke wiſely enough, knowing both what they promiſe the deuill, and vpon what conditions, and therefore all this while it is no deluſion. But after they be once in the league, and haue beene intangled in compact with the deuill (conſiderately as they thinke, for their owne good and aduantage) the caſe may be otherwiſe. For then reaſon and vnderſtanding may be depraued, memorie weakned, and all the powers of their ſoule blemiſhed. Thus becomming his vaſſals, they are deluded, and ſo intoxicated by him, that they will run into thouſands of fantaſticall imaginations, holding themſelues to be transformed into the ſhapes of other creatures, to be tranſported in the ayre into other countries, yea to doe many ſtrange things, which in truth they doe not.

I come now to their ſecond reaſon. The Witches of our age (ſay they) were not knowne in the daies of Moſes, nor of Chriſt, therefore that law concerneth them not.

To this I anſwer two waies:

Firſt, that their argument is naught: for by the ſame reaſon the Papiſts might auouch the lawfulnes of the images of Saints, as of Peter, Paul, and others, yea of Chriſt himſelfe, becauſe they were not knowne in the daies of Moſes, & therefore could not be condemned in the ſecond Commandement. Whereas contrarily, the ſpirit of God, hath ſo framed and penned the lawes Morall, and Iudiciall, which concerne A man, as that they fetch within their compaſſe all ſinnes of all ages, and condemne them. And therefore whatſoeuer is againſt the Lawe of God written by Moſes, though it were not knowne, nor heard of, either when the Law was made, or afterward, is yet condemned by the ſame Law.

Againe, I anſwer, that our Witches are the ſame that were in Moſes time: and therefore by their owne reaſon muſt needes be condemned by this Iudiciall law. For by the records of auncient writers it is prooued, that about a 1200. yeares before Chriſts birth, ſhortly after the Troian warre, which was 100. yeare and vpward before the building of the Temple by Sa- B lomon, there were the ſame Witches that are now, as the Circes and Syrenes, and ſuch like, mentioned in the * narration of that warre, as is manifeſt to them that knowe the ſtorie.

* Homer.Odyſſ.lib.10. & 12.

Againe, 500. yeares before Chriſt, when the Romans made their * twelue Tables, which compriſed all the lawes whereby that famous Commonwealth was gouerned, they made one expreſſely againſt Witches, euen the ſame with theſe of our time, for practiſing the ſame things, as blaſting of corne, hurting of cattell, men, women, and children, &c. And for the time of Chriſt, though there be no particular mention made of any ſuch Witches; yet thence it followeth not, that there were none: for all things that then happened, were not recorded: and I would faine know of the chiefe patrons of thē, C whether thoſe parties poſſeſſed with the deuill and troubled with ſtrange deſeaſes, whome Chriſt healed, and out of whom he caſt deuills, were not bewitched with ſome ſuch people, as our Witches are? if they ſay no, let them if they can prooue the contrarie.

* Sub tit. de iniur.aliiſq; delict.c.9. Senec. lib. Nat.Quæſt.4 Qui fruges excantaſſit, &c.

The third and laſt reaſon is this: Chriſt at his comming aboliſhed all ſinne, and therefore miracles and Witchcraft then ceaſed alſo. The Apoſtle ſaith, that hee ſpoiled principalities and powers, and triumphed ouer them vpon the croſſe, Coloſ. 2. 15.

Anſ. This argument is friuolous, ſeruing as well to iuſtifie the traytor, the theefe, and the murtherer, as the witch. For whereas it is alleadged, that Chriſt aboliſhed all ſinne: we muſt D vnderſtand how? not ſimply, ſo as ſinne ſhould be no more, but onely in part, in this life, reſeruing the finall deſtruction thereof to the laſt iudgement. Againe, ſinne is not aboliſhed, no not in part vnto all, but onely to the members of Chriſt. Whereupon the Apoſtle ſaith, There is no condemnation to them, that are in Chriſt, Rom. 8. 1. becauſe no ſinne is imputed vnto them. But vnto Witches, and all the enemies of Chriſt, ſinne is imputed, and not aboliſhed.

To conclude, howſoeuer much is ſaid in their defence, yet the firſt part is cleare affirmatiuely, that the Witches of our time, are the ſame with the witches that were in Moſes time, in truth & ſubſtance. And ſo much for the firſt Queſtion.

Sect. II.

II. Queſt. How we may be able in theſe our daies to diſcerne, and diſcouer a Witch.

Anſ. The diſcouerie of a Witch is a matter Iudiciall, as is alſo the diſcouerie of a theefe and a murtherer, and belongeth not to euery man, but is to be done Iudicially by the Magiſtrate, according to the forme and order of Law; who therefore is ſet a part for ſuch ends, and hath authoritie both to diſcouer, and puniſh the enemies of God and his Church. Now for the Magiſtrates direction in this buſines, we are to knowe, that in the diſcouerie of a Witch, two things are required, Examination, and Conuiction.

§. 1. Examination is an action of the Magiſtrate, making ſpeciall enquirie of the crime of Witchcraft. This action muſt haue the beginning from occaſions, and preſumptions. For the Magiſtrate though he be a publike perſon, and ſtand in the roome of God, for the execution of iuſtice, yet he may not take vpon him to examine whome and how himſelfe willeth, of any crime; neither ought he to proceede vpon ſleight cauſes, as to ſhew his authoritie ouer others, or vpon ſiniſter reſpects, as to reuenge his malice, or to bring parties into danger or ſuſpition; but he muſt proceed vpon ſpecial preſumptions.

Thoſe I call preſumptions, which doe at leaſt probably, and coniecturally note one to be a Witch; and theſe are certaine ſignes, whereby the partie may be diſcouered: I will touch ſome few of them.

The firſt in order is this: If any perſon, man, or woman, be notoriouſly defamed for ſuch a partie. Notorious defamation, is a common report of the greater ſort of people, with whome the partie ſuſpected dwelleth, that he or ſhee is a Witch. This yeeldeth a ſtrong ſuſpition. Yet the Magiſtrate muſt be warie in receiuing ſuch a report. For it falls out oftentimes, that the innocent may be ſuſpected, and ſome of the better ſort notoriouſly defamed. Therefore the wiſe & prudent Iudge ought carefully to look, that the report be made by men of honeſtie and credit: which if it be, he may then proceede to make further inquirie of the fact.

The ſecond is, if a fellow-witch or Magician giue teſtimonie of any perſon to be a Witch, either voluntarily, or at his or her examination, or at his or her death. This is not ſufficient for conuiction, or condemnation, but onely a fit preſumption to cauſe ſtrait examination of the partie to be made.

Thirdly, if after curſing there followeth death, or at leaſt ſome miſchiefe. For Witches are wont to practiſe their miſchieuous facts by curſing and banning. This alſo is a ſufficient matter of Examination, not of Conuiction.

Fourthly, if after enmitie, quarelling, or threatning, a preſent miſchiefe doth follow. For parties deuilliſhly diſpoſed, after curſings do vſe threatnings; & that alſo is a great preſumption.

Fiftly, if the partie ſuſpected be the ſonne or daughter, the manſeruant or maidſeruant, the familiar freind, neere neighbour, or old companion of a knowne and conuicted Witch. This may be likewiſe a preſumption. For Witchcraft is an art that may be learned, and conueyed frō man to man, and often it falleth out, that a Witch dying leaueth ſome of the forenamed, heires of her Witchcraft.

Sixtly, ſome do adde this for a preſumption; If the partie ſuſpected be found to haue the deuills marke: for it is commonly thought, when the deuill maketh his couenant with them, he alwaies leaueth his marke behind him, whereby he knowes them for his owne. Now if by ſome caſuall meanes, ſuch a marke be deſcried on the bodie of the partie ſuſpected, whereof no euident reaſon in nature can be giuen, the Magiſtrate in this caſe may cauſe ſuch to be examined, or take the matter into his owne hand, that the truth may appeare.

Laſtly, if the partie examined be vnconſtant, or contrarie to himſelfe in his deliberate anſwers, it argueth a guiltie minde and conſcience which ſtoppeth the freedome of ſpeech and vtterance, and may giue iuſt occaſion to the Magiſtrate to make further enquirie. I ſay not if he or ſhe be timorous and fearefull: for a good man may be fearefull in a good cauſe, ſometimes by nature, ſometimes in regard of the preſence of the Iudge, and the greatnes of the audience. Againe ſome may be ſodenly taken, & others naturally want the libertie of ſpeech, which other men haue. And theſe are the cauſes of feare and aſtoniſhment, which may befall the good, as well as the bad.

Touching the manner of Examination, there be two kinds of proceeding; either by a ſingle Queſtion, or by ſome Torture. A ſingle queſtion is, when the magiſtrate himſelfe only maketh enquirie, what was done, or not done, by bare and naked interrogations. A torture is, when beſides the enquirie in words, he vſeth alſo the racke, or ſome other violent meanes to vrge confeſſion. This courſe hath been taken in ſome countries, and may no doubt lawfully and with good conſcience be vſed, howbeit not in euery caſe, but onely vpon ſtrong and great preſumptions going before, and when the partie is obſtinate. And thus much for Examination: now followeth Conuiction.

§ 2. Conuiction, is an action of the Magiſtrate, after iuſt examination, diſcouering the Witch. This action muſt proceede from iuſt & ſufficient proofes, and not from bare preſumptions. For though preſumptions giue occaſion to examine, yet they are no ſufficient cauſes of conuiction. Now in generall the proofes vſed for conuiction are of two ſorts, ſome be leſſe ſufficient, ſome be more ſufficient.

1 The leſſe ſufficient proofes are theſe. Firſt, in former ages, the partie ſuſpected of Witchcraft, was brought before the Magiſtrate, who cauſed A red hoat iron, and ſcalding water to bee brought, and commanded the partie to put his hand in the one, or to take vp the other, or both, and if he took vp the iron in his bare hand without burning, or endured the wateer without ſcalding, hereby he was cleared, & iudged free: but if he did burne or ſcalde, he was then conuicted, and condemned for a Witch. But this manner of conuiction, hath long agone beene condemned for wicked and diabolicall, as in truth it is, conſidering that thereby many times, an innocent man may bee condemned, and a rancke Witch ſcape vnpuniſhed.

2 Againe, our owne times haue afforded inſtances of ſuch weake and inſufficient proofes. B As firſt, Scratching of the ſuſpected partie, and preſent recouerie thereupon. Secondly, burning of the thing bewitched, if it be not a man, as a hogge, or oxe, or ſuch like creature, is imagined to be a forcible meanes to cauſe the Witch to diſcouer her ſelfe. Thirdly, the burning of the thatch of the ſuſpected parties houſe, which is thought to bee able to cure the partie bewitched, and to make the Witch to bewray her ſelfe.

3 Beſides theſe, in other countries they haue a further proofe iuſtified by ſome that be learned. The partie is taken, and bound hand and foote, and caſt croſſe waies into the water, if ſhe ſinke, ſhee is counted innocent, and eſcapeth, if ſhee fleete on the water, and ſincke not, ſhee is taken C for a Witch, conuicted, & accordingly puniſhed.

All theſe proofes are ſo farre from being ſufficient, that ſome of them, if not all, are after a ſort practiſes of Witchcraft, hauing in them no power or vertue to detect a Sorcerer, either by Gods ordinance in the creation, or by any ſpeciall appointment ſince. For what vertue can the Scratching of a Witch haue to cure a hurt? where doe we finde it in any part of the word of God, that ſcratching ſhould be vſed? or what promiſe of recouerie vpon the vſe thereof.

But how then comes it to paſſe, that helpe is often procured by theſe and ſuch like means? Anſ. It is the ſleight and ſubtiltie of the deuill vpon ſcratching the Witch, to remooue ſuch D hurts, as himſelfe hath inflicted, that thereby he may invre men to the practiſe of wicked and ſuperſtitious meanes. And what I ſay of ſcratching, the ſame may be enlarged to all other proofes of this kinde before named, God hath imprinted no ſuch vertue in their natures to theſe purpoſes, or added the ſame vnto them by ſpeciall and extraordinarie aſſignment. That therefore which is brought to paſſe by them when they are vſed, commeth from the deuill.

And yet to iuſtifie the caſting of a Witch into the water, it is alleadged, that hauing made a couenant with the deuill, ſhe hath renounced her Baptiſme, and hereupon their growes an Antipathie, betweene her and water. Anſw. This allegation ſerues to no purpoſe: for

A all water is not the water of Baptiſme, but that onely which is vſed in the very act of baptiſme, and not before nor after. The element out of the vſe of the Sacrament, is no Sacrament, but returnes againe to his common vſe.

To goe yet further, an other inſufficient proofe, is the teſtimonie of ſome wizzard. It hath beene the ordinarie cuſtome of ſome men, when they haue had any thing ill at eaſe, preſently to goe or ſend to ſome wiſe man, or wiſe woman, by whome they haue beene informed, that the thing is bewitched; and to winne credit to their anſwer, ſome of them haue offered to ſhewe the Witches face in a glaſſe: whereof the partie hauing taken notice, returnes home, and detecteth the man or woman of Witchcraft. B This I grant may be a good preſumption to cauſe ſtrait examination: but a ſufficient proofe of conuiction it cannot be. For put the caſe the grand-Iurie at the Aſſiſes goeth on a partie ſuſpected, and in their conſultation the Deuill comes in the likeneſſe of ſome knowne man, and tells them the perſon in queſtion is indeede a Witch, and offers withall to confirme the ſame by othe: ſhould the Inqueſt receiue his othe or accuſation to condemne the man? Aſſuredly no; and yet that is as much as the teſtimonie of another wizzard, who onely by the deuills helpe reuealeth the Witch. If this ſhould be taken for a ſufficient proofe; the deuill would not leaue one good man aliue in the world. C

Againe, all other preſumptions commonly vſed, are inſufficient, though they may miniſter occaſion of triall: for example; If a man in open court ſhould affirme before the Iudge; Such a one fell out with me, and curſed me, giuing me threatening words, that I ſhould ſmart for it, and ſome miſchiefe ſhould light vpon my perſon or goods, ere it were long. Vpon theſe curſes and threats preſently ſuch and ſuch euils befell me, and I ſuffered theſe and theſe loſſes. The magiſtrate thus informed may ſafely proceede to inquire into the matter, but he hath not from hence any ſure ground of conuiction. For it pleaſeth God many times to lay his hand vpon mens perſons and goods without the D procurement of Witches. And yet experience ſhewes, that ignorant people who carrie a rage againſt them, will make ſtrong proofes of ſuch preſumptions, whereupon ſomtimes Iurers doe giue their Verdict againſt parties innocent.

Laſtly, if a man beeing dangerouſly ſicke, and like to die, vpon ſuſpition will take it on his death, that ſuch a one hath bewitched him, it is an allegatiō of the ſame nature, which may mooue the Iudge to examine the party, but it is of no moment for conuiction. The reaſon is, becauſe it was but the ſuſpition of one man, and a mans owne word for himſelfe, though in time of extremitie, when it is likely he will ſpeake nothing but the truth, is of no more force then another mans word againſt him.

And theſe are the proofes, which men in place and time haue ordinarily vſed, for the detecting of ſuch vngodly perſons: but the beſt that may be ſaid of them, is that they be all either falſe or vncertaine ſignes, or vnauaileable for the condemnation of any man whatſoeuer.

Now followe the true proofes, and ſufficient meanes of conuiction, all which may be reduced to two heads.

The firſt, is the free and voluntarie confeſſion of the crime, made by the partie ſuſpected and accuſed after examination. This hath been thought generally of all men both Diuines, and Lawyers a proofe ſufficient. For what needes more witneſſe or further inquirie, when a man from the touch of his owne conſcience acknowledgeth the fault.

And yet the patrons and aduocates of Witches except againſt it, and obiect in this manner: that a man or woman may confeſſe againſt themſelues an vntruth, beeing vrged thereto either by feare or threatening, or by a deſire vpon ſome griefe to be out of the world; or at leſt, beeing in trouble, and perſwaded it is the beſt courſe to ſaue their liues, and obtaine libertie, they may vpon ſimplicitie be induced to confeſſe that which they neuer did, euen againſt themſelues. Anſ. I ſay not that a bare confeſſion is ſufficient, but a confeſſion after due examination taken vpon pregnant preſumptions. For if a man examined, without any ground or preſumptions, ſhould openly acknowledge the crime, his act may be iuſtly ſuſpected, as grounded vpon by-reſpects; but when proceeding is made againſt him at the firſt, vpon good probabilities, and hereupon he be drawne to a free confeſſion, that which he hath manifeſted thereby, cannot but be a truth. Other points of exception vrged by them, are of ſmall moment, and may eaſily be anſwered out of the grounds before deliuered, and therefore I omit them.

Now if the partie helde in ſuſpition, be examined, and will not confeſſe, but obſtinately perſiſt in deniall, as commonly it falleth out; then there is another courſe to be taken by a ſecond ſufficient meanes of conuiction: which is, the teſtimonie of two witneſſes, of good and honeſt report, auouching before the Magiſtrate vpon their owne knowledge, theſe two things: Either that the partie accuſed, hath made a league with the deuill; or hath done ſome knowne practiſes of Witchcraft. And all arguments that doe neceſſarily prooue either of theſe, beeing brought by two ſufficient witneſſes, are of force fully to conuince the partie ſuſpected. For example:

Firſt, if they can prooue that the partie ſuſpected, hath inuocated and called vpon the deuill, or deſired his helpe. For this is a brāch of that worſhip, which Satan bindeth his inſtruments to giue vnto him. And it is a pregnant proofe of a league formerly made betweene thē.

Secondly, if they can giue euidence, that the partie hath intertained a familiar ſpirit, and

19049a

A had conference with it, in forme or likeneſſe of a mouſe,catte,or ſome other viſible creature.

Thirdly, if they affirme vpon oath, that the ſuſpected perſon hath done any action or work, which neceſſarily inferreth a couenant made; as that he hath ſhewed the face of a man ſuſpected beeing abſent, in a glaſſe; or vſed Inchantment, or ſuch like feats. In a word, if they both can auouch vpon their owne proper knowledge, that ſuch a man or woman ſuſpected, haue put in practiſe any other actions of Witchcraft, as to haue diuined of things afore they came to paſſe, and that peremptorily; to haue raiſed tempeſts, to haue cauſed the form of a dead man to appeare, or the like, ſtanding either in diuination or operation, it prooueth ſufficiently that he or ſhe is a Witch.

B But ſome may ſay, if theſe be the onely ſtrong proofes for the conuiction of a Sorcerer, it will be then impoſſible to put any one to death, becauſe the league with Satan is cloſely made, and the practiſes of Sorcerie are alſo very ſecret, and hardly can a man be brought, which vpon his owne knowledge, can auerre ſuch things.

I anſwer howſoeuer both the ground and practiſe be ſecret, and to many vnknowne, yet there is a way to come to the knowledge thereof. For it is vſuall with Satan to promiſe any thing, till the league be ratified: but when it is once made, and the partie intangled in ſocietie C with him, then he endeauoureth nothing more, then his or her diſcouerie, and vſeth all meanes poſſible to diſcloſe them. So that what ende ſoeuer the Witch propoundeth to her ſelfe in the league, he intendeth nothing elſe, but her vtter confuſion. Therefore in the iuſt iudgement of God, it often falleth out, that theſe which are true Witches indeede, ſhall either by confeſſion diſcouer themſelues, or by true teſtimonie be conuinced. The cauſes which mooue the Deuill not onely to effect, but to haſten this diſcouerie, are two principally.

The firſt is, his malice towards all men, in ſo high a degree, that he cannot indure they ſhould enioy the world, or the benefits of this life (if it were poſſible) ſo much as one houre. D Though therefore by vertue of the precontract, he be cock-ſure of his inſtrument, yet his malice is not herewith ſatisfied, till the partie be brought to light, and condemned to death. Which may be a caueat to all ill diſpoſed perſons, that they beware of yeelding themſelues vnto him.

The ſecond, is his inſatiable deſire of the preſent and full poſſeſſion of them, whome he hath got within the bonds of the couenant. For though he haue good hope of them, yet is he not certain of their continuance. The reaſon is, becauſe ſome vnited with him in confederacie, haue through the great mercie of God, by carefull vſage of holy meanes, and faith in Chriſt, beene reclaimed and deliuered out of his bondage, and ſo at length freed from his couenant, ſo as he hath eternally left them. Hence it is, that he labours by might and maine, to keepe them in ignorance, and to preuent the vſage of meanes effectuall to their conuerſion, by laying a plot for their diſcouerie. But how then comes it to paſſe, that all ſuch perſons are not ſpeedily detected, but ſome liue long, and others die without any mans priuitie? Anſ. The reaſons hereof may be diuers.

Firſt, becauſe ſome one or more of them may belong to Gods election: and therefore albeit for cauſes beſt knowne to himſelfe, he ſuffer them for a time to be holden in the ſnares of Satan, yet at length in mercie he reclaimes them, and in the meane time ſuffereth not the deuill to exerciſe the depth of his malice in diſcouering them to their confuſion. Againe, for others, the Lord may in iuſtice and anger ſuffer them not to be diſcloſed, that liuing vnder the meanes, where they might be reclaimed, and wilfully contemning the ſame; they may liue to fill vp the meaſure of their iniquities, and thereby be made finally inexcuſable, that they may receiue their iuſter condemnation.

Secondly, the deuill ſuffereth ſome to liue long vndiſcloſed, that they may exerciſe the greater meaſure of his malice in the world; ſpecially if they be parties maliciouſly bent to doe hurt to men, and other creatures.

Thirdly, ſome Witches do warily agree with the Deuill, for a certaine tearme of yeares, during which time he bindeth himſelfe not to hurt them, but to be at their command. And Satan is carefull, ſpecially in caſe of his owne aduantage, to keepe touch with them, that they may the more ſtrongly cleaue vnto him on their parts. But if the caſe ſo ſtand, that neither the partie ſuſpected confeſſeth, nor yet ſufficient witneſſes can be produced, which are able to conuict him or her, either of theſe two wayes; we haue no warrant out of the word either in generall, or in ſpeciall, to put ſuch a one to death. For though preſumption be neuer ſo ſtrong, yet they are not proofes ſufficient for conuiction, but onely for examination.

I would therefore wiſh and aduiſe all Iurers, who giue their Verdict vpon life and death in courts of Aſſiſes, to take good heede, that as they be diligent in zeale of Gods glorie, and the good of his Church, in detecting of Witches, by all ſufficient and lawfull means; ſo likewiſe they would be carefull what they doe, and not to condemne any partie ſuſpected, vpon bare preſumptions, without ſound and ſufficient proofes, that they be not guiltie through their owne raſhneſſe of ſhedding innocent blood.

Sect. III.

Queſt. III. Whether a man may preuent the daunger of Witchcraft, and if he may, then what Remedies he may lawfully and effectually vſe againſt it?

A To this Queſtion we anſwer affirmatiuely, that a man may. And for the manifeſtation of this point, the Remedies of Witchcraft are to be conſidered. In the handling whereof, I will proceede in this order. Firſt, to ſet downe the true, lawfull, and effectuall Remedies allowed and preſcribed in the word. Secondly, the vnlawfull and ſuperſtitious meanes preſcribed and practiſed in the Romiſh Church.

Lawfull Remedies of Witchcraft, be of two ſorts; Preſeruatiue, and Reſtoratiue. Preſeruatiue are thoſe, which keepe a man from the hurt of Witchcraft. And theſe be of two ſorts; either ſuch as keepe ſafe the perſons of men, or ſuch as preſerue the places of mens aboad.

B For the Perſons of men, there is one ſoueraigne preſeruatiue; And that is, to be within the couenant of grace, made and confirmed in the Goſpel by the blood of Chriſt, and that not outwardly in profeſſion onely, as all thoſe be which are within the compaſſe of the Church, but truly and indeede as all the Elect are. And a man is then in the couenant, when God of his grace in the vſe of the meanes, giues him a true knowledge of the nature of it, and of conditions required in the ſame on both parts: and withall giues him a true and liuely faith, to apprehend and applie to himſelfe the promiſe of God in Chriſt, touching remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting: yea further to ſhew forth his faith by the fruits of true repentance, and C new obedience. When a man in this manner comes to be brought within the couenant, and is in Chriſt, he then receiues aſſurance of Gods fauour, and to him belong the promiſes depending thereupon, to wit, not onely of the comfortable preſence of Gods ſpirit, but of the preſence and ſpeciall protection of his holy Angels, to pitch their tents about him, to keepe him ſafe in ſoule and bodie, from the power and malicious practiſes of Satan, and his members. The ground of this aſſurance is laide downe in the word, Pſal. 92. 10. He ſhall giue his Angels charge ouer thee, &c. And the ſpeech of Balaam confirmeth the ſame, who when he was hired of Balac to curſe Gods people, and had often times aſſayed to doe it, but could not, D at laſt he breakes out into this confeſſion, There is no Witch-craft againſt Iacob, nor Sorcerie againſt Iſrael: (for ſo the words are to be read, according to the true meaning, and circumſtances of the text. As if he ſhould haue ſaid, I was of thy opinion (O Balac) that Iſrael might be curſed, but after triall made, I found by good experience, that I could doe that people of God no hurt by mine Inchantments.

Howbeit we muſt here remember, that the promiſe of protection made vnto Gods children, is not abſolute, but admitteth exception, as all other promiſes of temporall bleſſing doe, and that in this manner: Thou ſhalt be partaker of this or that bleſſing, and this or that curſe ſhall be remooued, if it be expedient for thee: but if for ſpeciall cauſes to trie thy faith, and to exerciſe thy patience, I make deniall, thou muſt reſt thy ſelfe contented in my good will and pleaſure.

By warrant of this doctrine, a queſtion commonly mooued, may be reſolued: Whether the ſeruant and childe of God, may be bewitched or not?

Out of that which hath beene ſaid, I anſwer, he may; and that is plaine by the word. For by Gods permiſſion, the holy bodie of Chriſt himſelfe was by Satan tranſported from place to place, Matth. 4. Righteous Iob was miſerably afflicted in his bodie by the power of the Deuill, and his children, who no doubt were Gods ſeruants, and brought vp in his feare, as their father was, were ſlaine by the ſame power. Yea Chriſt himſelfe teſtifieth, Luk. 13. 16. That a daughter of Abraham, that is, of the faith of Abraham, had beene troubled eighteene yeares with a ſpirit of infirmitie, which the deuill cauſed by bowing her bodie together, ſo as ſhe could not lift her ſelfe vp, v. 11. And therefore whereas ſome men are of this minde, that their faith is ſo ſtrong, that all the Witches in the world, and all the deuils in hell cannot hurt them; they are much deceiued. This their faith is but a fond preſumption, and no true faith. For no man in the earth can abſolutely aſſure himſelfe of ſafetie and protection from the deuill: and if any could, it were the child of God; but Salomon ſaith, that al outward things may come alike both to the good and to the bad, Eccleſ. 9. 2.

Howbeit in this caſe there is great difference betweene the ſeruant of God, and an vnrepentant ſinner. Though the godly man be not exempted from Witchcraft, yet he is a thouſand folde more free from the power thereof, then other men are. For there is onely one caſe, and no more, wherein the deuill hath any way power to hurt him, and that is, when it pleaſeth god by that kind of croſſe, to make triall of his faith and patience, and out of this caſe, he is alwaies free from the annoyance of the vileſt Witches in the World.

If then this be the onely ſoueraigne preſeruatiue to keepe a man ſafe and ſure from the power of Witches, and of the Deuill, to haue part in the couenant of grace, to be made partaker of Chriſt, by a true faith, teſtified by dying vnto all ſinne, and liuing vnto God in newneſſe of life: we muſt not content our ſelues with a formall profeſſion, as many in the viſible Church doe, which wanting the life of faith, doe not liue in Chriſt; but ſtriue to goe further, and to adorne our profeſſion, by framing our liues according to the word, that we may haue our portion in this excellent priuiledge of preſeruation, from the power and malice of the enemies of God, and all vngodly perſons.

Preſeruatiues of the ſecond ſort, are ſuch as concerne the places of mens aboad. For Sathan contenteth not himſelfe to haue manifeſted his malice in afflicting mens perſons, but he alſo enlargeth the ſame to the moleſtation of

A the places where they dwell, by infecting the ayre, and ſuch like. The onely effectuall means to remedie this euill, is the Sanctification of the places of our habitation. Looke as we are wont to ſanctifie our meat and drink, by Gods word, and by prayer, and thereby procure his bleſſing vpon his owne ordinance for our refreſhing: ſo in like manner may we ſanctifie the places of our aboad, and thereby both procure the bleſſing which we want, and alſo auoide many curſes and dangers, which otherwiſe would fall vpon vs.

If any ſhall thinke the Conſecration of houſes and places in this ſort, to be a meere deuiſe of mans braine; let them remember, that in the Olde Teſtament, beſides the dedication of the B Temple, allowed by all, there was a Lawe preſcribed to the Iews, for the ſpecial dedication of euery mans houſe: If any hath built a new houſe (ſaith Moſes) and hath not dedicate it, let him returne againe, &c. Deut. 20. 5. As who ſhould ſay, he hath omitted a neceſſarie dutie. Now this dedication was nothing elſe, but the ſanctification of them by word and prayer, wherein they made acknowledgement, that they became theirs by the free gift and bleſſing of God, and further deſired a free and lawfull vſe of the ſame to his glorie, and their mutuall good. A dutie which hath beene performed by the ſeruants of God in auncient times.

C The firſt thing that Abraham did, when he came from Vr of the Chaldeans, to the land of Canaan, which God gaue him to poſſeſſe, was the building of an Altar for the worſhip of God, his ſacrificing thereon, and calling vpon the name of the Lord, Gen. 12. 8. The ſame did Noah before him at his firſt comming out of the Arke after the flood, Gen. 8. 20. and Iacob after him in Bethel. And they were all mooued hereunto, becauſe they knewe their comfortable aboad in thoſe places, came not by their owne endeauour, but from the bleſſing of God. When the good king Hezekiah kept the Paſſeouer in Ieruſalem, his principall care was that the Prieſts and all the people might firſt be ſanctified, and therefore he praied vnto God to be mercifull to them that were not ſanctified, D 2. Chron. 30. 18. And as he behaued himſelfe in his kingdome, ſo ſhould euery maſter of a familie behaue himſelfe in his houſe where he dwelleth, labouring to ſanctifie the ſame that it may be comfortable to him and his; leaſt for neglect thereof, he pul vpon himſelfe, and thoſe that belong vnto him, the heauie hand of God in plagues and puniſhments.

The ſecond kinde of Remedies are Reſtoratiue, which ſerue to deliuer men from Witchcraft, by curing the hurts of Witches in the bodies of men, or other creatures. In the handling whereof, firſt, we will conſider, how whole countries, and then how euery priuate man may be cured and deliuered. Whole Countries, and Kingdomes are freed and cured ſpecially by one meanes; The publiſhing and embracing of the Goſpell. When our Sauiour Chriſt had ſent the ſeauentie Diſciples to preach in Iurie, at their returne he gaue this teſtimonie of the effect of their miniſterie, That he ſawe Satan fall downe from heauen like lightening, Luk. 10. 18. his meaning was this, As lightning is ſuddenly and violently ſent out of the cloud, and (as it were) caſt downe to the earth by the cracke of the thunder: euen ſo Satan the Prince of the world, that ruleth in the hearts of the diſobedient, was caſt downe, and his kingdome ruinated by the power of the Goſpell preached. In the times of ignorance the deuill triumpheth freely without controlement, but the miſt and darkeneſſe of his deluſions cannot poſſibly abide the bright beames of Gods glorious wil reuealed by preaching. The Lord of auncient times commanded his people not to doe according to thoſe nations, among whom they dwelt in Canaan, by practiſing Witchcraft, or following after Sorcerie, Deut. 18. 9. &c. And that they might be able to obey this commandement, Moſes preſcribeth vnto them this Reſtoratiue, the reuerent and obedient hearing of the Lords Prophets, v. 18. In this our Church if we would be healed of our wounds, and baniſh Satan from among vs, who greatly annoieth a great number of our people by his deluſions and damnable practiſes of Sorcerie: the onely way to bring it to paſſe, is the maintaining of a learned Miniſterie, the aduancing of Prophets, by whoſe labours the Goſpell may flouriſh. For the faithfull diſpenſation thereof is the Lords owne arme and ſcepter, whereby he beateth downe the kingdome of darkeneſſe, and confoundeth the workes and enterpriſes of the deuill.

The ſecond ſort of Reſtoratiues, ſerue for the cure of particular perſons: for howſoeuer the gift and power of caſting out deuills and curing witchcraft be ordinarily ceaſed, ſince the Apoſtles times, it beeing a gift peculiar to the Primitiue Church, and giuen to it onely during the infancie of the Goſpell; yet there may be meanes vſed, and that effectuall, for the eaſing of any perſon that is bewitched by Satans inſtruments. Thoſe therefore that are in theſe daies tormented in this kinde, muſt doe three things.

Firſt, they muſt enter into a ſerious examination of themſelues, and conſider the cauſe for which it pleaſeth God to ſuffer Satan to exerciſe them with that kind of croſſe. And here vpon diligent enquirie, they ſhall finde that their owne ſinnes are the true and proper cauſes of theſe euills. When Saul was diſobedient to the commandement of God, the Lord ſent vpon him an euill ſpirit to vexe him, 1. Sam. 15. Hymeneus and Alexander for their peſtilent errors were both caſt out of the Church, and giuen vp alſo to Satan, that they might learne not to blaſpheme, 1. Tim. 1. 20. in the ſame manner was the inceſtuous perſon dealt withall, 1. Cor. 5. 5.

A Secondly, after this Examination, the ſame parties muſt ſhew forth their faith, whereby they depend on the free fauour and mercie of God for their deliuerance. How may this be done? by heartie praier vnto God, ioyned with faſting that the ſame may be more earneſt. In which praier the maine deſire of the heart muſt be abſolutely for the pardon of their ſinnes, and then for deliuerance from the hurts and torments of diabolicall perſons: yet not abſolutely, as for the other, but with this condition, ſo farforth as it ſtands with Gods glorie, and their owne good. For theſe are the bounds and limits of all temporall good things; of them the Lord maks no abſolute promiſe, but with theſe conditions and qualifications.

B Thirdly, the parties bewitched muſt patiently beare the preſent annoyance, comforting themſelues with this, that it is the Lords owne hand, by whoſe ſpeciall prouidence it comes to paſſe, and who turneth all things to the good of his choſen. Againe, they are to remember, that he beeing a moſt wiſe God, and louing father in Chriſt, will not ſuffer them to be tried aboue that they be able to beare, but in his good time will grant a ioyfull iſſue. Now when the bewitched ſhall thus ſubmit themſelues vnto God, in the croſſe, be it that he (vpon ſome cauſes) deferre their deliuerance, yet they ſhall not finally be deceiued of their hope. For either in this life, at the appointed time, or in C the end of this life, by death they ſhall be eternally deliuered, and put in preſent poſſeſſion of euerlaſting eaſe and happines. Thus much of the true remedies againſt Witchcraft.

In the next place we are a little to examine the falſe and ſuperſtitious Remedies, preſcribed and vſed by them of the popiſh Church.

The moſt learned Papiſts of this age doe teach and auouch, that there is in Gods Church an ordinarie gift and power, whereby ſome men may caſt out deuills, and helpe annoyances that come by Witches. The Proteſtant is of a contrarie iudgement, and holdeth according to truth, that there is now no ſuch ordinarie gift left to the Church of God, ſince the daies of the Apoſtles.

D Reaſons of this opinion may be theſe.

Firſt, caſting out of deuills, and curing ſuch annoyances, are extraordinarie and miraculous workes. For Chriſt accounteth handling of ſerpents without hurt, ſpeking with new tongues, curing of diſeaſes by impoſition of hands, (all which are things of leſſe moment) to be miracles, Mark. 16.18.19. but all theſe leſſer works, yea the ordinarie power of working them, is ceaſed: for it was onely giuen to the Apoſtles in the Primitiue Church, as a meanes to confirme the doctrine of the Goſpel to vnbeleeuers, that neuer heard of Chriſt before. So Paul ſaith, Strange tongues (that is, the gift of ſpeaking ſtrange languages, without ordinarie teaching) are for a ſigne, not to them that beleeue, but to them that beleeue not, 1. Cor. 14.22. And for the ſame ende were all extraordinarie gifts then giuen. Seeing therefore the doctrine of the Goſpel hath beene alreadie eſtabliſhed, and the truth thereof ſufficiently confirmed by miracles in the Primitiue Church, the ſame gift muſt needes ceaſe vnto vs. For if it ſhould ſtil continue, it would call into queſtion the effect of the Apoſtolicall preaching, and implie thus much, that the Goſpel was not well eſtabliſhed, nor ſufficiently confirmed by their extraordinarie Miniſterie, and miracles accompanying the ſame. Againe, if the gift of working miracles ſhould remaine, then the promiſe of God for his ſpeciall & extraordinarie aſſiſtance therein, ſhould yet continue: for the gift and promiſe goe together, ſo long as the promiſe is in force, ſo long is the gift alſo, but the promiſe made by Chriſt, In my name ſhall they caſt out deuills, and ſpeake with new tongues, Mark. 16. was in force onely in the perſons and Miniſterie of the Apoſtles, and thoſe that had extraordinarie and immediate calling from God, and it ceaſed when they and their calling ceaſed. Therefore if Miniſters now ſhould lay their hands on the ſicke, they ſhould not recouer them: if they ſhould annoint them with Oyle, it ſhould do them no good, becauſe they haue no promiſe.

Howbeit the Papiſts ſtand ſtiffely in defending the continuance of theſe gifts.

Firſt, they ſay, the Church of the New Teſtament is nothing inferiour to that of the Old. The Iewiſh Church before the comming of Chriſt, was the Church of the Old Teſtament, and had the power and gift of caſting out deuills. So ſaith our Sauiour himſelfe, Matth. 12. 27. If I through Beelzebub caſt out Deuills, then by whom doe your children caſt them out? In which words he aſcribeth this gift vnto the Iewes, therefore it ſhould ſeeme, the ſame remaineth ſtill in the Church.

Anſ. That place of Scripture is diuerſly expounded. Some by children there mentioned, vnderſtand the Apoſtles, who were Iewes borne, and had receiued from Chriſt this gift and power to caſt out deuils. Which if it be ſo, it maketh not for them, becauſe they had it extraordinarily. But I rather thinke, that by children, are meant the Exorciſing Iewes, before Chriſts time, who did caſt out deuils amõg thẽ, pretending an abilitie to doe this worke in the name of God; whereas in truth, they were all flat Sorcerers, and did it by vertue of a league & compact made with the deuill. Which practiſe hath beene of long continuance, and is at this day common and vſual among the Popiſh ſort. And that there were ſuch Excorciſts among the Iewes, it is euident. For ſuch were thoſe Vagabonds which came to Epheſus, and tooke vpon them to caſt out deuills by the name of Ieſus, and Paul, Act. 19.13. but the man in whom the euill ſpirit was, (ſo ſoone as he had adiured the ſpirit) ranne vpon them, and mightily preuailed againſt them, v. 16. Now if they had done this great worke by the power of God (as they pretended) the holy Ghoſt would not haue called them Exorciſts and Vagabonds; neither could the euil ſpirit poſſibly haue ouercome them as he did. Againe, in the Hiſtories of the Iewes are recorded many practiſes of ſuch as exerciſe this power among them. Raphael the Angell telleth Tobias, that a perfume made of the heart and liuer of a fiſh, will helpe a man vexed with an euill ſpirit, Tob. 6.7. which counſell is flat Magick, for there is no ſuch vertue in the liuer of a fiſh. And in other hiſtories we reade, that one Eleazar a Iew, by the ſmell of a certaine roote put to the noſe of a man poſſeſſed with a deuill, cauſed the deuill to come out of his noſthrills, and forſake him; which thing was done in publike place before Veſpaſian and others. This alſo was effected by meere coniuration. For what vertue can there be in any roote or hearb in the world, auaileable to command and enforce Satan to depart from a man poſſeſſed? And yet ſuch feats were plaied by ſundrie Magicians among the Iewes. Wherupon I conclude, that the meaning of our Sauiour in the place alledged, is in effect thus much; If I by the power of Beelzebub, &c. that is, you haue among you ſundrie Magicians and Exorciſts, who pretend and exerciſe the gift of caſting out deuills, and you thinke they doe it by the power of God, why then do you not carie the ſame opinion of me alſo?

Ioſeph. Antiquit. Iudaic. l.8.c.2.

Their ſecond reaſon is grounded on the promiſe of Chriſt, Mark. 16.17. Theſe tokens ſhall follow them that beleeue, In my name they ſhall caſt out deuills, &c. whence they gather, that there ſhall be alwaies ſome in the Church, who ſhall haue power to caſt forth deuils, if they beleeue.

Anſ. That promiſe was made by Chriſt vnto his Church, to be fulfilled immediately after his aſcenſion. It did not extend to all times, and perſons, ſo long as the world endureth, but onely to the times of the primitiue Church, and to ſuch as then liued. For to thē onely the doctrine of the Goſpell was to be confirmed by ſignes and miracles. And this laſted about 200. yeares next after Chriſt his aſcenſion. During which time, not onely the Apoſtles and Miniſters, but euen priuate men, and ſouldiers wrought many miracles.

The third reaſon is taken from experience, which (as they ſay) in all ages from the Apoſtles times to this day ſheweth, that there haue bin alwaies ſome in the Church, which haue had this gift of caſting out Deuills, and curing the hurts of Witchcraft.

Anſ. This gift continued not much aboue the ſpace of 200. yeres after Chriſt. From which time many hereſies beganne to ſpread themſelues; and then ſhortly after Poperie that myſterie of iniquitie beginning to ſpring vp, and to dilate it ſelfe in the Churches of Europe, the true gift of working Miracles then ceaſed, and in ſtead thereof came in deluſions, and lying wonders, by the effectuall working of Satan, as it was foretold by the Apoſtle, 2. Theſſ. 2.9. Of which ſort were and are all thoſe miracles of the Romiſh Church, whereby ſimple people haue beene notoriouſly deluded. Theſe indeed haue there continued frō that time to this day. But this gift of the holy Ghoſt, whereof the Queſtion is made, ceaſed long before.

To proceede yet further, we are here to conſider the particular Remedies, which they of the Popiſh Church haue preſcribed againſt the hurts that haue come by Witchcraft. And they are principally fiue.

I. The name Ieſus.
II. The vſe of the Reliques of Saints.
III. The ſigne of the Croſſe.
IV. Hallowed creatures.
V. Exorciſmes.

I. Firſt, for the name Ieſus: Thus much we grant, that any Chriſtian may lawfully call vpon the name of Ieſus in prayer, for the helpe and deliuerance of thoſe that are poſſeſſed and bewitched, but yet with the caueat and condition before ſpecified, If it be the will of God, and if their recouerie may make for his glory, the benefit of the Church, and the good of the parties diſeaſed.

But the Papiſt by the vſe of this name, intendeth a further matter, to wit, that the very name vttered in ſo many letters and ſillables, is powerfull to caſt out Deuills, and to helpe thoſe that are bewitched. For when it is vttered, then (ſay they) the authoritie of Chriſt is preſent, that the worke may be done. A flat vntruth, and a practiſe full of daunger. For let this be well conſidered, whatſoeuer any man doth in this caſe; he muſt doe it by vertue of his calling, and haue alſo his warrant for the doing thereof out of the word; which if he want, and yet will vndertake ſuch a worke, he may iuſtly feare the like euent that befell the vagabond Iewes that were Exorciſts, Act. 19.13. Now the Church of Chriſt hath no warrant in the word, to vſe this name of Chriſt for any ſuch purpoſe; neither hath any ordinarie Chriſtian a ſpeciall calling from God ſo to doe. Therefore he may not doe it.

And whereas they would beare men in hand, that the ſaid name, of all the names of Chriſt, and aboue all other things, is of moſt ſpeciall vertue, though it be vſed euen by a man that wanteth faith, becauſe the Apoſtle ſaith, At the name of Ieſus euery knee ſhall bow, both of things in heauen, in earth, and vnder the earth, Phil. 2. 10. and by things vnder the earth are meant the deuills: we muſt knowe that their allegation is weake, and that they greatly abuſe the place. For there the name Ieſus, is not onely a title of Chriſt, but withall ſignifieth the power, maieſtie, and authoritie of Chriſt, ſitting at the right hād of the father, to which all creatures in heauen, earth, & hell are made ſubiect; and by that power indeed (if they had it at command) they might be able to cure the hurts of Witchcraft.

II. The ſecond ſpeciall Remedie is the Vſe of Saints Reliques;as their bookes, bones,apparell, ſtaues, or ſuch like, which beeing but touched of the parties vexed, are excellent meanes to recouer them.

Anſ. The vſe of theſe things, to the purpoſes aforeſaid, is a meere ſuperſtitious practiſe. For firſt, they haue not the true Reliques of the Saints, as would plainely appeare, if a true Inuentorie were taken of all ſuch as they ſay are to be found in their Monaſteries and Churches. Secondly,though they had them,yet haue they no warrant or calling to vſe them to this ende: for in all the word of God, there is neither commandement to warrant the vſe,nor promiſe to aſſure any man of a bleſſing vpon the vſe of them. Albeit they would ſeeme to haue ſome warrant, and therfore they alleadge that which is written, 2.King 13. 21. of a dead man,who beeing for haſt throwne into the ſepulchre of Eliſha, ſo ſoone as he touched the bones of Eliſha, reuiued, and ſtood vpon his feete.To this alſo they adde the examples of cures done by Peters ſhadowe, Act.5. 15. and ſundrie diſeaſes healed by Pauls handkerchifes,Act.19. 12. Anſ. Theſe things indeede are true, but they ſerue nothing to their purpoſe. For firſt, the quickning of the dead ſouldier, came not from any vertue in the corps of Eliſha; but it was a miracle, which it pleaſed God then to worke, by meanes of the corps, that the Iewes at that time might be confirmed in the truth of that doctrine, which Eliſha had taught them from God, and which before his death they had neglected, as I haue before ſhewed. And it was a thing onely then done,and neuer ſince.It cannot therefore be a ground for the ordinarie vſe of Reliques. Againe, touching the other examples: I anſwer, that both Peter and Paul had the gift of working Miracles, and hauing the gift, they might vſe ſuch meanes for the preſent to cure diſeaſes. But the Papiſts are not able to ſhewe, that God hath giuen them the like gift, whereby they might be warranted for the vſe of the like meanes; neither can they aſſuredly hope for ſucceſſe, although they ſhould vndertake to vſe them.

III. The third Remedie, is the ſigne of the Croſſe, made vpon the bodie of the partie tormented. Behold to what a height of impietie they are growne, aſcribing that to the creature, which is proper to the Creator. For the power of working miracles, is proper onely to the Godhead. The Prophets and Apoſtles in their times did not worke them of themſelues, but were onely Gods paſſiue inſtruments, in this manner: When the Lord intended by them to worke any miracle, they receiued from him at the ſame time an extraordinarie and ſpeciall inſtinct, whereby they were mooued to attempt the worke. They therefore yeelded themſelues to the preſent motion of Gods ſpirit, to be his inſtruments onely in the diſpenſation of the worke: but the ſole author and producer of the miracle,was God himſelfe. And in this caſe the very manhood of our Sauiour Chriſt, conſidered apart from his Godhead, had no power of it ſelfe, but was onely the inſtrument of his Godhead, whenſoeuer it pleaſed him in that kind to manifeſt the ſame. Wherefore to aſcribe this vertue to the Croſſe,being a creature,or the worke of a creature, is to communicate the incommunicable power of the Creator to it, which is plaine blaſphemie.

IV. The fourth Remedie, is the vſing of hallowed things; as hallowed graines, ſalt, water, bread,images;ſpecially the image of Agnus dei.

Anſ. Hallowed creatures are in truth vnhallowed ſuperſtitions. For euery creature is ſanctified by the word and prayer, 1. Tim. 4. 4. by the word, when God in his word commands vs to vſe it for ſome ende; and by prayer, when we giue him thanks for giuing the creature,and withall deſire his bleſſing in the vſe thereof. Now let any Papiſt ſhewe me one letter or ſillable in all the Booke of God,commanding the vſe of a creature for any ſuch ende.

They affirme indeede, that Eliſha wrought miracles by hallowed ſalt, for by it he cured the bitter waters, 2. king. 2. 21. But the Prophet vſed not hallowed,but common ſalt,& that not ordinarily, but onely then, as a meanes whereby to worke a miracle. It was therefore powerfull in his hands, becauſe for the doing thereof, he had power and warrant from God extraordinarily: and it cannot be ſo in any other,which haue not the ſame gift.

V. The fiſt and laſt Remedie, is Exorciſme, which is an adiuring and commanding the Deuill in the name of God,to depart frō the partie poſſeſſed, and ceaſe to moleſt him any more. This meanes was vſed by our Sauiour Chriſt himſelfe, and after him by his Apoſtles, and other beleeuers in the time of the Primitiue Church, when the gift of working Miracles was in force: but in theſe daies(as I ſaid before) that gift is ceaſed, & alſo the promiſe of power annexed to the vſe of adiuration:and therefore the meanes thereof muſt needs ceaſe. And for an ordinarie man now to command the Deuill in ſuch ſort,is meere preſumption,and a practiſe of Sorcerie.

Sect. IV.

IV. Queſt. Whether the Witches of our age are to be puniſhed with death, and that by vertue of this law of Moſes?

I doubt not, but in this laſt age of the world, among vs alſo,this ſinne of Witchcraft ought as ſharply to be puniſhed as in the former times; and all Witches beeing throughly conuicted by the Magiſtrate, ought according to the Law of Moſes to be put to death. For proofe hereof, conſider theſe reaſons.

Firſt, this Law of Moſes flatly enioyneth all men, in all ages, without limitation of circumſtances, not to ſuffer the Witch to liue, and hereupon I gather, that it muſt ſtand the ſame, both now and for euer to the worlds ende.

Patrons of Witches except againſt this, holding that it was a Iudiciall Lawe, which continued but for a time, and concerned onely the Nation of the Iewes, and is now ceaſed. But I take the contrary to be the truth, and that vpon theſe grounds.

I. Thoſe Iudiciall Lawes, whoſe penaltie is death, becauſe they haue in them a perpetuall equitie, and doe ſerue to maintaine ſome morall precept, are perpetuall. The Iewes indeede had ſome Lawes of this kind, whoſe puniſhments were temporall, and they laſted onely for a certaine time: but the penaltie of Witchcraft, beeing Death by Gods appointment, and the inflicting of that puniſhment, ſeruing to maintaine the equitie of the three firſt morall precepts of the firſt Table, which cannot be kept vnleſſe this Lawe be put in execution: it muſt neceſſarily followe, that it is in that regard morall, and binds vs, and ſhall in like ſort bind all men in all ages, as well as the Iewes themſelues, to whō it was at that time perſonally directed.

II. Euery Iudiciall lawe, that hath in it the equitie of the lawe of nature, is perpetuall; but this Lawe of puniſhing the Witch by death, is ſuch. For it is a principle of the Lawe of nature, holden for a grounded truth in all countries and kingdomes, among all people in euery age; that the traytor who is an enemie to the State, and rebelleth againſt his lawfull Prince, ſhould be put to death: now the moſt notorious traytor and rebell that can be, is the Witch. For ſhe renounceth God himſelfe, the King of kings, ſhe leaues the ſocietie of his Church and people, ſhe bindeth her ſelfe in league with the deuil: and therefore if any offender among men, ought to ſuffer death for his fact, much more ought ſhe, and that of due deſert.

The ſecond reaſon for the proofe of the point in hand, is this; According to Moſes lawe euery Idolater was to be ſtoned to death: Deuter. 17. v. 3, 4, 5. If there be found any among you, that hath gone and ſerued other gods, as the Sunne, the Moone, or any of the hoaſt of heauen: if the thing vpon enquirie be found to be true and certen, thou ſhalt bring them foorth vnto thy gates, whether it be man or woman, and ſhalt ſtone them with ſtones till they die. Now this is the very caſe of a Witch, ſhe renounceth the true God, and maketh choice to ſerue the deuill, ſhe is therefore a groſſe Idolater, and her puniſhment muſt be ſutable. It is alleadged by the fauourers of the contrary part, that Peter denied Chriſt, and yet was not put to death: I anſwer there is great difference between Peters deniall of Chriſt, and Witches denying of God. Peters denyall was vpon infirmitie and in haſt: the Witch denyeth God vpon knowledge and deliberation, wittingly and willingly. Againe, Peter did not vpon the deniall betake himſelfe to the deuill, but turned vnto Chriſt againe, which he teſtified by his hearty and ſpeedie repentance: but Witches deny God, and betake themſelues to the deuill, of their owne accord, as is manifeſt euen by their owne confeſſions at their arraignments.

The third reaſon. Euery ſeducer in the Church, whoſe practiſe was to draw men from the true God to the worſhip of Idols, though it were a mans owne ſonne or daughter, wiſe or friend, by the peremptorie decree and commandement of God, was at no hand to be ſpared or pitied, but the hand of the witneſſe firſt, and then the hands of all the people muſt be vpon him, to kill him, Deut. 13. 6. 9. If this be ſo, no Witches conuicted ought to eſcape the ſword of the Magiſtrate: for they are the moſt notorious ſeducers of all other. When they be once intangled in the Deuills league, they labour to inure their deareſt friends and poſteritie, in their curſed and abhominable practiſes; that they may be the more eaſily drawne into the ſame confederacie, wherewith they themſelues are vnited to Sathan. I might here alleadge that they deſerue death, becauſe many of them be murtherers, but I ſtand not vpon that inſtance, becauſe I hold in the generall that Witches are not to be ſuffered to liue, though they doe no hurt either to man or other creatures, and that by vertue of Moſes lawe, onely for their leagues ſake, whereby they become rebells to God, Idolaters and ſeducers, as now hath beene ſhewed. Yet notwithſtanding all that hath beene ſaid, many things are brought in defence of them, by ſuch as be their friends and wellwillers.

Firſt, it is ſaide, that the hurt that is done, comes not from the Witch, but from the deuil: he deſerues the blame becauſe it is his worke, and ſhe is not to die for his ſinne. Anſw. Let it be granted, that the Witch is not the author of the euill that is done, yet ſhe is a confederate and partner with the deuill in the fact, and ſo the lawe takes hold on her. See it in a familiar compariſon. A companie of men conſpire together in a robberie, by common conſent ſome ſtand in open place to eſpie out the bootie, and to giue the watchword, others are ſet about the paſſage, priuily to ruſh vpon the man, and to ſpoyle him of his goods. In this caſe what ſaith the Law? The Parties that gaue the watchword, though they did nothing to the man, yet beeing acceſſories and abettors to the robberie by conſent, they are theeues, and liable to condemnation and execution, as well as the principalls. Euen ſo ſtands the caſe with the Witch. In the working of wonders, and in all miſchieuous practiſes, he or ſhe is partaker with the deuill by conſent of couenant: the Witch onely vſeth the watchword, in ſome charme or otherwiſe, and doth no more; the deuill vpon notice giuen by the Charme, takes his opportunitie, and works the miſchiefe. He is the principall agent, but the other yeeldeth helpe, and is rightly liable to puniſhment. The reaſon is, becauſe if the deuill were not ſtirred vp, and prouoked by the Witch, he would neuer do ſo much hurt as he doth. He had neuer appeared in Samuels A likenes had he not been ſolicited by the Witch of Endor. He would not haue cauſed counterfeit ſerpents and frogges to appeare in Egypt, but for Iannes and Iambres, and other Inchanters. And in this age there would not in likelihood be ſo much hurt and hinderance procured vnto men, and other creatures by his meanes, but for the inſtigation of ill diſpoſed perſons, that haue fellowſhip and ſocietie with him.

Againe, they obiect, that Witches conuicted either repent, or repent not: If they repent, then God pardoneth their ſinne, and why ſhould not the Magiſtrate as well ſaue their bodies and let them liue, as God doth their ſoules. If they do not repent, then it is a dangerous thing for the B Magiſtrate to put them to death: for by this meanes he kills the bodie and caſts the ſoule to hell.

Anſw. All Witches iudicially and lawfully conuicted, ought to haue ſpace of repentance granted vnto them, wherein they may be inſtructed and exhorted, and then afterward executed. For it is poſſible for them to be ſaued by Gods mercie, though they haue denied him. Secondly, the Magiſtrate muſt execute iuſtice vpon malefactors lawfully conuicted, whether they repent or not. For God approoueth the iuſt execution of iudgement vpon men, without reſpect to their repentance: neither muſt their impenitencie hinder the execution of Iuſtice. When the people of Iſrael had committed Ido- C latrie in worſhipping the golden calfe, Moſes did not expect their repentance, and in the meane while forbeare the puniſhment, but he and the Leuites preſently tooke their ſwords and ſlue them, and the Lord approoued their courſe of proceeding, Exod. 32. 28. When Zimri an Iſraelite had committed fornication with Cozbi a Midianitiſh woman, Phineas in zeale of Gods glorie executed iudgement vpon them both, without any reſpect vnto their repẽtance, Num. 25. 8. and is therefore commended, Pſal. 106. 30. Warres are a worthy ordinance of God, and yet no Prince could euer attempt the ſame lawfully, if euery ſoldier in the field ſhould ſtay the killing of his enemie, vpon expectation of his repentance. And whereas they ſay, that by executing an impenitent Witch, the Magiſtrate caſteth away the ſoule; we muſt knowe, that the ende of execution by the Magiſtrate is not the damnation of the malefactors ſoule, but that ſinne might be puniſhed that others may beware of the like crimes and offences, and that the wicked might be taken away from among Gods people.

But ſome Witches there be that cannot be conuicted of killing any: what ſhall become of them? Anſ. As the killing Witch muſt die by another lawe, though he were no Witch: ſo the healing and harmeleſſe Witch muſt die by this Lawe, though he kill not, onely for couenant made with Satan. For this muſt alwaies be remembred as a concluſion, that by Witches we vnderſtand not thoſe onely which kill and torment: but all Diuiners, Charmers, Iuglers, all Wizzards, commonly called wiſe men and wiſe women; yea, whoſoeuer doe any thing (knowing what they doe) which cannot be effected by nature or art; and in the ſame number we reckon all good Witches, which doe no hurt but good, which do not ſpoile and deſtroy, but ſaue and deliuer. All theſe come vnder this ſentence of Moſes, becauſe they denie God and are confederates with Sathan. By the lawes of England the thiefe is executed for ſtealing, and we thinke it iuſt and profitable; but it were a thouſand times better for the land, if all Witches, but ſpecially the bleſſing Witch might ſuffer death. For the thief by his ſtealing, and the hurtfull Inchanter by charming, bring hindrance and hurt to the bodies and goods of men; but theſe are the right hand of the deuill, by which he taketh and deſtroyeth the ſoules of men. Men doe moſt commonly hate and ſpit at the damnifying Sorcerer, as vnworthie to liue among them; whereas the other is ſo deare vnto them, that they hold themſelues and their countrie bleſſed that haue him among them, they flie vnto him in neceſſitie, they depend vpon him as their god, and by this meanes, thouſands are caried away to their final confuſion. Death therefore is the iuſt and deſerued portion of the good Witch.

TO THE COVNTREY-MAN, ## proouing it vnlawfull for him to buie or vſe our yearely PROGNOSTICATIONS.

GOod Reader, I haue thought it conuenient (for ſome ſpecial cauſes) in this ſhort treatiſe, to diſcloſe a part of my minde vnto thee, concerning the making of Prognoſtications, and if it might be, to perſwade thee, not to ſpend thy money in buying any of them. I haue long ſtudied this Art, and was neuer quiet vntill I had ſeene all the ſecrets of the ſame: but at the length, it pleaſed God to lay before me the prophanneſſe of it, nay, I dare boldly ſay, Idolatrie, although it be couered with faire and golden ſhewes. Wherefore, that which I will ſpeake with griefe, the ſame I would deſire thee to marke with ſome attention. My reaſon ſhall partly concerne thee, partly the Prognoſticatour himſelfe. Firſt on thy behalfe, I reaſon thus:

The firſt reaſon, immoderate care.

1 AS a man doth ſee the bleſſings of God vpon him, ſo he muſt alſo labour with a carefull diligence to maintaine the ſtate of this life. But becauſe the affection of man is carried headlong vnto a greedy couetouſneſſe: this deſire of ouermuch carping and caring, muſt be bridled with two ſtrong bittes. Firſt, all our care muſt extende it ſelfe no further, then the preſent day: Secondly, in caring we muſt not truſt vnto our ſelues, but fixe all our confidence in the mercie and prouidence of God who bleſſeth all, and without whoſe goodneſſe, nothing can come to paſſe, doe what we will. As touching the firſt, we haue the direction of our Sauiour Chriſt: who teacheth vs to pray on this wiſe; Giue vs this day our daily bread; whereby we are giuen to vnderſtand, that we are onely to ſeeke for the preſent time, reſting with this perſwaſion, that he which hath bleſſed vs this day, will alſo to morrowe, and the next day A ſhewe his like goodneſſe vnto vs. Againe, in the ſame place, our Sauiour Chriſt ſpeaketh on this wiſe, Care not then for the morrowe: for the morrowe ſhall care for it ſelfe: the day hath enough with his owne griefe. By this we learne, that God will prouide for euery day all things neceſſarie, though we doe not encreaſe the preſent griefe, with caring and caſting in our heads how we ſhall liue in the time to come. Now tell me what is the cauſe that thou yearely doſt buie a Prognoſtication, and one of thoſe, which tell the ſtrangeſt things? Is it becauſe thou haſt a delight to read the ſtyle of Prognoſtications? Or becauſe thou wouldeſt learne to Prognoſticate? Or becauſe the pictures and Characters which they make, delight thy minde? it were B follie to be perſwaded of this, ſeeing the very cauſe it ſelfe is manifeſt. Thy whole deſire is to fill thy coffers, and to heape vp wealth, thou art afraid leaſt thou ſhalt become poore, therefore thou greedily buyeſt the Prognoſtications, and continually ſearcheſt all the corners of them, to ſee the ſtate of the yeare to come, euen thus in minde reaſoning with thy ſelfe: I can neuer be quiet, nor take my ſleepe, vntill ſuch time as I haue knowne the ſtate of the yeare inſuing, that I may frame my buſineſſe accordingly: This next yeare there will be much raine, it will rotte corne vpon the ground, it will be ſpoyled, I will keepe my corne vntill the next yeare following. I finde that corne will C be deere about halfe a yeare hence, I will not ſell my corne now, but keepe it, that I may haue plentie of money for it, and ſufficient beſide, to maintaine my houſe: the ſea and land is calme and quiet this yeare, the next yeare many ſhipwracks and troubles in many countries will fall, now I will fraught my ſhips that then I may be quiet. Theſe imaginations are liuely arguments of thy diffidence and deſpaire in the goodneſſe and louing kindneſſe of God. If thou feare God, loue God, put thy whole truſt in God, thou art content to referre thy whole preſeruation vnto the hands of God: now, theſe

proling and raigning conceits of the time to come, argue that either thou neuer thinkeſt on god, or at the leſt perſwadeſt thy ſelf, that either he wil not, or cãnot help thee. And if thou in thy couetous minde, pray vnto God, thou canſt not pray according to the inſtitutiõ of Chriſt, without hypocriſie, giue vs our daily bread this day. Wherefore, ſeeing the hauing of Prognoſtications, commeth of ſo wicked cauſes, as is the greedy deſire of proſperitie, and wealth, and argueth ſome kinde of diffidence in God: when thou readeſt theſe my words, examine thine owne heart, if though finde my ſayings true (as certainely thou ſhalt) neuer hereafter deſire to know the ſtate of the yeare before-hand, except it be for the ſeaſons of the yeare, which I am perſwaded, thou maieſt know in ſome part, without any ſkill, euen by thine own experience.

The ſecond reaſon, neglect of Gods prouidence.

2 COncerning the contempt of Gods prouidence, thus much I ſay. The Prognoſticatour, if he be asked whether he confeſſe the prouidence of God, he will with all his heart confeſſe it: but by his deeds he doth denie it, for all the things whatſoeuer, which can happen in a whole yeare, he attributeth them to the ſtarres, and ſo he publiſheth his Predictions, alwaies mentioning ſtarres, neuer, or very ſlenderly, making any ſignification of the power, and iuſtice, mercie, and euerlaſting wiſedome of God. And ſurely, euen for the very paring of thy nailes, for the cutting of thy haire, for the putting on of thy ſhoes, for takihg a iournie two or three miles from thine houſe, for obtayning at Gods hands thy requeſt, for making thy bargaine with thy neighbour, for all thine actions be they neuer ſo ſmall, theſe wiſe men (if they will aske their aduiſe) will giue thee counſell from the ſtarres. Now when theſe their irreligious predictions ſhalbe had in thy boſome, and red of the daily, thou beeing a man vnlearned and worldly giuen, neuer hearing any mention of the ſpeciall prouidence, and hand of God in euery thing, but long diſcourſes of the vertues of Planets, and ſignes, doeſt neuer thinke vpon the wonderfull and moſt infinite power of God, working after a ſpeciall manner in euery matter, but art drawn ſtraightwaies into an admiration of the Aſtrologer, and a great feare of the conſtellations of heauen. An experience of this I found in thee about two yeares agoe. A learned man (yet in this caſe farre deceiued) wrote an Aſtrologicall diſcourſe of the coniunction betweene Iupiter and Saturne, wherein he ſhewed of great alteration in euery thing to fall. At this thou waſt ſore agaſt, thy mind was incombred with ſettling thy goods to ſet them in order againſt that day: thy ſong for halfe a yeare was nothing elſe, but, the coniunction; the day beeing come, what ſtaring was there and gaſing into heauen, to ſee the meeting of thoſe 2. Planets. Now all this while where was Gods prouidence, where was that truſt and reioyſing in him: where was that prayſing of his name for all things whatſoeuer ſhould come to paſſe; where was that meditation of his infinite, and vnſearcheable wiſdome: theſe things were neuer thought nor hard of, yea by reaſon of thine earthly affections, they tooke no place in thine heart. This thy dealing is like vnto the follie of that man, who hauing a coſtly clocke in his boſome, neuer extolleth or thinketh on the wit and inuention of the clocke-maker, but is continually in admiration of the ſpring or watch of the clocke, by whoſe meanes all the wheeles haue their ſwifter or ſlower, their backward or forward motions, and by which the whole clocke keepeth his courſe. Wherefore me thinketh that in a Chriſtian common wealth, thoſe onely bookes ſhould be publiſhed for thine vſe, which might beate into thine head, & make thee euery houre and moment to thinke on the prouidence of God: which beeing once ſettled in thy minde, the conſideration of the meanes, which God vſeth, will follow of it ſelfe. Contrariwiſe, to tell thee the means which God doth vſe, to thunder out the aſpects and conſtellations of Starres, and ſeldome to mention his prouidence, maketh thee to feare, and admire, and loue the meanes, quite forgetting the worke of God in the meanes. This fault was very riſe amongſt the Iſraelites, who came yearely vnto Aſtrologers and wiſe men: Wherefore that which is ſpoken by Ieremie vnto them, is alſo ſpoken vnto thee: Here ye the word of the Lord, that he ſpeaketh vnto you, O houſe of Iſrael. Thus ſaith the Lord, Learne not the way of the heathen, and be not afraid for the ſignes of heauen, though the heathen be afraid of ſuch. In like ſort, God forbiddeth his people of England to giue credite, or feare the conſtellations and coniunctions of ſtarres and Planets, which haue no power of themſelues, but are gouerned by him, and their ſecret motions and influences are not knowne to man, and therefore there can be no certaine iudgement thereof. If thou wilt not heare and follow this which I ſay, ſee what will enſue. Thou ſeeſt that the greateſt matters which theſe Diuinours and Prognoſticators foretell, fall out flat otherwiſe then they ſay, to their perpetuall ſhame. Truely I am perſwaded, that it is the iudgement of God vpon them (although they cannot ſee it) who maketh them, when they thinke they are moſt wiſe, to be moſt fooles. For ſo the Lord vſed the wiſe men and Aſtrologers of Chaldea, as he ſpeaketh by his Prophet Eſay; I am the Lord that made all things, that ſpred out the heauens alone, and ſtretch out the earth by my ſelfe, I deſtroy the tokens of ſoothſayers, and make them that coniecture fooles, and turne their wiſe men backward, and make their knowledge fooliſhneſſe. Doeſt thou then,

then, O careleſſe and miſerable man, thinke to eſcape the ſame, or greater puniſhment beeing a cauſe of this fault! for if none deſired to know what is to come, none would buſie themſelues in that vanitie. Wherefore, read the word of God in the 18. of Deut. When thou ſhalt come Deut.18.9. (ſaith the ſpirit of God) into the land which the Lord thy God giueth thee, thou ſhalt not learne to doe after the abhominations of thoſe nations. In the words following Moſes numbreth 9. abhominations.

As
1 To make his child goe through the fire.
2 To vſe Witchcraft.
3 To regard times, this is thy fault.
4 To marke the flying of foules.
5 To be a Sorcerer.
6 To be a Charmer.
7 To counſell with Spirits.
8 To be a Soothſayer.
9 To aske counſell at the dead.

All theſe horrible abhominations being rehearſed, marke what followeth, Deut.18.9. For all that doe ſuch things are an abhomination vnto the Lord, and becauſe of their abhominations, the Lord thy God doth caſt them out before thee: now ſeeing moſt of theſe abhominations, and eſpecially the third, is vſed of vs, why ſhould we not feare the like iudgements vpon vs, vnleſſe we will repent, and that with ſpeede.

1 The reaſons which concerne the Prognoſticatour, and may auaile to the perſwading of thee, not to buy any more of their vnprofitable bookes, are theſe which follow: firſt, their vnhability in Prognoſticating: ſecōdly, their manifeſt vntruthes: thirdly, their impieties: fourthly, their trickes of deceit. What: can they not foretel that which is to com? can they not make coniectures of that which is like to enſue? No ſurely. And I will vſe arguments to confirme it vnto thee.

The firſt reaſon, of the vſe and ende of the Heauens.

1 Pſal.19.2. THe true vſe of the heauens conſiſteth in many points. Firſt, to declare the glorie of God. The Heauens (ſaith Dauid) declare the glorie of God, and the firmament ſheweth the worke of his hands. It is an Alphabet written in great letters, in which is deſcribed the maieſtie of God, and that by theſe foure ſpeciall points. Firſt, the maieſtie of the worke it ſelfe; ſecondly, the infinite multitude of Starres; thirdly, by the wonderfull varietie of Starres: fourthly, by the greatneſſe of the Starres.

2 Rom.1.20. Secondly, it maketh ſinners and wicked men inexcuſable before the iudgement ſeate of God. For the inuiſible things of him (ſaith Paul) that is, his eternall power, and Godhead, are ſeene by the creation of the world, beeing conſidered in his workes, to the intent that they ſhould be without excuſe.

3 Gen.1.14. Thirdly, they ſerue to the appointing of times, as day, night, moneth, yeare, which are A both meaſured and deſcribed by the courſe of the ſunne, and moone, and other ſtarres. And ſo the feaſt of the Iſraelites, and the computation of the yeare in our Church, dependeth thereupon, and without them there would be great confuſion both in the common wealth and Church.

4 Fourthly, they ſerue to be ſignes, that is, to foretell things to come. And they are ſignes either of extraordinarie things, or things which be ordinarie. When they are ſignes of extraordinary things, then there is, and appeareth in them ſome extraordinare worke of God: as appeareth in theſe examples which follow. At the ſuffering of Chriſt, Matth.27. not onely the vaile of the Temple rent, and the dead roſe foorth of their graues, but alſo the Sunne was wholly eclipſed, B the Moone beeing in the full. At which ſight, Dyoniſius Areopagita, a good Aſtronomer ſpake theſe words: Either the frame of the world is deſtroied, or the God of nature ſuffereth. The Prophet Ezechiel beeing commanded of God to propheſie the deſtruction of Egypt, he firſt putteth down extraordinary ſignes: Ezek 32.78. And when I will put thee out, I will couer the heauen, and make the ſtarres thereof darke: I will couer the Sunne with a cloud, and the Moone ſhall not giue her light. All the lights of heauen will I make darke for thee, and bring darkeneſſe vpon the land, (ſaith the Lord.) Before the ſecond comming of our Sauiour Chriſt, there ſhall be ſignes in the Sunne and Moone, and in the ſtarres. Laſtly, the extraordinarie going C backe of the Sunne ſignified the lengthning of the life of king Hezekias.

Secondly, the ſtarres are ſignes of generall things which happen ordinarily euery yeare in nature among vs.

As of
- 1. approching and declining of
  - 1. The Spring.
  - 2. Sommer.
  - 3. Harueſt.
  - 4. Winter.
- 2. Ordinarie weather in theſe quarters.
- 3. Ebbing and flowing of the ſea.
- 4. Seaſons of D
  - 5. Plowing.
  - 6. Sowing.
  - 7. Setting.
  - 8. Planting.
  - 9. Cutting.
  - 10. Felling.
  - 11 Reaping.

I ſay generall, becauſe the particular eſtate and affaires of men, can in no wiſe be fore-ſignified by the ſtarres. I ſay ordinarie, becauſe the things which fall out ſeldome, and are beſides the common courſe of nature, as plentie of all things, famine, plague, warre, euerſions of kingdomes, &c. doe not depend vpon the Starres. For the confirming of this, I haue three reaſons: Firſt, in the 1. of Geneſis, God ſaith, Gen.1.14,15. that he made the lights to be ſignes, and yet the Eſa.47.13.14.

Gen.1.12.14.

ſame God in the 47. of Eſay ſaith, he will deſtroy the ſignes of them which diuine: flatly forbidding vs to vſe Starres, as meanes to iudge of any thing to come, ſauing onely of thoſe, of which they are expreſly made ſignes of God in the creation: all which are put downe before. Secondly, this is manifeſt by the order of the creation: the third day God created vpon the earth hearbs and trees, and the earth brought forth fruites and was fertile: the fourth day God commanded lights to be made in the firmament of heauen, to ſeparate the day and the night, and to be for ſignes and for ſeaſons, and dayes, and monethes, and then it was ſo, and then God ſawe it was good. Out of which I gather, that it cannot be a ſigne cauſing famyne, or plenty and fertilneſſe, becauſe fertiltie went before the creation of the hoſt of heauen. Alſo of warres and plagues, and the paticular eſtates of men, they can be no ſignes, becauſe man was not yet created, & yet euen then they were ſignes. Some will ſay, they were no ſignes of thoſe matters in the creation, but now they may be, and are: No, for the works which God created he now preſerueth, neither increaſing, nor diminiſhing any thing in them. Philo Iudæus in his booke de opificio mundi, ſaith, he was perſwaded that God foreſeeing the mindes of men, giuen to ſearch ſtrange matters to come, did in this order create the heauens, to confute and diſproue their imaginations. Thirdly, the Heauens and ſtarres were made for the vſe of man, and man is their ende, ſo that it is abſurde to imagine they haue any force in the affaires of man. Now then, Prognoſticators if they will foreſhow of ſtrange things to come: they muſt vndoe the worke of their Creator, and giue vnto it newe vſes, otherwiſe they ſhall not be able to prognoſticate as they yearely doe.

The ſecond reaſon, the prouidence of God.

THe prouidence of God, is his decree by which he appointeth how euery thing ſhall come to paſſe. The continuall execution of this decree, is ordinarily by meanes, but often without meanes. The meanes which God vſeth are either generall or ſpeciall. Generall are theſe by which he gouerneth all the whole world, and euery particular thing, which concerneth this life: vnto this kinde are referred ſpirituall creatures, called Angels, by whome the philoſophers ſaie the heauens are gouerned, and we ſee that whole Kingdoms, Prouinces, & Cities haue beene kept and defended by them, as alſo conſumed and deſtroyed. Againe, the ſtarres and heauenly bodies are vſed of God to gouerne and order things here below, as it is in the 19. Pſalme. Nothing is hid from the heate of the ſunne. And by the prophet Hoſea, the Lord ſpeaketh thus, I will heare the heauens; the heauens ſhall heare the earth, the earth ſhall heare the corne, the corne ſhall heare Iſrael. But this inſtrument is onely a generall inſtrument, and hath his worke in ordinarie matters of nature. Beſides theſe meanes, there be many other by which God ruleth the world. In the beginning he ſet man ouer the whole world, that he might haue rule ouer fiſhes, foules, beaſts, and all things elſe. He appointed husbands to gouerne their wiues, he ſet the firſt born before their bretheren, as Cain before Abel: Princeſſe and Tirants ouer Cities, Kingdomes, common wealthes, and therefore by reaſon of their dignitie calleth them Gods. There be alſo gouernours of families ouer their families, fathers ouer their children, maſters ouer their ſeruants. Yet God hath a more neare care in preſeruing and gouerning his choſen, as appeareth in the 43. chap. of Eſay, Thus ſaith the Lord God that created thee, O Iacob: and he that formed thee O Iſrael: Feare not, for I haue redeemed thee, I haue called thee by thy name, thou art mine: when thou paſſeſt through the waters, I will be with thee, and through the floude, that they doe not ouerflowe thee. When thou walkeſt through the very fire, thou ſhalt not be burnt, neither ſhall the flame kindle vpon thee, for I am the Lord thy God, the holy one of Iſrael, thy ſauiour. This is alſo manifeſt by that Sympathie which is in the Lord, when his children are afflicted, as appeareth by the 11. of Zacharie: He which toucheth you, toucheth the apple of mine eie. And in the 9. of the Act. Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? that is, my elect. Wherfore there be alſo ſpeciall meanes by which he more carefully gouerneth the elect: As be Angels, whom Paul to the Hebrewes calleth miniſtring ſpirits: it is certaine they defend euery one of the elect particularly. Hitherto may be referred the preaching of the word of God, the miniſtring of the ſacraments. Beſides this, God vſeth the deuils, and wicked men and Tyrants to exerciſe the faith of his elect, and to confirme them in patience: whereby they are called the ſeruants of the Lord, axes, hammers, ſawes, and ſwords in the land of God: as Pharaoh, and Nabuchadnezzar, and Senacherib. Moreouer, the meanes by which he worketh vpon the wicked are alſo many,

As
1 Angels good and euill. Exod.14.
2 Friends and familiars. Ierem. 13. 14. Amos 7.1.
3 Wild beaſts. Ierem.8.17.
4 Heauen aboue. Deut.11.17.
5 Diſeaſes, plague. Exod.15.16.
6 Famine. Hoſ.9.3.
7 Fire. Hoſ.8.14.
8 Furie. Hoſ.7.9.
9 Hardnes of heart. Rom.1.28.
10 Captiuitie. Ierem.15.2.

All theſe meanes Gods prouidence vſeth, firſt, that he might ſhewe his goodnes towards vs: ſecondly, that he might be knowne to be the Lord ouer all: thirdly, that we might be thankfull, becauſe he not onely himſelfe gouerneth vs, but alſo maketh his creatures to ſerue our turnes. Marrie this muſt be noted (as I ſaid before) that in all theſe ſecondarie cauſes, beſide their naturall worke, which God hath giuen them, there is alſo the ſpeciall worke of God his ſpeciall hand ſhowed. God worketh not by ſecond cauſes as Magiſtrates gouerne their common wealths by their inferiour officers. For they ſo gouerne by them, that they do nothing or very little themſelues, & peraduenture neuer know what is done. God gouerneth not the world ſo, but in euery particular worke, he hath his particular ſtroke. That the thunder burneth, moueth, hurteth; it is the generall prouidence of God: but that it burneth, or hurteth this or that man, on this or that part, in this or that manner, it is the ſpeciall prouidence of the ſame God. The Lord hath ſhowed his ſpeciall prouidence in one excellēt exāple. If the hatchet (ſaith God) fall forth of the hand of him which loppeth the tree, and kill a man in the way, I the Lord haue killed him. God alſo gouerneth the world immediately, and his prouidence worketh without meanes, & many things he bringeth to paſſe againſt all meanes, which is manifeſt by that of Matthew: Man liueth not by bread onely, but by euery word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God. For example without meanes. The ſpirit of God did mooue vpon the waters, and couer them in the creation immediately. The firſt garment which was made, was of leather, and God alone without meanes made it. Noah in the Arke was preſerued by God alone an whole yeare, againſt the force of the waters. Without meanes did he keepe the ſhooes and garments of the Iſraelites whole fortie yeares. He alone iuſtifieth, ſanctifieth, & conuerteth a ſinner. Againſt the courſe of nature he made the ſea to diuide it ſelfe, the ſunne to goe backward, the fire not to burne the three children, the Lyons not to deuoure Daniel. The cauſes of this, are theſe: 1. That we may know when God works by cauſes, he doth it by no neceſſitie, but freely. 2. that we might know when God vſeth means, that then he is not idle, but worketh all in all. 3. That if meanes want, nay if meanes be againſt vs, yet we ſhould not deſpaire of Gods prouidence. Now to come to our Prognoſticatours, and Moone-prophets, how ſhall they be able to knowe what will come to paſſe hereafter? for firſt, the heauens beeing onely one particular inſtrument of Gods prouidence, among many, they cannot certainely and truly ſay, this thing or that thing proceedeth from the heauens: ſecondly, they cannot determine whether God in extraordinarie matters, as Plague, Famine, Barrenneſſe, Diſtempered weather, Earthquakes, Warres, &c. doth worke immediately, or with meanes: If with meanes, they cannot determine, whither the Heauens, or Angels, or men, or any other things be the meanes of his prouidence. Thirdly, if they were able to know what the Heauen worketh naturally, yet they were neuer the better: for God beſide the power of the heauens, hath in all things his particular working prouidence, altering, and framing, and bending as waxe his inſtruments to his good will. Truly by this conſideration, a Chriſtian man will be brought to leaue off to ſeeke what euent the workes of God ſhall haue before they come to paſſe. If a man ſhall come into a Ioyners ſhoppe, can he by knowing the vſe of all his tooles, tell what things he hath made in his ſhoppe? No. What is the cauſe of that? He vſeth not onely his tooles in his worke, but thereunto adioyneth his owne hand, by which he handleth and turneth the toole to his owne pleaſure, and ſo maketh diuers kinde of workes with the ſame inſtruments. The ſame may be ſaid of our Prognoſticatours, which I would to God they would ſomewhat conſider.

19649a

The third Reaſon, the want of experience.

IF our Prognoſticators haue any meanes to foretell things to come, they haue thoſe meanes either without experience, or with experience: If they haue them without experience, then muſt thou accompt all which they doe to be fooliſh dreames and deceit. For all kinde of humane learning which is profitable, and hath vſe in the life of man, is taken from often obſeruations, and experience. If it be ſaid that they haue their directions in Prognoſticating from experience, and that of all times, I will conuince them thus. True experience of the cauſes of things, is an often obſeruing of the effects of the ſame cauſes, with this ground that they can proceede from no other thing. The Phyſician ſaith Rheubarb doth purge choler. Well: how knoweth he this? he hath often tried this, and that in old men, young men, children: and hath found, that in the bodies of all men, the cauſe of purging this humour, could be aſcribed to nothing elſe. Wherefore he may peremptorily conclude, Rheubarb purgeth choler. Our Prognoſticatours, in the heauens, can haue no ſuch experience. For they can not obſerue often the ſame poſition of ſtarres in the heauē. The order and cauſe of the fixed ſtarres and Planets, which we finde in the heauens this day, the next day will be chaunged, and neuer the like againe. They will ſay indeed although the ſame poſition of the whole heauen neuer happen, yet the ſame coniunctions of notable ſtarres, the ſame riſings, and ſettings and the ſame conſtellations of the chiefeſt ſtarres are marked often. I ſay againe, that when theſe Eclipſes and great coniunctions happen, the reſt of the ſtarrs being otherwiſe affected then they were before, and hauing new poſitions, may either encreaſe and diminiſh their effects, or elſe hinder them, and quite take them away. As we ſee when the Sun caſting his beames into a chamber, the light of candles, and torches, and fires do make it ſhine dimme, yet theſe beeing abſent, it will ſhine bright. Againe, they are not able to ſay that

A conſtellations, which they haue marked, are cauſes of thoſe effects which follow, as warres, diſeaſes, diſtempered weather, earthquakes, famine, &c. For in thoſe things which happen together, the one is not the cauſe of the other. When Nero played vpon his harpe, Rome was on fire: yet Neroes playing on the harpe was no cauſe of the burning of Rome. Alſo theſe effects may haue other cauſes in the heauen, then thoſe which they marke, and they may come immediately from God, they may come onely from the will of man. Wherefore ſeeing that they cannot aſſure themſelues that thoſe Eclipſes, and coniunctions are the works of ſuch effects vpon earth, and they cannot haue often B obſeruations of the courſe of heauen, their rules of Predictions are fained and ſuppoſed, and not built vpon true experience. Let a man which knoweth not one hearb, take al kinds of hearbs, and put them into a great veſſell, yet ſo, that there be more of ſome hearbs, and leſſe of other ſome: let him beate them altogether, and make a compound vertue of all their vertues: Can he now tell the nature and operation of euery particular hearb? Can he diuide and ſeuer by any helpe the vertue of one hearb from another? No indeed. The ſame thing may be ſaid of the ſtarres of heauen: all their lights, and all their influences (as they terme it,) are in the lower bodies: more plainely, euery earthly bodie hath in it all the ſecret powers, and working of euery C particular ſtarre: ſo that they make (as it were) a compound operation riſing of all, or of the moſt of their vertues ioyned together; for the Aſtrologers hold, that although the light may be hindred by the thicknes of the bodie, yet the heauenly influence pearceth through all. Therfore they are not able to ſeuer, and learne the nature of theſe ſtarres, except they can ſtop the influence of what ſtarres they liſt, & bring them into what compaſſe they will. Yet thus much I wil graunt them, that they may haue a little knowledge of the vertue of the Sunne and Moone, and ſome other ſtarres: as we ſee thoſe hearbs in the former compoſition, whoſe vertues be the chiefeſt, though not fully, yet ſomewhat doe repreſent their nature, and ſhew themD ſelues aboue the reſt. But what is this to the purpoſe? If I confeſſe the operations of the Sun and Moone: If I ſhall graunt that Saturne is in nature cold and dry, Iupiter warme and moiſt, Mars hot and dry, Venus cold and moiſt, Mercurie in nature mixt, the notable fixed ſtarres in the Zodiacke to be of the nature of Planets, & to haue manifeſt operations, as the riſing of the dogge, to make heat and tempeſtuous ſeas, the riſing of Arcturus, to make raine and ſhowers, Pleiades to be of the nature of Mars and the Moone, &c. what will all this ſuffice to make a Prognoſtication? for ſeeing all ſtarres haue their owne powers, and peraduenture alſo the leaſt ſtarres which we make no accompt of, haue great effects amongſt vs (as one graine of muske in the Apothecaries ſhoppe maketh a greater ſmel then all other powders be they neuer ſo many) nothing will the knowledge of the operation of ſome Starres preuaile, the reſt beeing not knowne and neuer regarded. They will ſay they haue ſome experience, but yet vnperfect; I haue ſhewed how they haue no true experience at all: and their vnperfect experience maketh them perfect lyers.

The fourth Reaſon, the ignorance of cauſes.

A Man which will iudge rightly of any matter by the cauſes, muſt not onely conſider the common cauſes, but he muſt alſo with them conferre the particular cauſes of all things which happen amongſt vs, ſo he ſhall iudge aright. In heauen the ſtarres be common cauſes of all things amongſt vs, becauſe they ſhewe their vertue on euery matter, one way or other. The ſame things haue their peculiar efficients, and matters, and formes, by which, and not by the heauens, they are made that, whatſoeuer they are. Theſe proper cauſes becauſe their natures be vnknowne vnto vs, I cannot ſee how the Prognoſticatour is able to foretell any thing to come, in good and conuenient manner, laying aſide all deceiuing and forging of vntruths. To make this more plaine, I will vſe this ſimilitude. Suppoſe an hen to ſit vpon many egges, ſome of her owne, ſome of diuers other foules: ſhe imparteth her heate equally vnto them: at the length ſhe hatcheth, and ſome of her chickens are cockes, ſome hennes, ſome crowes, ſome partriches, ſome doues, ſome blacke, ſome white, ſome like and liue, ſome die, ſome are killed of the kite, ſome are roſted. No man, I thinke, will profeſſe ſo much skill, as to ſay that he by the conſidering of the henne and her heate, which is a common cauſe of the chickens, and all that befalleth them, is able to tell, why of this egge came a partrich, of that a crowe, why this egge had no chicken, why that had a dead chicken, &c. except he doe therewithall adioyne the conſideration of the particular effects. ×ficients The heauen is as it were an hen foſtring vnder her wings all earthly things, imparting his vertue and heate vnto all. Can our Prognoſticatour by the erecting of figures, by conſidering the diſpoſition of euery Planet in their houſes, and the ſignifications of euery thing, iudge, why this man is wealthie, that man a begger: why this noble man dieth this yeare, none the next yeare: why it is naught to trauell this way, good to trauell that way: why theſe diſeaſes abound, and not other: why corne ſhall be deare this quarter, not the next: why this weeke is faire and temperate, that weeke, that moneth vnſeaſonable and tempeſtuous. Truely, it is a thing flat impoſſible. They muſt hereunto adioyne the particular nature of the countrie, the particular cauſes both in mens mindes and bodies, as, education, place, honeſtie, birth, blood, ſickeneſſe, health, ſtrength, weakeneſſe, meate, drinke, libertie of minde, learning, &c. and all other ſpeciall circumſtances: which they neuer doe as we may ſee in their Prognoſtications: and if they would doe it, yet they could not. Wherefore I muſt needes ſay this, that their follie is great in publiſhing their Prognoſtications: and thou alſo greatly to be blamed which by thy greedie deſire giueſt them great occaſion to be ſo vnprofitably occupied.

To ſhewe more briefly and plainely of their vnabilitie in Prognoſticating, although I graunt the ſtarres haue great force, yet I ſay they cannot iudge of things to come. And there be ſixe impediments.

The firſt impediment is imbecilitie of wit: for as mans eye from the earth beholding the heauens and the ſtarres, perceiueth them not in their iuſt quantitie, but as very ſmall lights: for indeede the Sunne is an hundred and threeſcore and ſixe times bigger then the earth, Saturne 90. times, Iupiter 95. Mars one and a halfe, the Moone is the 39. part of the earth: the biggeſt fixed ſtarres containe the earth 107. times, the ſtarres of the ſecond magnitude 90. the third 70. times, the fourth magnitude 54. times. the fift magnitude 35. times, the ſixt magnitude 18. times. So the weakeneſſe of mans vnderſtanding is not able to conceiue & learne the things which the heauens doe bring to paſſe on earth.

The ſecond impediment, the infinite number of ſtarres, which no doubt all haue great power, although we doe not finde it. For the Prognoſticator only marketh 1028. ſtarres, and of theſe he taketh onely heed vnto a very fewe. Which is as though a man ſhould iudge the power of an armie by the power of one or two ſouldiours and Captaines, not by the power of the whole company.

The third impediment, is the infinite varieties of the vertues of ſtarres, and the parts of heauen, which Aſtrologers graunt to be: yet they doe not know them. As touching the nature of the fixed ſtarres, they knowe nothing but by the colour, which is red, leadie, white, pale, &c. reſembling ſome planet. And becauſe they knowe not the vertue of all ſtarres and euery part of heauen, they are not able to iudge any thing but to their owne ſhame, no more then the Phiſitian is able to knowe the nature of a compound medicine without the knowing of euery ſimple.

The fourth impediment, the manifolde and daily change of the motions, poſitions, and configurations of the ſtarres: for if a man could tell both the number and nature of ſtarres, yet the varietie of poſitions breedeth trouble and hindereth right iudgement: becauſe by this meanes the powers of ſtarres are increaſed, diminiſhed, and changed. And theſe rules which ſerued for auncient times to foretell things, will not ſerue vs, becauſe all the fixed ſtarres haue changed their places, and the reſt are daily changed.

The fift impediment, the infinite varietie of inferiour things, which doe hinder, peruert, change, receiue, or not receiue the vertue and predictions of ſtarres, as the nature of the ſoile, the diſpoſition naturall of aire, orders, and conſtitutions of the common wealth, occaſions, education, inſtitution, kindes of meate and drinke, &c.

The ſixt impediment, the will of man, which freely in common matters chuſeth this and refuſeth that. There are many things which are cauſed without any worke of ſtarres, onely by the will of man, and ſtudie, as we may ſee in Socrates, Demoſthenes, and other, &c.

Thus much ſhall ſuffice to ſhew that they cannot Prognoſticate of things enſuing: now follow their manifold vntruthes, and moſt falſe rules. In diſcloſing them I will keepe the ſame order they vſe in their Almanackes.

In the firſt or ſecond leafe of their bookes thou ſhalt finde a picture of mans bodie with the 12. ſignes round about it, they call it the Anatomie of mans bodie, ſhewing how the 12. ſignes haue gouernment of the ſame: for the Moone or any other ſignificatour of any thing being in the ſigne, they ſay, that it is daungerous to boxe, to ſeare that part, or to let blood in it, which is ſubiect to the dominion of that ſigne. Al theſe are nothing but vaine Fables, as I will manifeſtly prooue.

1. Whereas they call it an Anatomie, me thinketh, it is a butcherly Anatomie: nay that of the butchers is farre better, for they ioyne head and appurtenance together: theſe men being ſparing, giue Aries the head, Leo and Cancer the heart and lungs. As for the liuer, I know not which ſigne hath it, peraduenture in olde time men had no liuers. At the Anatomie of a carrion, crowes deale friendly, for euery one hath ſomewhat: but in the diuiſion of mans bodie, ſignes play foule play, for Capricorne hath got nothing but a paire of knees. It is like that the ſignes ſcrambling for their portions Capricorne being ſlow got nothing, hereupon compaſſion beeing had, there was a gathering made, & Sagittarius gaue the lower part of the thigh, Aquarius the higher part of the legge, which both together make the knee. But to deliuer thee out of all doubt, mark theſe reaſons which follow. 1. The ſignes cannot haue any ſuch dominiō ouer mans bodie: I make it manifeſt thus. There is no corporall heauen indeed aboue the firmament, yet becauſe the firmament or 8. Sphere hath many motions, to giue reaſons of thoſe motions, the Aſtronomers haue faigned two heauens aboue the firmament, the Chriſtaline heauen, & the firſt moouable or 01. Sphere, which they deuide into 12. parts, which parts they cal ſignes. Now I pray you tel me, is it poſſible to conceiue that an imagined part of any imagined heauē void of all ſtars, ſhal either haue in it ſelfe, or giue vnto other Starres power to gouerne the parts of mans bodie? More reaſonable was that man, who beeing asked what was the cauſe of the ſands in Sandwich hauen,

The twelue ſignes faigned.

A he anſwered the building vp of Tenterton Steeple. Secondly, the gouernment of the ſignes in the bodie is not taken from experience in nature, but fained long agoe by ſome drowſie pate, and now becauſe it hath a cloke of antiquitie, it is allowed. More naturall was this kinde of way, that hote ſignes ſhould gouerne hote parts, cold ſignes colde parts, earthly ſignes earthly parts. So Aries ſhould gouerne the heart and the vitall blood, not the head, and the reſt of the ſignes thoſe parts which are of their nature and diſpoſition. Thirdly great experience of many men daily confuteth this rule. For many learned Phyſitians, and expert Chirurgians haue by infinite examples found, that if a man be let blood in the ſigne, or lanched, or boxed, or ſeared, no harme enſueth, nay they haue giuen teſtimonie that the patients haue found euen then great comfort. Wherfore let not theſe things trouble thy minde any more, but let thē be numbred euen amongſt vaine and vnprofitable fables.

2. Next after followeth Elections of dayes and houres, neceſſarie for all matters, as followeth:

Speciall daies to
- Prepare humours.
- Let blood.
- Purge with
  - Vomite.
  - Electuaries.
  - Potions.
  - Pilles.
- Cut haire.
- Comfort the vertue
  - Attractiue.
  - Digeſtiue.
  - Retentiue.
  - Expulſiue.
- Bathe.
- Put children to ſchoole.
- Trauell.
- Marrie.
- Hunt, hauke, fiſh.
- Plant.
- Geld cattell.
- Lay foundations.

Here, I pray thee, marke their naughtie dealings how they abuſe thy ignoraunce, to make themſelues ſkilfull and to doe more then they can doe. For if the iudgements of the beſt Aſtrologers may be taken, certainly moſt of theſe elections cannot be preſcribed to thee, vnleſſe they know beforehand the figure of thy Natiuitie. For all election, which concerne thy perſon, muſt be moderated (to ſpeake as plainely as their toies will ſuffer mee) by the direction of the roote of thy Natiuitie, and by the monthly and diurnall Progreſſions of thy preſent Reuolution. If any of theſe pretend ſome euill, the particular Election may be a meanes to increaſe and to bring it to paſſe. For example, ſuppoſe, thou beeing a man toward marriage, in the Almanacke thou findeſt a good day noted by the Prognoſticatour to marry in: thou takeſt thy opportunitie: after a while thou art wearie of thy life: the firſt daie of thy marriage was the laſt day of thy ioye. What is the cauſe of this? All the Planets which were ſignifiers of thy marriage in thy natiuitie, were then euilly affected, and peraduenture alſo, when thou waſt firſt borne, they receiued ſome diſgrace. So then thou maieſt lay all blame, partly vpon thy ſelfe for beleeuing, and partly vpon the Prognoſticator, who deceiued thee. But to come vnto particulars, the elections of daies to purge the bodie with any kind of purgation, and to comfort the ſame, are moſt ridiculous. Why doe they not alſo preſcribe houres of eating meate? Why doe they not appoint the kinds of meates and drinks, which we muſt eate and vſe daily? If thou ſee that God doth daily bleſſe the enterpriſes of thoſe Phyſitians, which neuer regard theſe elections in miniſtring to their patients: neuer eſteeme of them, let them goe as lies to B the Deuill from whence they came. Concerning the elections of daies to ſowe, to ſet, to plant, to lop, they are alſo fooliſh: the generall obſeruation of the ſeaſon of the yeare, in which theſe things are to be done is ſufficient. And S. Auguſtine in his booke de ciuitate Dei, laugheth at the follie of them, which chooſe particular daies to doe their husbandrie, as though ſome certaine poſitions of ſtarres had ſome ſpeciall influence to the things which are ſowne then. His reaſon is, becauſe many grains of corne beeing caſt into the ground together, and ripening all at one time: yet ſome of them are blaſted, ſome are eaten of birds, ſome are troden downe vnder foote, ſome ſtand and are neuer touched. The reſt of the elections, & eſpecially that of laying foundations is moſt C abſurd. They ſay that if an houſe, a citie, a town haue his foundation when the ſtarres be well affected, the inhabitants ſhall haue proſperous and quiet liuing: if when the ſtarres be euill diſpoſed, then trouble and diſquietnes. They haue no experience of this but that onely which is moſt falſe, for they know not the foundations of cities and towns, neither the poſitions of the ſtarres, when they were built. Let Rome and Venice be examples, becauſe theſe are moſt alledged of Aſtrologers, the time in which they were built is vncertaine, and the Planets are falſly ſet in the figure of the foūdation of Rome, becauſe Mercurie is contrarie to the ſunne, a thing flat impoſſible. Againe the folly of this is D thus manifeſt, that an houſe, or Citie, or common wealth may remaine, the people beeing gone, as it is in the time of plague, and baniſhment, and conqueſts of princes: And the inhabitants alſo may be ſafe and remaine, the building quite ranſumed, and beaten downe, as we may ſee in Carthage, the people and common wealth remained, the Citie quite defaced. That al elections are vnlawful, S. Auſtin writing vnto Ianuarius, prooueth it forth of the 4. to the Galatians by theſe words: Ye obſerue moneths and times and yeares. Therefore (ſaith he) let vs not obſerue dayes, and yeares, and moneths, and times, leaſt we heare this of the Apoſtle: I am afraid leaſt I haue taken labour in vaine with you: for he rebuketh them which ſay, I will not goe, becauſe the Moone is thus or thus mooued, or I will take my iourney that I may haue good ſucceſſe, becauſe there is ſuch a poſition of ſtarrs: I wil not do my buſineſſe this moneth, becauſe ſuch a ſtarre gouerneth this moneth: or I will do my buſineſſe this moneth becauſe ſuch a ſtarre ruleth. How then ſhall a man doe, not to breake the word of God? Art thou a man that deſireſt to leade a chriſtian life? Then take the example of Paul, as a patterne to gouerne all the actions of thy life: Without ceaſing (ſaith he) I make mention of you in my prayers: beſeeching that by ſome meanes, one time or other I might haue proſperous iourney by the will of God to come vnto you. So thou if thou haſt any buſineſſe in hand, any iourney to take, any thing to buy or ſell, or any other matter: neuer regard the conſtellations of Heauen, commit thy ſelfe to the onely prouidence of God, in whome thou haſt thy life and motion, and beeing, who directeth all thy ſteppes: pray vnto him priuately with thy ſelf to bleſſe thee and al thy actions, that they may tende to his glorie, thy welfare: thou ſhalt finde that all thy enterpriſes will haue better ſucceſſe, then if the whole hoaſt of heauen, & all the Prognoſticatours of England, had promiſed neuer ſo much proſperitie. Now let vs ſhew their abſurd folly in prognoſticating of the ſtate of the yeare: of which their predictions are either generall for the whole yeare, or ſpeciall for euery day. In their generall predictions are conſidered either the gounds of them, or the matters which they foretel. Their groũds are eſpecially two. 1. The figure of the reuolution of the yeare, erected when the ſunne entreth into the firſt minute of Aries. 2. The figure celeſtial for the time of the Eclipſe of the ſunne and moone: for vpon theſe twaine, ſay they, dependeth the whole ſtate of the yeare. In their celeſtiall figures they conſider the erecting of them, and the finding of the Lord of the figure. The erecting of the figure, containeth very many abſurdities.

Rom. 1. 10.

1. They follow that way, which Regiomontanus did inuent, neuer as yet prooued by anie experience, and flatly differing from thoſe waies which of auncient Aſtrologers were vſed: and were inuented by Gazulus and Campanus. Nay oftentimes it maketh the Planet or fixed ſtarre to ſignifie a flat contrary thing to that which theſe two other doe.

2. The caſting of the heauens into twelue diſtinct kind of matters is ridiculous, becauſe it beeing imagined, and voide of ſtarres, can haue no force. Yet (ſome will ſay) other ſtarres beeing in thoſe places may haue & ſignifie ſuch or ſuch effects. I anſwer that if ſtarres of diuers natures comming to ſuch an houſe alwaies ſignifying ſom one kind of thing, then the houſe muſt of neceſſitie giue ſome force vnto the Planet: and ſo it ſhal haue not only an augmenting, but alſo an effectuall working power, which Aſtrologers denie, and no reaſon can prooue.

3. They make the twelfth and eleuenth houſes beeing higher aboue the horizon then the firſt, to be of leſſe force then it: and the fourth houſe to be of greater power then any aboue the Horizon not Cardinall: and the ende of the ninth to be more in power then the beginning of the eleuenth houſe: all which are againſt reaſon, becauſe a Planet the more perpendicular his beames are, the more is his force. They anſwer, although the force of the light be greater, yet the ſecret influence is leſſe, and the firſt houſe hath more forcible influence thē the twelfth or eleuenth. If the influence be ſecret how can they know it? againe they can by no good experience ſhow that thoſe houſes haue more influence then the reſt; this influence maketh againſt them. I ſay they cannot prognoſticate becauſe they know not one ſtars vertue. For whereas they ſay, that the ſunne, and moone and planets haue moſt force. I anſwer, that it is by reaſon of their light, not their influence, which is ſmall, and there is farre greater in the ſmalleſt fixed ſtarres. So that the fixed ſtarres although they haue no light, or very ſmall light perceiued, yet they haue moſt influence. And ſo theſe men muſt needes dreame becauſe they iudge by wrong cauſes. Well, their figure beeing framed and diſtinguiſhed with faire characters, then goe they on to finde the Lord of the figure, that is, that Planet which hath moſt dignities in the figure.

2 Exaltation.
3 Triplicitie.
4 Termes.
5 Starres.
6 Houſes.
7 Freeneſſe from Combuſtion.
8 Directions.
9 Velocitie of courſe.
10 Sazimi.
11 Some aſpects of other Planets.

Theſe toyes be ſo fooliſh that a reaſonable man would not vouchſafe to refute them: yet a word or twain. If the houſes of the Planets ſhal be battered and puld downe, all the reſt of their worſhip and dignitie will lie in the duſt. Aries and Scorpius are appointed the houſes of Mars; Taurus and Libra, the houſes of Venus; Gemini and Virgo, the houſes of Mercury: Cancer the houſe of the Moone; Leo the houſe of the Sunne; Sagittarius and Piſces the houſes of Iupiter; Aquarius, and Capricornus the houſes of Saturne. What reaſon doe they giue of this? Leo and Cancer, ſay they, are the houſes of the Sunne and Moone, becauſe they reſemble the nature of theſe Planets, and becauſe they come moſt neare our heads: ſuch reaſon they giue of the reſt. What feeble grounds are theſe? As in the North part of the world Cancer and Leo reſemble the nature of the Sunne: ſo in the South part, in the contrarie climates, Capricornus, and Aquarius doe reſemble their natures.

Alſo in euery countrie ſome diuers ſignes be either verticall,or elſe come neare the toppe of the countrie,and ſo all ſignes ſhal be the houſes of the Sunne and Moone. Now then,the ſunne beeing diſplaced, I cannot finde how the reſt of the Planets can keep their hold. To go further, the exaltations of Planets in like manner are verie dreames. They ſuppoſe Exaltations be thoſe degrees in which the Planets were in the beginning of the world. But why ſhould thoſe places giue more force then any other? And if they could giue more force, yet they haue falſly aſſigned them. For the Sunne was not in Aries, when it was created of God, but was placed in Libra, which I prooue by this reaſon. God created man and beaſt in perfect age, giuing vnto them all kindes of fruites beeing then ripe, ſo that in the beginning was the time of the yeare, which we call harueſt. Now becauſe God neuer afterward changed the ſeaſons, and we finde that in the time of ripeneſſe the Sunne is alwaies in Libra, we muſt needes alſo ſaie that his place in the creation was in Libra. In the 23. of Exodus God commanded that the feaſt of tabernacles ſhould be celebrated in the ende of the yeare,when the Iſraelites had gathered their fruits out of the fields. Wherefore it muſt needs be that harueſt was in the beginning of the yeare(the beginning and ending beeing both together) and ſo by compting backwards we ſhall finde that the Sunne was in Libra in the beginning of the world. To this agreeth Ioſephus de antiquit. Lib. 1. cap. 3. Rabbi Eleazar vpon Geneſ. and Rabbi Abraham, Aben Ezra vpon the 7. of Daniel.

The reſt of the dignities of the planets conſiſt of Principles more weake then water. Firſt what is more vnreaſonable to a reaſonable man then this, that ſwift motion ſhould giue vnto a planet two dignities, and ſlow motion two dibilities:it ſeemeth to be plaine contrarie. For a ſwift courſe hindereth the force of the Planet, a ſlow courſe helpeth the ſame:and the ſtations of any Planet make an effectuall and ſenſible operation. A cole of fire in a mans hand if it be ſhaken about very much,it heateth very little, if it be ſhaken more ſlowly, it heateth more: but if it lie ſtill, it burneth violently. Beſide this, alſo experience confirmeth my aſſertion. In the yeare of our Lord 1513. the Sunne entering into Piſces, was almoſt in trine aſpect with Saturne ſtationarie, a little while after, there was a great froſt and ſnowe continuing many dayes: and when Saturne began againe to be direct, the weather was indifferent warme. In the yeare 1518. in Aprill Iupiter almoſt in ſecunda ſtatione beholding Saturne in ſtatione prima cauſed a great heate,conſidering the time of the yeare. In the yeare 1520. Saturne (as I ſaid before) being ſtationarie made ſuch a cold, that ſpoiled the Grapes and made Wine deare. Vpon theſe examples and many other I may conclude, that the worke and influence of Planets, is moſt felt when they are ſtationarie: A becauſe their vertue is fixed(as it were) in one place by reaſon of the ſlow motion.

Combuſtion is in like ſort a fained thing: What reaſon can Aſtrologers giue,why it ſhould giue vnto a ſtarre fiue debilities? They talk how that experience teacheth them, that Planets being vnder the beames of the Sunne, doe looſe a great, nay (ſome ſay) all their force. It is a manifeſt vntruth. For, Mercurie being of the nature of that Planet with which he is conioyned, if he go from coniunction with Saturne vnto the Sunne, he getteth no debilities thereby, but rather loſing the feeble and vnfortunate Nature of Saturne, receiueth a more ſtrong and fortunate nature of the Sunne. If any man ſay againſt B me that Mercurie combuſt hath no force, he deceiueth himſelfe. For if he be not hindered, he naturally will cauſe windes,beeing combuſt, he not onely engendereth windes, but cauſeth tempeſtuous windes and foule weather. In Aries, Taurus, Cancer, he maketh tempeſts, in Virgo, and Scorpius, raging Seas, in Sagittarius, Capricornus, Aquarius, and Piſces, raine and ſnow. Againe when many dayes together there hath beene faire weather, the Sunne if it come to be in coniunction or any other aſpect with Saturne,maketh very foule weather, & therfore the aſpects of the Sun & Iupiter are called apertiones portarum pro pluuia. This could not come to paſſe if Saturne had his force diminiſhed by C the beams of the Sun. A planet alſo being in Sazimi, that is,being within 16. minuts of the ſuns middle, hath thereby 5. dignities,which cannot well be, if that combuſtion giue 5. debilities. For the Planet is in the midle of his combuſtion, and the Sunne caſteth his beames and force verie vehemently vpon it. Theſe things ſhewe how abſurd a dreame combuſtion is: yet if it were a good and ſound principle of Aſtrologie, and gaue vnto euery planet fiue debilities, yet it could not be prooued, that libertie from combuſtion ſhould giue fiue dignities, beeing onely a meere abſence and priuation of the other. Magnes at the preſence of the Adamant, is hindred from drawing Iron: yet if the Adamant be away, the attractiue vertue of the magnes is not encreaſed. Here I might with eaſe D confute the triplicities of Planets, directions, aſpects, applications, preuentions, refrenations, with many ſuch like, but my intent at this time is onely to ſhew thee ſome vntruthes of our Prognoſticatours.

Thus much of the grounds of their predictions, now followe the matters, of which they Prognoſticate, and they are very many: nay, there is no matter almoſt,of which they wil not giue their verdite: but how they doe this I will briefly make it manifeſt vnto thee, that their lyes and their vnchriſtian dealing may be more loathed of thee.

1. They foretell of Comets, Earthquakes, Famines,and plagues,&c,but they doe it as the blind man which caſteth his ſtaffe he knoweth not where. No man as yet euer knewe the true cauſes of theſe. As for Comets and blazing ſtarres, they doe not riſe of the influence of any ſtarres, neither are they any earthly things, but are in heauen, moſt commonly farre aboue the Moone, as by Geometricall, and Aſtronomicall demonſtrations may be prooued: How this commeth to paſſe the Lord onely knoweth. And ſurely they do thee great iniurie, that when as no doubt, God doth lighten them, and ſend the reſt extraordinarily, as threatning tokens of his ſore diſpleaſure, yet they will rocke thee aſleepe in the cradle of ſecuritie, by telling that ſuch tokens came from the ordinarie courſe of the heauens.

2. They foretell all things which happen in ciuill affaires amongſt men, as are theſe which follow.

As
Loue and hatred of kinsfolke.
Mariages.
Encreaſe of farmes and liuings.
Iniuries and quarrels.
Rayſing of rents.
Exacting of ſubſidies by officers.
Impriſonments.
Hard intreating of Eccleſiaſticall perſons.
Buying, ſelling, vndermining.
Solemne progreſſes.
Fauour of noble men.
Men ſhall fall, bodie, and goods, into the Princes handes.
Marchandiſe vnprofitable, &c.

Theſe and ſuch like proceede onely from the will of man: the conſtellations of ſtarres are neither ſignes nor cauſes of them. Some will ſay, Non imponere neceſſitatem, ſed inclinare Stellas, that is, That ſtarres doe not conſtraine, but onely incline the mindes of men: a moſt wicked ſaying, although moſt commonly ſpoken of and defended. For the inclining of the will of man is onely the worke of God, as the holy Scriptures doe teach vs. The heart of man
Prov.1.6.9. (ſaith Salomon) purpoſeth his wayes, but the Ier.10.23. Lord directeth his ſteps. O Lord (ſayth Ieremie the Prophet) that the way of man, is not in himſelfe, neither is it in man to walke and direct his ſteppes. He ſpeakeh this becauſe that Nebuchadnezzar purpoſed to haue made warre againſt the Moabites and Ammonites, but hearing of Zedekias rebellion, he turned his power to goe againſt Ieruſalem, therefore the Prophet ſaith, that whereas he had otherwiſe purpoſed, yet this was the Lords inclination and direction.
Proa.21.1. Againe in the Prouerbs we reade this: That the heart of the king is in the hands of the Lord, as the riuers of water, he directeth it whether he wil. It wil be ſaid, that although God properly and immediately inclineth the will of man: yet alſo ſome ſmall inclination muſt be giuen vnto the Starres, and that immediately. For

Say ſome,
Conſtellations worke vpon the Elements by the foure firſt qualities.
Elements worke vpon, and alter the compound bodies and humors.
Compounde bodies by their qualities change the ſenſes.
The ſenſes being altered, the vnderſtanding is altered.
The vnderſtanding laſtly altereth and inclineth the will of man.
Therefore Conſtellations incline the will.

This reaſon is not much vnlike that which the drunken man maketh, ſeruing as well for the defence of his vice, as the former for approouing of truth in diuination.

He which drinketh well, ſleepeth well:
He which ſleepeth well thinketh no harme:
He which thinketh no harme, is a good man:
Therefore he which drinketh well, is a good man.

The deceits and vntruthes which be in their reaſons, are very many.

1. The ſtarres worke vpon mens bodies, yet ſo that the nature of the Countrie and ſoyle, the meats and drinkes haue moſt comonly greater force. Why are the bodies of Gentlemen of England and poore labouring men of diuers diſpoſitions? are they not both in one countrie? doe not the ſtarres ſhewe their force in them alike? yes truely, but the kind of life and diet preuaileth. In the ſame region, why are they, which dwell vpon hills, of other temperatures then they, which dwell vpon plaine and champion ground? why? doe not the ſame influences of Starres make them of like natures? is it not becauſe the nature of the ſoyle preuaileth? So then, when as there be many cauſes effectuall, and differing in altring mens bodies, to build an argument vpon one cauſe is moſt vnreaſonable.

2. The ſtarres worke vpon the Elements, earth, water, ayre, by making heate, cold, moiſture, drineſſe. The Elemenes, how worke they on mens bodies? They will alſo ſay by making heate, cold, moyſture, drineſſe: which is moſt vntrue: for the hotter, and drier the elements be, the colder and moyſter by nature are mens bodies. According to that ſaying of Empedocles, Nature placed a hotte bodie in a cold countrie, and a cold bodie in a hot countrie.

3. The Philoſophers ſay that all cauſes are either per ſe or per accidens. Now the heauens beeing cauſes of the alteration of the ſenſes per accidens, they muſt not be cauſes of the inclination of the will, either per ſe or per accidens, but per accidentis accidens, which is moſt ridiculous.

4. This long chaine by which they linke the will of man to the ſtarres, if it ſhalbe applyed vnto particulars, it muſt needes breake: for the actions of the will is buying, ſelling, trauailyng, lying, heaping vp wealth, murdering, ſpreading of falſe rumors, offering of diſcourteſies, hating of kinsfolkes, and ſuch like, which our heauen-gazers foretell, haue no coherence with the firſt qualities, heat, cold, moiſture, drineſſe: neither can they any way proceed from them, and therefore the ſtarres cannot be cauſes of them, for they worke onely by theſe qualities.

5. This reaſon is nothing to their purpoſe: for becauſe they graunt that a man may freely reſiſt the inclination of the ſtarres, and he may hinder that, vnto which the ſtarres bend his will, how dare they preſume to ſay this or that will come to paſſe? The heathen men gaue vp themſelues to their owne luſts and vanities, and followed euery little and vaine inclination: and of them, in this order, did auncient Aſtrologers among them diuine that this or that time, ſuch actions, ſuch vices, ſuch enterpriſes, ſuch affaires ſhould be among them. In like manner our Engliſh wiſemen, ſpeake of vs as though we were beaſts, not reaſonable men, as though we neuer had heard the bleſſed Goſpel of God, neuer taſted of the grace of God, neuer learned what is good and what is bad, neuer laboured to ſubdue our luſts and affections, alwaies turned to and fro with the blaſt of any influence, working very ſlenderly in vs.

Thus much of Ciuill affaires. They make mention alſo yearely of the diſeaſes which ſhall raigne: but the way which they follow, is taken forth of the barren and vncertaine rules of the old Aſtrologers, who doe ſo aſcribe vnto euery Planet certaine diſeaſes, that if neede ſhal require, they may referre the ſame diſeaſes vnto many ſignificatours, as in the plague, the putriſaction of humors is attributed vnto Iupiter, the ſharpe feuer vnto Mars, the madneſſe which followeth vnto Mercurie, the whole plague vnto Mars. In the plureſie the inflammation of the blood betweene the skinne called Pluritis, and the ribbes, is attributed vnto Iupiter, the ſuppuration of the blood vnto Saturne, and the whole plureſie vnto Iupiter: In the Iaundes the inflammation & corruption of humors, vnto Iupiter, the yellow humor in the gaule, vnto Mars, the obſtruction of the parts vnto Saturne, the whole Iaundes beeing white, vnto Mars, black, vnto Saturne. And ſo in euery diſeaſe, they vſe this inconſtancie and ambiguitie in Prognoſticating. It is a rule among the Aſtrologers that if the Planets ſignifiers of diſeaſes be well affected, then there ſhal be no diſeaſes but health: if they be euilly affected, then diſeaſes follow. Our Prognoſticatours neuer marke this rule, but howſoeuer the Planets be affected, they ſtraightwaies pronounce that ſuch diſeaſes ſhall raigne. For example; The laſt winter quarter it was ſaid by one of them, that the diſeaſes which ſhould afflict mens bodies, were rewmes, coughes, colde laskes, ſwelling of the face & throte, falling of the Colmel, ſore eies, deafeneſſe, the ſtone, goute, dropſie, greenſicknes, madnes, quarterne feuers, &c. And all the Planets ſignifiers of diſeaſes in that quarter were indifferent well affected: wherefore thou A haſt not one cauſe to fear their threatnings, but rather to be ſorie for their continual deceits, wiſhing them minds that they may one day ſee their owne folly.

Concerning the time when the conſtellations take their effects, our Prognoſticators ſay that ſome take their effects the ſame yeare, ſome not the ſame yeare but long after, as great coniunctions and eclipſes. For they ſay if the Moone be eclipſed one houre, ſhe worketh her effect a moneth after, if two houres, two moneths after, and the Sunne for euery houre it is Eclipſed, taketh his effect an whole yeare after. Truly this rule which they follow, muſt needes be againſt all reaſon. For why ſhould not all coniunctions B and oppoſitions of the Sunne and Moone deferre their effects, as well as thoſe coninnctions and oppoſitions in which the Sunne and Moon is Eclipſed; if they ſhow forth their power immediately after, why ſhould not theſe alſo doe the ſame? Moreouer Epignoſticall Aſtrologers who haue conferred the courſe of the heauens with hiſtories, ſhewe very manifeſtly, that Eclipſes doe not deferre the time of working their ſpite vpon the earth.

In the yeare of our Lord 1419. the Sunne was Eclipſed in Aries, & preſently after ſhewed all his force. There was a great ſedition in Prag that yeare: In Paris an vprore betweene them of the Citie and the Vniuerſitie, and two thouſand Schollers were ſlain. Then alſo Wenzeſlaus C king of Bohemia beeing in a great palſie died. In the yeare 1524. there was a coniunction of Saturne and Iupiter in Scorpius, and alſo a great Eclipſe of the Sunne in Iune, which tooke their effects the ſame yeare: Charles king of Fraunce driuen forth of his countrie: warre betweene the Danes and the men of Sleſwicke. There was a great plague in Germanie, Ciuill diſſention amongſt the Princes of the Empire and them which tooke the part of Iohn Huſſe. 1452. an Eclipſe of the Sunne in Sagittarius, his effects began preſently, and laſted a great while: Euen then Conſtantinople was taken by the Turke. The Hungarians and Bohemians beſieged Fredericke the Emperour. 1473. the 27. of Aprill, the Sunne was Eclipſed in Taurus, Mars beeing D in Aries, and Iupiter in Sagittarius. The ſame yeare in ſummer was ſuch heate and drineſſe of weather, that woods euen withered, and one might wade ouer deepe riuers. In the yeares of our Lord 1476. 1460. 1469. 1486. 1502. 1518. and many yeares after, there were both great coniunctions and ſtraunge Eclipſes, which tooke their effects preſently, not one, or two, or three yeares after (as our heauen-gazers beare thee in hand.) All theſe examples which I bring againſt them, I haue not fained, but taken forth of thoſe bookes which they haue in greateſt eſtimation, and could, if neede ſhould ſerue, bring an hundred more, all to ſhew their lies, when as they commonly ſay thus, There ſhalbe an Eclipſe this yeare, marie I will not here determine his effects, but reſerue them to be de-

A clared in my Prognoſtication one yeare or two yeares hence, when it will take place.

To know where the effects of the ſtarres ſhal take place, they haue appointed vnto euery ſigne certaine countries, as ouer Europe they haue ſet the fiery Triplicitie, ouer the Orientall and North parts of Aſia, the airie Triplicitie, the waterie Triplicitie ouer Aphrica, ouer the South parts of Aſia the earthie Triplicitie: & ſo euery peculiar ſigne hath his dominion ouer ſome parts of thoſe. Now therfore, when a coniunction or Eclipſe is in any of theſe ſignes, the Cities & countries ſubiect vnto them, feele the force of that conſtellation eſpecially. This is a moſt manifeſt vntruth, and may be confuted by many reaſons. 1. The nature of the ſignes is not the ſame now as it was in times paſt, and by the
B confeſſion of the beſt learned haue other effects now, then they had in the daies of king Ptolomie: yet we ſee the nature of countries & people to remaine the ſame ſtill, as may be ſeen by reading Tacitus, Plinie, Caſar, Strabo. 2. America which is halfe the world, hath no ſignes appointed ouer it: why? it was found out of late. True it is, but this is an argument that the Rules of Aſtrologie, are abſurd, and were the bare inuentions and imaginations of idle braines. For, there is no doubt, but that America, his parts and Ilands, as Braſilea, Peru, Pari, Terra Florida, Iaua Maior, Iaua Minor, Puloana, Pauilonga, Subath: Maſſana, Mattan, Iuuacana, Cozumella, Iamaica, &c. haue felt
C the force of thoſe Conſtellations, which they attribute to ſome partes of the old world. Becauſe theſe Countries be about the midle Zone, and haue both Planets & ſignes full ouer them, and therefore if the ſtarres threaten any ſtrange thing to come, they muſt eſpecially feele it. 3. Experience the cauſe of all acts, is againſt them, as is manifeſt in theſe examples. 47. yeares before the Natiuitie of our Sauiour Chriſt, there was a coniunction of the higher Planets in Scorpius; and then was ciuill warre betweene Caſar and Pompey: And the change of the Empire was in Europe. But according vnto the inſtitution of Aſtrologers, all theſe troubles ſhould haue been in Aphrike; becauſe Scorpius hath his dominion there. In the yeare of our Lord 34.
D there was a great coniunction of planets in Leo, and then (ſaith one very prophanely) was the Goſpell preached through the world. But if he make this coniunction to be a ſigne of the preaching of the Goſpell, then it ſhould more haue bin preached in the parts of Europe then Aſia, which is not true. In the yeares of our Lord, 331. and 1127. there were great coniunctions in Virgo, and yet the Countries ſubiect to this ſigne felt no harme, but Italy was troubled with the Popes ſuperſtitions, and Arrius his hereſie was broched. There was a meeting of Planets in Sagittarius 73. yeares after Chriſt, when as Otho, Galba, Vitellius, and Veſpaſian troubled the Romane Empire, yet there was no where more grieuous warres then in Paleſtine, and no greater ſlaughter then of the Iewes, who are ſubiect vnto Scorpius and not vnto Sagittarius. In the yeare 1464. a coniunction of higher Planets was in Piſces, vnder whoſe dominion, although Europe be not placed, yet it moſt felt the ſmart by troubles and ciuil warres. So 1576. and 1577. two Eclipſes of the Sunne, the one in Leo, the other in Capricorne tooke their effects in Germanie: when as Leo and Capricorne doe not rule that Countrey. It is vaine to ſhewe the abſurditie of this rule by mo examples, theſe ſhall be ſufficient.

This ſhall ſuffice to haue ſpoken of their generall Predictions, now follow their ſpecial determinations of the ſtate and temperature of the weather, wherein I wil ſet forth firſt of all a moſt manifeſt and abſurd contradiction, which moſt of them make, and that is this: They vſe (as I haue ſaid) to ſet downe their iudgements of the whole quarter, that it ſhould be either moiſt, hote, cold, or drie: afterward iudging particularly they diſprooue by particular daies that which they ſaide before. In the yeare of our Lord 1581. one ſaid that in the Autumne quarter ſhould be a great drought, yet I peruſing his particular iudgement vpon the daies of the quarter, finde it ſhould haue plentie of raine. In the yeare laſt paſt, an other ſaid, the ſommer ſhould be ſo hote and drie, that euen wells and riuers ſhould be dried vp, and fiſhes be ſcarce, and cattell die for want of water: yet the ſame partie in his particular iudgement of the weather, maketh 20. daies of the ſame quarter, at the leaſt raine and miſling, and 30. other either temperate or very cold.

In one word, the iudgements which are ſet downe of the weather, they are more tolerable then the reſt: yet as long as the world endureth, no man ſhal be able to prognoſticate truly what weather ſhall be in euery day of the yeare. The cauſes of this I haue ſet downe before, & neede not now to repeat. Wherefore they might leaue off any longer to buſie themſelues in this kind. And it ſhall be ſufficient for the leading of a Chriſtian life, to know the generall and ordinarie eſtate of the parts and ſeaſons of the yeare.

The third reaſon, impieties.

BEſides all this, the impious ſpeeches and vngodly practiſes, which theſe men vſe, might mooue a Chriſtian man to loath their predictions. Firſt, yearely ſome of them doe foretell whether men ſhall ſtudy and imbrace, or forget and neglect true Religion. What a filthy and deuilliſh thing is this, not to be ſuffered in a common wealth where the Goſpell of Chriſt is preached. Euery man naturally is the child of wrath, the vnprofitable ſeruant, dead in all kind of ſinne, his vnderſtanding it is enmitie againſt god, his affections are rebellious againſt his wil; none doth good, no not one: not one hath any facultie to receiue or keepe true religion: we are as ſawes in the hands of God, as the Prophet

Eſay ſpeaketh:how then become we religious? by the onely worke of God. No man can come to me(ſaith Chriſt)except the father drawe him.
Ioh.6.44.
And as God draweth vs firſt vnto true religion, ſo he alſo maketh vs continue in the profeſſing of the ſame, as S. Paul ſaith, he which hath begun a good worke in you, will finiſh the ſame,&c. By what meanes doth God doe this? by the outward preaching of the Lawe and the Goſpell, and by the inward working of his holy ſpirit: other meanes the Scripture neuer mentioneth. On the contrary part, if any man refuſe the grace of God, and will not imbrace the true Religion, it proceedeth from the hardneſſe of his owne heart, and wilfull rebellion. Seeing therefore the rebellion of man commeth from his owne will, and the imbracing of true godlineſſe from God alone: why dare they preſume, without great impietie, to adioyne the conſtellations as adiuuants either vnto man or God in this diuine worke. Againe, theſe predictions are very perillous, for if a man be wickedly giuen, they hinder him from the acknowledging of his ſinne, becauſe they make him lay part of his faultes vpon the ſtarres, when as all indeede come from his owne ſoule. And if a man be a penitent ſinner, and feele the grace of God; yet beeing weake in faith and conſcience, they make him not to put his whole truſt in God, and to loue him with all his ſoule, with all his ſtrength; but allure him in ſome part to attribute that vnto the ſtarres, which is the onely worke of God, and not of any creature.

2. They vſe to foretell what vices ſhall raigne, as in theſe examples:

As
There ſhall be much vnlawfull and ſecret whoredome.
Great robbing by hie-waies ſides.
Wanton and young men ſhall ſit in their Ladies lappes, by reaſon of their GODDESSES well placing.
Many ſhall vſe deceit and coſening.

By theſe and ſuch like, lewd and diſſolute people, take occaſions and are ſtirred vp to liue prophanely, and to ſollowe thoſe vices, vnto which the luſts of their nature carrie them.

The fourth reaſon, tricks of deceit.

A Iugler which taketh vpon him to doe ſtrange things muſt vſe many ſleights, leaſt if the ſtander by ſhall ſee his tricks of ligierdemaine he be deſcried, and all his former cunning turne to his ſhame. Our Prognoſticatours vnderſtanding this, haue thought it conuenient to vſe in their kind ſome tricks of deceiuing Iuglers, I can call them by no better name, for ſo they are indeede. Firſt publiſhing their predictions in thy behalfe, they vſe ſuch abſurd, vnknowne, and inſolent wordes, as (I thinke) neuer the like were read or hard amongſt vs in England. As are theſe which followe:

1. A Prognoſtication Aſtrologically calculated for the pole Articke, for ſuch a citie whoſe longitude and latitude is thus.
2. Quartill reuolution.
3. Rectiſied for the motions and aſpects of the meridian and eleuation.
4. Capricorne in qualitie cold and drie, melancholie, in taſt bitter, nocturnall fœminine, meridionall, of the earthly trigon.
5. Mercurialiſtes, Ionialiſtes, Martialiſtes. Hiemal Solſtice, Æſtiual, Vernal, Autumnall.
6. Pars tortura coupled with the Dragons taile.
7. Taurus a ſigne of the earthly trigonſme naturally, cold in the ſigne horoſcop: and Virgo of the ſame ſtampe the ſigne of the preuention preceding.
8. A ſigne of the ſame triangularitie. Iupiter Lord of this reuolution reſident with Venus in domicilio deorſum ab Angulo cadente.
9. Planets retrograde.
10. Cardiualor a ſuccedent poſition.
11. Lunarie defect.
12. Names of ſtrange authors. Proclus, Alchindus, Meſſahala, Zael, Albohazen Haly, Albumacer, Albubater, Guido, Bonetus, Hiſpalenſis, Firmius, Abraham, Auenezra, Triſmegiſtus, with many other wondrous Doctors, hauing a great deale of ſmall learning, and beeing far borne, as in Caldea, Perſia, Arabia, Iurie.

1. Thou wilt ſay what meanes all this? here is great learning no doubt it paſſeth my capacitie: who would not haue an Alanmacke, if it were for nothing but for this, to ſee and heare how profound our Prognoſticatours are? Thou farre deceiueſt thy ſelſe: for they perceiuing well, that their deceits and lyes may be ſoone eſpied, haue inuented ſtrange tearmes to colour them, and to caſt a miſt before thine eyes, that thou maiſt not ſee their naughty dealing. For any man the more true and honeſt he thinketh his matter, the more deſirous is he to ſpeake plainely to the vnderſtanding of all.

2. It was a point of the knauerie of the Deuill, otherwiſe called Apollo, as the Heathen men asked his counſell, to anſwer doubtfully, becauſe when as he was ignorant of the euent, yet would not, but ſeeme to knowe, as in this anſwer,

I tell thee Pyrrhus the Romanes may conquer.

It is vnderſtood two wayes; either that Æacides might vanquiſh the Romanes, or the Romanes Æacides. Our Prognoſticatours haue choſen a verie good patterne to followe, their dealing with thee is the like: when they doubt and cannot tel what to Prognoſticate, then they vſe two wayes of foretelling, either to ſpeake that which is true euery way, or that which is true euery yeare. For the firſt, amongſt many examples, I will put one or two that thou maiſt ſee their dealing in true, not forged examples.

1. The coniunction of Mars and Saturne threaten warres, but Iupiter will mitigate the ſame: as a man ſhould ſay, the Prognoſticatour telleth true, except he tell a lye.

2 1585. We ſhall haue a very drie winter, if peraduenture any floods and ſtore of raine doe fall, they ſhall proceede of former cauſes.

3 This ſommer quarter is like to be for the greateſt part drie and whole, yet it is like neither to be too hotte, or too colde, but indifferent.

4 Neither faire, nor foule, both together.

5 Faire and calme, but a little miſling.

6 Clouds portending raine and ſnowe.

Examples of thoſe predictions, which may agree to euery yeare are common with them, as theſe;

1 This yeare Artificers muſt take heede of too much ſtreining their backes.

2 Take heede of ventering in ſlipperie places boldly in building.

3 Old men ſhall die.

4 Death of Sheepe and other cattell this yeare ſhall be.

5 Sundrie diſeaſes are like to raigne amongſt many which will ſweepe away many.

6 Falſe rumors, impriſonments, tortures.

7 Brethren and ſiſters ſhall not loue one another.

8 Sundrie men and women ſhalbe troubled with paines in their eyes.

9 Much ſtrife amongſt men and women.

10 Small loue amongſt kinsfolkes.

11 Much vnlawful luſt, this yeare and ſecret fornication.

12 Some Eccleſiaſticall perſon ſhall be in trouble, and ſome noble man ſhall die, this is euer at one place or other.

13 Many ſhipwracks, and other ſtirres on the ſeas.

14 Many ſhall addict themſelues to the ſtudy of Negromancie.

Againe, beſide theſe waies there is alſo a third, and that is this. They fearing leaſt their Prognoſtications ſhould not be regarded becauſe of their lyes, and that they might winne men vnto the vſing of them, haue adioyned Aſtronomicall matters of the riſing and ſetting of ſtarres, of the aſpects and motions of planets, which are no profit to thee. Here alſo they haue annexed tables of all the Faires in the land, and of the chiefe high wayes, which beeing of ſome price with thee, make that which is naught of it ſelfe, to be of ſome accompt.

A Concluſion.

THus much (good Reader) I hope ſhall be ſufficient to perſwade thee of the vanitie of Prognoſtications: if not, I beſeech thee accept of my ſimple endeauour, ſeruing in ſome part vnto thy profit. For if thou be a Chriſtian man thou oughteſt onely to be contented with knowing the times and ordinarie ſeaſons of the yeare: not regarding nor ſearching any ſecret and ſpeciall Predictions, for which the Lord neuer gaue any man warrant, but in plaine words hath forbidden them. Nay they which be ingraffed into Ieſus Chriſt indeede, are ſo farre from ſearching what ſhall be hereafter, that they leade a life which is a continuall meditation of preſent death. The which the Lord for Ieſus ſake, graunt vnto vs, that we may in ſome meaſure behold our owne vanities.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE ROBERT LORD RICH, Baron of LEEZE, &c.

RIght Honourable; Among all the Societies and States, whereof the whole world of mankind from the firſt calling of Adam in Paradiſe, vnto this day, hath conſiſted, the firſt and moſt ancient is the Family. For if we looke into the Scriptures; The writings of Moſes, which in time go beyond all the Hiſtories and Records of men, doe euidently declare, it was the will of God, to ſanctifie that firſt coniunction of Adam and Eue, as the roote wherein mans whole poſteritie was virtually contained, and whence in the ages ſucceeding, both Church and Commonwealth ſhould ſpring and grow to their perfection. And all thoſe Nations & Cuntries before the Flood, the Heads wherof lineally deſcended from the two firſt houſes of Seth and Cain, had no outward forme of ciuill gouernment, by which they were ruled, nor any viſible face of a Church whereto they had relation, but the whole frame of their policie both Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall was confined within the precincts of priuate Families. And from the flood, the houſe of Noah became the common Mother, in which the other two ſtates were included, and out of whoſe bowels they iſſued afterward in the multiplication of poſteritie, for number, equall to the ſtarres of the skie, and the ſands by the Sea ſhoare.

Anſwerable to the voice of the Scripture, hath beene the verdict of the Heathen in this point. Some of the Learned among them, haue called the Familie, the firſt Societie in nature, and the ground of all the reſt. Some againe haue compared it to the Bee-hiue, which we call the Stocke, wherein are bred many ſwarmes, which thence doe flie abroad into the world, to the raiſing and maintaining of other States. Others doe not vnfitly reſemble the ſame to a Metropolis, or mother Citie, which firſt traineth vp her natiue inhabitants, and then * remoooueth ſome of them to other places of abode, where they may be framed as members, to liue in obedience to the Lawes of their Head.

Vpon this condition of the Familie, beeing the Seminarie of all other Societies, it followeth, that the holy and righteous gouernment thereof, is a direct meane for the good ordering, both of Church and Commonwealth; yea that the Laws thereof being rightly informed and religiouſly obſerued, are auaileable to prepare and diſpoſe men to the keeping of order in other gouernments. Hence it is, that the holy Ghoſt in the booke of the Scriptures, hath in great wiſdome commended both Rules for direction, and Examples for imitation, to Husbands and Wiues, to Parents and Children, to Maſters and Seruants, in euery point of Chriſtian cariage touching God and man. For this firſt Societie, is as it were the Schoole, wherein are taught and learned the principles of authoritie and ſubiection. And looke as the Superiour that faileth in his priuate charge, will prooue vncapable of publike employment; ſo the Inferiour, who is not framed to a courſe of Oeconomicall ſubiection, will hardly vndergoe the yoke of Ciuill obedience.

1.Tim.3.5.

Againe, the corruption or declination of this firſt gouernment, muſt of neceſſitie giue way to the ruinating of the reſt. For an errour in the foundation, puts the bodie and parts of the whole building in apparant hazzard. In the old world, before the flood, though all fleſh had corrupted their waies; yet the firſt ground of that vniuerſall ouerflowe of ſinne, iſſued out of the ſtate Oeconomicall, and thence was deriued into the whole earth. It was the fault of the priuate gouernment of Eli the Prieſt, that made his ſonnes Hophni and Phinehas, of vngratious children, vngodly Churchmen. It was the errour of Dauid in the adminiſtration and giudance of his owne houſe, which incourged Abſalom & Adoniah his ſonnes, vpon preſumption of their Fathers indulgence, to become ill Common-wealths men, to aſpire, and vſurpe the kingdome by plots and practiſes of Rebellion.

To forbeare further matter of inſtance in this kind; by the due conſideration of the premiſſes, I hold it a thing both neceſſary and behooſeful for all eſtates, to be throughly informed of the right manner of erecting and ordering the priuate condition of the Familie, whereby they may be furniſhed with fit grounds for the common good in more publike and open courſes. For which end this preſent Diſcourſe of Chriſtian Oeconomie was firſt contriued by the Author, and now thought fit to be ſet forth, for the inſtruction and edification of the multitude. Which as it commendeth it ſelfe by the ſhortnes and perſpicuitie, both which being applied to vnderſtanding and memorie, may giue contentment to euery well-diſpoſed Reader; ſo it carieth a kind of eminencie aboue other Treatiſes of this nature before publiſhed, in ſundrie regards;

Firſt, whereas Experience teacheth, that the Queſtions of Conſcience in matrimoniall affaires, are very many in number, and difficult in nature; here we ſhall find either direct anſwers to ſome of them, or at leaſt the Grounds of reſolution in diuers caſes, warranted by the word, in ſuch ſort, as litle or nothing will appeare, vpon the triall, to be vntouched, making for the Readers ſatisfaction.

1.Tim 4.8.

Secondly, the maine Scope of the Author in the ſeuerall branches hereof, is, to make plaine this truth in particular, That no Familie can be intereſſed in the bleſſing and fauour of God, which is not founded in his feare, and ordered according to his reuealed will. For though the Heathen in their writings of the like Argument, doe ſhewe, that Nature by her dimme light may afford ſome good directions to this purpoſe, and that men meerely naturall, haue proſpered in the practiſe of Oeconomicall vertues; yet the true happineſſe of houſes and inhabitants wholly dependeth vpon the ſpeciall grace of God, and iſſueth out of his promiſe; and that is directed onely to them that feare him, and walke in his waies; it beeing Godlineſſe alone which hath the promiſes of this life, and the life to come. Therfore to dreame of a bleſſing in any other ſtate, which is not ſeaſoned with Godlineſſe, and ordered by direction of diuine Lawe, is but a witleſſe preſumption; conſidering that the Familie it ſelfe from whence they growe, hath no further aſſurance of bleſſedneſſe, then it hath right and title in the promiſe.

1.Cor 7.1.2.

Laſtly, it containeth here and there, ſome ſpeciall Grounds of truth, tending to the diſcouerie of diuerſe errors of Popiſh doctrine in points appertaining to Mariage; as namely theſe. I. That this eſtate is free to all men, euen to ſuch as haue the gift of continencie; and for thoſe who haue not the power to abſtaine, it is expreſſely inioyned by God as neceſſarie. Which diſcouereth that Error of abſolute inhibition therof to ſome ſorts of men, without the leaſt exception of abilitie to forbeare. And in this caſe, though the Church of Rome preſcribeth an helpe by prayer and indeauour, where the gift is wanting; yet herein, ſhe addeth two more abſurdities to the former; impoſing a neceſſitie of containing by her Laws, where God hath giuen libertie, by his word; and cauſing to flee from that only Remedie which himſelfe hath ſanctified, to another, whereunto he neither giueth charge by his will, nor incouragement by promiſe. II. That Mariages conſummate without the free & aduiſed cōſent of Parents, either explicite in tearmes, or implicite by conniuence, are in the court of conſcience, meere nullities. A doctrine cleared in this Booke, both by Scriptures, & by conſent of Antiquitie. Wherein is chalenged the Ieſuits propoſition, That the ſole conſent of the parties is ſufficient, ad Matrimonium firmum ac ratum efficiendū. As alſo that decree of the Councel of Trent, which profeſſeth a deteſtation of clandeſtine Contracts, & yet with the ſame breath pronounceth the curſe of Anathema vpon them, who affirme that Parents may ratifie or make void Mariages contracted by their children without their allowance. III. That Matrimonie lawfully begun and conſummate, is made void only by way of diuorce in the caſe of Adulterie. So ſaith our Sauiour; Whoſoeuer ſhall put away his wife (except it be for fornication, &c.) And this libertie granted by Chriſt both to diſſolue, and to marrie againe, cannot be reſtrained or cut off by any humane ordinance. A point directly impugned by two other Rules of that Councell: One, that the Church of Rome erreth not, when ſhe teacheth (as they profeſſe, iuxta Euangelicam & Apoſtolicam doctrinam, but in truth expreſſely contradictorie thereunto) That the knot of mariage cannot be broken becauſe of adulterie, and that neither partie may vndertake to be maried againe, during the life of the other, after the diſmiſſion. The other, That the vowe of Chaſtitie, and entring into holy Orders, is of force to looſe the bond of Mariage. And in this caſe, ſeparation is made and allowed de facto, by the ſole authoritie of the Pope, notwithſtanding the refuſall of the ſettled partie to yeeld conſent. I V. That the iudgement and determination of cauſes matrimoniall, as of Contracts and their impediments, of degrees of kindred, of diuorces, &c. reſteth originally in the ciuill Magiſtrate, in whoſe power it is, to ordaine and eſtabliſh Laws touching thē, agreeable to Gods word, & to cauſe them to be put in execution. For this purpoſe, in doubtfull and difficult caſes, the* ancient Church hath not abſolutely reſted in her owne decrees, but hath made recourſe to the ſeate of Iuſtice, ſpecially vnder Chriſtian Magiſtrates, ſubmiting her ſelfe to their Lawes and Conſtitutions in that kind. Whereas the * Church of Rome, hath determined, that theſe cauſes doe ſimply and only appertaine to Eccleſiaſticall Iudges; and therefore hath concluded Mariage to be a Sacrament; that the definition of caſes conjugall, becomming, vpon this ground, an action of a ſpirituall nature, might be transferred from the ciuill to their ſpirituall Courts. The Soueraigntie whereof, in theſe affaires, by their owne conſtitutions, is greatly inlarged. For though they admit, that politike Princes haue ſome intereſt in them; yet they muſt hold it, with ſubordination to the authoritie of the Church-Magiſtrate; and when the Rector of the Prouince maketh a Lawe hereof, he muſt doe it approbante Principe Eccleſiaſtico, by the allowance of the Pope; otherwiſe his Laws are meere nullities. And among their reaſons of policie, this is one of the principall, that they might by this meanes raiſe a commoditie to the Sea of Rome, by the ſale of their diſpenſations.

Now theſe points, together with the Subſtance of this ſmall diſcourſe, I willingly commend vnto your Lordſhip, deſiring that vnder the wings of your Honourable protection, it may ſafely walke abroad in the world, to the view and benefit of others. The true report of your ancient loue of the truth, and fauourable inclination to the Miniſters and diſpenſers thereof, hath giuen me incouragement in this action; The rather, for that the Argument fitteth in ſome ſort your preſent eſtate, whoſe houſe God hath adorned with oliue plants, a vertuous and hopefull iſſue, whoſe young yeares beeing ſeaſoned therein, by the ſweete ſauour of their fathers vertues, may yeeld in time a plentifull increaſe of Honour in this Commonwealth; and conſequently aduance your Name in themſelues and their poſteritie. To this may be added mine owne deſire to giue ſome teſtimonie of dutie to your L. as holding it your due, to be had in Honourable tearmes with men, whoſe care hath bin to maintaine the Honour of the Higheſt by your conſtant profeſſion and practiſe of Religion. And thus embouldening my ſelfe vpon the perſwaſion of your L. fauour and acceptance, I humbly take my leaue, and commend you to the grace of God, who is able to build you vp further, and giue you an inheritance among them which are ſanctified. *Finchingfield. # A # SHORT SVRVEY OF THE RIGHT MANNER of erecting and ordering a Family, according to the Scriptures.

CHAP. I.
Of Chriſtian Oeconomie, and of the Familie.

Chriſtian Oeconomie, is a doctrine of the right ordring of a Familie.

The onely rule of ordering the Familie, is the written word of God. By it Dauid reſolued to gouerne his Houſe, when he ſaith, I will walke in the vprightneſſe of my heart in the midſt of my houſe, Pſal. 101. 2. And Salomon affirmeth, that through wiſedome an houſe is builded: and with vnderſtanding it is eſtabliſhed. Prou. 24. 3.

A Familie, is a naturall and ſimple Societie of certaine perſons, hauing mutuall relation one to another, vnder the priuate gouernment of one. Theſe perſons muſt be at the leaſt three; becauſe two cannot make a ſocietie. And aboue three vnder the ſame head, there may be a thouſand in one familie, as it is in the houſholds of Princes and men of ſtate in the world.

CHAP. II.
Of the Houſhold ſeruice of God.

A Familie, for the good eſtate of it ſelfe, is bound to the performance of two duties; one to God, the other to it ſelfe.

The duty vnto God, is the priuate Worſhip and Seruice of God, which muſt be eſtabliſhed and ſetled in euery familie. And the reaſons hereof are theſe.

Firſt, becauſe this duty ſtandeth by the expreſſe commandement of God, who by his Apoſtle willeth men to pray euery where lifting vp pure hands, without wrath or doubting, 1. Tim. 2. 8.

Againe, it is confirmed by the cuſtome and practiſe of holy men in their times, I know (ſaith the Lord touching Abraham) that he will command his ſonnes and his houſhold after him, that they keepe the way of the Lord, to doe righteouſneſſe and iudgement, that the Lord may bring vpon Abraham, that which he hath ſpoken to him, Gen. 18. 19. To the ſame purpoſe ſpeaketh Ioſhua; If it ſeeme euill vnto you to ſerue the Lord, chuſe this day whom ye wil ſerue, whether the gods whom your Fathers ſerued (that were beyond the flood) or the gods of the Amorites in whoſe land ye dwell: But I and my houſe will ſerue the Lord, Ioſ. 24. 15. And Cornelius is reported to haue beene a deuout man, and one that feared God with all his houſhold. Act. 10. 2.

Thirdly, common reaſon and equitie ſheweth it to be a neceſſarie dutie; for the happie and proſperous eſtate of the familie, which conſiſteth in the mutuall loue and agreement of the Man and Wife, in the dutifull obedience of children to their parents, and in the faithfull ſeruice of ſeruants to their Maſters, wholly dependeth vpon the grace and bleſſing of God, and this bleſſing is annexed to his worſhip: for 1. Tim. 4. 8. Godlineſſe hath the promiſes of this life, and the life to come. Pſalm. 127. 1. Except the Lord build the houſe, they labour in vaine that build; except the Lord keepe the Citie, the keeper watcheth in vaine. Ver. 2. It is in vaine for you to riſe earely, and to lie downe late, and eate the bread of ſorrowe: but he will ſurely giue reſt to his beloued. Ver. 3. Behold, children are the inheritance of Iehouah, and the fruit of the wombe his reward. Pſal. 128. 1. Bleſſed is euery one that feareth the Lord, and walketh in his wayes. Ver. 2. When thou eateſt the labours of thy hands thou ſhalt be bleſſed, and it ſhall be well with thee. Ver. 3. Thy wife ſhall be as the fruitfull vine vpon the ſides of thy houſe, and thy children like Oliue plants round about thy table. Ver. 6. Yea thou ſhalt ſee thy childrens children, and peace vpon Iſrael. 1. Sam. 1. 27. I prayed (ſaith Hannah) for this child, and the Lord hath giuen me my deſire which I asked of him.

The houſehold ſeruice of God hath two parts; the firſt is a conference vpon the word of God, for the edification of all the members thereof, to eternall life. The ſecond is, Inuocation of the name of God, with giuing of thanks for his benefits; both theſe are commended in the Scriptures. Deut. 6.6. Theſe words which I command thee this day, ſhall be in thy heart. V. 7. And thou ſhalt whet them vpon thy children, and talke of them when thou tarieſt in thine houſe, and as thou walkeſt by the way, and when thou lieſt downe, and when thou riſeſt vp. Verſ. 20. When thy ſonne ſhall aske thee in time to come ſaying, what meane theſe teſtimonies, & ordinances, and laws, which the Lord our God hath commanded you? Verſ. 21. Then thou ſhalt ſay vnto thy ſonne, we were Pharaohs bondmen in Egypt, but the Lord brought vs out of Egypt with a mightie hand. Verſ. 24. Therfore the Lord hath commanded vs to doe all theſe ordinances, and to feare the Lord our God. Pſal. 14. 1. The foole hath ſaid in his heart, There is no God. v. 4. They call not vpon God.

The times of this ſeruice are theſe: The morning, in which the family comming together in one place, is to call vpon the name of the Lord, before they begin the works of their callings.

The euening alſo is another time to be vſed in prayer, becauſe the family hath ſeen the bleſſing of God vpon their labours the day before, and now the time of reſt draweth on, in which euery one is to commend his bodie and ſoule into the protection of the Lord; for no man knoweth what ſhall befall him before he riſe againe, neither knoweth any whether euer he ſhall riſe againe or not, it is therefore a deſperate boldnes without praying to go to reſt.

Beſides this, there be other times alſo wherin to performe this dutie, as before and after meales: For meates and drinks are bleſſed to the receiuers, by the word and prayer. 1. Tim. 4.4. Whatſoeuer God hath created is good, neither is any thing to be refuſed, if it be taken with thankeſgiuing, for it is ſanctified by the word of God and prayer.

Now theſe times, the word of God approoueth. Deut. 6.6. Thou ſhalt talke of them, when thou lieſt downe, and when thou riſeſt vp. Pſal. 55.18. Euening and morning and at noone, I will pray and make a noiſe, and he will heare my voice. Pſal. 127.1. It is in vaine to riſe early, and to lie downe late, and eate the bread of ſorrow, except the Lord vouchſafe a bleſſing, who will ſurely giue reſt to his beloued.

To theſe may ſometimes be added the exerciſe of faſting, which is (as occaſion ſerueth) to be vſed both publikely and priuately, eſpecially when they of the familie be thereunto called by ſome preſent or imminent calamity. Heſt 4.16. Goe and aſſemble all the Iewes that are found in Shuſan, and faſt yee for mee, and eate not, nor drinke in three daies, day nor night: I alſo and my maids will faſt likewiſe, and ſo wil I go into the King, which is not according to the law; and if I periſh, I periſh. Zachar. 12.11. And in A that day ſhall there be a great mourning in Ieruſalem, and the land ſhall bewaile, euery family apart, the family of the houſe of Dauid apart, and their wiues apart, the family of the houſe of Nathan apart, and their wiues apart, &c.

Wherfore, thoſe familes wherein this ſeruice of God is preformed, are, as it were, little Churches, yea euen a kind of paradiſe vpon earth. And for this purpoſe S. Paul writing to Philemon, greeteth the Church that is in his houſe, Philem. 1.2. And in like manner, he ſendeth ſalutations to the Church of Corinth, from Aquila and Priſcilla, and the Church which was in their houſe, 1. Cor. 16. 19. On the otherſide, where this dutie of Gods ſeruice is B not vſed, but either for the moſt part, or altogether neglected, a man may tearme thoſe families no better then companies of prophane and graceleſſe Atheiſts, who as they denie God in their hearts, ſo they are knowne by this note, that they doe not call vpon the name of the Lord, Pſal. 14.4. Yea ſuch families are fitly compared to an heard of ſwine, which are alwaies feeding vpon the maſte with greedineſſe, but neuer looke vp to the hand that beateth it down, nor to the tree from whence it falleth.

The other duty concerning the houſe it ſelfe, is, That euery member in the familie, according to their abilitie, employ themſelues in ſome honeſt and profitable buſineſſe, to maintaine the temporall eſtate and life of the whole. Gen. C 3.19. In the ſweat of thy face ſhalt thou eate bread, till thou returne to the earth, for out of it waſt thou taken; for duſt thou art, and to duſt ſhalt thou returne. 1. Cor. 7. 20. Let euery man abide in the ſame vocation wherein he was called. Now if any one in the familie ſtarteth aſide out of his calling, and inticeth another to idolatrie, he is to be reuealed, Deut. 13.6. And againe, their caſe is very fearefull that doe nothing in their houſes, but goe finely and faire daintily from day to day. This is the blacke marke that the Scripture ſets vpon the rich glutton, Luk. 16. 19. There was a certaine rich man, which was clothed in purple, and fine linen, and fared deliciouſly euery day.

CHAP. III.

Of maried folks.

A Familie is diſtinguiſhed into ſundrie combinations or couples of perſons.

A couple, is that wherby two perſons ſtanding in mutuall relation to each other, are combined together as it were in one. And of theſe two the one is alwaies higher, and beareth rule, the other is lower, and yeeldeth ſubiection.

Couples are of two ſorts; principall, or leſſe principall.

The principall, is the combination of maried folkes; and theſe are ſo termed in reſpect of Mariage.

Mariage is the lawfull coniunction of the two ma-

maried perſons; that is, of one man, and one woman into one fleſh. So was the firſt inſtitution of Mariage, Gen. 2.21. which is expounded by our Sauiour Chriſt, Matth. 19. 6. Therefore they are no more two, but one fleſh. And alſo by Paul, Epheſ. 5. 31. For this cauſe ſhall a man leaue father and mother, and ſhall * cleaue vnto his wife, (as two bords are ioyned together with glue) and they which were two, ſhall be one fleſh. Wherefore this is an eternall law of mariage, that two, and not three or foure, ſhall be one fleſh. And for this cauſe, the fathers, who had many wiues, and Concubines, it may bee that through cuſtome they ſinned of ignorance, yet they are not in any wiſe to be excuſed.

* Προσκολληθήσεται.

Mariage of it ſelfe is a thing indifferent, and the kingdome of God ſtands no more in it, thē in meates and drinkes; and yet it is a ſtate in it ſelfe, farre more excellent, then the condition of ſingle life. For firſt, it was ordained by God in Paradiſe, aboue and before all other ſtates of life, in Adams innocencie before the fall. Againe, it was inſtituted vpon a moſt ſerious and ſolemne conſultation among the three perſons in the holy Trinitie. Gen. 1. 26. Let vs make man in our image, according to our likenes, and let them rule ouer, &c. Gen. 2. 18. Iehouah Elohim ſaid, It is not good that the man ſhould be himſelfe aolne, I will make him an helpe meete for him. Thirdly, the manner of this coniunction was excellent, for God ioyned our firſt parents Adam and Eue together immediately. Fourthly, God gaue a large bleſſing vnto the eſtate of mariage, ſaying, Increaſe and multiplie, and fill the earth. Laſtly, mariage was made & appointed by God himſelfe, to be the fountaine and ſeminarie of al other ſorts and kinds of life, in the Common-wealth and in the Church.

Now if mankind had continued in that vprightnes and integrity which it had by creation, the ſtate of ſingle life had bin of no price & eſtimation amongſt men, neither ſhould it haue had any place in the world, without great contempt of Gods ordinance and bleſſing.

Neuertheleſſe, ſince the fall, to ſome men who haue the gift of continencie, it is in many reſpects farre better then mariage, yet not ſimply, but only by accident, in regard of ſundry calamities which came into the world by ſin. For, firſt it freeth a man from many and geeat cares of houſehold affaires. Againe, it maketh him much more fit and diſpoſed to meditate of heauenly things, without diſtraction of minde. Beſides that, when dangers are either preſent, or imminent, in matters belonging to this life, the ſingle perſon is in this caſe happie, becauſe he and his are more ſecure and ſafe, then others be who are in maried ſtate. 1. Cor. 7. 8. Therefore I ſay to the vnmaried and widowes, It is good for them if they abide euen as I doe. ver. 26. I ſuppoſe then this to be good for the preſent neceſſitie, I meane, that it is good for a man ſo to be. v. 28. But if thou takeſt a wife thou ſinneſt not, and if a virgin marrie ſhe ſinneth not: neuertheleſſe ſuch A ſhall haue trouble in the fleſh. ver. 32. And I would haue you without care.

The ende of mariage is fourefold.

The firſt is, procreation of children, for the propagation and continuance of the ſeede and poſteritie of man vpon the earth, Gen. 1. 28. Bring forth fruit, multiplie, fill the earth, and ſubdue it. Gen. 9. 1. 1. Tim. 5. 14.

The ſecond is the procreation of an holy ſeed, whereby the Church of God may be kept holy and chaſte, and there may alwaies be a holy companie of men, that may worſhip and ſerue God in the Church from age to age, Malach. 2. 15. And did not he make one? yet had he abundance of ſpirit; and wherefore one? becauſe he B ſought a godly ſeede.

The third is, that after the fall of mankind, it might be a ſoueraigne meanes to auoide fornication, and conſequently to ſubdue and ſlake the burning luſts of the fleſh, 1. Cor. 7. 2. Neuertheleſſe for the auoiding of fornication, let euery man haue his wife, and euery woman haue her husband. ver. 9. But if they cannot abſtaine let them marrie; for it is better to marrie, then to burne. And for this cauſe, ſome Schoolemen doe erre, who hold that the ſecret comming together of man and wife, cannot be without ſinne, vnleſſe it be done for procreation of children: Lombard the maſter of the Sentences ſaith the contrarie, namely, that mariage before the C fall was onely a dutie, but nowe ſince the fall it is alſo a remedie.

The fourth ende is, that the parties married may thereby performe the duties of their callings, in better and more comfortable manner, Prou. 31. 11. The heart of her husband truſteth her, and he ſhall haue no neede of ſpoile. ver. 13. She ſeeketh woll, and flaxe, and laboureth cheerefully with her hands.

Mariage is free to all orders and ſorts of men without exception, euen to thoſe that haue the gift of continencie: but for them which cannot abſtaine, it is by the expreſſe commandement of God, neceſſarie. Hebr. 13. 4. Mariage is honourable amongſt all men, and the bed vndefiled. 1. Cor. 7. 9. But if they cannot abſtaine, let them marrie.

D By which it appeareth to be a cleare caſe, that the commandement of the Pope of Rome, whereby he forbiddeth mariage of certain perſons, as namely of Clergie men, is meerely diabolicall: for ſo writeth the Apoſtle, 1. Tim. 4. 1. The ſpirit ſpeaketh euidently, that in the latter times ſome ſhall depart from the faith, and ſhall giue heede vnto ſpirits of error, and doctrines of deuills. verſ. 3. forbidding to marrie.

But againſt this doctrine ſundrie things are alleadged.

Obiect. 1. The Apoſtle commandeth the maried among the Corinths, to abſtaine with conſent for a time, that they might giue thēſelues to faſting and praier, 1. Cor. 7. 5. I anſwer, that Paul ſpeakes not in that place of daily and common ſeruice of God in praier, but of the ſolemne & extraordinarie exerciſe thereof, which was ioyned with faſting & abſtinence, in common dangers and calamities.

*Ob.*2. 1.Cor.7.32. He that is vnmaried careth for the things of the Lord, how he may pleaſe the Lord; but the married perſon careth for the things of the world. Anſ. The place is not generally to be vnderſtood of all, but indefinitly of thoſe married perſons that are carnall and fleſhly. And he that is married, is to be ſo carefull for the things of the world, as he ought, and may haue alſo a ſpeciall regard of thoſe things that concerne God and his kingdome.

Obiect. 3. 1.Tim. 5. 11. The yonger widowes (ſaith the Apoſtle) will marrie, hauing damnation becauſe they haue broken the firſt faith. Anſ. By the firſt faith, Paul vnderſtandeth that promiſe and vow which they made vnto Chriſt, when they were baptiſed; and they are there ſaid to begin to waxe wantō againſt Chriſt, by denying or renouncing that faith, and not otherwiſe.

Obiect. 4. He that doth earneſtly and from his heart, craue the gift of continencie, God will giue it him, and therefore he neede not marrie.

Anſ. The gifts of God are of two ſorts, ſome are generall, ſome are Proper. Generall gifts are ſuch as God giueth generally to all, & theſe may be obtained, if they be asked according to Gods word, lawfully, Iam. 1. 5. If any of you lacke wiſedome, let him aske it of God, who giueth to all men liberally, and reprocheth no man, and it ſhall be giuen him. verſ. 6. But let him aske in faith, and wauer not. Proper gifts, are thoſe which are giuen onely to ſome certaine men; of which ſort is the gift of continencie, & ſuch like, which though they be often and earneſtly asked, yet they are ſeldome or neuer grāted vnto ſome men; as appeareth in Pauls example, who beeing buffetted by Satan, ſaith of himſelfe, For this thing I beſought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me; but he ſaid vnto me, My grace is ſufficient for thee, 2. Cor. 12.8.9.

CHAP. IIII.

Of the contract.

Marriage hath two diſtinct parts, the firſt is the beginning; the ſecond, the accompliſhment or conſummation thereof.

The Beginning, is the Contract or Eſpouſals; the End or accompliſhment, is the ſolemne Manifeſtation of the Contract, by that which properly we call Marriage. Deut. 20. 7. What man is there that hath betrothed a wife, & hath taken her? Let him goe and returne againe vnto his houſe, leſt he die in battell, and another man take her. Matth. 1. 18. When his mother Marie was betrothed to Ioſeph, before they came together, She was found with child of the holy Ghoſt.

Betweene the Contract and Marriage, there ought to be ſome certaine ſpace or diſtance of time. The reaſons whereof may be theſe.

Firſt, a buſineſſe of ſo great importance as this is, would not be raſhly or vnaduiſedly attempted, but ſhould rather be done by degrees in proceſſe of time, according to that ſaying, not ſo ancient as true, * Actions of weight, before reſolution, require mature deliberation. Secondly, That during ſuch a ſpace inquirie may be made, whether there be any iuſt cauſe, which may hinder the conſummation of Marriage: conſidering that before the parties come and conuerſe together, what is amiſſe may be remedied and amended, which to doe afterward will be too late. Thirdly, In theſe caſes, perſons eſpouſed muſt haue regard of honeſtie, as well as of neceſſitie; not preſently vpon the Contract, ſeeking to ſatisfie their owne fleſhly deſires, after the manner of bruit beaſts, but proceeding therein vpon mature deliberation.

* Diu deliberandum quod ſemel ſtatuendum.

The Contract is a mention or mutuall promiſe of future marriage, before fit & competent Iudges and Witneſſes.

The beſt manner of giuing this promiſe, is, to make it * in words touching the preſent time, and ſimply without any exception or condition expreſſed or conceiued. For by this meanes it comes to paſſe, that the bond is made the ſurer, and the ground or foundation of future marriage the better laid. And hence alone it is, that the perſons betrothed in Scripture are termed man and wife. Iacob ſpeaking of Rahel, who was only betrothed vnto him, ſaid to Laban, Giue me my wife, Gen. 29. 21. Deut. 22. 23. If a maid be betrothed to a husband, and a man find her in the towne, and lie with her, then ſhall ye bring them both out vnto the gates of the citie, and ſhall ſtone them with ſtones to death, the maid, becauſe ſhe cried not being in the citie, and the man, becauſe he hath humbled his neighbours wife. Matth. 1. 20. Ioſeph feare not to take Mary thy wife.

* In verbis de præſenti & purè.

Now if the promiſe be vttered in words, * for time to come, it doth not preciſely bind the parties to performance. For example: If one of them ſaith to the other; N. I will take thee, &c. and not, N. I doe take thee, &c. by this forme of ſpeech the match is not made, but only promiſed to be made afterward. But if on the other ſide it be ſaid, N. I doe take thee, and not, I will take thee; by theſe termes, the mariage at that very inſtant is begun, though * not in regard of fact, yet in regard of right and intereſt, which the parties haue each in another indeed and in truth. And this is the common opinion of the learned. Yet notwithſtāding, if the parties contracting ſhall ſay each to other, I will take thee to, &c. with intention to bind themſelues at the preſent; the bond is in conſcience preciſely made before God, & ſo the Contract indeed made * for the preſent time before God. True it is, that he which ſtādeth to his promiſe made, as much as in him lieth, doth well: yet if the promiſe hath or cōceiueth ſome iuſt cauſe, why be

A he ſhould afterward change his purpoſe, the Contract expreſſed in tearmes for time to come, though it were formerly made, and confirmed by oath, muſt notwithſtanding giue place to the Contract made for time preſent.

Thoſe eſpouſals, which are made vppon condition, which is honeſt, poſſible, and belonging to Mariage, doe ceaſe or depend, ſo farre forth as the condition annexed ceaſeth or dependeth. For example; If the one partie promiſeth to marrie the other vpon condition, that his or her kinſman will yeeld conſent to the match; or vpon condition of a dowrie that ſhe ſhall bring vnto him, ſutable to her education, and the familie whereof ſhe commeth: theſe conditions beeing kept or not kept, the promiſe doth likewiſe ſtand, or not ſtand.

B But thoſe conditions which are neceſſarily vnderſtood, or which may certainly be kept and come to paſſe, doe neither hinder nor ſuſpend Mariage. As this: I promiſe thee mariage, if I liue; or, I promiſe to marrie thee, if the Sunne riſe to morrowe.

Againe, conditions that are either impoſſible, or diſhoneſt, are not to bee accounted as promiſes annexed * in way of Marriage. Of which ſort are theſe, I will be thy wife, if thou wilt take vnto thee wings and flie, or, If thou wilt bring an vntimely birth.

* In fauorē Matrimonij.

Furthermore, if the parties betrothed, doe lie together before the condition (though honeſt and appertaining to Marriage) be performed; then the contract for the time to come is, without further controuerſie, ſure and certaine. For C where there hath beene a carnall vſe of each others bodie, it is alwaies preſuppoſed, that a mutual conſent, as touching Mariage, hath gone before.

CHAP. V.

Of the choiſe of perſons fit for Marriage.

FOr the making of a contract, two things are requiſite: firſt the choice, and then the conſent of the parties.

D Choice is an enquirie after perſons mariageable.

Perſons mariageable, are ſuch as be fit and able for the married ſtate.

This fitneſſe or abilitie is knowne and diſcerned by certaine ſignes; which are either eſſentiall to the contract, or accidentall.

An eſſentiall ſigne is that, without which the contract in hand becomes a meere nullitie. And of this ſort there are principally fiue.

The firſt is the diſtinction of the ſexe, which is either male, or female. The male is man of a ſuperiour ſexe, fit for procreation. The female is woman of an inferiour ſexe, fit to conceiue and beare children. 1. Cor. 11. 7. The man ought not to couer his head: for as much as he is

A the Image and glorie of God; but the woman is the glorie of the man. 1. Tim. 2. 12. I permit not the woman to teach, neither to vſurpe authoritie ouer the man, but to be in ſilence. By this diſtinction is condemned, that vnnaturall and monſtrous ſinne of vncleanneſſe betweene parties of the ſame ſexe, commonly tearmed Sodomie; as alſo the confuſion of the * kinds of creatures, when one kind commits filthines & abomination with another.

Rom. 1 26.
* Species, Leuit. 18. 22, 23.

The ſecond ſigne, is, the iuſt and lawfull diſtance of blood.

Diſtance of blood is then iuſt and lawfull, when neither of the perſons that are to be married, doe come neare to the kindred of their fleſh, or to the fleſh of their fleſh, for ſo the B Scripture ſpeaketh, Leuit. 18. 6. No man ſhall come neare to any of the fleſh of his fleſh: or to the * kindred of his fleſh. Where it is to be obſerued, that by a mans fleſh, is meant that ſubſtance which is of himſelfe, or whereof himſelfe conſiſteth. And by the fleſh of his fleſh, that which next and immediately iſſueth out of that fleſh whereof he conſiſteth. Whereupon it followeth, that the touching or comming neare of fleſh to fleſh, is not ſpoken of ſtrangers, but of thoſe only that are of kindred.

* Ebr. Sheer Beſaro.

Kindred is of two ſorts, conſanguinitie, or affinitie.

Kindred in conſanguinitie, are thoſe which iſſue from out, and the ſame common blood or ſtocke. And there be certaine degrees, whereby C kinſmen of this ſort are diſtinguiſhed one from another.

A degree is a generation or deſcent betweene two perſons that are of the ſame blood. For one perſon cannot make a degree, vnleſſe he be conſidered relatiuely in regard of generation.

Now many degrees continued or deriued from one and the ſame head, doe make a Line; And a Line is twofold, the Right line, or the Ouerthwart, commonly tearmed collaterall.

In the Right Line, looke how manie perſons there are, ſo many degrees there be, that onely excepted, which vpon occaſion offered, is in queſtion, & from which we begin the account.

Abraham.
D Iſaac.
|
Iacob.
Ioſeph.

Here Ioſeph is diſtant three degrees from Abraham, Iacob, two, Iſaac one, or the firſt.

This Right line is either aſcending or deſcending.

The right line aſcending, is the race of all the anceſtors; and it hath ſundrie degrees. Of the firſt whereof is, the father and the mother: of the ſecond, the grand-father both by the father and mothers ſide, that is, the father of my father, and the father of my mother; & the grandmother, that is to ſay, my fathers and my mo-

A thers mother. Of the third, is, the great grandfather, or the father of my grand-father; and the great grand-mother, or the mother of my grandfather. Of the fourth, is the great grand-fathers father, and the great grand-fathers, or grandmothers mother. Of the fift, is the great grandfathers grand-father, & the great grand-fathers, or great grand-mothers grand-mother. Of the ſixt, is the great great grand-fathers grand-father and the great great grand-fathers, or great great grand-mothers grand-mother.

The right line deſcending, is the race of a mans owne poſteritie. And that alſo hath ſundry degrees. The firſt whereof is, the ſonne and the daughter; the ſecond, the nephew, and the neece; the third, the nephewes ſonne, and the neeces daughter. The fourth is the nephewes nephew, B or the ſonne in the fourth degree of lineall deſcent, and the neeces neece, or the daughter in the ſame degree of deſcent. The fift is he and ſhe that are three lineall deſcents from the childes child. And ſo are the reſt in their order, by what names ſoeuer they be called and knowne.

Now in this right line, whether aſcending or deſcending, the perſon, of whom the caſe or queſtion is mooued, commeth neere to the kindred of his fleſh. And therefore mariages in this line are prohibited infinitely, without any limitation; ſo as if Adam himſelfe were now aliue, he could not marrie by the law of God, becauſe he ſhould come neare to the kindred of his own fleſh, as Moſes ſpeaketh. The reaſon hereof is, C becauſe in the right line, ſuperiours and inferiours are to each other as parents and children; and the kindred betweene parents and children, beeing the firſt and neareſt of all other, their coniunction in marriage muſt needs be moſt vncleane, and repugnant vnto nature.

The collaterall or crooked line, is that, which walketh by the ſides of the right line, whether aſcending or deſcending, in the row of the kindred. And it is either vnequall or equall.

The vnequall is that, whereby the perſon in queſtion and his kinſman, are vnequally diſtant from the common ſtocke, or head of the kinred.

And in this line, looke how many degrees the kinſman that is furtheſt off from the common D ſtocke, is diſtant from the ſame, ſo many is he and his kinſman in queſtion diſtant one from the other.

For example,

Here Laban beeing remooued furtheſt off, to wit, three degrees from the common ſtocke Thare; is likewiſe three degrees diſtant from Abraham, his great vnckle, and Abraham ſo many from him.

Furthermore, kinſmen in this Line are of two ſorts; ſome are Superiours to the perſon in queſtion, ſome are Inferiours to him.

Superiours are ſuch, as are akinne to his father, and mother, of ſome ſide; and that either nearer, or further off.

Thoſe that are of neare kinne to them, be theſe. I. The vncle of the fathers ſide, or the fathers brother; the aunt of the fathers ſide, or fathers ſiſter. The vncle of the mothers ſide, or the mothers brother; the aunt of the mothers ſide, or the mothers ſiſter. II. The great vncle, or grandfathers brother; the great aunt, or grand-fathers ſiſter. The great vncle, or grand-mothers brother, and the great aunt, or grand-mothers ſiſter. III. The great vncle by the fathers ſide, or great grand-fathers brother; and the great aunt by the fathers ſide, or great grand-fathers ſiſter. The great vncle by the mothers ſide, or the great grand-mothers brother; and the great aunt by the mothers ſide, or the great grand-mothers ſiſter. IV. The great grand-vncle by the fathers ſide, or great grandfathers fathers brother: and the great grand-aunt by the ſame ſide, or the great grant-fathers fathers ſiſter. The great graund-vncle by the mothers ſide, or the great grand-mothers mothers brother: and the great grand-aunt by the ſame ſide, or the great grandmothers mothers ſiſter.

Now theſe in regard of their inferiours, are in ſtead of parents, and therefore do come neare to the kindred of their fleſh.

Thoſe ſuperiours which are of kindred to parents on the one ſide, a farre off, are theſe. I. The ſonne and daughter of the great vncle or aunt by the fathers ſide; or of the great vncle or aunt by the mothers ſide. II. The nephew and neece of the great vncle or aunt by the fathers ſide, or of the great vncle or aunt by the mothers ſide, neare to the cozin germane.

Sobrino propior.

And theſe as they ſtand in compariſon with their inferiours, doe not come neare to the kindred of their fleſh.

The equall collaterall line, is that, whereby kinſmen are equally diſtant from their head.

Kinſmen of this line, are, I. whole brothers, that is, brothers by the ſame father & mother, or halfe brothers, that is, brethren by the ſame father, but not by the ſame mother. Againe, whole ſiſters by the ſame father or mother, or halfe ſiſters by one of them and not by both. II. The brothers children or couſin germans; that is, the vncles ſonnes or daughters, or the aunts ſonnes or daughters. The ſiſters children, or couſingermans; that is, the aunts ſonnes or daughters, which are the children of two ſiſters. III. The couſin-german, the ſonne of the great vncle by the fathers or mothers ſide, and the couſingerman the ſonne of the great aunt, by the fathers or mothers ſide. The couſin-german the daughter of the great vncle, by the fathers or mothers ſide, and the couſin german, the daughter of the great aunt by the ſame ſides.

In this line, looke how many degrees the partie in queſtion is remooued from the common ſtock, by ſo many twice told, is he remoued from his kinſman in queſtion. Put the caſe betweene Bethuel and Iſaac, as in this example:

Here Bethuel beeing two degrees remooued from Thare, is foure degrees diſtant from Iſaac.

Now he that is in the ſecond degree of this line, comes neere to the kindred of his fleſh; and for that cauſe the mariages of brethren and ſiſters are vnlawfull, and forbidden.

But againſt this, ſundrie things are alleadged.

Obiect. 1. The ſonnes of Adam, who were the firſt brethren in the world, maried their ſiſters; mariages therefore in this degree may ſeeme to be lawfull. Anſw. The caſe of thoſe perſons in thoſe times, was a caſe of neceſſitie, which could not be auoided, and thereupon was warranted by diuine dipenſation. For God had giuen them his owne expreſſe commandement in this behalfe; Beare fruit and multiplie, Gen. 1. 28. Beſides that, there were then no other women in the world, by whom they might haue iſſue and poſteritie, but onely by their ſiſters. Whereupon it is manifeſt, that Gods will was, to permit them to take euen their ſiſters to their wiues. But now out of this ſpeciall diſpenſation from God, ſuch matching is vtterly vnlawfull, beeing an apparent breach of another expreſſe commandement giuen afterward by God himſelfe, Leuit. 18. 9. 11. To this purpoſe ſaith Auguſtine in way of anſwer to the example propounded; The practiſe of thoſe firſt times, then backed by vrgent neceſſitie; the more auncient it was, the more damnable it prooued afterward, when it was reſtrained by Gods commandement.

De ciuit. Dei. lib. 15. cap. 16.

Obiect. 2. Sarah was Abrahams ſiſter, and yet Abraham tooke her to wife. Gen. 20. 12. Yet in verie deede ſhe is my ſiſter, for ſhe is the daughter of my father, but not the daughter of my mother, and ſhe is my wife. Gen. 11. 29. Abraham and Nahor tooke them wiues, and the name of Abrahams wife was Sarah. Anſ. Touching this inſtance there are ſundrie opinions. The Iewes doe grant thus much, that ſhe was called by a name common to all kinsfolke of that ſexe, to wit, a Siſter; yet indeede ſhe was Abrahams neece, the ſiſter of Lot, and the daughter of Haran, Abrahams brother, which Moſes elſewhere calleth Iiſcha, Gen. 11. 29. Others thinke that ſhe was daughter in lawe to Thare, Abrahams father; becauſe Abraham himſelfe ſaith, She is the daughter of my father, not of my mother. Others are of opinion, that ſhe was Harans daughter in lawe, and after his death was tranſlated into the family of Terah, her grand-father; who was alſo in ſtead of her father beeing dead, and thence ſhe was tearmed his daughter. Now howſoeuer in this varietie of iudgements, it is hard to A finde certaintie of truth, yet this is out of doubt, that God in thoſe daies tolerated many things, which notwithſtanding he did not altogether approoue.

Obiect. 3. 2. Sam. 13. 13. Thamar ſaies to her brother Amnon; Speake I pray thee to the King, and he will not denie me vnto thee. Anſw. The ſpeach of Thamar is not ſimplie to be taken as if ſhe deſired that which ſhe ſaid, or as if it were lawfull to be done, which ſhe wiſhed him to doe; but onely that ſhe ſought to put him off, by giuing him this counſell, in reſpect of her owne deliuerance from that preſent danger wherein ſhe was. Or at leaſt it may be ſaid, that ſhe erroneouſly ſuppoſed it was lawfull for the B King to grant ſuch a ſuite, if it had beene made vnto him by her brother Amnon. Whether way ſoeuer this ſpeech be taken, there can no ſuch thing be gathered thence, as is pretended.

Now out of the ſecond degree of the equall collaterall line, it ſhould ſeeme that thoſe who are ioyned one to another in mariage, doe not touch the kindred of their fleſh; and therefore the lawe of God forbiddeth not conſobrines or couſin-germans, that is, brothers and ſiſters children to marrie.

Yea if examples be of force for this purpoſe, the Scripture approueth ſuch mariages. For thus it is written, that Iacob married Rahel the daughter of Laban, his mothers brother, Gen. 28. 2. Againe, that Mahlah, Tirzah, and Hoglah, C Milcah, and Noah the daughters of Zelophehad, were married vnto their fathers brothers ſonnes, Numb. 36. 11. And Othniel the ſonne of Kenaz, the couſin of Caleb, tooke Kiriath-ſepher; and he gaue him Acſah his daughter to wife, Ioſ. 15. 17.

Howbeit in this caſe, the rule of the Apoſtle is to be followed; That nothing be done, euen in things that are otherwiſe lawful, whereby a mans brother may ſtumble, or be offended, or made weak, Rom. 14. 21. Wherefore it is conuenient, that ſuch mariages ſhould not be, becauſe ſometimes they may giue offence in regard of the law of the Magiſtrate; and becauſe they come ſomwhat neare to the bonds and termes of blood and ſtocke, which God hath ſet downe in his word. D Auguſtine in his 15. booke De ciuitate Dei, chap. 16. ſaith to this purpoſe, Experti autem ſumus, &c. that is, We haue found by experience, that in regard of that neereneſſe of blood, which couſin-germans haue vnto the degrees of brothers and ſiſters, how rarely cuſtome hath admitted thoſe mariages, which were warrantable by lawes, becauſe the law of God hath not forbidden them, nor as yet the law of man. Neuertheleſſe the practiſe lawfull in it ſelfe, was forborne the rather, becauſe it came neare to that which was vnlawfull, and therefore marriage with the couſin-german, ſeemed in a manner to be marriage with a mans owne brother or ſiſter, &c. Howbeit, there is no queſtion, but in theſe times it hath beene well prouided by laws, that ſuch mariages ſhould not be vndertaken. For as the multiplication of alliance is hindred therby, ſo this inconuenience alſo grow- eth from them, that freindſhip and loue which is procured by affinitie, betweene men that are ſtrangers; cannot be enlarged and encreaſed, where men goe not out of the limits, and termes of their owne blood; Yea, there is naturally in man a commendable meaſure of ſhamefaſtneſſe, whereby vpon conſideration of neereneſſe in blood, he acknowledgeth a due debt of modeſtie and honour to his next kindred, and conſequently reſtraineth himſelfe in regard of them from the occaſions & actions of concupiſcence, whereunto he is inclinable in reſpect of others. And hence it is, that generally the modeſtie that ought to be in thoſe which intend mariage, auoideth as much as may be, theſe and ſuch like coniunctions. The ſame is the iudgement of Ambroſe in one of his Epiſtles to his friend Paternus, wherein he diſſwadeth him from marrying his ſonne with his couſin-german, vpon the grounds before alledged by Auguſtine, adding this withall, that though it were in it ſelfe lawfull, beeing no where forbidden by God, yet in ſundrie reſpects being inexpedient, it ought not to be done, according to the ſaying of the Apoſtle, All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient.

Epiſtol.lib. 8.epiſt.66.

1.Cor.6.

But it is auouched to the contrarie, that God by expreſſe law forbiddeth mariage with the aunt, the fathers ſiſter. Leuit. 18. 12. and with the mothers ſiſter, verſ. 13. and with the fathers brothers wife, which is alſo the aunt, verſ. 14. therefore by the law of proportion, he forbiddeth matching with the children of theſe perſons. For in nature it is a ruled caſe: If a man may not marrie the mother, much leſſe may he marrie the daughter.

Anſ. The argument is faultie, and concludes nothing to the purpoſe. For there is not the ſame reaſon of both. In the right line of conſanguinitie, thoſe which are ſiſters to father and mother, ſtand in the place and ſtead of parents; and their nephewes and neeces are to them as children, therefore mariages among them can ſtand by no law, either of God, of nature, or by the poſitiue lawes of nations. It is not ſo with couſin-germans. For hauing no ſuch relation, their is not in their mariages, by the law of Moſes, any diſco[illegible]e of ſhame, or breach of ciuill honeſtie. The bleſſing of God vpon ſome of them mentioned in Scripture, as vpon Iacob and Rahel, and ſuch like, doe euidently ſhewe that they were lawfull in themſelues, & pleaſing vnto him. And thus much touching kindred by blood or conſanguinitie.

Kindred in affinitie is that, whereby the termes of two kindreds, are brought into the ſocietie of one and the ſame familie; or whereby perſons that are not of blood, are by marriage allied each to other. Hence it is termed affinitie, becauſe it maketh an vnitie of termes in kindred, which before were diſtant.

Affinitie or alliance groweth by mixtion or participation of blood, in the coupling of man and wife together in lawfull mariage. For a bare and ſimple contract, maketh not alliance betweene partie and partie properly, but marriage after the contract finiſhed and conſummate.

Againe, the ſame alliance ceaſeth and determineth vpon the death of either partie eſpouſed or maried; yet ſo as the prohibition of coniunction remaines, and ſtands in force, for the preſeruation of publike honeſtie.

Now there is a kind of reſemblance and proportion betweene kindred of blood, and kindred by mariage, not only in regard of degrees and line, but alſo in reſpect of the prohibition of degrees.

Thoſe that are of alliance, are commonly reduced to theſe heads. I. The father in law, or the husbands or wiues father. The mother in law, or the husbands or wiues mother. II. The mothers husband, or ſtep father to them that come by another man. The fathers wife, or ſtepmother to thoſe that come by another woman. III. The wiues fathers father, or grand-father, and the wiues mothers mother, or grand-mother; or the grand-father and grand-mother of the wife. IV. The ſonne in law, or daughters husband, and the daughter in law, or ſonnes wife. V. The neeces husband, and the nephewes wife. VI. The ſtep-ſonne, or ſonne in law, that is, the ſonne of a man by another wife, or of a woman by another husband. The ſtep-daughter, or daughter in law, that is, the daughter of a man by another wife, or of a woman by another husband. VII. The ſtep-ſonnes ſonne, or his ſonne who comes of a man by another woman, or of a woman by another man. And the ſtep-daughters daughter, or her daughter who comes of a man by another woman, or of the woman by another husband. VIII. The husbands or wiues brother, and the husbands ſiſter, or brothers wife. IX. The ſiſters husband, and the brothers wife.

Concerning affinitie, I propound theſe rules.

I. Looke in what degree a man is of conſanguinitie to ones wife, in the ſame degree of affinitie he is to the wiues husband. And contrariwiſe: for example,

Here, if Marie Ioſephs wife, be diſtant from Eſau Ioſephs vncle by the fathers ſide, two degrees, then alſo is Ioſeph himſelfe diſtant from Aaron the brother of Eli his father in law, two degrees. If Marie the wife, be diſtant from her owne father Eli one degree, and from her grandfather Samuel two; then alſo is her husband diſtant from Eli his father in law, one degree, and from Samuel his wiues grand-father, two. Another example,

Here Herod beeing in the firſt degree of conſanguinitie with his brother Philip; Herodias his brothers wife is in the firſt degree of affinitie to him.

II. Rule. Couſins by mariage within the degrees, both of the right and collaterall line, do come neere to the kindred of their fleſh, in the ſame manner that couſins by blood doe, in the ſame lines; and the like degrees in both are forbidden. Therefore in the right line of affinitie it is as well vnlawfull for the father in lawe to marrie the daughter in lawe, or the ſonne in law to marrie the mother in lawe, as it is for the father to marrie the daughter, or the ſonne the mother. Againe, in the collaterall, it is as vnlawfull for the vncle by the mothers ſide, to marrie the wife of his ſiſters ſonne, and ſo in other degrees, as it is for him to match in the ſame degrees of conſanguinitie. The reaſon is, becauſe in theſe lines, as well as in thoſe of conſanguinitie, ſuperiours and inferiours, are each to others as parents and children.

From hence amongſt other things it may be gathered, that it is in no ſort lawfull for a man, when his wife is dead, to marrie her ſiſter, Leu. 18.16. Thou ſhalt not diſcouer the ſhame of thy brothers wife; for it is thy brothers ſhame. And Leuit. 20.21. The man that taketh his brothers wife, committeth filthines, becauſe he hath vncouered his brothers ſhame.

Againſt this doctrine it is obiected, Firſt, that God commaundeth not to take a wife with her ſiſter, during her life, Leuit. 18.18. in which place, he doth not ſimply forbid a man to marrie two ſiſters one after another, but to marrie them both together, and therefore after the wife is dead, a man may marrie her ſiſter.

Anſ. The place is a flat prohibition of the ſinne of Polygamie. For to take a wife to her ſiſter in the Hebrewe phraſe, is nothing elſe but to take two wiues one to another. The like forme of ſpeech is vſed otherwhere by Moſes, as Exod. 26.3. Fiue curtains ſhal be coupled together, [the woman to her ſiſter] that is, one to another; and the other fiue curtains ſhall be coupled [the woman to her ſiſter] that is, the one to the other. Ezech. 1.9. The foure beaſts were ioyned with their wings, [the woman to her ſiſter] that is, the one to the other. Againe, Moſes himſelfe there alleadgeth two reaſons againſt Polygamie: the one is, becauſe the man is to loue, cheriſh, and comfort his wife; whereas, if he ſhould take vnto him another beſides her, he ſhould greatly vexe his firſt lawfull wife. The other, becauſe by that meanes he ſhould vncouer the ſhame of his wife; that is, he ſhould play a verie diſhoneſt part with her, to whom he was before lawfully married.

Obiect. 2. The Lord commanded by a ſpeciall lawe, that the brother, in caſe his brother died without iſſue, ſhould take his wife, and raiſe vp ſeede vnto him, Deut. 25.5.

Anſw. The words of Moſes are a ſpeciall exception of a generall lawe propounded in Leu. 18.16. Thou ſhalt not diſcouer the ſhame of thy
A brothers wife; for it is thy brothers ſhame. And they are peculiarly directed to the Iſraelites, vpon ſpeciall cauſe; that, when the elder brother died without any ſeede, the name of the firſtborne might not be extinct, but the familie might be preſerued in that name, by raiſing vp of ſeede vnto him, which beeing a priuiledge proper to the Iſraelites, vpon that ſpeciall conſideration, it muſt not be enlarged to any other ſort of men whatſoeuer. Neither is the text to be vnderſtood of couſins remoooued onely, as ſome thinke, but alſo of the next of the kindred by blood; as appeareth plainely by the hiſtorie of Ruth, chap. 1. v. 11 in theſe words of Naomi to her daughters in lawe, Turne againe, my
B daughters; for what cauſe will you goe with me? Are there any moe ſonnes in my wombe, that they may be your huſbands? Turne againe, my daughters, goe your way, for I am too olde to haue a husband, &c.

III. Rule. The wiues kinſman by blood, is of affinitie to her husband onely; but vnto his kindred by blood, the ſaid kinſman hath no affinitie at all. So on the contrarie it is true, that though the husbands kinſman by blood, be allied to his wife, yet he hath no alliance to thoſe that are kinſmen of blood vnto her. The reaſon is, becauſe betweene the kindred of blood on the mans ſide, and the kindred of blood on the womans ſide, there is no affinitie. For the prohibition of the degrees of affinitie, hath force
C in thoſe onely which are the cauſe thereof, and goeth no further. Now the cauſe beeing onely in the maried perſons themſelues, the effect may not in reaſon be inlarged, to them that are of the ſame blood with either of them.

From this rule it followeth, that the kindred of both married perſons by blood, may lawfully match together. The ſonne in lawe may match with the daughter of his mother in lawe. The father and the ſonne by another wife, may marrie the mother and the daughter. Two brothers may lawfully match with two ſiſters.

Beza de repudiis. 82.

IV. Rule. Kindred of affinitie to the wife, are alſo kindred of affinitie to her husband; but how? not properly, but onely after a ſort, and as it were, of affinitie. So on the contrary.
D Kindred of alliance to the husband, are as it were of alliance to his wife. For example. The wife of my father in lawe, which is not my wiues owne mother, but her ſtep-mother, is, as it were, my mother in lawe, for ſhe is (as it were) of affinitie to me, becauſe ſhe is indeede of affinitie to my wife.

Thoſe which are of affinitie onely after a ſort, cannot conueniently match one with another. And therefore the ſonne in lawe may not marrie with his wiues ſtep-mother; becauſe being of affinitie to his wife, ſhe is in ſted of a mother in lawe to him. Neither may the daughter in lawe match with her husbands ſtep-father, becauſe he is (as it were) a ſtep-father to her. Againe my ſiſters husband may not marrie my brothers wife; for they are after a ſort brother and ſiſter each to other. The reaſon hereof is, becauſe the wife is holden in lawe a * part of her husband, and therefore if affinitie hinders mariage with one of the married couples, it hindreth as well in the like caſe and reſpect, mariage with the other.

* Cuius nuptias inire nō licet, eius nec coniugi. licet.

And thus much touching the diſtance of blood, which in the choice of perſons fit for mariage, is moſt neceſſarily to be obſerued. For in the 18. chap. of Leuiticus there are ſixteene ſeuerall ſorts of perſons with whom mariage is forbidden. The firſt is the mother. The ſecond is the ſtep-mother. The third, the ſiſter by the ſame father and mother. The fourth, the halfe-ſiſter, by one of the parents onely. The fifth, is the neece by the ſonne. The ſixth, the neece by the daughter. The ſeuenth the fathers ſiſter. The eight, the vncles, that is, the fathers brothers wife. The ninth, the mothers ſiſter. The tenth, the daughter in lawe, or ſonnes wife. The eleuenth, the brothers wife. The twelfth, the wiues mother. The thirteenth, the ſteppe-daughter, or the wiues daughter by an other husband, or husbands daughter by a former wife. The fourteenth, is the ſtep-ſonnes daughter, that is, his daughter who was the wiues ſonne by another husband. The fifteenth the ſtep-daughters daughter. The ſixteenth, is the wiues ſiſter. And not onely theſe, but all other anſwerable to them, either in the ſame or like degree, are by equall proportion forbidden to be had in mariage.

It is alledged, that the prohibitions mentioned in that chapter, are meerely Moſaicall, that is, Ceremoniall, and therefore doe not bind vs now in the newe Teſtament.

Anſw. It is a flat vntruth; as ſhall appeare by theſe reaſons.

Firſt, the Cananites long before theſe lawes were giuen by Moſes to the Iſraelites, were grieuouſly afflicted for the breach and contempt of the ſame, as may be gathered by that which is written in the ſame chapter of Leuit. ver. 3. According to the workes of the land of Canaan, yee ſhall not doe, neither walke in their ordinances. And ver. 24. You ſhall not defile your ſelues in any of theſe things; for in all theſe the nations are defiled, which I will caſt out before you. ver. 25. And the land is defiled; therefore I will viſite the wickedneſſe thereof vpon it, and the land ſhall vomit out her inhabitants.

Chap.18.

Secondly, the Prophets themſelues after Moſes, are wont to account theſe prohibitions not Ceremoniall, but Morall, Ezech. 22. 10. In thee haue they diſcouered their fathers ſhame; in thee haue they vexed her, that was polluted in her flowers. Amos 2. 7. A man and his father will goe in to a maid, to prophane the name of my holineſſe.

Thirdly, the ſame lawes are alſo vrged in the newe Teſtament, wherein Legall Ceremonies were determined, and had their ende. Mark. 6. 18. Iohn ſaid to Herod, It is not lawfull for thee to haue thy brothers wife. 1. Cor. 5. 1. It is heard A certainely, that there is Fornication among you, and ſuch Fornication, as is not once named among the Gentiles, that one ſhould haue his fathers wife.

Fourthly, Nature it ſelfe by proper inſtinct, abhorreth ſuch kind of coniunctions, and the prohibitions of them, haue ſufficient ground, euen from her principles. For to this purpoſe it is, that not onely the laws of the Romane Emperours, but alſo the ciuill Canons, and conſtitutions of men, very skilfull in that kind, haue in all ages expreſly beene made againſt ſuch perſons, as haue offended in thoſe ſocieties forbidden by the Law of Moſes.

Fiftly, the Lord himſelfe hath denounced many and great puniſhments to be inflicted vpon the breach of the ſame lawes. Leuit. 20. 11. B The man that lieth with his fathers wife, becauſe he hath vncouered his fathers ſhame, they ſhall both die, their blood ſhall be vpon them. ver. 12. The man that lieth with his daughter in lawe, they both ſhall die the death; they haue wrought abhomination; their blood ſhall be vpon them. v. 14. He that takes a wife and her mother, committeth wickednes; they ſhall burne him and them with fire. ver. 16. The man that taketh his ſiſter, his fathers daughter, or his mothers daughter, and ſeeth her ſhame, and ſhe ſeeth his ſhame; it is villanie: therefore they ſhall be cut off in the ſight of their people. ver. 20. The man that lieth with his fathers brothers wife, and vncouereth his vncles ſhame, they ſhall beare their iniquitie, and ſhall die childleſſe. Deut 23. 2. A baſtard ſhall C not enter into the congregation of the Lord, euen to his tenth generation. Deut. 27. 20. Curſed be he that lieth with his fathers wife.

The third eſſentiall Signe of a perſon mariageable, is abilitie and fitneſſe for procreation. And this in an holy and modeſt ſort is alwaies ſuppoſed to be in the partie contracted, vnleſſe the contrarie be manifeſtly knowne, and diſcerned by ſome apparent infirmitie in the bodie.

Hence I gather, that it is vnlawfull to make a contract with ſuch a perſon, as is vnfit for the vſe of Mariage, either by naturall conſtitution of bodie, or by accident. For example; in regard of ſickeneſſe, or of frigiditie, or of the palſie vncurable, or laſtly of the depriuation of the parts belonging to generation. Theſe and ſuch D like impediments are of force, though a contract ſhould alreadie be made, yet to make it a meere nullitie, conſidering that God maketh knowne his will in them, that he approoueth not of ſuch eſpouſals, but would haue them to be diſſolued.

Againe, that which is made betweene two perſons that are * vnder age, is to be holden and accounted as vnlawfull. And though it ſhould be done by conſent, or commandement of Parents, yet it is of no moment. This alwaies remembred; except it be ratified by a new conſent of the parties after they be come to age; or that they in the meane time haue had priuate and carnall copulation one with another.

* Impuberes.

Againe, put the caſe two be eſpouſed, whereof the one is vnder age, the other of full age; the partie that is of full age, ought to tarrie and expect the time, wherein the iſſue of the eſpouſalls formerly made, may be manifeſted. And the vnder-aged may not breake off conſent, either before, or when they be come to perfect yeares, but muſt reſt in expectation of the accompliſhment of the contract when he or ſhe ſhall be out of their minoritie.

The fourth eſſentiall Signe, is a ſound and healthfull conſtitution of bodie, free from diſeaſes incurably contagious.

Whereupon it followeth, that a promiſe of marriage made betweene thoſe, whereof the one hath a diſeaſe ſo loathſome, as that the other vpon good ground cannot poſſibly endure familiar ſocietie and company with him, though it doe not wholly hinder the vſe of the bodie, is vtterly vnlawfull.

Of this ſort is the Leproſie, the French poxe, and ſuch like. For ſeeing there cannot be any matrimoniall vſe of them that are tainted with ſuch contagious diſeaſes, without apparent danger of infecting each other, and thoſe alſo, which haue ſocietie with them, and others; yea and by this meanes the iſſue of their bodies, growing of a corrupted ſeede, are euen borne to perpetuall miſerie, and to great hurt and hinderance of the Common-wealth; the caſe is plaine, that ſuch mariages cannot be vndertaken with good conſcience.

Now if the one party haue a diſeaſe, though not contagious, yet either incurable, or ſo *loathſome, as the other hath iuſt cauſe to abhor his companie; for example, if he be ſicke of a Lethargie, of the falling ſickeneſſe, or ſuch like diſeaſes; then, though it be lawfull to match with him, becauſe ſuch a contract is not expreſly forbidden, neither is it apparently hurtfull to the Common-wealth, yet is it not expedient, becauſe the diſeaſe being loathſom to the ſound partie, the mariage alſo will become vnprofitable, and the partie in danger of breaking the commandement of the Morall lawe, wherein God forbiddeth to commit adulterie.

* Turpi.

The fifth eſſentiall Signe of a perſon marigeable, is freedome from mariage; whereby both the parties which enter contract, are ſo at libertie, that neither the man hath in preſent another wife, or is promiſed to another; nor the woman hath another husband, or is promiſed to another. The reaſon is, becauſe God himſelfe eſteemeth that mariage onely lawfull, wherein one man is ioyned to one woman, and they both into one fleſh; and conſequently iudgeth it vnlawfull, as for one man to haue more wiues; ſo for one woman at the ſame time to haue more husbands.

Hence it followeth, that it is againſt the law of God, and the firſt inſtitution of Mariage, that a contract ſhould be made betweene ſuch perſons, whereof the one is formerly betrothed to another. For ſo long as the firſt promiſe ſtands in force, the man can no more be betrothed to two women, then he may be the husband of two wiues; becauſe the ſpouſe by the bond of her promiſe to the man, becomes a wife; and the man by the bond of his promiſe to the woman, becomes an husband, Deut. 22. 23. 24.

Againe, there can be no ſure-making, and conſequently no mariage with ſuch a one, as either hath beene diuorced without a ſufficient cauſe, or hath wrongfully forſaken and reiected a lawfull mate before. To this purpoſe ſaith our Sauiour Chriſt, Matth. 19. 9. I ſay vnto you, that, whoſoeuer ſhall put away his wife, except it be for whoredome, and marieth another, committeth adulterie; and whoſoeuer marrieth her which his diuorced, committeth adultery. And S. Paul, 1. Cor. 7. 11. But and if ſhe depart, let her remaine vnmarried, or be reconciled vnto her husband, and let not the husband put away his wife.

Hitherto I haue treated of eſſentiall markes, which belong to the beeing of mariage. Now I come to thoſe that are accidentall.

An accidentall marke of a perſon fit for mariage, is that, which belongeth not to the beeing, but to the well beeing, that is, to the holineſſe and puritie of that eſtate. And of this ſort, there be three that are the principall.

The firſt is paritie or equality, in regard of Chriſtian religion; For in mariage, there is a ſpeciall care to be had, that beleeuers be matched with beleeuers, and Chriſtians with Chriſtians; not beleeuers with Infidels, or Chriſtians with Pagans. For the former ſort are onely and alwaies to be made and kept, and the latter to be auoided, yea inhibited by poſitiue lawes and conſtitutions, the breach whereof in ſuch caſes is ſeuerely to be puniſhed. The neglect of this point was one principall cauſe of the deſtruction of the old world by the floud. Gen. 6. 2. The ſonnes of God ſaw the daughters of men, that they were faire, and they tooke them wiues of all that they liked. Abraham obſerued it in the mariage of Iſaac his ſonne, and for that purpoſe tooke an oath of his ſeruant. Gen. 24. 3. I will make thee ſweare by the Lord God of heauen, and God of the earth, that thou ſhalt not take a wife vnto my ſonne of the daughters of the Cananites among whom I dwell. And in imitation of that holy example, Iſaac alſo giues a charge vnto Iacob his ſonne, that he ſhould not take a wife of the daughters of Canaan. Gen. 28. 1. Afterward there was an expreſſe law of God giuen by Moſes, touching the Gentiles that liued in that land. Exod. 34. 15. Beware that thou make not a couenant with the inhabitants of the land, &c. verſ. 16. And take of their daughters vnto thy ſonnes, and their daughters goe a whoring after their gods; and make thy ſonnes goe a whoring after their gods. And the ſame lawe was vrged by Ezra the Prieſt in his time. Ezra. 10. 11. Separate your ſelues from the people of the land, and from the ſtrange wiues. Laſtly, S. Paul exhorteth the Corinthians, 2. Cor.

Cor. 6. 14. Be not vnequally yoked with the Infidels. And Titus 3. 10. Reiect him that is an heretike, after once or twice admonition.

But ſuppoſe it falleth out, that the eſpouſals be paſt, and that both parties at the firſt were beleeuers, or one of them only; or that at firſt both were vnbeleeuers, and yet afterward one of them is conuerted to the faith: or further, admit that both were beleeuers at the contract, yet within ſome time after, the one becomes an Infidell, that is to ſay, a Iew, a Turke, or an obſtinate Heretike, that denies the faith, and raſeth euen the very foundation of Religion; in this caſe what is to be done? Surely euen ſuch eſpouſals once made and ended, if there be no other impediments but theſe, are to ſtand and continue firme and vnchangeable; ſo long as the vnbeleeuing partie doth willingly yeeld & ſubmit him or her ſelfe to the performance of mariage duties, properly belonging to man & wife. My reaſon is, the ſpeech of Paul, who ſaith; If any brother haue a wife, that beleeueth not, if ſhe be content to dwell with him, let him not forſake her. Againe, The woman which hath an husband that beleeueth not, if he be content to dwell with her, let her not forſake him, 1. Cor. 7. 12. 13.

If it be here alledged, that the ſinne of adulterie diſſolues the bond both of contract and mariage, and therefore much more doth Idolatrie or infidelitie, which is a ſinne farre more deteſtable then adulterie: I anſwer, that the queſtion is not, whether of theſe is the greater ſin, or more hainous in the ſight of God; for Infidelitie in both reſpects farre exceedeth the other; but whether of them is more repugnant to the nature and condition of wedlocke. Now the ſinne of adulterie is that alone, which breakes the bond, and renounceth the troth plighted in mariage, and is the proper cauſe of a diuorce, & not Idolatrie or Infidelitie.

The ſecond note, is parity or equalitie in regard of age and condition.

Firſt of Age; becauſe though the mariage of perſons, whoſe yeares are farre vnequall, is not expreſly forbidden in the word; yet it is agreeable to the rules of expediencie & decencie, that the aged ſhould match with the aged, the yonger with the yonger.

Reaſons are theſe. Firſt, becauſe the comforts of this ſocietie in likelihood will by this meanes alwaies be equall, and conſequently bring the more contentment to either partie. Secondly, theſe vnequall mariages are oftentimes offenſiue to others. Thirdly, they cannot but in ſome caſes prooue offenſiue euen to thẽſelues. For when a man of great yeares matcheth with a woman very yong, or a yong ſtripling marrieth an aged woman; the elder partie growing weake and impotent, may the ſooner come to be vnfit for marriage duties; and the yonger beeing of greater ſtrength and ability, the more in danger of beeing expoſed to incontinencie, and that in the higheſt degree, vnleſſe he be reſtrained by Gods ſpeciall grace. For this cauſe it was a great fault, wherewith on Apuleius was iuſtly charged, that beeing but a verie yong man, he was maried to a wife of 60. yeares of age.

Secondly, of condition and eſtate. For this alſo is anſwerable vnto the Apoſtles rule, who exhorteth men to thinke of, and to doe thoſe things which are true, iuſt, commendable, and of good report, Philip. 4. 8. Thus it is a ſeemely and commendable practiſe, that, the Prince, the Noble man, the free-man, the gentleman, the yeoman, &c. ſhould be ioyned in ſocietie with them, that are of the ſame or like condition with themſelues, and not otherwiſe. For this cauſe are the auncient Romans greatly to be commended, who (as we reade in their ſtories) had ſuch a carefull reſpect of their mariages in this behalfe, that they made lawes and conſtitutions for the reſtraining of inequality of worldly eſtate in ſuch ſocieties, by this meanes preuenting much confuſion and diſturbance in families, and other orders of men. Whereunto agrees that of Tertullian, who ſaith, That if a free woman had affianced her ſelfe to him that was a bond-man to another, and beeing thrice admoniſhed thereof, by him that had authoritie ouer her, did notwithſtanding perſeuere in her purpoſe; ſhe ſhould, according to the law, loſe her freedome.

The third note is publike honeſty and credit, whereby the contract made becomes a matter of good report, well thought and ſpoken of abroad. Whatſoeuer things are of good report, thinke on them, Philip. 4. 8. From hence I gather,

I. That it is an vnſeemely thing for a man to make promiſe of mariage to ſuch a woman, as hath beene formerly deflowred, or hath and is, or may be conuinced of adulterie, and vncleannes. Nay, I adde further, that a contract made with ſuch a one, as himſelfe hath before deflowred, is by the law of God vnlawfull. For the adulterer and the adultereſſe, by diuine law ſhould be put to death, and be cut off from humane ſocietie, Leuit. 20. 10.

II. It is altogerher inexpedient that a woman ſhould be married to ſuch a man, as hath a Concubine, vnleſſe he formerly renounce her, and teſtifie the ſame by true and vnfeined repentance. The reaſon is plaine. Such a marriage cannot be vndertaken in the Lord. And the partie himſelfe, beeing before polluted with his Concubine, becomes now by mariage to another, an adulterer; and ſhe that is married vnto him, by this her act yeelds conſent vnto his adulterie.

III. That no man profeſſing Chriſtian religion, much leſſe a Miniſter of the word, ought to take to himſelfe in mariage a harlot, a defamed woman, or one that comes of infamous parents, though ſhe be repentant. Leuit. 21. 7. The Prieſt ſhall not take to wife one that is a whore, or prophaned, that is to ſay, which hath an euill name, or comes of ignominious parents. Which law, though it was in part Ceremoniall and Leuiticall, and ſo farre forth abrogate ; yet hauing in it ſome Moralitie, in as much as the reaſon thereof (to wit, becauſe it is reprochfull to a Chriſtian, but ſpecially to a Miniſter) is ſtill in force, it is to be holden perpetuall. For Chriſtian profeſſion, and the Eccleſiaſticall Miniſtrie is principally to be reſpected, and whatſoeuer may preiudice the dignitie and credit thereof, to be auoided.

Obiect. 1. The Prophet Hoſea was commanded to take vnto him a wife of fornication, that is, an harlot, Hoſea 1. 2. Anſw. Hoſea did it not indeed, but in type and reſemblance. For God commanded him in his prophecie, to take vpon him (as it were) the perſon of a fornicator, that by this meanes he might the more effectually charge and conuince the Iſraelites of their vncleane and vnchaſt conuerſation.

Obiect. 2. The Lord alſo forbiddeth the Prieſt to marrie a widow, Leuit, 21. 14. it may ſeeme therefore vnexpedient for a miniſter ſo to doe. Anſ. The law concerning the mariage of a virgin, and not a widow, was not enioyned to all Prieſts, but onely to the chiefe Prieſt, Levit. 21. 10. And he alſo might marrie a widow, but ſuch a one onely, as had beene the widow of a Prieſt, and not any other, Ezech. 44. 22. Now this was commanded them vpon ſpeciall conſideration. For the high Prieſt was a type of Chriſt, and Chriſt was in time to come to call his Church, the elect, among the Gentiles, and to marrie them as a virgin eſpouſed vnto himſelfe. Yea he was alſo to marrie his Church as a widow; but the widow of a Prieſt only, becauſe he was to gather to himſelfe the remnants of the Church of the Iewes; Howbeit, not all of them, but ſuch only as came of the holy Fathers, and were Iſraelites, not according to the fleſh, but according to the promiſe.

IV. That it is not meet for a man to be contracted to the ſiſter of her that is alreadie affianced vnto him.

And ſo much of the firſt point, required to the making of a contract, namely, the choice of a perſon fit for mariage.

CHAP. 6.

Of conſent in the Contract.

THe ſecond thing required to the making of a contract, is the free and full conſent of the parties, which is indeed the verie ſoule and life of the contract. And this conſent ſtandeth in the approbation, or (as we commonly call it) the Sure-making of the parties contracted.

Conſent in this caſe is twofolde, either of the man and the woman, or of their parents.

Touching the firſt; That the man and the woman may yeeld free conſent each to other, it is neceſſarie that, in reſpect of vnderſtanding, their iudgement ſhould be ſound; and in regard of will, their choice ſhould be free. And here ſundrie caſes are to be reſolued.

I. Caſe. When the contract flowes not from the will and good liking of the parties, but is forced and compelled, what is then to bee done?

Anſ. If the eſpouſals haue beene made through force, or feare; I meane, ſuch as may befall a conſtant, and reſolute man, and which hath beene wrought, vpon good knowledge, and conſideration; then are they of no moment and in truth meere nullities; becauſe there is wanting to them the free & voluntarie accord, and aſſent of both parties. Neuertheleſſe, if afterward they ſhall grow to a new conſent, or both yeeld to an after-acceptatiō of that which was formerly made, the eſpouſals ſhall then ſtand in force; without further exception, or contradiction.

II. Caſe. But how if conſent be paſt, and in proceſſe of time it appeares to the eſpouſed perſons, that they haue erred, either in choice, or conſent, or both?

Anſ. There is a threefold error in conſent; the one of the perſon, the other of the abilitie, or eſtate of the perſon, the third of the qualitie.

Errour in reſpect of the perſon, is, when one perſon is taken for another, or when the contract is made betweene two, whereof the one was taken to be ſuch a partie, as afterwards he proued not to be. Now where this errour is committed, it is a plaine caſe, there was no conſent; and therefore the contract, vpon certaine knowledge thereof, is quite fruſtrate. For the knowledge of the partie is the ground of conſent, and belongs conſequently to the very ſubſtance of mariage.

Neuertheleſſe, if, the errour beeing once knowne, the parties haue had ſecret ſocietie one with another; and haue either againe conſented, or growne to an after-acceptation of the conſent before made, the contract may and doth ſtand in full force. For example: Iacob, by the deceit of Laban, had taken Leah for Rachel, to his wife: ſo ſaith the text, When the euening was come, Laban tooke Leah his daughter, and brought her to him, & he went in vnto her, Gen. 29. 23. But when the morning was come, behold it was Leah, 25. Now by the iudgement of the beſt Diuines, Iacob might iuſtly haue renounced Leah, if he would, becauſe Laban had giuen her vnto him for Rachel, and ſo deceiued him; yet he would not vſe extremitie, but kept her as his wife.

If it be ſaide, there was an error in the perſon, therefore no conſent, and ſo Leah was not his lawfull wife, but Rachel: I anſwer, that Iacob did renue his conſent afterward, and that renued conſent following vpon their knowing one of another, made her his wife, though in extremitie and rigour ſhee was not. Againe, Rachel was indeede the par-partie to whom he was eſpouſed, by the former contract; and therefore, vpon their mutuall agreement afterward, ſhe alſo became his wife. So ſaith the holy Ghoſt, verſ. 27. Fulfill ſeauen yeares for her, and we will alſo giue thee Rachel for thy ſeruice, &c. v. 28. Then Iacob did ſo, and Laban gaue him Rachel his daughter to be his wife.

Error of the abilitie or eſtate is, when one of the parties to whom conſent was giuen by the other, being taken for rich and wealthie, in the iſſue prooues to haue beene very poore, and not ſufficient to maintaine that ſtate of life.

Touching this error, it is to be conſidered, whether the cōtract was made abſolute, for the time preſent, & ſo for euer afterward, or conditionall for time to come only. If it were abſolute, that is, conceiued in termes of the preſent time, then though the deceit be verie offenſiue to the partie deluded, & vpon his complaint ought in equitie to be puniſhed by the Magiſtrate; yet it is not off force to break of the contract; becauſe the abilitie of either or both parties belongs not to the eſſence of marriage. But if it were for time to come and conditionate, then he or ſhee that made promiſe vpon this condition, is free and not bound in conſcience to fulfill the promiſe; vnleſſe the condition expreſſed aforehand be kept, and performed.

Error of the qualitie of the perſon is, when ſhe which was in the eſpouſals taken to be a virgin, is afterward found to be with childe by another, before they come together. By this errour the Couenant is made void, and becomes a meere nullitie; ſo as the man cannot be compelled, vpon true and certain knowledge thereof, to marrie the woman; but may renounce her, vnleſſe both parties come to a new agreement, or haue priuately knowne each other vpon mutuall conſent. For firſt, God did in expreſſe tearmes command the Iewes, that ſuch a woman ſhould be ſtoned to death: Deut. 22. 20. If the maid (that was giuen to wife) be not found a virgin, verſ. 21. then ſhall they bring the maid to the doore of her fathers houſe, and the men of her citie ſhall ſtone her with ſtones to death, becauſe ſhe hath wrought folly in Iſrael, by playing the whore in her fathers houſe. Therefore it was not the will of God, that ſhe ſhould be retained as a wife, but vtterly reiected and forſaken. Againe, this was ſo vſualll a practiſe in Iſrael vpon Gods commandement, that godly and righteous men, vpon the diſcouery of this error, would not in conſcience be perſwaded, to mary them to whom they had beene betrothed, Matth. 1. 18. Ioſeph her husband (hauing found, before Marie and he came together, that ſhe was with child) beeing a iuſt man, and not willing to make her a publike example, was minded to put her away ſecretly.

III. Caſe. What ſhall wee thinke of the eſpouſals of ſuch, as are furious, and franticke?

Anſ. We muſt diſtinguiſh of theſe diſeaſes. For Madnes is, either perpetuall, or by fits only with intermiſſion.

If it be perpetuall, the caſe is cleere, that whether one of the parties only, or both be franticke, the contract made between them, is altogether vnprofitable and vaine. For ſuch know not what they doe when they make a promiſe, and the conſent which paſſeth betwixt them cannot be free, full and perfect, but muſt needs be hindred and preiudiced by the heate and violence of their diſeaſe.

Now although perpetuall madneſſe be a iuſt impediment of mariage, and a ſufficient cauſe to diſſolue a contract, yet it is meete that there be a conuenient ſpace of time agreed vpon, wherein all meanes may be vſed for the curing of this diſeaſe, to the end that Gods will touching their amendment may be the more euidently knowne; and both the parties themſelues and their friends may giue teſtimony to the world, that they haue had a carefull reſpect of the contract before made.

Againe, if it be not continuall, but by * fits, ſo as they haue ſome good daies, and quiet intermiſſion, the caſe is otherwiſe. For the contract ſhall be ratified, and ſtand in force: prouided, that it was manifeſtly knowne, that the ſaid parties were both in their right wits, before they plight their troth each to other; and themſelues be willing afterwards to confirme their promiſe formerly made, by renuing their conſent.

Conſent of the Parents, is that act whereby they giue their word and promiſe, to beſtow their children in mariage, & in regard of right, do indeed preſently beſtow them.

Therefore priuate contracts, that are made without free and lawfull conſent of parents, are not only vnprofitable and vnlawfull, but euen by the law of God meere nullities. Reaſons. I. They are contrarie to the expreſſe wil and commandement of God: Exod. 20. Honour thy father and thy mother. II. They are flat repugnant to naturall equitie; which teacheth, that he who hath not power, nor right ouer himſelfe, cannot bind himſelfe by promiſe to another. Now childrē haue not power ouer themſelues, but are vnder the gouernment, and at the diſpoſition of their Parents; therefore the couenants which they make, are not made and appointed of God, and thoſe which God maketh not, are indeed, and truth none at all.

Gal. 4. 1.

CHAP. 7.

Of Reiection, or Refuſall of the Contract.

Contrary to a complete and lawfull contract is Reiection, whereby the Contract is diſſolued, or broken off.

Repudium.

A lawfull Contract is then diſſolued, when ſome

ſome great and hainous fault followeth immediately vpon it, in either of the parties eſpouſed. And from hence ariſe diuers and ſundrie caſes to be ſet downe and reſolued.

The firſt is this. What is to be done, whē ſome diſeaſe befalls one of the parties immediately after the contract made.

Anſ. Thoſe diſeaſes which take away the vſe of the bodie, and altogether diſable the partie from the performance of the promiſe made, in reſpect of mariage duties, are very iuſt impediments of mariage, and conſequently doe break off the Contract. Of which ſort are vncurable palſies, frigiditie, and ſuch like, whereof I haue ſpoken before.

Neuertheleſſe a couenant once made is not ſuddenly to be renounced, for feare of breeding offence. And therefore ſome longer reſpite is to be taken frō the time of the contract, in which they are to reſt in expectation of amendment, before the ſaid diſeaſes be publikely and ſolemnely declared to bee incurable, and conſequently that the couenant made is become void.

Now, if the diſeaſe doe not for the preſent take away the vſe of the bodie, and yet in time proues incurably contagious, and ſo lothſome, that the one may iuſtly feare to keepe and conuerſe with the other; as it falleth out when one is tainted with leproſie; then the contract is vtterly to be diſſolued, as if God himſelfe ſhould haue commanded it, though the promiſe was formerly made, & the parties themſelues ſhould be vnwilling. God hath ordained Matrimonie to helpe, not to hurt, either the perſons themthemſelues, or others. Where therefore theſe diſeaſes be, which may infect, hurt, or deſtroy others, there God hath, as it were, teſtified from heauen, that the act done is not pleaſing vnto him, and that preſently it ought to be fruſtrate.

The contract beeing thus once diſſolued, the ſounder partie ſhall be at his, or her libertie to marrie againe. But the diſeaſed is by the Magiſtrates authoritie, to be forbidden ſocietie with any other in way of mariage, and commanded to lead his life, where he may conueniently from companie, for feare of infection. And withall he is for his owne part, to ſue vnto God by prayer in faith for the gift of continencie. For certaine it is, that he to whom God hath denied the power of vſing mariage with good conſcience, is thereby euen called to continencie and ſingle life.

But if the diſeaſe be not contagious, yet either incurable, or ſo naſtie, that either of the eſpouſed hath iuſt cauſe to be afraid of the others companie; then both are to be aduiſed, not to claime their right, but willingly to ſurrender it each to other by mutuall conſent, that they may be free againe, and not bound by any former promiſe to liue together as man and wife; Conſidering that they haue no hope mutually to conuerſe together, with comfort and contentment, while they ſo remaine.

Vpon this aduice giuen by their lawfull Paſtor, or ſome in his ſtead; if they both yeeld, or one of them at the leaſt deſires to be at his owne libertie, the eſpouſals are forthwith to be broken off. But if neither will conſent to a ſeparation, but rather proceed as they haue begun, and in probabilitie the one haue no iuſt cauſe to hold the other in ſuſpition, in reſpect contagion; they are not to be hindered from the conſummation of their mariage.

Furthermore, though one of them ſhould haue a diſeaſe, which is continuall without intermiſſion, aud yet curable, or any other inconuenience ſhould befall either of them, after the ſure-making whereby they become lame, deaf, or dumbe, &c. yet this is not a ſufficient cauſe to mooue them to renounce, and diſſolue the contract.

A ſecond Caſe. What if it falleth out, that after the finiſhing of the contract, one of the eſpouſed perſons be long abſent frō the other, ſo as the abſence be preiudiciall to the mariage, that ſhould enſue vpon the contract?

Anſ. Inqurie muſt be made, whether this abſence be voluntarie, or againſt the will of the partie.

If it be voluntarie. For example; if the man vpon an honeſt and iuſt cauſe, the woman alſo being priuie thereunto, ſhall goe beyond ſeas, and beeing admoniſhed of his dutie before hand, ſhall notwithſtanding ſtay a whole yeare or more, and will not returne, but further wilfully abſent himſelfe; then may it be lawfull to the woman, to craue of the publike Magiſtrate a diſſolution of the couenant made, and conſequently marry another man, vnleſſe the former, to whom ſhe was contracted, be heard of. If he be, then ſhall it be lawfull for him to pleade for himſelfe, and tendring no iuſt cauſe of his refuſall, he ſhall be forced by the Magiſtrates authoritie to ſtand to his promiſe, and take the woman for his wife. And the ſame order is to be taken in the wilfull abſence of the woman, after ſhe is contracted.

If againe, the man or woman ſhall vpon an euill minde, and with purpoſe to deceiue each other, abſent themſelues, and depart; meanes muſt be vſed, that they may be admoniſhed of their dutie. That being done, or at leaſt vndertaken, and yet the partie offending will not appeare, if the other that is preſent, vpon certaine knowledge of his, or her want in reſpect of continencie, ſhall ſue to the Magiſtrate; after publike and ſolemne notice giuen, the contract may be broken.

But if on the other ſide, either of them be abſent againſt their will, and intendeth no fraud or deceit, but is violently detained, by captiuitie impriſonment, ſicknes, force; baniſhment, tranſportation or ſuch like; then the partie preſent beeing deſirous of the conſummatiō of the mariage, ought either to make meanes vnto him, and expect his return or haue taine notice of his death, before ſhe promiſe, or haue to doe with any other in way of mariage.

A third Caſe. What if after the contract, one of the parties becomes furious, or madde?

Anſ. If the diſeaſe be continuall, without intermiſſion, in all equitie and likelihood, the eſpouſals are to be diſſolued, vnleſſe both parties after knowledge and experience of the diſeaſe, haue knowne one another: yet in this, and all ſuch like caſes, it is fit that good means be tried and vſed, and ſufficient time be giuen for the reſtoring of the diſeaſed, to their former good eſtate, and for the accompliſhment of the mariage lawfully begun, as before.

CHAP. VIII.

Of Mariage.

Mariage is that, whereby the coniunction formerly begun in the contract, is ſolemnely manifeſted, and brought to perfection. Mariage is conſummate by three ſorts of actions; one of the parents of the Bride and Bridegroome, the other of the Miniſter in publik, the third of the perſons coupled together.

The action of the Parents is vpon the Mariage-day, to bring the Bride, and deliuer her to the Bride-groome, that they two may become actually man and wife, and performe each to other all matrimoniall duties.

And where the marriage is complete, in any other manner, ſo as the Parents vpon ſounde iudgement and deliberation, ſhall denie their full & free conſent, either in expreſſe words, or by conniuence and ſilence, and that vpon iuſt & lawfull cauſe; there, though in the ciuill courts of men, it may ſtand, and the children borne therein be legitimate before men, yet the truth is, before God it is of no force, but a meere nullitie.

And becauſe this doctrine, touching conſent of parents in theſe Caſes, is of great vſe, and auaileth much to the ſupporting and maintaining of families; I will firſt open the truth therof, and then prooue it by reaſons.

Vnder the name of parents are comprehended; Firſt, the Father and Mother. Secondly, all Tutors and Guardians, who haue the proper & ſole charge of wards, or others vnder yeares of diſcretion. Thirdly, all ſuch as are kindred of blood, who are in ſtead of parents to children, as the vncle by the fathers ſide, the vncle by the mothers ſide, and ſuch like.

Now touching the conſent of parents, that is of father and mother, I hold it requiſite of neceſſitie to mariage: For the authoritie of parents muſt not be reſiſted, or violated. As for Tutors, and ſuch as haue the place of parents, their conſent is not required of neceſſitie, but * of honeſtie at leaſt, becauſe the power and authoritie of the parent, though it be not taken away, yet it is leſſened, when it is either transferred to another perſon, or in part reſteth in the child al- A readie beſtowed.

Secondly, by parents conſent, I vnderſtand that which they giue, not raſhly, vnaduiſedly, or fooliſhly, but out of good and wiſe conſideration, and vpon true and ſound iudgement of the buſineſſe in hand: For otherwiſe, as much as in them lieth, they make the mariage void and of none effect. And they are then thought to carrie a right iudgement of the thing, when they be able to yeeld a iuſt cauſe of yeelding, or denying their conſent. For example: if a father denies to beſtow his daughter Iulia vpon Sempronius, becauſe he knowes him to be an Arrian, a Pelagian, or of any other ſort of Heretiks; he withholdeth his conſent vpon a good B ground, and he doth that which he doth, of iudgement.

Yet further I adde, that where the parents doe diſſent, and can yeeld no probable cauſe thereof; the mariage conſummate without their conſent, ought to be confirmed and ratified by the authoritie of the Magiſtrate, who is Pater patriæ. And this ſeemes to be the moſt equall courſe, both for the auoiding of greater ſcandalls, and for the preuenting of wrong, that may otherwiſe be done in ſome particular caſe, as to a woman that is defloured and reiected.

Thirdly, conſent of parents is either expreſſed, or implied; Expreſſed, when it is giuen by words; Implied, when it is yeelded by ſilence. C For it ſtandeth with moſt equitie and indifferencie, to thinke that thoſe parents doe giue conſent, who doe not by word expreſly denie the ſame.

Fourthly, children are either ſubiect to the authoritie of their parents in the familie; or at their owne liberty, and out of their parents ſubiection. Thoſe that are at libertie, are tied neceſſarily to ſubiection in reſpect of mariage; but the other beeing ſtill of the familie, and vnder iuriſdiction, are bound to be ordered by their parents in the beſtowing of themſelues.

This is briefly the meaning of the queſtion in hand. Now, for proofe of this point, I will propound three ſorts of arguments, whereof ſome are drawne from the law of God, ſome D from the light of nature, and ſome from the iudgement of the ancient Church.

For the firſt ſort. According to the law of God, mariage is not only a ciuill and politike, but alſo a diuine and ſpirituall coniunction, the author and ordainer whereof, vpon ſpeciall cauſe, was God himſelfe: This our Sauiour Chriſt witneſſeth, when he ſaith, Thoſe whome God hath ioyned together, let no man ſeparate, Matth. 19. 6. That therefore mariages may be ſoundly ratified and confirmed, the authoritie and power of God himſelſe is neceſſarily to be interpoſed.

If it be asked, How God that is in heauen, ſhould bring and ioyne together man and wife vpon the earth?

I anſwer, that he doth it not immediately by himſelfe, as he brought Euah vnto Adam, but in and by ſome ſolemne and lawfull meanes.

And this meane, is that great and ancient power and prerogatiue of parents. And the lawe of God hath giuen them this power, not in ciuill contracts & in compoſitions alone, but euen in the beginning and accompliſhing of mariages. Deut. 7.3. Thou ſhalt not giue thy daughter vnto his ſonne, nor take his daughter vnto thy ſon. Ier. 29. 6. Take wiues for your ſonnes, and giue your daughters vnto husbands, that they may beare ſonnes and daughters. 1. Cor. 7.36. But if any man thinke that it is vncomly for his virgin, if ſhe paſſe the flower of her age, and neede ſo require, let him doe what he will, he ſinneth not, let them be married.

Hence it was, that Abraham by right of this authoritie, gaue order what wife his ſeruant ſhould prouide for his ſonne; Thou ſhalt not take a wife to my ſonne of the daughters of the Canaanites; But thou ſhalt goe vnto my countrie, and to my kindred, and take a wife vnto my ſonne Iſaac, Gen. 24. 3. 4. Sampſon, though he was inflamed with the loue of the woman in Timnath, whom he ſawe to be beautifull in his eye, yet he durſt not take her to his wife, till ſhe was giuen him of his parents, Iudg. 14. It was an expreſſe lawe of God, that if a man intiſed a maid that was not betrothed, & lay with her, he ſhould endowe her, and take her to his wife: But how? marke in what manner the holy Ghoſt proceedeth, If her father refuſe to giue her to him, he ſhall pay money according to the dowrie of virgins, Exod. 22. 16. 17. Deut. 22. 28, 29. In which text, Moſes plainely teacheth, that the conſent of the two parties is not ſufficient, no not though they haue had ſocietie together, vnleſſe they haue the free conſent of their parents alſo. In like manner it was ordained by God, Numb. 30. 4. 5. 6. That if a woman vowed a vowe vnto the Lord, beeing in her fathers houſe, and her father hearing it, holdeth his peace concerning her, that is, approoueth her vowe by winking at it, her vowe ſhall ſtand. But if her father diſallowe her, that is, giueth no approbation or conſent vnto the vowe made, it ſhall be of no value, and the Lord will forgiue her, becauſe her father conſented not. Now, if the vowe of children made vnto God, and pertaining to his worſhip, cannot be ratified without the parents approbation; of how much leſſe force ſhall any priuate contract or mariage be, without their allowance?

The ſecond argument is taken from the light of nature, and it is gathered by proportion, on this manner. A ſonne priuily alienateth and ſelleth away his fathers lands, either in whole or in part. The queſtion is, whether this alienation be good in lawe, yea or no? Anſwer is, No. And why? Becauſe the land did not belong to the ſonne, but was part of his fathers ſubſtance. In like manner, a ſonne alienats himſelfe and is betrothed to a woman, to marrie her without his parents knowledge: Is this act of the ſonne warrantable and ſound? By no meanes: for the ſonne in reſpect of his bodie is part of the fathers goods, and may not be alienated from him without conſent. A notable reaſon hereof we finde in Iob 1. For when God had giuen Satan power to deſtroy and ſpoile all Iobs goods, and whatſoeuer he had, the deuill doth not onely touch the wealth of Iob, but his children alſo, as a part of his ſubſtance. In this reſpect the Iewes were permitted by God to ſell their children. Exod. 21.7.

Againe, for the accompliſhment of mariage, there muſt needes be a mutuall donation, betweene the ſpouſe and the eſpouſed. And what is that which is mutually giuen? Surely their perſons, or rather their bodies each to other: for ſo Paul ſaith, 1. Cor. 7.2. Let euery man haue his wife, and let euery woman haue her owne husband. But by whome is this donation to be made? by ſonnes and daughters that are in the familie, vnder the iuriſdiction of their parents? It may not be: For nature her ſelfe taketh it for granted, that he which is not at his owne libertie, cannot yeeld to the giuing of himſelfe. The donation therefore remaines in the right of the parent, in as much as the wil and conſent of the child, ought to depend vpon his will and conſent, to whome God hath giuen power and authoritie in this behalfe.

In the third place, let the iudgement of the auncient Church be obſerued. Ambroſe in his firſt booke of the Patriarch Abraham, chap. 9. requires this conſent in mariages, which he ſaith is ſo equall and agreeable to nature, that euen the Poets acknowledged the ſame. For which purpoſe he reciteth two verſes out of the Grecian Poet Euripides, in his Tragedie called Andromacha, wherein when Oreſtes deſired to marrie Hermion, ſhee frames him this anſwer, That the matter of her mariage wholly depended vpon the pleaſure and authoritie of her father, and was not in her owne power or liberty. Innocentius, who was both a Pope and Martyr, in his decretal epiſtles, ſo ſtrictly requireth conſent of parents, as where it is wanting, he concludes the marriage to be voide. In the Councell of Lateran, it was decreed that Clandeſtine contracts and ſecret mariages, made and vndertaken betweene partie and partie, ſhould be holden as vnlawfull as mariages in thoſe degrees of conſanguinitie and affinitie, which are forbidden by God. Tertullian ſaith, That *in this world the ſonne can not * rightly and lawfully marrie without the allowance of his father.* Baſil in an Epiſtle to Amphilochius Biſhop of Iconium, affirmeth; That mariages which are made without them which haue power ouer the parties, are fornications, and therefore that they which are ioyned together in mariage, while their parents or maſters liue, are in no ſort free from imputation of ſinne, vntill they haue approbation from them, for then mariage is ratiſied and confirmed, when they haue yeelded allowance thereunto.

The ſecond Action touching the conſummation of Mariage, is the action of the Miniſter. And that is the bleſſing or ſanctification thereof, of, which is a ſolemne worke, whereby the miniſter pronouncing the parties cōtracted to be man and wife before the whole congregation, commendeth them and their eſtate vnto God by ſolemne prayer.

This ſolemne ſanctification is grounded vpon the practiſe of God himſelfe, who hauing giuen Euah to Adam, bleſſed them, ſaying, Increaſe and multiplie, Gen 2.22. and 1.27. For that which God then gaue, the Miniſter ſtanding in his roome, now prayeth may be giuen to the man and wife. Yea it is agreeable to the generall rule of the Apoſtle, Let all things be done decently and in order. 1.Cor.14.40.

Now that this action is to be approoued and vſed in the Church, appeares by theſe reaſons. I. Mariage as it is a publike action, ſo it is after a ſort a ſpirituall and diuine ordinance, whereby it differeth from the contract: For the contract beeing meerly ciuil, as it ſtandeth by conſent of men, ſo by the ſame conſent, it may be broken and diſſolued, but with mariage it is otherwiſe. II. Mariage is the Seminarie of the Church and Common-wealth. III. It was the practiſe of the Primitiue Church. Tertullian ſpeaking of mariage of Chriſtians with Chriſtians, acknowledgeth himſelfe not to be able ſufficiently to declare the happineſſe of that coniunction which is made by the Church, conſecrated by prayers and * ſolemne ſeruice, witneſſed by the Angels, and ratified by God himſelfe. Nicephorus reporteth of one Syneſius, who auouched that God, and the lawes, and the holy hand of Theophylus had giuen him a wife. Ambroſe ſaith, That mariage ought to be ſanctified, with the vaile wherewith the Prieſt was wont to couer the Bride and the Bride-groome in the publike congregation, and with his bleſſing.

Lib.2.ad vxorem.

* Oblationē ſic exponit Beatus Rhenanus. Niceph.l.14.c.55. Ambroſ. epiſt 19. epiſt. 70. ad Vigil.

The third and laſt action belonging to the accompliſhment of this eſtate, is, that of the parties themſelues, whereby the Bride is in decent and modeſt manner, brought vnto the houſe and home of the Bride-groome. It is the lawe of this eſtate publiſhed by God himſelfe in Paradiſe, that the man, euen in reſpect of habitation, ſhould leaue father and mother and cleaue to his wife, Gen.2.24.

Here queſtion is mooued, whether mariage is to be ſolemnized with mirth and feaſting. Anſ. I. It is lawfull and warrantable to vſe feaſting and mirth at mariages, becauſe theſe be things indifferent, and we haue examples thereof in the Scriptures. Laban made a feaſt at the wedding of Iacob and Rachel, and inuited all the men of the place to it, Gen 29.22. Chriſt himſelfe did approue the reſort of people to the mariage at Cana in Galilee, both by his preſence, and by that honourable gift of ſixe waterpots of the beſt wine, Ioh. 2.2.7.8. II. It is not onely lawfull, but conuenient and fit to be done, if there be abilitie; according to the commendable cuſtome of the place and country wherein men do dwel; ſo as in the vſe thereof, theſe cautions be obſerued. Firſt, that in mirth and merrie-making, there be care had that nothing be done which is diſhoneſt, prophane, or of ill report. Philip.4.8. Whatſoeuer things are honeſt, pure, of good report, thinke on theſe things. Secondly, That ioy in them be mixed and moderated with the feare of God, without which, Laughter and reioycing is meere madneſſe, Eccleſ.2.2. Thirdly, That it be performed in a moderate and ſober vſe of the creatures, without riot and exceſſe. Thus we reade that at the great feaſt of Ahaſhueroſh, it was appointed by the King himſelfe, that they ſhould drinke orderly, and none might compell another to drinke more then he thought conuenient, Eſter. 1.8. And where weddings are kept contrarie to theſe directions, they are not feaſts celebrated vnto God, but vnto the deuil; which alſo may be ſaid of all other feſtiuall meetings.

And ſo much touching the point of mariage, in which this is to be remembred for a concluſion, That where there is generally a nullitie in the contract, or a ſeparation following vpon it, there is alſo a nullitie in regard of the conſummation of mariage.

CHAP. IX.

Of the duties of married perſons.

THus farre haue we proceeded in the doctrine of mariage; and nowe we come to the duties which they who be maried are to performe each to other.

Theſe are principally two: Cohabitation, and Communion.

Cohabitation is their quiet and comfortable dwelling together in one place, for the better performance of mutuall duties. 1.Cor.7.10. And to the married command I, not I but the Lord, let not the wife ſeparate her ſelfe from her husband: verſ. 12. But to the remnant I ſay, not the Lord, If any brother haue an vnbeleeuing wife, and ſhe be content to dwell with him, let him not forſake her: verſ. 13. And the wife which hath an vnbeleeuing husband, which is content to dwell with her, let her not forſake him. 1.Pet.3.7. Likewiſe let the men dwell together, as becommeth them that haue knowledge; giuing honour to the woman as to the weaker veſſell, euen as they which are heires together of the grace of life, that your prayers be not interrupted.

This dutie muſt be kept eſpecially the firſt yeare of mariage, Deut.24.5. When a man taketh a wife, he ſhall not goe on warfare, neither ſhall be charged with any buſines, but ſhall be free at home one yeere, and reioyce with his wife which he hath taken. And the ground of this commandement, no doubt, is, that they might learne to knowe one anothers conditions, and that they might worke a ſettled affection one towards another, which afterward vpon no occaſion might be changed.

wards

Yet they may be abſent each from other in two caſes; Firſt, vpon mutuall conſent for a time, for the performing of ſome buſines, that is requiſite for the familie, Prou.7.19. For mine husband is not at home, he is gone a farre iourney: at the appointed time he will returne againe. Secondly, the like abſence is allowed, when ſome great and weighty affaires either in the Church or Common-wealth are in hand, Sam. 11.9. 10. But Vriah ſlept at the doore of the Kings Palace, with all the ſeruants of his Lord, and went not downe to his houſe, v.11. Then Vriah anſwered Dauid; The Arke, and Iſrael, and Iudah dwell in tents, and my Lord Ioab, and al the ſeruants of my Lord abide in the open field; ſhall I then goe into my houſe to eate, and drinke, and lie with my wife? by thy life, and by the life of my ſoule, I will not doe this thing.

Hence ariſeth a queſtion: What if after mariage conſummate, there grow vpon one of the parties a contagious diſeaſe that cannot be cured, but is ſo lothſom, that the other whole partie cannot endure cohabitation at all?

Anſ. Both the mariage it ſelfe, and the dutie of dwelling together, ought to continue firme and ſure notwithſtanding: yet ſo as the partie neither may, nor ought in good conſcience, to deſire coniunction with other, whereby he, or ſhe may bring infection vpon themſelues, conſequently hurt their children, and indanger the Common-wealth.

But if either of the parties haue not the gift of continencie, nor cannot abſtaine; they muſt ſue for it vnto God in earneſt praier, who will giue it vnto them.

For there God hath called a man or woman to continencie, where they be neceſſarily hindred from the vſe of the ordinarie and lawfull remedie of the contract.

The contrarie to Cohabitation is Deſertion.

Deſertion is, when one of the maried folkes, vpon a wilfull, and obſtinate minde of their owne head, departeth from the other, without a iuſt, and neceſſarie cauſe.

Touching this point, there be ſundrie Caſes expounded.

I. Caſe. Suppoſe that an husband which is an vnbeleeuer, or an heretik in the foundation, of his owne accord, vpon deteſtation of true religion, quite forſakes the beleeuing wife, and denies any more to dwell with her; what is to be done?

Anſ. All good meanes muſt be firſt vſed to bring the infected partie to repentance; and when none will ſucceed, but the caſe remaineth deſperate, then mariage is diſſolued on his part, and the beleeuing wife is free to marrie another. So ſaith the Apoſtle, 1. Cor. 7.15. If the vnbeleeuing partie depart, let him depart: a brother or a ſiſter is not in ſubiection in ſuch things: but God hath called vs vnto peace. In which words obſerue a twofold reaſon: I. He that is A at libertie may marrie another; now the beleeuing partie forſaken, is at libertie; becauſe he is not in ſubiection in ſuch things: therefore he may marrie another. II. God hath called vs vnto peace, ſaith Paul, and this peace cannot be kept, if the beleeuing partie forſaken cannot containe, vnleſſe he marrie. Ambroſe vpon the place ſaith, That mariage cannot ſtand firme, which is ſeparated from the worſhip and ſeruice of God; and therefore it is no ſinne in the partie that is forſaken for Gods cauſe, to be married to another: and the vnbeleeuer departing, ſinneth both againſt God, and againſt the law of wedlocke, becauſe he denies to remaine in that eſtate, in regard of religion. Therefore he breakes the B couenant of mariage, and the other is not bound in this caſe to keepe touch with him. Lombard, the maſter of the ſentences, ſaith, That the beleeuing partie in this caſe, is not bound to follow the vnbeleeuer when he departeth, but while he liues may marrie another. Auguſtine affirmeth, that euen the wife which is ioyned to her husband in lawfull ſocietie, if ſhee will not abide with her Chriſtian husband, becauſe he is a Chriſtian, may be forſaken and left, without ſinne. And it is farre better that the couenant ſhould be diſſolued, that man and wife haue made each with other, then that the Couenant which man hath made with God. The people of Iſrael beeing in affliction, were conſtrained to breake the former made with ſtrange women, that they might C keepe the latter, Ezr.10.11.19.

Ambroſ. in 1. Cor.7.15.

Lib.4.diſt.39.

Lib.de Fide & oper.c.16.

It is alleadged, that the vnbeleeuing partie may haply repent, and then to make a diſſolution is in vaine. But I ſay, that it is as likely that he will neuer repent, and theerefore there is cauſe that the knot ſhould be diſſolued.

Againe, it is lawfull (ſay ſome) to make a diuorce out of the caſe of Adulterie. Anſ. The beleeuing partie which is forſaken, is not the cauſe of the diuorce, but is a patient of the ſeparation, wrongfully made by the vnbeleeuer. And Chriſt where he mentioneth the Caſe of Adulterie, Matth. 19. ſpeaketh of an equall mariage, whereas Paul ſpeakes of an equall.

II. Caſe. What if there fall out a deſertion between two married folkes, which are both D beleeuers?

Anſ. The faultie perſon, who is the cauſe of this deſertion, is to be forced by courſe of Ciuill, and Eccleſiaſticall cenſure, to performe his, or her dutie. Vpon which proceeding, if he remaine obſtinate and peruerſe in wil; the other muſt in patience, and earneſt prayer vnto God, waite the time, vntil his minde may be changed and he made to relent by the order of the Magiſtrate. But if the one of them, by iuſt occaſion of feare, be compelled to depart from the oother; and cannot returne againe without apparent danger of life; in this caſe they are not bound to return; but the delinquent partie is to remaine ſolitarie, till they be inſtructed & made willing to doe their duties: and in the meane while, the partie innocent muſt bee reſolued that God hath called him or her to ſingle life.

Againe, be it that the one is reſolutely vnwilling to dwell with the other, and thereupon flies away without any fault of the other; if the thing after a long ſpace be ſufficiently knowne before-hand, and all poſſible meanes haue bin vſed, to reclaime the guiltie perſon; yea beeing called, he doth not perſonally appeare before the Iudge, to yeeld a reaſon of the fact; after publike and ſolemne declaration made, the Miniſter vpon ſuch deſertion, may pronounce the mariage to be diſſolued. For he that vpon malice flieth away from his mate, is to be holden in the ſame termes with an vnbeleeuer, who departs vpon deteſtation of religion, & the ſeruice of God, 1.Tim.5.8.

Howbeit if the place whither he is fled, be vnknowne, and vpon his flight there be found ſome fault in the Plaintiffe, ſhee is not to be heard, or ſet at liberty by the Iudge in this caſe, though ſhe pretend want of the gift of continencie.

But ſuppoſe he that fled come againe vnlooked for, and requires his ſpouſe: then in caſe the former courſe hath not beene taken, nor iudgement giuen againſt him, they may be reconciled and come together againe. If it hath, and matters be concluded, he is not vpon his returne to be heard, but rather ſeuerely puniſhed.

Like vnto Deſertion, is malicious and ſpitefull dealing of married folkes one with the other.

Malicious dealing is, whē dwelling together, they require ech of other intolerable cōditions: and when the one doth not regard nor releeue the other, being in danger or extremitie, as is meete. For this is as much as to betray one anothers eſtate and life to their vtter enemies.

Here it may be demaunded, what a beleeuer ſhould doe, who is in certaine and imminent danger, either of loſſe of life, or breach of conſcience, if they both abide together?

Anſ. I. This certaine danger hath his originall, either from one that is a ſtranger, or frō one of the parties: If frō a ſtranger, then the husband either takes vpon him the defence of his beleeuing wife, or not; if he doth, then ſhe ought to abide with him. If not, ſhe may depart and prouide for her owne ſafetie. II. Againe, if the husband threatneth hurt, the beleeuing wife may flie in this caſe; and it is all one, as if the vnbeleeuing man ſhould depart. For to depart frō one, and driue one away by threats, are equipollent.

Neither may this ſeeme ſtrange vnto any, that the beleeuer in ſuch caſe is allowed to depart. For a husband that is a Chriſtian is maried two waies: Firſt with Chriſt, and ſecondly with his wife. The former marriage is made in Baptiſme, and is a more holy coniunction, then is the latter. Therefore when theſe two cannot ſtand together, but one of them muſt needes be diſſolued; the latter muſt rather be left then the former. Againe, If the beleeuer ſhould remaine with the vnbeleeuer, ſhe ſhould haply be vrged ſometimes, in caſe of danger vpon infirmitie, to denie Chriſt, and make ſhipwracke of faith and good conſcience; which may in no ſort be done of either partie: and therefore ſeparation is to be made rather in this ſocietie, then that the coniunction with Chriſt ſhould not ſtand firme, and continue.

It is alleadged, that if this be ſo, then the beleeuing wife forſakes the vnbeleeuing husband, which ſhe may not doe.

Anſ. She forſakes him not finally, but leaues him for a time. Againe, the deſertion is not made by the perſon, which giueth place for the time, but by him in whō is the cauſe of the deſertion; euen as he is not to be termed a ſchiſmatike, which ſeparateth himſelfe, but he in whom is the cauſe of the Schiſme.

Againe, it is obiected, that he which flieth leaues his calling; and euery man muſt abide in his calling, according to the rule of the Apoſtle, 1.Cor.7.20.

Anſ. There is a double calling: The generall, ſtanding in the worſhip of God: The particular, as the calling of mariage, or of ſingle life. When theſe two callings cannot ſtand together, the latter muſt giue place to the former: Luk.14.26. If any man come to me, and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and ſiſters; yea and his owne life alſo, he cannot be my diſciple.

III. Caſe. When the husband is perpetually abſent from the wife, what is to be done?

Anſ. If he be abſent either becauſe he is in captiuitie, or vpon malice, or feare, or any ſuch like cauſe; the wife muſt reſt in exſpectation of his returne, till ſhee hath notice of his death, either by ſufficient teſtimonie, or by apparant likelihoods. Now in the want of teſtimonies, and coniectures in this behalfe, if the partie forſaken cannot certenly determine, that the abſence was made vpon an euill minde; ſome haue thought that it behooueth her to expect his comming againe for the ſpace of foure yeares; others of fiue; ſome of ſeauen, ſome of tenne yeares; after which time, ſhee is free, and may marrie another man. And if the partie doe haply returne againe after ſome long ſpace of time, who was probably thought to haue beene dead, the latter marriage vndertaken vpon neceſſarie ignorance of ſuch an euent, may be diſſolued; and it ſhall not be imputed to either partie, conſidering it fell out not by their fault, but onely by accident.

Now if the queſtion be of wilfull and affected abſence, the ſame is to be determined concerning that, which hath bin ſaid before touching the point of Deſertion.

CHAP. X.

Of the Communion of marri-

19649a

ed folks, and of due beneuolence.

A

THe communion of man and wife, is that dutie, whereby they doe mutually and willingly communicate, both their perſons, and goods each to other, for their mutual helpe, neceſſitie and comfort, Eph.5.28. So ought men to loue their wiues as their owne bodies: he that loueth his wife, loueth himſelfe.

This duty conſiſteth principally in the performance of ſpeciall beneuolence one to another, and that not of courteſie, but of due debt, 1.Cor.7.3. Let the husband giue vnto the wife due beneuolence, and likewiſe alſo the wife vnto the husband.

B Due beneuolence muſt be ſhewed with a ſingular and entire affection one towards another; and that three wayes principally.

Firſt, by the right and lawfull vſe of their bodies, or of the marriage-bed, which is indeed an eſſentiall dutie of marriage.

The mariage bed ſignifieth that ſolitarie and ſecret ſocietie which is betweene man and wife alone.

And it is a thing of it owne nature indifferent; neither good nor bad; and ſo Paul numbreth it amongſt indifferent things, 1. Cor.7. 27. Art thou bound vnto a wife? ſeeke not to be looſed: art thou looſed from a wife? ſeeke not a wife. Wherefore the Church of Rome erreth two contrarie waies. Firſt, in that it maketh mariage to be a Sacrament, and ſo euery action of it, to be of the owne nature good. Secondly, in that they prohibite mariage of certaine parties, and the reaſon of the prohibition may ſeeme to be this; that they thinke this ſecret comming together of man and wife to be filthineſſe. This was the ſentence of Syricius, that filthie Pope of Rome; who determined that mariage was the vncleanneſſe of the fleſh, and to that purpoſe abuſed the words of the Apoſtle, Rom.8.8. affirming, that they which are in the fleſh, that is, in the eſtate of Matrimonie, cannot pleaſe God. Yea and after that mariage was condemned by them, ſome began to deteſt and hate women, as Ephraim the Syrian, of whom Eccleſiaſticall ſtories make mention. And the Councell of Trent is of the ſame iudgement. For whereas it oppoſeth mariage and chaſtitie; it plainely determineth that in mariage there is no chaſtitie. C D

Canon. Propoſuiſti, Diſt. 82.

Sozom.l.3. cap.16. Seſſ.8.Can. 9.10.

This comming together of man and wife, although it be indifferent, yet by the holy vſage thereof, it is made a holy and vndefiled action, Heb.13.4. Marriage is honourable among all, and the bed vndefiled. And it is (as all other creatures and ordinances of God are) ſanctified by the word and prayer, 1. Tim.4.3.---Forbidding to marrie, &c. v. 4.---And nothing ought to be refuſed:---for it is ſanctified by the word of God, and prayer. In which place it is to be obſerued, how the Apoſtle applieth the point of ſanctification directly to mariage.

The word of God giueth direction to married folkes two waies. Firſt, by giuing them warrant, that they may lawfully doe this action; becauſe whatſoeuer is not done of faith (which faith muſt be grounded on Gods word) is a ſinne. Secondly, by preſcribing the right and holy manner of doing the ſame.

The holy manner ſtands in theſe particulars.

Firſt, that it be done in moderation. For euen in wedlocke exceſſe in luſts is no better then plaine adulterie before God. This is the iudgement of the auncient Church, that Intemperance, that is, immoderate deſire euen betweene man and wife, is fornication.

Ambroſ.lib. de Philoſop. citat.ab Auguſt.contr. Iulian.l.2.

Secondly, that it be vſed in a holy abſtinence.

Abſtinence from this ſecret ſocietie, muſt be vſed in two caſes.

Firſt, while the woman is in her flowers, Leuit. 18.19. Thou ſhalt not goe to a woman to vncouer her ſhame, as long as ſhe is put apart for her diſeaſe. And it is made one of the properties of a good man, not to lie with a menſtruous woman, Ezek.18.6.

Secondly, in the time of a ſolemne faſt, when ſome grieuous calamitie is imminent. Then they are to giue themſelues (by mutuall conſent) to faſting and prayer, 1.Cor.7.5. Defraud not one another, except it be with conſent for a time, that you may giue your ſelues to faſting and prayer: and againe come together, that Satan tempt you not for your incontinencie. 2.Sam.11.11. Then Vriah anſwered Dauid, The Arke, and Iſrael, and Iudah dwell in tents: and my Lord Ioab, and the ſeruants of my Lord abide in the open fields: ſhall I then goe into mine houſe to eate and drinke, and lie with my wife? By thy life, and by the life of thy ſoule, I will not doe this thing. Zach.12.12. The family of the houſe of Dauid ſhall mourne apart, and their wiues apart; the family of the houſe of Nathan apart, and their wiues apart, &c.

Next vnto the word, this action may be ſanctified by prayer, for a bleſſing vpon it. Children are the gift of God, and therefore married folkes are not onely to vſe the meanes, but alſo to pray for the obtaining of them: Pſal.113.9. He maketh the barren woman to dwell with a familie, and to be a ioyfull mother of children. Pſal. 127.3. Behold children are the inheritance of the Lord, and the fruit of the wombe his reward. Examples for this purpoſe are theſe, Gen.25. 21. Iſaac praied vnto the Lord for his wife, becauſe ſhee was barren, and the Lord was intreated of him, and Rebekah his wife conceiued. 1. Sam.1.26,27. And ſhee ſaid, Oh my lord, as thy ſoule liueth, my lord, I am the woman that ſtoode with thee here, praying vnto the Lord. verſ. 27. I praied for this child, and the Lord hath giuen me my deſire, which I asked of him.

Now the fruits, which are reaped and inioyed by this holy vſage of the mariage bed, are three. I. The hauing of a bleſſed ſeede. Deut. 28.1. If thou ſhalt obey diligently the voice of the Lord thy God, &c. bleſſed ſhall be the fruit of thy bodie, and the fruit of thy ground. Which alſo is called the ſeede of God, beeing begot in an holy manner, Mal. 2.15. And did not he make one? yet had he abundance of Spirit: And wherefore one? becauſe he ſought a ſeede of God: therefore keepe your ſelues in your ſpirit, and let none treſpaſſe againſt the wife of his youth. II. The preſeruation of the bodie in cleanneſſe, that it may be a fit Temple for the holy Ghoſt to dwell in, 1.Theſſ.4.3,4. This is the will of God, euen your ſanctification, that euery one of you ſhould know how to poſſeſſe his veſſell in holineſſe and honour, and not in the luſt of concupiſcence, euen as the Gentiles that know not God. III. The holy eſtate of marriage is a liuely type of Chriſt and his Church, and this communion of married perſons, is alſo a figure of the coniunction that is betweene him, and the faithfull: Hoſ.2.19. I will marrie thee vnto me, for euer; yea I will marrie thee vnto me in righteouſnes, in iudgement, in mercie, and in compaſſion: I will euen marrie thee vnto me in faithfulnes, and thou ſhalt know the Lord. Eph.5.23. For the husband is the wiues head, euen as Chriſt is the head of the Church, and the ſame is the Sauiour of his bodie.

Here ſome queſtions are to be reſolued.

Caſe I. Whether may mariage be diſſolued in the caſe of barrenneſſe?

Anſ. No. For barrenneſſe is an hidden infirmitie for the moſt part, and which God hath many times cured, euen when it ſeemed to be deſperate, as in Sarah. Againe, the fruit of the wombe is Gods bleſſing, and wholly dependeth vpon him. He therefore that in want of children, reiecteth his wife, whome he hath receiued at the hands of God, offereth wrong euen to God himſelfe.

Caſe II. What if either of the maried folks commit fornication, or any ſinne of the ſame kind greater then fornication, as Inceſt, Sodomie, lying with beaſts, or ſuch like.

Anſ. Adulterie and fornication are moſt grieuous and open crimes, which doe breake the very bond and couenant of mariage, Prou. 2.17. and therefore when they are certenly knowne by ſuch perſons, they are at no hand to be winked at, but the Magiſtrate is preſently to be informed of them. Howbeit, if the innocent partie be willing to receiue the adulterer again, in regard of his repentance; leſt he ſhould ſeeme to fauour and maintaine ſinne, and to be himſelfe a practiſer of vncleanneſſe, he is to repaire to the Congregation, and declare the whole matter to the Miniſter, that he may vnderſtand, the parties repentance, and deſire of forgiueneſſe.

And if the adultreſſe hath conceiued and is in trauell, the husband to auoid the imputation of hauing an heire in baſtardie, is to make relation to the Church of the repentance of the adultereſſe; or to acquaint ſome certaine perſons therewith, not to the ende that ſhe ſhould be puniſhed for the fact, but that they may take notice of a child conceiued in adultery, whō afterward he may lawfully put off, as none of his.

A The matter being knowne, the innocent partie may require a diuorcement. For adulterie is ſuch a ſinne, as doth quite breake off, not onely the vſe, but the bond and couenant of mariage, Matth. 19.9. I ſay therefore vnto you, that whoſoeuer ſhall put away his wife, except it be for whoredome, and marrie another, committeth adulterie, &c. And yet the ſame bond may be continued, and growe vp againe by the good will and conſent of the partie innocent, and conſequently they may be reconciled, and dwel together ſtill. 1. Sam. 25.44. Now Saul had giuen Michal his daughter Dauids wife to Phalti the ſonne of Laiſh, which was of Gallim. 2.Sam. 3.14. Then Dauid ſent meſſengers to Iſhboſheth B Sauls ſonne, ſaying, Deliuer me my wife Michal, which I married for an hundred foreskines of the Philiſtims. The ſame courſe may be taken in like caſes by the innocent, ſpecially vpon the repentance of the guiltie perſon. But yet euery man muſt be left to his owne conſcience, and none is to be compelled to take another, from whome he may iuſtly be ſeparated, againſt his will.

Now in requiring of a diuorce, there is an equall right and power in both parties, ſo as the woman may require it as well as the man; and he as well as ſhe. The reaſon is, becauſe they are equally bound each to other, and haue alſo the ſame intereſt in one anothers bodie; prouided alwaies, that the man is to maintaine his ſuperi- C oritie, and the woman to obſerue that modeſtie which beſeemeth her towards the man.

After the diuorcement made, it ſhall be lawfull for the harmeleſſe partie, not hauing the gift of continencie, vpon leaue obtained of the Church, and the Chriſtian Magiſtrate, to marrie againe.

But what then ſhall become of the partie offending?

Anſ. If vpon the hazard of his conſcience, any libertie of ſecond mariage be to be graunted to the partie offending, by the Church or ciuill Magiſtrate, (as indeede here in England there is not) diuerſe Reſtraints muſt be obſerued. Firſt, No libertie is to be granted him, for mariage, ſo long as the matter remaines vn- D certaine, whether they may be reconciled; ſpecially while the partie innocent liueth in ſingle life. Secondly, it muſt euidently appeare, that he hath earneſtly repented him of his ſinne, before he can either be receiued into the Church, or admitted to a ſecond mariage. Thirdly, this libertie is not to be granted him either preſently, or vnaduiſedly; but vpon frequent and ſerious admonition, rather to giue himſelfe to mourning & lamentation, and ſtil to remaine alone, then to deſire againe to enioy the benefit of that eſtate, which he hath alreadie ſo ſhamefully abuſed.

So much of the firſt way of performance of due beneuolence.

The ſecond way is, by cheriſhing one another: Epheſ.5. 29. No man euer hated his owne fleſh, but nouriſheth and cheriſheth it, as Chriſt alſo doth the Church. This cheriſhing is the performing of any duties, that tend to the preſeruing of the liues one of another. Wherefore they are freely to communicate their goods, their counſell, their labours each to other; for the good of themſelues and theirs.

The third way is, by an holy kind of reioycing and ſolacing themſelues each with other, in a mutuall declaration of the ſignes and tokens of loue and kindneſſe, Prou.5.18. Reioyce with the wife of thy youth: verſ. 19. Let her be as the louing Hind, and pleaſant wildgoate: let her breaſts ſatisfie thee at all times, and delight in her loue continually, Can. 1.1. Let him kiſſe me with the kiſſes of his mouth, for thy loue is better then wine. Gen.26. 8. So after he had beene there a long time, Abimelek King of the Philiſtims, looked out at a windowe, and loe, he ſawe Iſaack ſporting with Rebekah his wife: Then Abimelek called Iſaac and ſaid; Loe, ſhe is of a ſuretie thy wife. Eſa,62.7. As a young man marrieth a virgin, ſo ſhall thy ſonnes marrie thee; and as a Bridegroome is glad of the Bride, ſo ſhall thy God reioyce ouer thee.

This reioycing and delight is more permitted to the man, then to the woman; and to them both, more in their yong yeares, then in their olde age.

CHAP. XI.

Of the Husband.

MArried folkes are either Husband or Wife.

The husband is he which hath authoritie ouer the wife; hereupon in Scripture he is called the guide of her youth, Prou.2. 17. and they twaine beeing but one fleſh, he is alſo the head ouer his wife.

The duties of the husband towards the wife, are theſe:

I. To loue her as himſelfe: Ephe. 5.33. Let euery one loue his wife euen as himſelfe. Gen.24. 67. Afterward Iſaac brought her vnto the tent of Sarah his mother; and he tooke Rebekah and ſhe was his wife, and he loued her: ſo Iſaak left mourning for his mother. Note, how the loue of the husband to the wife mitigates ſorrowe for the death of the mother.

He is to ſhewe this loue in two things: Firſt in protecting her from danger, Gen.20.16. And vnto Sarah he ſaid, behold I haue giuen 1000. ſhekels of ſiluer vnto thy brother; behold he is the couering of thine eyes amongſt all that are with thee. Let it be knowne amongſt all, and be thou inſtructed. 1.Sam.30.5. Dauids two wiues were taken priſoners alſo, Ahinoam the Izreelite, and Abigail the wife of Nabal the Carmelite: ver.8. Then Dauid asked counſell of the Lord ſaying; Shall I followe after this company? ſhall I ouertake them? And he anſwered him, Followe, for thou ſhalt ſurely ouertake them, and recouer all. Secondly, in regarding her eſtate as his owne, and prouiding maintenance for her, both for his life time, and as much as he may, for time to come after his death. Epheſ. 5.28. So ought men to loue their wiues, as their owne bodies: he that loueth his wife loueth himſelfe; ver.29. For no man euer yet hated his own fleſh, but nouriſheth it, &c. Exod 21.10. If he take him another wife, he ſhall not diminiſh her food, her rayment, and recompence of her virginitie. Ruth 3. 9. Vnto whom he ſaid, who art thou? which ſaid; I am Ruth thine handmaid, ſpread therefore the wing of thy garment ouer thine handmaid; for thou art the kinſman.

II. To honour his wife: 1. Pet. 3. 7. Giuing honour to the woman.

This honour ſtands in three things; Firſt, in making account of her as his companion, or yoke-fellow. For this cauſe, the woman, when ſhe was created, was not taken out of the mans head, becauſe ſhe was not made to rule ouer him; nor out of his feete, becauſe God did not make her ſubiect to him as a ſeruant; but out of his ſide, to the ende that man ſhould take her as his mate. Secondly, in a wiſe and patient bearing or couering of her infirmities, as anger, waywardneſſe and ſuch like, in reſpect of the weakeneſſe of her ſexe, 1. Pet.3. 7. Giuing honour to the woman, as vnto the weaker veſſell, ſeeing yee are heires together of the grace of life, that your prayers be not hindred. Thirdly, by ſuffering himſelfe ſometimes to be admoniſhed or aduiſed by her. It was Gods commandement to Abraham concerning Sarah his wife; Let it not be grieuous in thy ſight for the child, and for thy bondwoman: in all that Sarah ſhall ſay vnto thee, heare her voice; For in Iſaac ſhall thy ſeede be called, Gen 21. 12. Thus Elkanah was willing to ſubſcribe vnto his wife Annaes aduice for her tarrying at home till the child was weaned, 1.Sam. 1. 23. And Elkanah her husband ſaid vnto her, doe what ſeemeth thee beſt: tarrie vntill thou haſt weaned him: onely the Lord accompliſh his word. Hereupon the Heathen Philoſopher ſaid, That the maſter of the familie exerciſeth (after a ſort) a power Tyrannicall ouer his ſeruants, a power Regall ouer his children; becauſe Kings are fathers of their Commonweales: but in reſpect of his wife, he exerciſeth a power Ariſtocraticall, not after his own will, but agreeable to the honour and dignitie of the married eſtate; and conſequently, that he ought not in modeſtie to challenge the priuiledge of preſcribing and aduertiſing his wife in all matters domeſticall, but in ſome to leaue her to her owne will and iudgement.

Ariſt. Ethic. lib.8.

Here queſtion is mooued, whether the husband may correct the wife?

Anſw. Though the husband be the wiues head, yet it ſeemeth he hath no power nor libertie granted him in this regard. For we reade not in the Scriptures, any precept or example to warrant ſuch practiſe of his authoritie. He may reprooue and admoniſh her in a word onely, if

A he ſeeth her in fault. For,thus we reade,that Iacob cenſured his wife,beeing impatient, euen in anger, Gen. 30.2. Am I in Gods ſtead, which hath withholden from thee, the fruite of the wombe? And Iob reprooued his wife, Iob 2.10. Thou ſpeakeſt like a fooliſh woman. What? Shall we receiue good at the hand of God, and not receiue euill? But he may not chaſtiſe her either with ſtripes, or ſtrokes. The reaſon is plaine; Wiues are their husbands mates; and they two be one fleſh. And no man will hate, much leſſe beat his owne fleſh,but nouriſheth and cheriſheth it, Ephe.5. 29. Againe,it is the commandement of God, that man ſhould not treſpaſſe againſt the wife of his youth, Malac. 2.15. Chryſoſtome B ſaith, It is the greateſt reproach for any man, that can be, to beate his wife. Plutarch in the life of Cato the Cenſor, affirmeth, that he which ſmiteth his wife, doth all one, as if he ſhould lay violent hands vpon the ſacred images of the gods, which was counted an high degree of offence among the Heathen.

In 1.Cor.11. Homil.26.

It is alleadged, Husbands are commanded ſo to loue their wiues, as Chriſt doth his Church; nowe Chriſt chaſtiſeth his Church with ſtrokes; and therefore ſo may the husband his wife. Anſ. As Chriſt doth entirely loue his Church, ſo he may alſo chaſtiſe the ſame,becauſe he is not only the husband, but alſo abſolute Lord and King of his Church: ſo is not the husband abſolute ouer the wife.

C But his authoritie ouer the wife, is after a ſort ciuill, as is the authoritie of the Magiſtrate ouer his people. Anſ. It is not ſo. For the Magiſtrate hath in his hand the power of the ſword, by which power he inflicteth puniſhment in caſe of offence. But the husband can challenge to himſelfe no ſuch power: yea it is flatly forbidden in the Ciuill law, that he ſhould ſcourge or ſtrike his wife.

Neuertheleſſe; if ſhe growe to extremities, and be deſperately peruerſe, ſo as there be no hope of amendement: then the Magiſtrate may be informed; who to preuent ſcandals,and to prouide for publike peace, both ought and may aſſigne vnto her neceſſarie correction, and puniſhment according to her deſert. Now the D husband that hath a wife ſo ſtubborne and peeuiſh, muſt beare it, if it may be borne, as the portion of his croſſe laid vpon him by God. And in this caſe, if he be impatient, he may in ſome ſort be pardoned and pitied,but he is not wholly to be excuſed.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Wife.

THe wife is the other married perſon, who beeing ſubiect to her husband,yeeldeth obedience vnto him.

Touching the ſubiection of the wife, the word of God mentioneth it in ſundrie places. Rom.7.2. The woman which is in ſubiection to the man, is bound by the lawe to the man while he liueth. Epheſ.5. 24. As the Church is in ſubiection to Chriſt, euen ſo let the wiues be to their husbands in euery thing. Coloſ. 3. 18. Wiues ſubmit your ſelues vnto your husbands, as it is comelie in the Lord, 1.Tim.2.12. I permit not a woman---to vſurpe authoritie ouer the man. And it was a lawe eſtabliſhed by God immediately after the fall, Gen.3.16. Vnto the woman he ſaid, I will greatly increaſe, &c. and thy deſire ſhall be ſubiect to thine husband, and he ſhall rule ouer thee. Indeede the daughter according to the Ciuill lawe, euen when ſhe is married is * in the power of her father, and not of her husband. But this is directly againſt the lawe of Moſes, and croſſeth the lawe of Nature, Leuit. 22.12. 13. Numb.30.13.

* In poteſtate patris.

Now the duties of the wife, are principally two.

The firſt is,to ſubmit herſelfe to her husband and to acknowledge and reuerence him as her head in all things. Gen. 20. 16. Likewiſe Abimelech ſaid vnto Sarah; Behold thy brother,that is,thy husband,whom thou calleſt thy brother, is the vaile of thine eyes to all that are with thee. As if he ſhould ſay, Thy husband is thy head, and hath power ouer thee, and thou oughteſt to reuerence him. For of ancient times, the wife was couered with a vaile in the preſence of her husband, in token of ſubiection to him. Thus Rebekah at the ſight of Iſaak tooke a vaile, and couered her head therewith. Gen. 24. 65. 1. Cor. 11.3. The man is the womans head. Epheſ. 5. 22. Wiues ſubmit your ſelues vnto your husbands, as vnto the Lord; for the husband is the wiues head, euen as Chriſt is the head of the Church. The reaſon hereof is good. For the wife enioyeth the priuiledges of her husband, and is graced by his honour and eſtimation amongſt men. His Nobilitie maketh her noble, though otherwiſe ſhe is baſe and meane; as contrariwiſe, his baſeneſſe and low degree cauſeth her,thogh ſhe be by birth noble and honorable, to be by eſtate baſe and meane.

The ſecond dutie is,to be obedient vnto her husband in all things; that is,wholly to depend vpon him, both in iudgement and will. For looke as the Church yeelds obedience to Chriſt her head,and yeelds her ſelf to be commanded, gouerned, and directed by him, ſo ought the woman to the man. So Sarah is ſaid to obey Abraham, and to giue him the termes of obedience. She called him Lord, or Sir, 1. Pet. 3. 6. Hence it followeth, that the woman is not to take libertie of wandring, and ſtraying abroad from her owne houſe,without the mans knowledge and conſent. 2.King.4.22. Then ſhe called to her husband and ſaid,Send with me, I pray thee, one of the yong men, and one of the aſſes; for I will haſte to the man of God, and come againe. Againe,that ſhe is to follow her husband when he flitteth or departeth from place to place, vnleſſe he forſake either her or Chriſt. To this purpoſe Paul ſaith he had power to lead a- bout a wife, being a ſiſter, as well as the reſt of the Apoſtles, 1.Cor.9.5. Thus Sarah went with Abraham into Egypt, Gen.12.11. and out of Egypt, Gen.13.1. and to Gerar to ſoiourne there, Gen.20.1.2.3. Thus the wiues of Iacob departed with him, frō their father Laban, Gen.31.17.

Contrarie to theſe duties, are the ſinnes of wiues; To be proud, to be vnwilling to beare the authoritie of their husbands; to chide and braule with bitterneſſe; to forſake their houſes, &c. Prou.27.15. A continuall dropping in the day of raine, and a contentious woman are alike, verſ.16. He that hideth her, hideth the winde, and ſhe is as the oyle in his right hand, that vttereth it ſelfe. Exod.4.26. Then Zipporah ſaid, O bloodie husband; becauſe of the Circumciſion. It was the fault of the Leuites Concubine, Iudg.19.2. who played the whore, and went away from him vnto her fathers houſe to Bethlem Iudah, and there continued the ſpace of foure moneths. It was the ſinne of Queene Vaſhti, who refuſed to come at the Kings word, which he had giuen in charge to the Eunuches: therefore the King was verie angrie, and his wrath kindled in him, Eſt.1.12. Laſtly, to be a cauſe of griefe to their kindred. Thus the proud wiues of Eſau, the daughters of the Hittites, were a greife of mind to Iſaac and Rebekah, Gen.26.35. & 27.46.

CHAP. XIII.

Of the Parent.

Hitherto hath beene treated of the firſt Couple, whereof the familie conſiſteth, namely, of maried folkes. Now followe the other; and they are of two ſorts; either ſuch as, whereby the family is increaſed, and multiplied; or ſuch as are helpes thereunto.

Thoſe whereby the familie is inlarged, are alſo of two ſorts; Parents and Children.

Parents are they which haue power and authoritie ouer children.

The duties of parents are eſpecially two; One to bring vp their children; The other to beſtow them, when they haue brought them vp.

Touching Education or bringing vp of children, the parents care muſt be, both that they may liue, & alſo that they may liue wel. Ep.6.4.

Touching the preſeruation of the life of the child, there are many duties required of the Parents, ſpecially foure. Firſt, the mother is her ſelfe to giue the infant ſucke, and to wrap it vp in ſwadling clothes. Paul commends it for a note of a good wife, to nurſe her owne children, 1.Tim.5.10. Thus Sarah gaue ſucke to Iſaac, Gen.21.7. Anna nurſed Samuel, 1.Sam.1.22. Dauid in likelihood was nurſed by his mother, Pſal.22.9. Thou gaueſt me hope euen at my mothers breaſts. And our Sauiour Chriſt was alſo nurſed by Marie his mother, Luk.11.27. and ſwadled, Luk.2.7. Now the reaſon hereof is plaine. God hath giuen milke to women that beare children, and hath ſo appointed, that no meat is more naturall to the child, then the mothers milke. And nature it ſelfe teacheth this in the courſe of other creatures. The earth nouriſheth that which it bringeth forth. The fruit which the tree beareth is fed by the ſappe that comes from the root thereof. Yea amongſt the bruit beaſts, euen thoſe that be moſt ſauage, as the Tigres, doe giue ſucke vnto the young ones which they bring forth.

Yet in caſe of want of health, or ability, or any other iuſt impediment, the mother may in equitie be forborne, and the child committed vnto a nurſe. And ſo we read that Rebekah the daughter of Bethuel, and afterward the wife of Iſaak, had a nurſe, Gen.24.59. whoſe name was Deborah, Gen.35.8. And Pharaohs daughter in a caſe of neceſſitie, committed Moſes to be nurſed of an Hebrew woman, whom ſhe tooke not to be his mother, but a ſtranger: and her fact was allowed by God, Exod.2.7.9.

The ſecond dutie of the Parent is, to prouide for his child meate, drinke, and clothing. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, that Parents euen by the light of nature, though they be euill, will not denie or withhold neceſſarie foode from their children: Matth.7.9,10. What man is there among you, that if his ſon aske him bread, will giue him a ſtone, or if he ask a fiſh, will giue him a ſcorpion? And Paul ſaith, If there be any that prouideth not for his owne, and namely for them of his houſhold, he denieth the faith, and is worſe then an Infidell, 1.Tim.5.8.

The third dutie is, when God giueth abilitie and meanes, to lay vp ſome thing for the future maintenance of the child. 2.Cor.12.14.--for the children ought not to lay vp for the fathers, but the fathers for the children. Pro.19.14. Houſe and riches are the inheritance of the fathers.

The fourth is, to obſerue both the inclination, and the naturall gifts of body and mind that are in the child, and accordingly to beſtow it in ſome honeſt calling and courſe of life. Pro.20.11. A child is knowne by his actions, whether his worke be pure and right. In the Eccleſiaſticall hiſtorie, written by Ruffinus, it is recorded, that Alexander Biſhop of Alexandria, ſaw a far off, in a place neere to the ſea, a companie of children playing together, and in their play imitating himſelfe in ſundrie Miniſteriall actions. And when he had a while viewed them, he perceiued that they examined and baptiſed one another, according to the ſolemne order vſed in the Congregation: which thing, when he had made ſome of his Clergie acquainted withall, & taken order that the children ſhould be ſent for, and brought before him, he demanded of them, what ſport they vſed, and in what manner they plaied one with another. The children at firſt, for feare, denied what they had done, yet vpon further examination they confeſſed, that they had made Athanaſius (who afterward became Biſhop of the place) their Biſhop, & that he inſtructed & baptiſed ſundrie of their companie. He further asked both Athanaſius himſelfe, and thoſe which were ſaid to haue beene baptiſed, what queſtions he asked them, and Ruffin. Eccl. hiſt. l.1.c.14.

A what anſwers they gaue;and perceiuing by their ſpeeches, that they had framed themſelues, though in ſporting manner,to the Church-proceedings in thoſe actions; vpon conference had with his Clergie, he determined, that thoſe which had firſt beene asked, and had giuen anſwer fully, according to the forme vſed in that Church, and thereupon baptiſed,ſhould not be rebaptiſed. And for Athanaſius and the other children, which had done the part of Miniſters in their kind, he ſent for their parents, and gaue them great charge that they ſhould be brought vp in learning and religion, that ſo they might in time be fit for the publike Miniſterie. The like courſe we reade to haue beene taken by the B Heathen, for iudgement of the inclination and towardneſſe of their children. The Athenians made a lawe,that before children were beſtowed in any calling, they ſhould be firſt brought into a publike place, where Inſtruments belonging to all ſorts of trades were laid; and looke in what kind of Inſtrument any of them tooke moſt delight, the child was thought to be moſt fit for the trade, whereunto that Inſtrument belonged, and afterward applied to the ſame with good ſuceſſe.

Nazian.epiſt. ad Eudox.

Now the Parents firſt and principall care muſt be for the Church;that thoſe of their children which haue the moſt pregnant wit,and be indued with the beſt gifts,be conſecrated vnto God,and brought vp in the ſtudie of the Scriptures,to ſerue afterward in the Miniſtery of the C Church. Thus Anna dedicated Samuel her ſonne vnto God by vowe, 1. Sam. 1. 11. And ſhe vowed a vowe, and ſaid, O Lord of Hoſtes, if thou wilt-----giue vnto thine handmaid a man-child, then I will giue him vnto the Lord all the daies of his life. And ſhe did according to her vow,and the Lord bleſſed Samuel her ſon,who in proceſſe of time became a great Prophet.

The next point of Education of children, is to prouide that they may liue well and lead a godly life. To this purpoſe Parents moſt doe three things.

First, they are to be carefull, that the childe ſo ſoone as may be,after it is borne,be admitted into the true Church of God by Baptiſme, and D haue a fit name giuen vnto it.

Secondly, they are to endeauour to ſowe the ſeeds of godlineſſe and religion in the heart of the child, ſo ſoone as it comes to the vſe of reaſon and vnderſtanding; and as it growes in yeares, ſo care muſt be had that it growe in knowledge and grace. To this purpoſe is the vowe and promiſe made in Baptiſme, which parents are bound to call vpon the child to remember, when it comes to yeares. It was the godly care of Timothies parents, 2. Tim. 3. 14. But continue thou in the things which thou haſt learned, knowing of whom thou haſt learned them, ver. 15. And that thou haſt knowne the holy Scriptures of a child, which are able to make thee wiſe vnto ſaluation, through the faith which is in Chriſt Ieſus. This was the commandement of God to the parents of his people, Deu. 6. 7. Thou ſhalt rehearſe theſe words which I command thee continually to thy children, and ſhalt talke of them when thou tarrieſt in the houſe. And verſ. 20. When thy ſonne ſhall aske thee in time to come, ſaying, What meane theſe Teſtimonies, and Ordinances, and Lawes, which the Lord our God hath commanded you? Then thou ſhalt ſay vnto thy ſonne; We were Pharaohs bondmen in Egypt, &c. This was obſerued by the Iſraelites in the ages ſucceeding: Pſal. 44. 1. We haue heard with our eares, O God: our fathers haue told vs the workes that thou haſt done in their dayes in olde time.

Thirdly, the firſt inſtruction of children in learning and religion, muſt be ſo ordered, that they may take it with delight. For which purpoſe,they may be ſometimes allowed in moderate manner to play and ſolace themſelues in recreations fitting for their yeares. And if they doe amiſſe in either, they are to be reſtrained by the bridle of diſcipline. Firſt, by reproofe in word, and when that will not helpe,by the rod of correction. Zach. 8. 5. The ſtreets of the citie ſhall be full of boyes and girles, playing in the ſtreetes thereof. Prou. 29. 15. The rodde and correction giue wiſedome, but a child ſet at libertie makes his mother aſhamed. verſ. 17. Correct thy ſonne, and he will giue thee reſt, and giue pleaſures to thy ſoule. Hebr. 12. 9. We haue had the fathers of our bodies which correct vs, and we gaue them reuerence.

Yet in this point two extreames are carefully to be auoided; That the parent be not either too ſeuere,or too indulgent to the child. For ſeueritie Paul giues this rule, Eph. 6. 3. Parents prouoke not your children to anger, that is, by too much auſteritie in gouernment. For lenitie, we haue old Eli his example, 1. Sam. 2. 23. And he ſaid vnto them, Why doe yee ſuch things? for of all this people, I heare euill reports of you. Doe no more my ſonnes, &c. So much for Education.

The ſecond generall dutie of parents, is the beſtowing of their children; This beſtowing is, when they knowing their children fit for mariage, not to haue the gift of continencie, doe vſe their beſt indeauour to prouide matches for them in time, or at leaſt, doe aduiſe them thereunto by themſelues or by their friends: 1. Cor. 7. 36. If any man thinke it vncomely for his virgin to paſſe the flower of her age, and neede ſo require------let them be married. verſ. 38. he that giueth her to mariage, doth well. Ier. 26. 6. Take yee wiues-----and take wiues for your ſonnes, and giue your daughters to husbands, &c. Gen. 28. 1. Iſaac called Iaacob and bleſſed him; and charged him and ſaid vnto him, Take not a wife of the daughters of Canaan; Ariſe, get thee to Padan Aram----and thence take thee a wife of the daughters of Laban thy mothers brother. Iudg. 14. 2. Sampſon came and told his father and his mother, and ſaid, I haue ſeene a woman in Timnah of the daughters of the Philiſtims; now therefore giue me her to wife.

This dutie is now adaies careleſly neglected of Parents; and the fruit thereof is dangerous. For hence it comes to paſſe, that their children oftentimes do either commit whoredome, or vndertake wicked and vngodly mariages.

In the choice of a husband or wife, the Parents ought to haue a greater reſpect vnto pietie and wiſedome, then vnto beautie and riches, or any other outward bleſſings. Yet where they all concurre, the partie ſo qualified is the more thankfully to be entertained. Vpon theſe grounds the Prieſt or Prince of Midian, gaue his daughter Zipporah to Moſes, and Moſes agreed to take her, Exod.2. 19. A man of Egypt deliuered vs from the Philiſtims, and alſo drew vs water enough, and watered the ſheepe---- And Moſes agreed to dwell with the man, who gaue vnto Moſes Zipporah his daughter. Ioſu.15.16. Then Caleb ſaid, He that ſmiteth Kiriath-ſepher, and taketh it, euen to him will I giue Achſah my daughter to wife. Yea it is a ſinne to marrie onely for beautie, without conſideration of the better things. Thus the old world ſinned, when the ſonnes of God ſaw the daughters of men that they were faire, and tooke them wiues of all that they liked, Gen. 6. 2. and Samſon, who only vpon the ſight of the woman in Timnah, of the daughters of the Philiſtims, without further inquirie, deſired that ſhe might be giuen him for his wife, Iudg. 14. 2.

Againe, it is meet that parents ſhould deale moderately with their children in this caſe, and not vndertake at any hand to force and compel them to marrie this or that partie. This was the iuſt commendation of Rebekahs parents, who though they were Idolaters, yet had that regard of equitie, that they firſt called her and asked her conſent, before they ſent her away with Abrahams ſeruant, to be maried to Iſaak, Gen.24.58. Now in caſe the Parents faile in their dutie in this regard, the ſonne or daughter may lawfully declare the matter firſt to their kinsfolk, and afterward (if need be) to the Miniſter, or Magiſtrate, and ſue for redreſſe by their meanes and direction.

CHAP. 14.

Of the Sonne.

THe Sonne is he who is in ſubiection to his parents.

The duties of a Sonne to be performed to his parents, are principally two.

Firſt, to yeeld them obedience, whether they be his naturall parents or otherwiſe, as his ſtep-father and ſtep-mother, & that while he liueth. Eph. 6. 1. Children obey your parents in the Lord; for this is right. Luk.2. 51. Then he went downe with them, and came to Nazareth, and was ſubiect to them. Exod. 18. 19. Moſes father in law ſaid vnto him, Heare now my voice, I will giue thee counſell, and God ſhall be with thee. Ruth.3.5. And Ruth ſaid vnto Naomi her mother in law, All that thou biddeſt me, I will doe. Iob.1.5. And when the daies of their banqueting were gone about, Iob ſent and ſanctified them.

This obedience muſt ſhew it ſelfe in two things.

Firſt in the choyce of a lawfull calling, wherin the child is to be ordered and appointed at the diſcretion of the parent.

Secondly in mariage. For in that, the parent is the principall agent and diſpoſer of the child. Now although his authoritie be not ſo great, as that the child is to be forced and compelled by him; yet the reuerent and dutifull reſpect which the child ought to beare towards him, ought to be a ſtrong inducement, not to diſſent, or renounce his aduice, without great and waightie cauſe. Yea the child muſt endeuour by all manner of dutifull cariage to ouercome, or at leaſt to mitigate his parents ſeueritie in that behalfe.

Now for the daughters; They muſt yeeld obedience to their parents in all Domeſticall labours, that they may be skilfull in houſhold affaires. Thus did the ſeuen daughters of the Prieſt of Midian, accuſtome themſelues to draw water, and fill the troughes to water their fathers ſheepe, Exod. 2. 16. Thus Rebekah was ſeene to come out of her fathers houſe, with her pitcher vpon her ſhoulder, and to go downe with it to the well to fill it, and giue drinke to her fathers Chamels, Gen. 24. 16. 17.

The ſecond dutie of the ſonne, is to recompence his fathers loue, and care ouer him, by releeuing him in caſe of want, if God giue abilitie, with food and raiment, and other neceſſaries. Herein children muſt deale with their parents, as the brood of the Storke is reported to doe with her, by feeding her when ſhe is old; wherein they doe no more but what ſhe before hath done vnto them. It is Pauls counſell, that children and nephewes ſhould recompence the kindnes of their kindred in the firſt place, 1. Tim.5.4. and therefore to their parents, the head and foundation of their kindred. When Ioſeph was in proſperitie, and his father Iaacob in want, hee firſt gaue him corne freely; and afterwardes ſent for him to Egypt, and there prouided for him; in ſo much as the text ſaith of him, that hee nouriſhed his father and his brethren, and all his fathers houſehold with bread, Euen as the mother puts meate into the childs mouth, Gen. 47. 12. When Naomi the ſtepmother of Ruth was of great yeares, and her ſtrength ſpent, Ruth gathered corne in the harueſt for releiſe of them both. Yea when Boaz gaue her to eate and to drinke, ſhe reſerued part of her victualls, and brought it home with her gleanes, to refreſh her mother, Ruth.2.14.18.

The neceſſitie of the performance of theſe duties is ſo great, that if the ſonne neglecteth them, and doth the contrarie, by ill vſage of his parent, either in word or deede, he is worthie of death, euen by Moſes lawe: Exod.21.15. He that ſmiteth his father or his mother ſhall die the death.

The lawe of the firſt borne of a mans children, that he ſhould haue a greater portion of his fathers goods, then any of the reſt of his brethren, is perpetuall, and admits no exception, but onely in the caſe of notorious wickedneſſe. Deut. 21. 17. He ſhall acknowledge the ſonne of the hated for the firſt borne, and giue him a double portion of all that he hath, for he is the firſt of his ſtrength, and to him belongeth the right of the firſt borne. This was the lawe; yet we reade that Reuben loſt this prerogatiue, by reaſon of his inceſt, and Iudah the fourth ſonne of Iaacob, had the dignitie of the firſt borne, Gen. 49. 8. Thou Iudah, thy brethren ſhall prayſe thee----thy Fathers ſonnes ſhall bowe downe vnto thee.

In the Church of the olde Teſtament, the priuiledge of the firſt borne was threefold; the firſt of gouernment and royaltie, the ſecond of Prieſthood, the third of the double portion. And it is probable that this was for the moſt part Ceremoniall, and was accompliſhed and determined in Chriſt, who was the Image of the inuiſible God, and the firſt borne of euery creature, Coloſ.1.15.

Here two queſtions are propounded.

Queſt. I. Whether is it lawfull for the ſonne to make a vowe belonging either to religion, or to ciuill conuerſation, without the conſent of the parent?

Anſw. A vowe ſo made is of no force to bind the child, but by the Lawe of nature and common equitie, is to be made void. For it is a ruled caſe, that he which is not his owne man, that is to ſay, at his owne libertie, but vnder the power of another, cannot bind himſelfe. Againe, the authoritie of the parent by the lawe of God is great; For it alloweth the father to make void the vowe of the child pertaining to Gods worſhip; Num.30.6.

Queſt. II. Whether is the conſent of the parents to be required in the ſecond mariages of their children.

Anſw. 1. Of ancient times, both by [*] Ciuill lawes, and alſo by Imperiall conſtitutions, it was prouided that no widowes, though made free by their former mariages, ſhould make any contract againe, without the good will of their parents. 2. Conſent in this caſe, though it be not abſolutely neceſſarie, yet it is to be thought fit and conuenient, becauſe children in ſome regards exempted from parents authoritie, doe owe notwithſtanding the dutie of honour vnto them, by Gods expreſſe commandement, Exod.20.12. and conſequently ought to teſtifie the ſame, by being ordred and aduiſed by them in ſome ſort, euen at the after-beſtowing of themſelues. Hence it is, that [*] later Diuines haue holden vpon good ground: That the eſpouſals of widowes, who haue ſome more libertie, then the child firſt married, being made without their parents knowledge, cannot but incurre iuſt reprehenſion, howſoeuer they may ſtand in force without it.

CHAP. 15.

Of the Maſter.

NExt vnto parents and children, whereby the familie is increaſed, is a ſecond ſort of couples, which are helpes thereunto. And they are maſters and ſeruants.

The Maſter is a member in the familie, which hath power and beareth rule ouer the ſeruant. And his dutie ſtands principally in three things.

Firſt, To make a good choice of his ſeruants; which is then done, when he inquireth firſt after ſuch as feare God, and be willing to ſerue him. Paul makes the ſeruice and feare of God the maine ground of true obedience in ſeruants, Epheſ.6.5.6.7. Coloſ. 3.22. It was the rule of Dauids choice, Pſal. 101. 6. He that walketh in the perfect way, he ſhall ſerue me. Abrahams chieſe ſeruant of his houſe, was a man that feared God, as appeareth in that he made conſcience of his oath, Gen.24.2.3. and prayed alſo for ſucceſſe in the buſineſſe whereabout he was ſent. Gen. 24. 12. O Lord God of my Maſter Abraham, I beſeech thee ſend mee good ſpeede this day, and ſhewe mercie to my Maſter Abraham. Cornelius of Cæſarea, the Captaine of the Italian band, had a ſouldier that daily attended on him, who feared God, and ſeruants alſo beſide him, to whom he made knowne the heauenly viſion which he ſawe, Act.10.7.

Secondly, To enioyne them labour, and not to require more of them, then their ſtrength will beare. The maſter is to rule ouer the ſeruant in iuſtice. And then is his commandement vniuſt, when it will not ſtand with the courſe of nature, with the abilitie of his ſeruant, or with the word of God. Therefore he is to require labour at their hands proportionable to their ſtrength, and yeeld them ſometimes intermiſſion and reſt. Leuit 25.46. Ouer your brethren the children of Iſrael, ye ſhall not rule ouer one another with crueltie. 1. Pet. 3.8. Be pitifull, be courteous, one beare with another. And for the furtherance of buſineſſe, it is conuenient that the maſter be oftentimes preſent with the ſeruants in their works. Prou.27.23. Be diligent to knowe the ſtate of thy flocke, and take heede to thy heards. The good matron ouerſeeth the waies of her houſhold, Prou.31. 27. A man of Libya beeing asked, what it was that might make a horſe fat, he anſwered, The maſters eie.

Ariſt.Oeconom.7.

Thirdly, To recompence the diligence and paines of his ſeruant, and that three waies.

Firſt, by giuing him his due of meate and drinke for the preſent. The good matron giueth the portion to her houſhold, and the ordinarie to her maids, Prou.31. 15.

Secondly, by paying him his hire in the ende of his ſeruice. The labourer is worthy of his wages, Luk.10.7. Well done good ſeruant and faithfull; thou haſt beene faithfull in little, I will make thee ruler ouer much ; enter into thy maſters ioy, Matth. 25.21.

make

Here three caueats are to be obſerued. I. That the wages be proportionable to the work. II. That it be paid in due time, without deferring. So the Maſter of the vine-yard, when euen was come, called his ſeruants together to giue them their hire, Matth. 20. 8. III. That the ſeruant be not defrauded of any part of his due. For this is a crying ſin ; Deut. 24.15. Thou ſhalt giue him his hire for his day, neither ſhall the Sunne go downe vpon it-----leſt he crie againſt thee vnto the Lord, and it be ſinne vnto thee. Iam. 5.4. Behold, the hire of the labourers which haue reaped your fields, which is kept backe by fraude, crieth, and the cries of them which haue reaped, are entred into the eares of the Lord of hoſts.

Thirdly, if the ſeruant in time of his ſeruice be ſicke, the maſters care muſt be by all meanes poſſible to procure his recouerie. Equitie muſt be the rule in theſe caſes; and maſters are to do to their ſeruants that which is iuſt and equall. Col. 4. 1. Now the ſeruant haply falles ſicke by and in his ſeruice, and his health yeelds not only profit to his maſter, but incouragement alſo to himſelfe. The good Centurion in caſe of his ſeruants ſicknes, tooke the beſt courſe to haue him reſtored, Matth. 8.6.

CHAP. 16.

Of the Seruant.

THe Seruant, is a perſon in the family ſubiect vnto his maſter.

The dutie of a ſeruant is, faithfully and diligently to demeane himſelfe in the affaires of his maſter, and to doe ſeruice vnto him as vnto Chriſt, though he be froward and hard-harted. Titus. 2 9. Let ſeruants be ſubiect to their maſters, and pleaſe them in all things, not anſwering againe. Epheſ. 6. 5. Seruants, bee obedient to them that are your maſters according to the fleſh, with feare and trembling, in ſinglenes of your hearts, as vnto Chriſt. Col. 3. 22. Thus Iaacob ſerued Laban. Gen. 31. 38. This twentie yeares haue I bin with thee; thine ewes and thy goats haue not caſt their yong, & the rammes of the flocke haue I not eaten, &c.

Contrariwiſe, the ſeruant muſt take heede that he doe not his maſters buſines negligently, or for faſhion ſake, or with eye-ſeruice as a man-pleaſer; that in caſe of rebuke or controlement, he anſwer not againe: laſtly, that he be truſtie and withhold his hands from picking, & his heart from deceiuing his maſter.

Seruants are of two ſorts; either free, or bond-ſeruants.

A free-ſeruant is he, whom his maſter hireth for wages to do him ſeruice. To him belongs the iuſt paiment of his hire, & in caſe of offence,
A the maſter hath authoritie to cenſure and correct him, prouided that in the execution therof, reſpect be had vnto his age, and the correction be vſed with moderation, as if he were his ſon.

A bond-ſeruant, is a ſeruant bought for money, and is commonly called a ſlaue. Touching this ſort, a queſtion is mooued, whether a Chriſtian may with ſafe conſcience, haue and vſe a man as his ſlaue.

Anſ. The power and right of hauing bondmen, in thoſe countries where it is eſtabliſhed by poſitiue lawes, may ſtand with good conſcience, if it be vſed with moderation, wherein theſe ſeuen caueats be obſerued.

I. That the maſter haue not ouer his ſeruant
B the power of life and death ; for this takes away the lawfull power of the Magiſtrate, to whom only the Lord hath committed the ſword of iuſtice.

II. That there be not libertie granted him, to vſe his ſeruant at his owne will and pleaſure in all things; for this was not granted by the law of God to his owne people: Exod. 21,26. If a man ſmite his ſeruant or his maid in the eye, and hath periſhed it, he ſhall let him goe free for his eye: Alſo if he ſmite out his ſeruants or his maids tooth, he ſhall let him go out free for his tooth.

III. That the power be not enlarged to the commanding of things againſt piety or iuſtice, for in theſe caſes a man muſt rather obey God then man, Act. 4.19.

C IV. That maſters doe not take libertie to make ſeparation of thoſe their ſeruants that be maried, the one from the other, or of thoſe that be parents from their children; conſidering that God himſelfe hath made theſe ſocieties, and ioyned ſuch perſons together, and therefore man may not ſeparate them.

V. That the maſters do not take libertie to put ouer their ſeruants to vngodly and vnbeleeuing maſters, for that is an vnkind and cruell libertie, and may be an apparant occaſion to make the ſeruant fal away from religion, and renounce the true God.

VI. That they doe not bind them to perpetuall ſlauerie, and neuer make them free. Exod.
21. 5. But if the ſeruant ſay thus, I loue my ma-
D ſter, my wife & my children, I will not go out free.

VII. That the ſeruitude be not procured and retained by force; for it is a more grieuous crime to ſpoile a man of his libertie, then of his riches.

Now that the ſame power limited with theſe cautions, is lawful & warrantable in conſcience, it appears by theſe reaſons.

I. God hath ordained and allowed it, euen by warrant of his owne law : The poſteritie of Cham was curſed by Noah, and condemned to ſlauerie, Gen. 9. 25. And he ſaid, Curſed be Cham, a ſeruant of ſeruants ſhall he be to his brethren. So were the Gibeonites by Ioſhua, Ioſ. 9. 23. Now therefore ye are curſed, and there ſhall none of you be free frō being bond-men, and hewers of wood, and drawers of water, for the houſe of my God. So was the theefe, Exod. 22.3. If he had not wherewith to make reſtitution, then he ſhould be ſold for his theft. Againe, thoſe that are ouercome in warre may be held captiue, and it is lawfull for the conquerer to kill them, and therefore to make them ſlaues: and if beeing taken, they be ſaued from death, they owe all that they haue to them by whom they are ſaued.

II. The lawe of God gaue libertie to any man that would, to make ſale of himſelfe to another. Leuit. 25. 45. Of the children of the ſtrangers that are ſoiourners among you, of them ſhall ye buy, and of their families that are with you, which they begat in your land, theſe ſhall be your poſſeſſion. Deut. 15. 12. If thy brother an Hebrewe ſell himſelfe to thee, or an Hebreweſſe, and ſerue thee ſixe yeares, euen in the ſeuenth yeare thou ſhalt let him goe free from thee: and ver. 17. Thou ſhalt take an aule, and pierce his eare through againſt the doore, and he ſhall be thy ſeruant for euer.

III. The man that is ranſomed from his enemie, is bound to ſerue as a ſlaue in liewe of thankefulneſſe.

IV. The examples of the godly in the Scriptures. Abraham had ſeruants whom he bought for ſiluer. Gen. 17.12. Euerie manchild of eight dayes old among you ſhall be circumciſed in your generations, as well he that is borne in thine houſe as he that is bought with money of any ſtranger, which is not of thy ſeede. Gen. 24.35. The Lord hath bleſſed my maſter Abraham wonderfully ----for he hath giuen him ſheepe and beeues, and ſiluer and gold, and men-ſeruants, and maid-ſeruants, and camels and aſſes.

V. The Apoſtles doe not diſallowe of ſuch ſeruants, but command them beeing ſeruants, and called to the profeſſion of Chriſtianitie in that ſtate, not to change, but to abide in their calling. 1.Cor.7.21. Art thou called beeing a ſeruant? care not for it.

It is alleadged that ſuch ſeruitude is againſt the Lawe of nature. Anſ. It is indeede againſt the lawe of intire nature, as it was before the fal, but againſt the lawe of corrupted nature ſince the fall, it is not.

But Chriſt hath purchaſed libertie to beleeuers, Coloſſ. 3. 11. Anſ. Onely a ſpirituall libertie in this life, and a corporall onely in the life to come. For though the ſeruant in regard of faith and the inner man be equall to his maſter, becauſe in Chriſt Ieſus there is neither maſter nor ſeruant, bond nor free; yet in regard of the outward man and ciuill order amongſt men, the maſter is aboue the ſeruant, and the ſeruant is, and muſt be ſubiect to the maſter. Neuertheles where this kind of ſeruitude is aboliſhed, it is not to be again receiued or intertained amongſt Chriſtians, ſpecially conſidering, it is a far more milde & moderate courſe to haue hired ſeruants.

Theodor. Orat. 8.

If it be ſaid againe, that the Heathen Philoſopher holdeth ſeruitude to be naturall, whereby ſome are by birth bond, and others free. I anſwer, That ſeruitude proceedeth not of nature, but hath his originall from the laws of nations, and is a conſequent of the fall. For all men by nature are equally and indifferently free, none more or leſſe them others.

Ariſtot.pol. lib.1.

CHAP. XVII.

Of the Maſter of the Familie, or goodman of the houſe.

THus much touching the diuers and ſeuerall combinations or couples belonging to the ſtate Oeconomicall. From which doe ariſe two perſons of a mixt or compounded nature & condition, commonly called the Goodman, and the Goodwife of the houſe.

The good man or maſter of the familie, is a perſon, in whome reſteth the priuate and proper gouernment of the whole houſhold, and he comes not vnto it by election, as it falleth out in other ſtates, but by the ordinance of God, ſetled euen in the order of nature. The husband indeed naturally beares rule ouer the wife; parents ouer their children, maſters ouer their ſeruants: but that perſon who by the prouidence of God, hath the place of an husband, a father, a maſter in his houſe, the ſame alſo by the light of nature, hath the principalitie and ſoueraigntie therein, and he is Paterfamilias, the father and chiefe head of the familie: to him therefore the true right and power ouer all matters domeſticall, of right appertaineth. The duties of the maſter of the familie, are ſpecially fiue.

I. To beare the chiefe ſtroke, and to be the principall agent, directer and furtherer of the worſhip of God within his familie. Ioſ.24.15. I and my houſhold will ſerue the Lord. And this he doth partly by praying for and with his houſhold, and partly by inſtructing them in the holy Scriptures, and in the grounds of religion, that they may grow in knowledge and reape benefit by the publike Miniſterie. Thus God commanded the men of Iſrael to walke in their families. Deut. 6. 7. Thou ſhalt rehearſe them continually vnto thy children, and ſhalt talke of them, when thou tarieſt in thine houſe, ---- and when thou lieſt downe, and when thou riſeſt vp. Againe, v.20. When thy ſonne ſhall aske thee,--- what meane theſe teſtimonies, and ordinances and lawes, which the Lord our God commanded you? Then ſhalt thou ſay vnto thy ſonne, We were Pharaohs bondmen in Egypt, but the Lord brought vs out of Egypt, with a mightie hand. This teſtimonie God gaue of Abraham before the law was giuen, Gen.18.19. For I know Abraham that he will command his ſonnes, and his houſhold after him, that they keepe the way of the Lord. And this houſhold of Abraham was very large, for the holy Ghoſt ſaies long before, that he had three hundred and eighteene, * that were borne and brought vp in his houſe, Gen. 14. 14. It was in likelihood the courſe of Salomon * Ethechnicau)ſuos initiatos.

A which he had learned of his father Dauid, and giuen for a rule to all maſters of families. Prou. 4. 1. Heare O children the inſtruction of a father, and giue eare to learne vnderſtanding---- For I was my fathers ſonne, deare and tender in the ſight of my mother, when he taught me and ſaid vnto me, Let thine heart hold faſt my words. The companie of the Diſciples were the houſehold of Chriſt, and he himſelfe did adminiſter all parts of the ſeruice of God with them and among them, Luk. 22. 15. To this purpoſe * Auguſtine ſaith, That the maſter of the familie, doth after a ſort and in his meaſure performe the dutie of a Churchman, or Biſhop within his houſe.

* In Ioan. tract. 51. in fine.

II. To bring his familie to the Church or Congregation on the Sabbath day, to looke that they doe religiouſly there behaue themſelues, and after the publike exerciſes ended, & the Congregation is diſmiſſed, to take account of that which they haue heard, that they may profite in knowledge and obedience, Act. 10. 24. The day after, they entred into Cæſarea; Now Cornelius waited for them, and had called together his kinſmen and ſpecial friends. verſ. 33. Now therefore (ſaith Cornelius to Peter) are we all here preſent before God, to heare all things that are commanded thee of God. Iob. 1. 5. And when the daies of their banqueting were gone about, Iob ſent and ſanctified them, and roſe vp early in the morning, and offered burnt offerings, &c. 2. King. 4. 23. And he ſaid, wherefore wilt thou goe to him to day? It is neither new moone nor Sabbath. For this verie cauſe the fourth Commandement is giuen firſt of all and principally to the maſter of the familie, that he might ſee the Sabbath kept, and be a principall doer in al parts of Gods worſhip therein. Exod. 20. 10. In it thou ſhalt not doe any worke, thou nor thy ſonne, nor thy daughter, thy man ſeruant, nor thy maid, nor thy cattell, nor thy ſtranger that is within thy gates.

Neither is this his care tied only to the Sabbath, but vpon other daies beſides it, he ought to cauſe them of his houſhold, as much as in him lieth, to repaire to places, where the word of God is preached. Commendable was the practiſe of Marie the ſiſter of Martha, in this caſe, who when Chriſt came to her houſe is ſaid, to ſit at his feete and attend vnto his preaching, Luk. 10. 39.

III. To prouide for his family meat, drink, and clothing, and that they may liue a quiet & peaceable life, 1. Tim. 5. 8. Pro. 27. 26. The lambs are for thy clothing, and the goates for the price of thy field. v. 27. And let the milke of thy goats be ſufficient for thy food, for the food of thy familie, and for the ſuſtenance of thy maids. 1. Cor. 9. 9. Thou ſhalt not muzzle the mouth of the oxe, that treadeth out the corne: doth God care for oxen? either ſaith he it not altogether for our ſakes? Matth. 13. 52. Euery Scribe which is taught vnto the kingdom of heauen is like vnto an houſholder, that brings forth out of his treaſurie, things both new and old.

IV. To keepe order, and to exerciſe diſcipline in his houſe, and that in this manner.

In caſe of offence, when a capitall crime is committed, which incurreth publike cenſure; he is not to puniſh it himſelfe, but to bring the offender to the ciuill Magiſtrate, to informe of his fault, that he may haue his deſert: It was a courſe eſtabliſhed by the Iudiciall law, which God gaue vnto Moſes for his directiō in cauſes criminall among the Iſraelites: Deut. 21. 18. 19. 20. If any man hath a ſonne that is ſtubborne, and diſobedient, which will not harken vnto the voice of his father, nor the voice of his mother, and they haue chaſtned him; then ſhall his father and his mother take him, and bring B him out, vnto the Elders of his citie, and vnto the gate of the place where he dwelleth, and ſhall ſay vnto the Elders of his citie; This our ſonne is ſtubborne, and diſobedient, and he will not obey our admonition: he is a rioter, and a drunkard. Againe, Deut. 13. 6. If thy brother the ſonne of thy mother, or thine own ſonne, or thy daughter, or the wife that lieth in thy boſome, or thy friend which is as thine owne ſoule, entiſe thee ſecretly, ſaying, Let vs goe and ſerue other gods (which thou haſt not knowne, thou, I ſay, nor fathers) thou ſhalt not conſent vnto him, nor thy heare, neither ſhall thine eye pitie, nor ſhew mercie, nor keepe him ſecret. Zach. 13. 3. And when any ſhall yet propheſie, his father and his mother that begate him ſhall ſay vnto him, Thou ſhalt C not liue: for thou ſpeakeſt lies in the name of the Lord: and his father, and his mother that begate him, ſhall thruſt him thorough when he propheſieth.

If the fault be of any inferiour nature, and leſſer in compariſon; the maſter of the familie ought to proceed by priuate cenſure vpon the delinquent partie, ſometimes by admonition, otherwhiles by correction, and chaſtiſement, according to the qualitie of the offence, and the condition and ſtate of the perſon. Leuit. 19. 17. Thou ſhalt plainely rebuke thy neighbour, & not ſuffer him to ſinne. Matth. 18. 15. If thy brother ſinne againſt thee, goe and tell him his fault betweene him and thee alone: If he heare thee not, take yet with thee one or two. Prou. 29. D 17. Correct thy ſon, and he will giue thee reſt, and will giue pleaſures to thy ſoule.

When admonitions and corrections will not preuaile, the partie muſt be brought before the Miniſters, and Gouernours of the Church, that they may cenſure him. Matth. 18. 17. If he wil not heare them, tell it vnto the Church. And the Apoſtle Iames giueth order that the Miniſters of the Church ſhould come to thoſe that are ſicke, and pray for them, Iames 5. 14. which if they doe in caſe of infirmitie; then they are alſo to be ſought vnto, in caſe of errour and offence committed, for redreſſe.

But when none of all theſe meanes will doe good; if the partie be a ſeruant, his maſter may, and ought to remooue him. Pſal. 101. 7. There ſhall no deceitfull perſon dwel within mine houſe; he that telleth lies ſhall not remaine in my ſight. Ioh. 8. 35. The ſeruant abideth not in the houſe for euer.

V. To giue intertainment to thoſe that are ſtrangers, and not of the familie, if they be Chriſtians, and Beleeuers; but ſpecially to the Miniſters of the Word. Rom. 12. 13. Giuing your ſelues to hoſpitalitie. Hebr. 13. 2. Be not forgetfull to lodge ſtrangers: for hereby ſome haue receiued Angels into their houſes vnawars. This dutie the woman of Shunem and her huſband performed vnto the Prophet Eliſha, 2. King. 4. 10. Let vs make him a little chamber, I pray thee, with walles, and let vs ſet him a bed there, and a table, and a ſtoole, and a candleſtike, that he may turne in hither, when he commeth to vs. Theſe are the duties.

Here if it be demanded, whether the maſter of a familie is alway, and neceſſarily bound in his owne perſon to doe all theſe things?

I anſwer, that if there be iuſt and neceſſarie cauſe, either in reſpect of his owne inabilitie, or in regard of publike imployment, vpon a lawful calling, whereby he is hindered, ſo as he cannot doe any of them himſelf, at ſome times; it is lawfull for him to haue, and vſe a deputie. This our Sauiour Chriſt teacheth in effect, when he ſaith, Who then is a faithfull ſeruant, and wiſe, whom his maſter hath made ruler ouer his houſhold, to giue them meate in ſeaſon? Matth. 24. 25. Thus Abraham had a ſteward of his houſe, Eliezer of Damaſcus, Gen. 15. 2. and he performed the waightieſt matters, that concerned the eſtabliſhment, and continuance of a Family, not by himſelfe, but by his Steward, as namely the choice of a wife for his ſonne Iſaak, Gen. 24. 2. Therefore Abraham ſaid vnto his eldeſt ſeruant of his houſe, which had the rule ouer all that he had; Put now thine hand vnder my thigh, &c. Thus Pharaoh King of Egypt had Ioſeph, Gen. 39. 5. So Ioſeph found fauour in his ſight, and ſerued him, and he made him ruler of his houſe, and put all that he had in his hands.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of the Miſtreſſe of the familie, or Goodwife of the houſe.

THe Goodwife or Miſtreſſe of the houſe, is a perſon which yeeldeth helpe and aſſiſtance in gouernment to the Maſter of the familie. For he is, as it were, the prince and chiefe ruler; ſhe is the aſſociate, not only in office and authoritie, but alſo in aduiſe, and counſell vnto him. 1. King. 17. 17. And after theſe things, the ſonne of the woman, which was wife, or * miſtreſſe of the houſe, was ſicke.

* Bagnalath babbajith) Domina domus.

Her dutie is two-fold.

Firſt to gouerne the houſe, as much as concerneth her, in her place. 1. Tim. 5. 14. I will therefore that the yonger women marrie, and gouerne the houſe. And that ſhe doth three waies. I. By exerciſing her ſelfe in ſome profitable employments, for the good of her charge, Prou. 31. 13. She ſeeketh wooll, and flax, and laboureth cheerfully with her hands. II. By appointing her maids their worke, and ouerſeeing them therein. Verſ. 15. She riſeth whiles it is yet night, and giueth the portion to her houſhold, and the ordinarie to her maids. III. By ordering her children and ſeruants in wiſedome; partly by inſtruction, partly by admonition, when there is need. Verſ. 26. She openeth her mouth with wiſedome, and the law of grace is in her tongue. verſ. 28. Her children riſe vp, and call her bleſſed, &c. Tit. 2. 5. That they be diſcreet, chaſt, keeping at home, &c. Act. 18. 26. Priſcilla in her houſe, with Aquila, inſtructed Apollos, in that wherin he was wanting, expounding vnto him the way of God more perfectly. Gregorie Naziazen in an Oration made for his father, ſaith, That his mother was not only an helper, but alſo a teacher or inſtructer, and guide vnto his father in matters of religion and godlines.

The ſecond dutie, is, to giue the portion of food vnto her familie, or cauſe it to be giuen in due ſeaſon. Prou. 31. 15. She riſeth whiles it is yet night, and giueth the portion, or meate to her houſhold. Thus did Rebekah in her houſe. Gen. 27. 9. Get thee now to the floke, and bring me thence two good kids, of the goates, that I may make pleaſant meat of them for thy father, ſuch as he loueth.

Queſt. Whether may the goodwife, without the conſent of the goodman, giue and beſtow the goods belonging to the familie?

Anſ. I. There are ſome things which are proper to her ſelfe, and not part of her dowrie which ſhee brought vnto her husband. And theſe ſhee may claime as her owne, becauſe either they were reſerued vpon the match made betweene them, or elſe are peculiar vnto her by their mutuall conſent; and of them ſhe may lawfully giue, without her husbands knowledge. II. The goods which are common to them both, are of another nature; and theſe ſhe may not beſtow, without his allowance, either expreſſe or at leaſt generall and implicite, ſpecially when the giuing of them doth or may grow in likelihood, to the hinderance, and preiudice of the ſtate of the familie.
